Unusual secrecy surrounds the deliberations of the French committee which is putting the finishing touches to the memorandum on the recognition of Russia. The insistence of the Soviet Republic on recognition without reservations is responsible for the delay in formal action by Herriot. There are no unsurmountable obstacles however.

Herriot has made up his mind to accord Russia unconditional recognition, leaving France free to take up other matters at issue between the two countries afterwards.

France Seeks Loan Of $100,000,000 to Stabilize the Franc

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Tentative arrangements were made here today for France to obtain a loan of from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 in the United States.

J. P. Morgan held a conference with finance minister Clementel when they agreed in principle that France should obtain the loan in New York. The details are not yet settled.

France wants the money to stabilize the Franc and to take up maturing bonds.

COMMUNISTS DENIED HALL HOLD ROUSING MEETING IN STEEL TOWN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 27.—In spite of the eleventh hour cancellation of the permit for the school auditorium for the speech of Benjamin Gitlow, Communist vice-presidential candidate on the Workers Party ticket, another hall was secured by the Workers Party members and a rousing meeting held.

The workers of the steel towns are getting a taste of the capitalist dictatorship and applauded Gitlow vociferously when he pointed out to them that the remedy for capitalist autocracy is a government of workers and farmers.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Benjamin Gitlow, Workers Party candidate for vice-president, at the Labor Lyceum here, kept an audience of 800 intensely interested as he discussed and analyzed the income tax reports being published.

Gitlow showed how the capitalists benefit from society without work, and how the workers could end it only by proletarian revolution.

Harry Winitsky was another speaker on the program with Comrade Baker as chairman. A collection of $104.20 was taken and several applications for membership in the Workers Party.

MINERS ENJOYED FOSTER'S FIRST SCRANTON VISIT

Communist Hands Roast to Traitor Cappellini

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 27.—Taking cognizance of the presence of a large number of miners at the campaign meeting held here, William Z. Foster, Communist candidate for president, made a ringing denunciation of Rinaldo Cappellini, president of District No. 1, United Mine Workers of America, and branded him as a traitor of the lowest ilk.

"He accepted our support, took our different speakers to his home and catered to them, declared he was going to the Progressive Conference that was held in Pittsburgh, June 2-3, 1923, to tell the progressives from all over the country what kind of crooks the officials of the Miners' Union were.

"He would have done it if it hadn't been for the close proximity of the election, for which reason the radicals urged that he remain at home to help insure victory for his slate.

Makes Peace With Crooks.

"He had not yet assumed office, when he made peace with all those he had previously branded as crooks, thru the instrumentality of 'Boss' Lewis, and began to denounce the ones who were responsible for his election.

"He allowed Lewis to incite a mob to beat up Joe Manley and Jack and Ida McCarthy. He went to the International convention last January and, to square himself for his attitude, declared that he wished he had poisoned the radicals instead of feeding them.

"Such a man, and, unfortunately, the labor movement has many of them, is a rank traitor, and Cappellini, Mussolini, the names are much alike, and there's no difference in their character," continued oFster, "is that kind of a man, a traitor of the lowest ilk."

The meeting was the largest of its kind ever held here, the seating capacity of the large hall in the Labor Temple being more than taken up and extra chairs provided. For more than two hours Foster drew word pictures of the capitalist system and Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette were all given the raspberries, much to the delight of those present.

Explain Political Situation.

The alignments of the different labor fakers with the three political groups were also outlined to show the capitalist system of its true colors, because many of those present were attending their first meeting of this character.

The program of the Workers Party was also thoroly outlined by Foster and the applause with which the speaker was frequently interrupted, best describes the way the large audience received a real working class message.

Much literature and campaign buttons were disposed of and a collection of $93 taken. ...ow to Lewis in on a secret—"This was Fosters first visit to Scranton and the miners enjoyed it."

CHICAGO TRADE UNION MILITANTS' MEETING WED. OCT. 29; VITAL MATTERS WILL BE DISCUSSED

The regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Trade Union Educational League will be held at North West Hall, corner of North and Western Aves., on Wednesday, Oct. 29, starting at 8 p. m. prompt.

At this meeting the following matters of interest to all militants in the local trade unions will be taken up:

1. Report of the Carpenters' Convention by Jack Johnstone, assistant secretary of the Trade Union Educational League.
2. The left wing and the Machinists' Convention by Andrew Overgaard.
3. The left wing program for the A. F. of L. convention by Earl R. Browder, editor of the Workers Monthly.
4. The Amalgamated and the LaFollette movement by Phillip Aronberg.

All militant members of trade unions are urged to be present at this meeting. The only way that the reactionary bureaucrats now ruling the unions with an iron hand can be fought effectively is by understanding their moves and how to combat them.

WHEELER STILL LOYAL TO WALSH AGAINST F.-L. P.

Reactionary Bought Him with Expose Aid

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, candidate for vice-president as LaFollette's running mate, in an interview with the DAILY WORKER, admitted he is supporting Walsh for senator of Montana in place of his former farmer-labor party friends. But Wheeler said he "did not know what the situation is in Montana," altho he has just returned from a tour of that state.

"I have issued a statement and I am supporting Senator Walsh for senator of Montana," Wheeler told the DAILY WORKER. "I feel obligated to Senator Walsh because he helped me in those investigations I conducted in Washington."

Turns Back on Anderson.

"J. W. Anderson, who is running for senator on the farmer-labor party ticket is a very close personal friend of mine and I am sure would make a very good senator if elected. But Walsh is doing good work in fighting the trusts in Montana and I felt I ought to support him."

When Senator Wheeler passed thru Chicago on the way to Montana, he declared to the DAILY WORKER he was not supporting the farmer-labor party because he understood there were a "bunch of stool pigeons and reds getting control." He declared he would know more about the situation when he had been in Montana. Wheeler, after spending three days in his own state, admitted to the DAILY WORKER his complete ignorance of conditions there.

Backed By Copper Money.

Wheeler did not comment on the fact that altho he is supporting Walsh, that worthy gentleman is charged by the farmer-labor party with spending huge sums of copper company money in his effort to defeat the farmer-labor candidate Anderson. And altho the farmer-labor party of Montana indorsed Wheeler and LaFollette, nevertheless he "felt obligated to support Walsh."

Ex-Premier of Italy Dies.

ROME, Oct. 27.— General Pellous, former premier of Italy, died today.

Coolidge Has His Price; So Has Wheeler, Shown in Closing Days of Campaign

By LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the national political struggle enters upon its closing week. Another seven days and the American voters will be marking their ballots.

For the first time the workers in this country have an opportunity to vote Communist. They have the chance to mark their ballots for the ending of the capitalist system.

The names of the Communist candidates of the Workers Party—William Z. Foster, for president, and Benjamin Gitlow, for vice-president,—will not appear on the ballots in all of the states. The election laws of "the great American democracy" are framed to gag as much as possible a full and free expression of the masses.

At this writing there is a total of 14 states where the Communist standard bearers will go before the voters. These are districts representative of the growing class struggle between labor and capital thruout the United States.

It is interesting to study the list including Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Iowa, Colorado and Washington.

There is the New England textile and industrial group, the stamping ground of the multi-millionaire "open shop" Butler, campaign manager for Coolidge—Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Here we find the victims of the employers' frame-ups, Sacco and Vanzetti, in Lawrence, and Merrick, in the shoe town of Haverhill, Mass.

Then comes an even greater industrial group—New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—states that decide the national election. The Communist appeal here goes to the millions in the factories, the mills and the mines.

Then the Chicago industrial district, with Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin. These are states of coal mines, steel mills and industries of many kinds, with wide expanses of farming land, burdened more with mortgages and bankruptcies, than with the produce of the soil.

Then the great agricultural states, Minnesota, North Dakota and Iowa, scene of the greatest unrest among the farmers, where the workers in the cities and on the land are breaking away from the old parties with their Farmer-Labor organizations.

One state is in the Rocky Mountain district, Colorado, where the class struggle in these domains of John D. Rockefeller have been most bitter. Another state on the Pacific Coast, Washington, where the pioneer spirit still lives and labor, farm and city, is militant to the core.

These are the states where the Red Flag of Communism is actually raised in the voting booths of the polling places, beckoning to the exploited and the downtrodden to enlist in the growing struggle for their own emancipation.

The DAILY WORKER makes no prediction as to the size of the Communist vote. It gives its best energies to the electoral struggle and accepts the results, with the whole of the American Communist movement, as merely the beginning of new and greater efforts.

In the great tidal waves of piffle that will engulf the nation during the closing days of the campaign, the Workers Party sounds the clear revolutionary note of "All Power to the Workers!"

From the camp of the democrats comes the last minute charge against Coolidge that he accepted a fee of $250, while vice-president, for making a speech at the unveiling of a war memorial at Bridgeport, Conn., May 27, 1923. Coolidge objected to a bonus for the returned soldiers but he didn't mind making a little graft for himself out of the agony of war's victims.

But the bankruptcy of the democrats is shown by the fact that they must direct attention to a measly $250 when the income tax returns show how the great multi-millionaires, republican and democrat alike, lift billions annually out of the pockets of the workers.

There is the good 100 per cent democrat, Burton K. Wheeler, U. S. senator from Montana, parading as vice-presidential candidate on the LaFollette ticket. The workers and farmers of Montana, even as Washington, but he is not supporting their party, the Farmer-Labor Party of Montana. He reiterates that he has sold out to the reactionary, anti-labor democratic senator, Walsh, because this corporation tool aided him in his exposures of Daugherty's department of justice. How Walsh really aided Wheeler is shown by the fact that the Wheeler investigation didn't touch the class issues involved in the government's attacks on the workers and their organizations.

Coolidge got his $250. But Wheeler sold his support to the democrat, Walsh, for the latter's advice on how to betray the workers and farmers, not only those of Montana who had elected him, but of the entire nation.

This is the opposition to Communism in the present campaign. It is an opposition against which the workers and poor farmers should rally as a unit. They may not accomplish that solidarity in this campaign. But the lessons of this political struggle will help them achieve that class unity for future and greater and victorious struggles.

CONTROVERSY IN COURT HOLDS UP I. W. W. MEETING

selves against the Rowan injunction in the master in chancery's court, so demoralized the convention that George Speed made a motion that "We adjourn and go home, as this bunch doesn't seem able to get together to do anything."

A recommendation was read the convention from Edward Delaney, until the present convention secretary of the California defense committee, that the Rowan-Bowerman board members be expelled from the I. W. W. for calling the I. W. W. members "gunmen and hi-jackers." "We have proved to the capitalist courts in the last five years that we are not gunmen and hi-jackers," said Delaney. "And now so-called general executive board members place the lives of I. W. W. prisoners in jeopardy and damn the man in prison. They also took I. W. W. affairs into these capitalist courts and I demand complete retraction of their statements or that they be expelled from the I. W. W." No action has yet been taken on Delaney's charges.

Says Convention Lacks Courage.

Delegate A. Hanson sounded a note of warning to the delegates that the membership is not only disgusted with the Rowan-Bowerman officials for bringing the I. W. W. into the capitalist courts but the membership is also getting disgusted with the convention itself for lacking the courage to decisively dispose of the charges against suspended officials. "Before long, economic determinism is going to settle the fate of this convention for you," said Hanson. "We are running out of money and will have to adjourn before we have accomplished our purpose if we do not hurry matters."

After the two witnesses had refused to talk and a motion had been made to refer the controversy back to the investigating committee, Rumbaugh made a motion to hear the report of the auditing committee appointed to go over the books before the convention. Delegate Joe Oates declared: "We are sidestepping the controversy again. We started it and ought to go thru with it." Speed then made his motion to adjourn, which was not seconded. "An emergency seems to be existing among the delegates," Oates added, "and we ought to do something."

Chairman Accused of Partiality.

Delegate Nelson then made a motion to rescind the former action of the convention taking up investigation of the controversy, and the convention tabled the motion. "We let the disruptionists hold up this convention day after day," Delegate Rumbaugh told the convention. "There are parties to the controversy here and ready to testify and the chairman refused to hear them." Rumbaugh referred to Peo Monoldi, secretary of Industrial Union No. 330 and G. E. B. members.

A motion by Joe Jordan that all suspended officials who refused to appear before the convention for investigation of charges against them be expelled was being discussed when noon adjournment came.

At the hearing yesterday before Master-in-Chancery Bernstein, the I. W. W. injunction case brought out the following facts: Cunnea, lawyer for the temporary administration, asked Rowan's group to settle out of court. Bigelow, Rowan's lawyer, refused, saying he did not recognize the convention. Griffith apologized for asking for the injunction. Rowan's group refused to submit the whole case to a referendum. Secretary Trotter of the Rowan group threatened violence against Doyle and Fisher after complaining to court of gunmen.

Dirt Movers Show Spunk.

From the northwestern district of Industrial Union No. 310 came a telegram to the convention demanding that if William Buchwald and P. D. Ryan, officers of No. 310, refuse to recognize the convention, the convention itself elect two other men from the 310 delegates to take over the offices of Buchwald and Ryan. The telegram was received with applause.

Unable to Audit Books.

That the financial affairs of the I. W. W. have been put into hopeless confusion by the factional struggle was clearly shown by the report of the auditing committee. Because, each member of the Rowan-Bowerman faction has insisted on keeping his own individual accounts, and has persistently refused to turn over the records to a central committee, it has been impossible for J. A. Griffith of his faction to make an intelligible report on finances.

New York Women Meet.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 27.—A meeting of the women's committee, Workers Party, District 2, will be held Monday, Nov. 10, at 203 East 12th St., at 8 p. m. This meeting is of great importance as the new policy on the women's work will be taken up. All delegates be present. Branches who have no delegates should elect two delegates.

British "Red Plot" Brazen Fake

to Ramsay MacDonald, secretary of state for foreign affairs. It reads:

"Sir: I have received a foreign office note, of Oct. 24, signed J. D. Gregory, to which I have the honor to make the following reply:

"1. As recently as last year, after a settlement of the diplomatic conflict which took place in May, it was agreed between representatives of the government of the Soviet Union in London, and the foreign office, that in the interests of the strengthening of friendly relations between the two countries both parties would endeavor to settle by direct conversations any incidents which might arise, resorting to the dispatch of notes only in the case of this friendly procedure failing to bring about a favorable result. After my arrival in London the foreign office personally confirmed, that in the future we would adhere to this reasonable practice, which would remove avoidable misunderstandings and prevent conflicts. By maintaining this rule we were able to liquidate in a friendly way a number of incidents affecting both countries. As an instance, I will mention the fact that my government did not resort to public protest and to creating a conflict in connection with an extremely important incident bearing upon the most vital interests of the Union, which arose as a result of a declaration made by a representative of the British government, Professor Gilbert Murray, at the conference of the League of Nations, a declaration which was in contradiction with our agreements of last year and with the provision of the new treaties of Aug. 8 concerning non-interference in our internal affairs, and which flagrantly violated the note of the British government on the recognition of the Soviet Union.

"2. To my great regret, the note which I received last night, in which absolutely unfounded accusations are made by the foreign office against the Soviet government at a moment when British opinion is concentrated upon the Anglo-Soviet treaties and future relations between Great Britain and the Soviet Union, constitutes an unexpected violation of the procedure which we mutually agreed upon.

"3 As regards the subject matter of Mr. Gregory's note, I declare in the most categorical terms that the manifesto annexed to it is a gross forgery and an audacious attempt to prevent the development of friendly relations between the two countries. If, instead of departing from established practice, the foreign office had in the first place approached me for an explanation, it would not have been difficult to convince them that they had been the victims of deception on the part of enemies of the Soviet Union. Not only the contents, but the heading and signature of the document definitely prove that it is the work of malicious individuals, who are inadequately familiar with the constitution of the Communist International. In the circulars of the Communist International—which may be seen in the press, for its activities are not concealed—it is never decribed as the Third Communist International, for the simple reason that there has never been a First or Second Communist International. The signature is similarly a clumsy forgery, for Zinoviev is made to sign himself as the presidency of the presidium of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, whereas actually he is, and always signs himself officially as President of the Executive Committee. The whole of the contents of the document are, moreover, from the Communist point of view a tissue of absurdities, intended simply to arouse British public opinion against the Soviet Union and to frustrate efforts being made by both countries to establish durable and friendly relations.

"4. The evident falsity of this document relieves me of the necessity of replying to the conclusion drawn in the foreign office note as to the responsibility of the Soviet government for the activities of the Communist international, since they are based on the assumption that the document is authentic.

"5. I protest categorically against this using of false documents against the Soviet Union, and also against the violation of the procedure mutually established for the consideration of all incidents which may arise between the two countries. At the same time I express my conviction that the British government will take the necessary steps to investigate the authorship of this malicious attempt to create a conflict between the two governments. This will ensure the possibility of preventing in the future a recurrence of similar incidents.

"C. RAKOVSKY."

British Communists in Denial.

Considerable space is given in the press to a statement issued by the executive committee of the British Communist Party denying the authenticity of the document. The left wing section of the labor party is now urging MacDonald to completely disavow the act of Gregory and thus make the publication of the forged letter a boomerang to the tories.

Tho it is not doubted that MacDonald knew of the intention to publish the fake, his only chance now is to throw the responsibility on the tories who have complete control of the foreign office and of the army and navy under the labor government. This bears out the Communist claim that the MacDonald government is but the creature of the British capitalists.

The British Communist Party upholds the points made by Rakovsky in branding the letter a forgery and quotes Arthur McMalus, who is now in this country, and is supposed to be one of the signers of the document that the letter is a pure fabrication.

The Communists point out that the British and French foreign offices had been forced to admit on other occasions that they had been the victims of forgeries. The admission of the Daily Mail, noted reactionary sheet, owned by the Bolshevik baiter Lord Rothermere, that it furnished the government with the proof of the "red" plot does not tend to allay suspicion.

There is considerable curiosity over the manner in which the mysterious letter got into the hands of the foreign office, but the latter refuses to make the source of its information public. This is considered only an excuse to prevent a showdown.

What effect the frame-up will have on the voting next Wednesday is problematical. The right wing leaders of the labor party now announce that there is no truth in the report that they sent out orders to kill the Anglo-Russian treaty. The conservatives were delighted at first with the situation, as they thought a good "red plot" would rouse their followers, but the loud guffaw with which the concoction has been received by the public is not very encouraging to tory hopes.

The liberals are between the devil and deep sea. They are compelled to criticise both sides. The general belief is that they will suffer a crushing defeat next Wednesday.

FARRINGTON IS CHARGED WITH GRAVE OFFENSE

Returns the Compliment With Interest

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.
(Article Fourteen.)

Williamson County, Illinois, first burst into the national limelight during the coal miners' strike of 1922, when William J. Lester, owner of a strip mine, hired a number of strike-breakers to operate his property. The scabs along with trying to break the strike, also became exceedingly offensive in the community going around the country insulting women, beating up old men and setting the example for the conduct subsequently followed by the Ku Klux Klan, who are in every way worthy successors to the Lester strike-breakers.

All did not go well with the scabs however. Then opened fire on a body of union miners who went to the barricaded coal mine with the object of making certain suggestions to them, with a view to relieving the tension created in the neighborhood by their presence. When the smoke of battle cleared, the number of scabs who looked healthy could be counted on the fingers of one hand. A sensation was created thruout the country and chambers of commerce and capitalist newspapers called for the blood of the union miners.

Lester Got Permit

It was afterwards learned that Lester received a permit from Farrington to clear off the dirt of his strip mine. Other went further and said that Lester had paid a round sum of money to Farrington and Vice-President Fishwick for that concession. Of course the president of the Illinois Miners' Union denies these charges but as the correspondence published below will show, no less a person than John L. Lewis president of the International Union makes this charge against Farrington according to the statement of International Board Member Dobbins.

Farrington collected a fund of $2,000,000 from the Illinois miners by assessment for the alleged defense of Williamson County cases. He has never given an accounting of the expenditures and it is widely believed among the miners of District 12, that he has used this money as a slush fund to build up his own personal machine and to enrich himself and his family with it.

The correspondence which follows is as damaging to Lewis as it is to Farrington. How both could unite after what they say about each can only be understood in the light of the reason given in the previous article: their deadly fear of the progressive elements in the union who are out to rid the organization of both crooks.

The first is a letter from Farrington to Lewis:

"Springfield, Ill., Nov. 2, 1922.
"Mr. John L. Lewis, President,
United Mine Workers of America,
Indianapolis, Indiana.
(Copy).

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Just yesterday International Board Member Dobbins told me that during the meeting of the International Executive Board held Oct. 9th to 20th, inclusive, that you made the statement to the Board that things in Illinois were corrupt and that a compact had been entered into between two substantial officers of this district and W. J. Lester to allow his strip mine to operate during the recent strike.

"Board Member Dobbins also told me that later in your room at the hotel that you told him that the two substantial officers to whom you had referred in your statement made to the Board were Vice-President Fishwick and myself. He also told me that upon his return to Springfield from the compact. Board Member Dobbins also told me that you told the Board, and later told him personally, that Robert M. Medill, Director of the Department of Mines and Minerals in Illinois, had made the compact and that the money was to be split three ways, namely, between Mr. Medill and the two substantial officers to whom you had referred.

Bosses Gave Facts

"He also told me that you told him that I was verging on a nervous breakdown because of mental disturbance over this matter. Board Member Dobbins also told me that you told him that your information came from one who has secured the infrmation from Mr. Honnold, secretary of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association, and that he, Dobbins, could secure further information on the subject from L. F. Lumaghi, a coal operator in this state.

"Before taking any action on this matter I desire a letter from you either affirming or denying the statements Board Member Dobbins told me that you had made before the International Executive Board and to him personally about this matter. I am not at all disturbed over the matter, but I do intend to attempt to expose those who are trying to defame my good name and considering that fact that according to Board Member Dobbins' statement, Mr. Honnold, Secretary of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association seems to be the authority upon which your statements are made, it would seem that the Illinois Coal Operators are at the bottom of the conspiracy and I am anxious to arrive at the facts so that I shall know how to proceed in clearing up this matter. I shall appreciate an early response to this communication."

"Yours truly,
"(Signed) F. FARRINGTON, Pres."

To this communication John L. Lewis makes the following brief reply in which he denies nothing.

Springfield, Ill., November 9, 1922.
"Mr. Frank Farrington, President,
District 12, U. M. W. of A.,
Springfield, Ill.
(Copy).

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"This will reply to your communication of November 2nd. Mr. Dobbins' memory is somewhat inaccurate as to my statement to the International Executive Board and my later conversation with him when he called on me.

"The whole story of Medill's prostitution of his public office and attempted bribery of certain coal operators in Illinois during the strike is so infamous and corrupt that I do not care to discuss it here. I have no objection to discussing some phases of it with you personally if you desire. About a month ago I discussed the same subject with Vice President Fishwick."

"Very truly yours,
"JOHN L. LEWIS, President."

Farrington justly charges Lewis with evasion and sends the following scorcher:

"November 22., 1922.
"Mr. John L. Lewis, President,
United Mine Workers of America,
Indianapolis, Indiana:

"With this reply to your letter of November 9th which you wrote in answer to my letter of November 2nd, in which I brought to your attention information given me by board member Dobbins concerning statements you were alleged by him to have made before the International Executive Board and to him personally to the effect that things in Illinois were corrupt and that Vice President Fishwick and myself had entered into a compact to allow the Lester Strip Pit Mine to operate during the recent strike upon condition that Vice President Fishwick and myself were to be paid stipulated sums of money.

Believes Dobbins' Word

"I observe you state 'That Mr. Dobbins' memory is somewhat inaccurate as to my statements to the International Executive Board and my later conversation with him when he called on me.' I regard your answer as being one of evasion. Surely Mr. Dobbins' memory is not so inaccurate that everything he told me is merely the result of bad memory. Before writing you under date of November 2nd, I had Mr. Dobbins' como to my office and in the presence of Vice President Fishwick and Secretary Nesbit and myself he told me of the statement you had made and as set forth in my letter of November 2nd. I took his statement down in writing and I told him before hand that I was going to write you on the subject and that I wanted to be absolutely correct before doing so and after taking down his statement in long hand I read it over to him and asked him if he was quite certain that I had correctly taken the statement as made by him concerning what you had said about me before the International Executive Board and to him personally while in your room at the hotel and Board Member Dobbins stated that I had a correct version of the matter. Consequently I cannot believe that Mr. Dobbins' memory is completely inaccurate about the matter and considering the fact that you neither affirm or deny all or any part of the statement Mr. Dobbins told me you made, but instead you attempt to brush the whole matter aside by saying 'Mr. Dobbins' memory is somewhat inaccurate,' I am disposed to believe that the story he told me is substantially true and that you are now attempting to escape responsibility by charging Mr. Dobbins with having a bad memory and by making a vitrolic atack up on Robt. M. Medill, the director of the Department of Mines and Minerals in Illinois, and you hold up your hands in holy horror because of his attempted bribery of certain coal operators in Illinois, when as a matter of fact you have no authority for making such a serious charge even against him, excepting the information that came to you through Mr. Honnold, the Secretary of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association.

Calls Lewis Coward

"It is not my business to defend Mr. Medill. I leave that to him to do, as I expect he will do at the proper time and place, but I do not propose to allow you to blacken my good name in the way you attempted to do before the International Executive Board in the cowardly manner you did do and it is putting the matter mildly when I say to you in my opinion you are engaged in mighty small business when you attempt to throw a cloud of suspicion around the officers of District No. 12, and particularly the President of District No. 12, by telling such vicious fabrications as you related to the members of the International Executive Board, and such conduct does not become one of you enough to occupy the Presidency of the United Mine Workers of America.

"I note in your letter of November 9th you say, 'I have no objections to discussing some phases of it (meaning the subject matter) with you personally if you desire.' It seems to me it would have been more manly and honorable, and less dirty and cheap, if you had discussed the matter with me personally before you related your story to the members of the International Executive Board, and because you did not do that I have no desire whatever to discuss the matter with you personally as I feel it would be useless to do so with one of your tendencies. You deliberaely attempted to blacken my good name before the members of the International Executive Board and I happen to know that that is not the first time you have attempted to do so, but in this case the only authority you have for your vicious falsehood is the Secretary of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association, and again I say I think you are engaged in mighty cheap business for one holding the exalted position you occupy.

Heard Many Tales

"It so happens I have heard a number of stories about your official conduct and coupling the stories, as I heard them, with the circumstantial evidence, I have more reason to believe that they are true than you have to believe that Vice President Fishwick and myself entered into a compact to allow the Lester Strip Mine to operate during the strike and for your information I herewith recount some of the stories I have heard about your official conduct.

"FIRST: I was told that the President of the South Western Coal Operators' Association stated that the Kansas Coal Operators would pay almost any price to get rid of Alex Howat as President of the Kansas Miners and considering the outrageous manner in which you treated him and the Kansas mine workers in order to get rid of Howat as President of the Kansas miners, I have just as much reason to believe that you collected a handsome sum of money for your part in the Kansas trouble, as you have to believe that I was to collect money for allowing Lester Strip Mine to operate.

Wanted to Dodge Responsibility

"SECOND: An influential operator, with whom I happen to know you had dinner during the month of December, told me that you told him during the month of December that you believed the mine workers of the country were going to be obliged to take a reduction of wages after the first of April and that you implied that in order to enable you to escape responsibility for the reduction a strike was to be called on the first of April and that it would continue until the government intervened and settled the strike or until the members of the union themselves were punished until they demanded a settlement of the strike, on the basis of a reduction of wages, and considering the facts that you were continuing parleying with government authorities during the strike, I have just as much right to believe his statement is true as you have to believe the story about me concerning the Lester Mine.

"THIRD: I heard that you and other officers of our union collected $100,000 from the operators in Kentucky for allowing them to operate during the strike and considering the fact that you stated during the meeting of the Policy Committee, held in Washington, that work in the Kentucky mines would not be stopped so long as you were President of the Miners' Union, I have just as much reason to believe that the story is true as you have to believe the one about me.

The Harriman Deal

"FOURTH: I heard that instead of borrowing $1,000,000 from the Harriman Bank of New York, as publicly stated, that you received $750,000 from this bank and that three members of the Directorate of the Bank are operating non-union mines in the Pennsylvania field and that the extra $650,000 which the public never heard anything about, was given to you and your associates with the understanding that the support of the International Union would be withdrawn from the striking mine workers in the non-union fields of Pennsylvania, and considering that fact that you exonerated our members from the payment of per capita tax to the International Union for the month of August, instead of requiring them to pay the tax as the International Constitution obligates them to do, and that at a time when the striking mine workers of Pennsylvania were badly in need of financial assistance, would seem to lend color to the story. To exonerate our members from the payment of tax for the month of August meant no material relief for the individual but in the aggregate had the tax been collected it would have meant substantial relief for the strikers.

"Furthermore, considering the fact that you waited until October before levying a special assessment, which could not be collected until the month of November, and this in face of the fact that the striking mine workers in Pennsylvania had been sending out pitable nation wide appeals for financial assistance even since the general strike was settled during the month of August, and taking into account the fact that Wall Street Banks are noted for their Farrington is Charged 4 union sympathies, the average individual would conclude, (taking circumstantial evidence into consideration,) that there must be some truth in the story and that you were deliberately conspiring to starve these men in submission.

"I have not been a party to circulate these stories because I have no proof for their truthfulness and I cannot bring myself to believe them, even though circumstantial evidence is strongly against you, and because my sense of manhood will not allow me to descend to that depth of degradation even in retaliation of one who has himself descended to the level, of a louse, in order to poison the minds of gullible men against me

"Yours truly,
"(Signed) F. FARRINGTON, Pres."

OUR REPORTER WRITES ABOUT HUGE COOLIDGE TURNOUT IN MINNEAPOLIS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 27.—The stone walls of a group of buildings, a few lamp-posts, an expanse of blue sky and twenty-five human beings formed the audience to which the Morgan Fife and Drum Corps, employed by the aristocratic Lincoln club, tooted and bugled patriotic airs today in an attempt to rally the workers to the standard of Coolidge and Dawes.

From the twenty-five people present, subtract the reporter for the DAILY WORKER. That leaves twenty-four who went, without—presumably—having been forced to go.

Twice a week the Lincoln club pays a few dollars to the G. A. R veterans to play during the noon hour and attempt to draw a crowd with a chorus of patriotic Hallelujahs and republican Amens.

The platform on which the band plays has been artistically draped with the remnants of five aged cripples who left most of their anatonomy on battlefields in one or another of the wars for freedom. The heroes present a most pathetic spectacle, but fail to draw the workers.

To these attractions has been added another freak—a person alleged to have been "progressive"—Judge M. C. Tifft. In a speech teeming with vicious personalities, Tifft attacked both Foster and LaFollette as advocates of "free love."

The judge proceeded to urge the election of Coolidge as the only means of "saving" America from the "reds."

"The workers face poverty unless they re-elect Coolidge," was the final ling of Tifft at today's anti-revolutionary session.

NEGROES MUST FIGHT FOR RIGHT TO CAST BALLOTS IN OKLAHOMA

(Special to the Daily Worker)

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 27.—Negroes here may force a federal grand jury investigation into the refusal of certain Oklahoma registrars to permit Negro voters to register for the general election.

The decision to try to force an investigation has followed on the refusal of the district court of a writ of mandamus seeking to compel Okfusgee registrars to register Negro voters.

In denying the writ, Judge F. E. Kennamer was forced to admit that it looks as if there were "a conspiracy in the state capital and the state election board to deny the right of voting to certain citizens because of race or color."

"In some precincts registrars go around and find only those voters to register whom they know will vote 'right'," Kennamer admitted.

That a Negro has virtually no chance of getting suffrage rights thru appeal to the state supreme court was not denied by the judge.

NEGROES SHOWN CHICAGO COURTS HOUNDING THEM

Threatened Here With "Jim Crow" Justice

Protests of lawyers at the apparent discrimination practiced in Chicago courts against Negro defendants proved so embarrassing to Judge Padden, of the municipal court, that he found it necessary to appeal for reassignment of several cases involving Negroes.

The outbreak of protest came with the trial of William Beasley, Negro musician, on a charge of pandering.

"Third Degree" by Investigators.

Betty Beasley, a white woman, the wife of the musician, was also arrested in connection with the case, and it was on her that the so-called social investigators on the case used the well-known "star-chamber" methods.

The first indication that race prejudice would be a factor in the trial was the unusually high bond set for Beasley. He was placed under $4,000 bond.

Attorney William Westbrooks, entered the ante-room behind the bar, and discovered that the "social investigators" had taken Mrs. Beasley in there to persuade her to testify against her husband. Attorney Westbrooks overheard the following conversation:

"Don't you know that you are disgracing yourself by marrying a black man?" This from one of the white woman investigators.

"No," said Mrs. Beasley, "I love him."

Favor Kentucky Methods.

"I know what we would do with you in Kentucky," came the answer.

When Westbrooks interrupted court to tell Judge Padden what he had heard, Padden flew into a rage and asked if Westbrooks meant to insinuate that he was involved in the third degree methods used on Mrs. Beasley.

The judge finally ordered the case thrown out of court, not however, before he had raised Mrs. Beasley's bond from $400 to $1,000.

Judge Ward, before whom the case came up later, threatened to throw Westbrooks into jail.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Beasley have demanded a jury trial.

Dance by Lithuanian Chorus "Aido" to Aid Party Campaign Fund

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 27.—An Entertainment and Dance will be given by the Lithuanian "Aido" Chorus of Detroit, the entire proceeds of which will go to the Workers Party Campaign Fund.

Tht dance and entertainment will be held on Saturday, November 1 at the House of the Masses at Gratiot and St. Aubin streets. Only a few member of the chorus are party members and it is thru the efforts of these comrades that the dance is being held.

All Detroit comrades are urged to get behind this affair and give it every possible support. Don't forget the date: Nov. 1, at the House of the Masses. Come and bring your friends. Swell the fund for our party work in this campaign.

Sues Boss for Tuberculosis.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—Alleging that he became ill with tuberculosis while its employe and that the ailment was contracted thru the negligence of the company which failed to protect his failing health after the disease was contracted, R. C. Pogue has filed suit against the New Cornelia Copper Co. of Ajo for $50,000 damages.

Pogue entered the employ of the New Cornelia Jan. 2, 1924, and became ill with tuberculosis May 6, according to the complaint filed in the office of the clerk of the U. S. district court at Phoenix.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

in deadly earnest on the Klan question the it is hard to believe that men like Fitzpatrick, Farrington, Nockles and John L. Walker can be in earnest about anything except holding their jobs.

At the last state convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor anti-Klan resolutions were introduced by miners' delegates, but Farrington and Victor Olander tried to block their introduction. The DAILY WORKER was the only paper to publish the story, and the Takers denied it, but had to admit that they thought it good policy to ignore the Klan question altogether. It is now perfectly clear that Walker, Olander and Farrington were acting under the instructions of Grand Dragon Palmer of the Illinois Klan, and his paymaster Small. How does such a situation appeal to the members of the Illinois Miners' Union?

Hearst has come to the conclusion that Coolidge is going to win out in the coming election. The publisher of yellow journals is secretly for Coolidge tho he has not dared to come out in the pen. His chief editorial writer, Arthur Brisbane, a most unprincipled hireling, is boosting "Silent Cal" in his daily column. Hearst was undecided in the early days whether he should support LaFollette or not but "Bob" was running a one man show and Hearst did not care to play second fiddle. He is having a good time playing up Cosmopolitan pictures and particularly Marion Davies his pulchritudinous star in his fifteen daily newspapers.

Rudolph Spreckles is very busy in California rooting for LaFollette. Spreckles is a bitter anti-socialist, yet he is going to vote the socialist ticket this year in order to "save capitalism." That is the way he puts it. The socialist ticket comes in handy. A man like Spreckles is entitled to admiration. He is out spokenly truthful and one is able to know where to find him. He is perfectly right in his reasoning on the LaFollette movement. The continued reign of Big Business under a nonentity like Coolidge will foster discontent faster than under direction of a clever faker like LaFollette. Therefore Spreckles knows that it is better for capitalism in the long run to have an alleged "reformer" in the White House than an out and out conservative.

The British capitalists, when in danger allowed Ramsay MacDonald to steer the empire because his presence at 10 Downing Street allayed the discontent of the masses. Now that the empire is getting a bit cockier, other rival units of capitalism want to throw Ramsay out. Our American rulers cannot yet stomach even a mild critic like LaFollette.

"Fightin' Bob" has a different speech for every section of the country. In some places he is hard on the supreme court, but in Nebraska where there is a German population which suffered from war hysteria to the extent of having a law passed prohibiting the teaching of German in the public schools, "Bob" was very kind to the supreme court, because that august body declared the anti-German law unconstitutional, thereby making thousands of voters for Coolidge. "Bob" wanted these votes so he declared he would not abolish the supreme court but would reform it a little.

His position on the railroads has also undergone a change. He is no longer shouting for government ownership. He has even raised the railroads which were once his pet aversion. But if one looks over a record of LaFollette's speeches in Wisconsin he will find that "Bob" said kind words about the "predatory interests" and was really very good to them. This does not mean that LaFollette is liked by Wall Street. No, he is very much hated by them just now, but so was Roosevelt once and Woodrow Wilson. But Wall Street is some lion-tamer. A Bobcat looks easy for them.

THE DAILY WORKER is now almost a year old. The American working class has never had a more reliable defender of it's rights, one that understood better that the best defense is an attack.

Every new reader is a re-enforcement for our revolutionary army, is an active recruit for our Communist fighting force, is like the snowflake, which when pressed together with thousands of others finally becomes a mighty avalanche, against which all resistance is vain and useless.

Strengthen it and thereby make more powerful the Communist movement.

Editor of "Volkszeitung."

STANDARD OIL PRESIDENT IN CHINA OUSTED

Tsao Kun Rose to Power with American Gold

PEKING, China, Oct. 27.—The government of Tsao Kun, president of China, whose installation in that office has been claimed by the revolutionary Sun Yat Sen.to have been purchased by Standard Oil thru bribery by Jacob Gould Schurman of the Chinese parliament, is overthrown by a "Christian" hireling, General Feng Yu-hsiang, acting in the interests of Japanese imperialism.

Tsao Kun, the figurehead, was really subordinate to his army commander, Wu Pei Fu, whose utter defeat in armed contest with the Manchurian forces under Chang Tso-lin, openly known to be subsidized by Japan, is being confirmed by reports from the field of operations along the great Chinese wall.

"Christian" Duplicity Wins

By clever maneuvering, General Feng, with true Christian duplicity, seized Peking after turning traitor to Wu Pei Fu, with whose army and in whose cause he and his hosts had previously fought since war opened. It is common knowledge that this trick was planned from the beginning, Feng, the Christian, being bribed by Japan to await a favorable moment in the conflict to strike Wu Pei Fu, the representative of American and British imperialism, in the back.

By forced marches, Feng's army surrounded Peking, and on Saturday, training artillery on the presidential palace, forced Tsao Kun to first declare war "at an end," stripping Wu Pei Fu, who is still fighting Chang Tso-lin's forces to the north, of office and ordering him exiled to Turkestan. Then Tsao Kun was compelled to resign the presidency.

Shanghai Bankers Upset.

From Shanghai come reports that the British-American interests are dismayed by the turn of events at Peking. The victory last week of the Kiangsu (Peking government) army over the Chekiang army of Lu Yung-hsiang, known to have been supported by Japan, has been upset by Feng's treachery, and Feng has added to the fears of the Shanghai bankers by wiring to Lu Yung-hsiang, who fled to Japan when Shanghai fell, ordering him to return to that city. This evidently means that Feng will send an armed force to dispossess the satrap installed by British-American capital thru Tsao Kun.

The diplomatic body of foreign freebooters in both Peking and Shanghai are in a quandry, only the Japanese apparently being cheerful, as reports from the north arrive telling of Chang Tso-lin's victorious advance and as Feng consolidates his capture of Peking.

Volunteer for Election Day in N. Y.

CALL TO ACTION.

ON Election Day, November 4, the workers of the various Industries will not work in their shops as this is a legal holiday, therefore we ask you to work for the party and for COMMUNISM.

We must have hundreds of comrades to report to their section headquarters on election day to be assigned to work in the polling places as watchers and as canvassers outside of the polling place. The law permits you to stand 100 feet away from the polls to instruct workers how to vote and to pass out literature to the voters. All comrades can do this work and should immediately report to the section headquarters absolving ... or this work. We also must have comrades who are citizens to act as watchers in the polling places.

It is not enough to have the workers vote for the Communist candidates.

We must have comrades at the polls to see that the votes are counted for us.

We must have comrades near the polls to distribute literature to the voters.

We must have comrades near the polls to instruct voters how to vote for us.

CLEVELAND IS GOOD PLACE FOR DAWES TO DODGE THESE DAYS

By HARVEY O'CONNOR.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

CLEVELAND, Oct. 27.—Charlie Dawes is not slated to visit Cleveland. It's too hot for bank looters! Two more wreckers have been found guilty by a jury of scuttling the $18,000,000 Representative Realty and Municipal Loan enterprises. They are Sol Peskind and Ben Karp. M. A. Vinson, secretary of the company, was found guilty several weeks ago. Two others were stamped with guilt in a previous trial.

The realty firm coined fortunes for its promoters by taking money from wage earners who contemplated building homes. Thousands of Cleveland wage earners had sunk their savings with the cmopany waiting the day when they had enough deposited to start building or to pay off a mortgage of a home already completed.

After the crash, local public officials refused to take action until a progressive newspaper went over their heads and appealed to the governor of Ohio to appoint special prosecutors. The appeal was granted and it was found that $1,500,000 in county funds had been illegally deposited with the wrecked Representative Realty Co. This furnished the clue for the county authorities' unwillingness to press action.

Five officials of the company have now been found guilty with two more to be tried. If the cheated depositors of the Lorimer bank in Chicago had been able to get similar action, the republican party might have had to find another vice-presidential nominee in 1924.

Some Pointers on Spreading the Good News Effectively

By GEORGE McLAUGHLIN

KANSAS CITY, Kansas, Oct. 27.—Those rebels who go to work by street car have a splendid chance to distribute literature. Take along leaflets, programs and always make a point to carry your old paper along. Pick out the young and keen workers and give 'em the dope. This beats the factory gate—you can pick your prospect, he is fresh and untired, he has a few minutes with nothing better to do than read. Always carry 20 programs to the car with you!

If the conductor howls, you can either work on him, or use a soft answer, plead ignorance of company rules—and do the same next day.

If you've not enough nerve to pass out your old paper, at least take it out and throw it on some one's door step.

It's your paper—Build on it!

Poetry Prize Won by Working Girl Who Sang to John Reed

Marya Zaturensky, daughter of a Russian Jewish immigrant and a factory worker in the crowded east side of New York until last year when she received the Zona Gale scholarship at the University of Wisconsin, won the John Reed poetry prize one of the four prizes by the Poetry magazine this year. The other three winners were also women.

Miss Zaturensky uses John Reed's life and death as the theme in her prize-winning verses. We print the part which is entitled "They Bury Him"

Into the sad, cold heart
Of Sleeping Russia they laid
The dreamer from the West
Among the buried Tsars of ancient Muscovy.

No holy candles burnt
There in that ancient place.
No long-haired priest
Spoke three times the blessings for the dead.

But with uncomprehending eyes
Slowly filed in
The peasants and soldiers of the new order.
Over their comrade from the West
They lifted their red flags.
This was their benediction!

Delay Trial of Burns.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The criminal syndicalism trial of William Burns, I. W. W. organizer, is put over to Nov. 5. Burns was arrested a year ago for trying to organize workers in Yosemite National park, and will be tried in federal court for violation of a California state law. William Rackle is held under the same circumstances.

A Freak Solution -

By GORDON OWENS

LOUIS HILL, a white southerner, and author of a book on the Negro or race problem, labelled, "When Black Meets White," has chartered a steamer, on which 500 people, half Negroes and half whites, will sail from New York, Jan. 1, 1925, to visit Jamaica, Haiti, the Virgin Islands and other tropical countries.

No color line or Jim Crow restrictions will exist on the steamer. Lectures and discussions on the Negro problem will constantly take place. The list of Negro passengers include Negro leaders, office holders, politicians, editors, intellectuals and students. The white passengers include capitalists, liberals, social uplifters and philanthropists. Negro and white club women and other idlers will also sail, and no doubt much social equality will be indulged in on the voyage.

Social equality is the one condition that must not exist between Negro and white workers, according to capitalist spokesmen and newspaper hirelings.

The only Negro or white workers aboard the steamer will be those who stoke and otherwise man the ship. The voyage will last 30 days.

A month's voyage on the tropical waters, by a bunch of parasitic Negro and white handshaking and parrot chatting loafers, will in no way improve the lot of the exploited and oppressed Negro and white workers in the United States.

While these middle and capitalist class parasites are sailing on the tropical seas, the Negro and white workers will be slaving in field, mine, mill and factory to eke out a bare existance, or they will be tramping the streets begging an opportunity to slave to keep from starving.

The Negro and white workers must imitate the voyagers in only one respect, that is abolish all race and color lines which keep workers divided, and rid themselves of all race, color or religious prejudices held against any working people.

The Workers Party of America has a program and plan of action for Negro and white workers to improve their lot It is to abolish the present boss rule and to usher in a Communist order in which the workers, who produce the good things of life will also enjoy them.

This will be effot about by establishing in place of the present capitalist government, a workers' and farmers' government.

Then there will be no Negro or white parasites to travel around and have a good time, spending the profits produced by sweated and exploited workers.

Let all workers join and support the Workers Party which is their party, and hasten to bring about workers' rule.

Chicago Party and League Members!

Poll Watchers Needed for Election Day.

PARTY and League members are asked to help the Party on election day, Nov. 4, by acting as poll watchers. This is to ensure an accurate count of all votes cast for the Workers (Communist) Party candidates. It is easy to be released from work on election day. The Party will need about 300 watchers. Are you ready to help? If you are, sign below and send it in to the Local Office, 166 W. Washington St., Room 303.

— — — — CUT OUT HERE — — — —

I will be a poll watcher on November 4th.

LIE FACTORIES OF KEPT PRESS EXPOSED AGAIN

Correspondent Shows Origin of Stories

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

MOSCOW, Oct. 27.—It is a strange experience to come back bright and cheerful from a pleasant holiday and read in the European and American press that a war has been going on in the very place you have come from.

For nearly a month I was in the Caucausus, going afoot thru the mountains, crossing the highest mountain range with a knapsack on my back, sleeping under the stars, and perfectly free from interference even from a stray bandit or so. I lived in Tiflis and Batum for nearly a week and found life perfectly normal.

She Gets the News.

And then on my return to Moscow, the London Daily Herald informs me by an official statement from Jordania, erstwhile socialist president of the old anti-Soviet state in Georgia, that while I was peacefully sipping tea on the sidewalk cafes of lazy Batum, "the Bolshevik troops" disembarked at Batum, and made terrible reprisals on the population, massacring the old men, women and children. Houses were being burned, whole villages destroyed."

Then the Manchester Guardian in an editorial openly discredits, simply by deductive reasoning, the official—and as far as I can see—absolutely correct statement of the Russian delegation in London that a small rising had been immediately put down.

See Threat of Intervention.

And then comes a wire from Geneva—saying the league of nations is considering investigating the "war between the state of Georgia and Russia." One can smell the threat of intervention there as keenly as the league of nations smells oil in Georgia.

American papers elaborated on the supposed revolt with all their powerful imaginations, reinforced by distance.

What happened? There was a sporadic uprising which was quickly quelled, and which had been instilled by a queer combination—the bandits which even the czarist soldiers could never deal with, the dispossessed "princes" of Georgia, fighting for their nationalized land, and—the pacifist, internationalist Georgian social-democrats. When we were first told that these were involved, we didn't believe it, until the confession of their envoy himself, who had been sent to foment the trouble.

No Trouble in Georgia.

My extensive trip in Georgia covered the distance from Vladikavkas to Tiflis—the heart of the Georgian mountains—afoot, during the height of the uprising. I lived in Tiflis during the days of armed suppression of the uprising. I went by rail to Batum and lived in Batum during the days the reprisals were supposed to have taken place. I traveled by car along the entire western coast of the Caucasus, touching at all the important towns there, during the time that the pillaging, plundering and massacring were supposed to have taken place there. The steamer stopped for six or seven hours in the larger ports, and for an hour or two in the smaller ports. We noticed nothing untoward in any of those places, and joined the populations of the towns in their light-hearted, care-free sea bathing.

And when I returned to Moscow, and read of the "war," reprisals, massacres, etc., I was not the only one who had been in Georgia and seen nothing of the sort. Hundreds of pleasure-seekers, spending their precious annual holiday in Georgia, and returning refreshed for their work, were equally amazed to read of the terrible things that had been going on right under their noses and which they had neither seen nor heard.

Berry Rules the Roost.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Andrew R. Armstrong of the World's pressroom is the new president of Newspaper Webpressemn's Union No. 2 which, according to local No. 25, disbanded by Major George Berry, International president of the pressmen, during the strike last year. Berry presented the new charter and installed the new officers appointed by the International board of directors. Nominations for the offices will be made Nov. 1, with the exception of secretary-treasurer and elections held 60 days later. Thomas Sharkey of the Times will continue as secretary-treasurer "because of the involved condition of the local's finances." The International will pass upon eligibility of members nominated and has the power to remove officers violating the agreement. The International board of directors can also suspend local meetings in emergencies. Junior pressroom workers are in an auxiliary.

AND RED WEEK HAS ARRIVED

So this is Red Week? And we answer—You can bet your last toothpick it is! It is this week that thousands of comrades will busy themselves in hundreds of cities, each distributing a 127-piece literature unit composed of leaflets, pamphlets, stickers and DAILY WORKERS.

By the way, everybody says that the special national campaign edition of the DAILY WORKER issued for distribution during Red Week will surely give revolutionary vision to every scrambled mind it meets. It's so inspiring and inviting that all you need to do is to show it to a worker and he'll compel you to allow him to subscribe for it. You try it and see!

Remember, emphasis upon shop distribution. ... nce enough to get away with it you're hardly wise enough to be a Communist. But if it is actually impossible, then into the homes with your 127 pieces. Into the home, we said—not into hallways, or upon porches or into yards. Open the door and throw it into the room. Don't waste a single piece.

The effort to mobilize the entire party membership was a success. We did not have a 100 per cent mobilization, that's true. But as a first call to arms everybody feels mighty satisfied. It constitutes a big stride towards the bigger tasks to come.

Anyway, RED WEEK IS HERE! Millions of pieces of Communist literature will be distributed. And the closest affinity with the revolutionary movement this week will be enjoyed by those comrades who take their 127 under arm and go forth to win the masses.

Here are the cities that answered the call:

JAY LOVESTONE MAKES HIT WITH STEEL WORKERS

Shows Up Dawes Plan and LaFollette Illusion

(Special to the Daily Worker)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 27.—Speaking before a hall filled with steel workers, Jay Lovestone, author of "The LaFollette Illusion" "Blood and Steel" and several other working class books and pamphlets, brot the entire audience to its feet with a thunder of applause when he said, "The United States is the grandest and richest country on earth, and that is just why we of the Workers Party want to take it away from the capitalists at home and abroad and give it to the workers and farmers to whom it belongs."

Without mincing his words Lovestone pointed out the total bankruptcy of the capitalist parties and its straw man in the person of LaFollette. The jackass-elephant and bobcat parties were torn to pieces and no one was spared by the mass of facts and figures exhibited by Lovestone to prove that the parties of Coolidge, John Wall Street Davis and Bobcat LaFollette were controlled by Wall Street and offered nothing to the working class. The Dawes' plan was shown up as an imperialist bridge for the next world war that is making the United States a receivership for Germany as a first step for the whole of Europe.

A reporter present from a local capitalist sheet declared that Lovestone was a walking encyclopedia.

That Lovestone made a hit with the steel workers is putting it mildly.

"I would rather have a government that represented 95 per cent of the people than one that represents five per cent of the people," and the steel workers proved what this belief also, judged by the thunder of applause that greeted Lovestone's statement on the Soviet government as compared with the capitalist rule in the United States.

"Beauty-Bolshevik," New Russian Picture, in Superior, Nov. 5

The latest and greatest feature picture made in Soviet Russia, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," will be shown at the Savoy Theater, Superior, on Wednesday, November 5, five shows from 1 to 11 p. m.

The picture has been shown with record-breaking success in several big cities, notably in New York and Philadelphia, and now smaller towns such as Hancock, Mich., on Oct. 30-31, and Rock, Mich., on Nov. 2, are also making successful dates. In New York the show was originally booked for three days but the run had to be extended to ten, so great a crowd tried to get in on the first day that five doors were broken in. In Philadelphia the great Lulu Temple was jammed to capacity twice in one night, over 5000 people attending.

The picture tells of the quartering of a red army brigade in a village just rescued from the whites, and of the romance that develops between the brigade commander and the daughter of the richest landowner of the village. The film is produced by "Prolketkino" the most modern and most active production unit in Soviet Russia, a real labor film company operated by and in the interest of the trade unions, co-operatives and other labor organizations that own its stock. The film created a tremendous furor when it was first shown in Moscow, Lunacharsky, Trotsky, Ryckov and many other notables attending and praising the picture.

An added attraction is a three-reel economic survey of Russian industrial life. It is called "Russia in Overalls" and shows the industrial progress made in many different lines. Oil, iron, coal, steel, locomotives, shoes, and cigarettes are only a few of the products touched on. Particular emphasis is laid on those industries that involve the help of American working class bodies. The coal mines of "Kuzbas," the forty factories of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and the big tractor farms of the International Workers' Aid are featured. The two pictures, taken together, give a complete story, both serious and humorous, of Russian life today.

Hobo Convention in Hot Springs.

CINCINNATI—The 19th annual convention of the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, popularly known as the Hobo Union, opens in Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 25, according to National Secretary Tom Curry with offices at 410 Clinton St., Cincinnati. All local groups may send delegates. Labor unions and other organizations interested are invited to send fraternal delegates. Among the topics will be vagrancy laws, the vote, employment agencies, work or wages, old age pensions, unemployment, education, organization.

REINSTATE CAP MAKERS' UNION IN THE A. F. OF L.

Jurisdiction Fight with United Hatters Settled

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The dispute between the United Cloth, Hat and Cap Makers' Union and the United Hatters' Union has been settled and the cap makers reinstated in the American Federation of Labor, according to J. M. Budish, editor of the Headgear Worker, the capmakers' official organ.

A letter from Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L., has been received by the cap makers granting them three delegates at the Nov. 17 convention of the A. F. of L. in El Paso and determining the jurisdiction of the two unions.

United Hatters will have workers on men's straw, panama, felt and wool hats and women's felt hats. Millinery and cloth hat and cap workers will be in the United Cloth Hat and Cap Makers' Union. The cap makers were suspended from the A. F. of L. in 1918, when they refused to accept the decision giving millinery workers to United Hatters. Later after conferences, United Hatters offered to let all millinery workers, except in their Chicago and Boston locals, go to the cloth hat and cap makers, but this proposal was also rejected and the matter again referred to the A. F. of L. executive council.

The two millinery locals of United Hatters are now to be transferred to cloth hat makers' union and New York City Local No. 45 of that union, straw hat workers, will become part of United Hatters.

30,000 Mechanics in U. S. Navy Yards Ask for Increase in Pay

WASHINGTON.—Thirty thousand mechanics and other workers in the U. S. navy yards are asking for an increase in pay, while the departmental chiefs are proposing a reduction in wages, as the annual wage-fixing negotiations start. The employes, speaking thru N. P. Alifas, International Association of Machinists, point to President Coolidge's statement that wages in general in this country have risen 69 per cent since 1913, and they offer proof that their own wages have increased only 60 per cent in that time. Costs of living have increased far more.

The 2,000 men still employed in the government arsenals are not affected by these negotiations. Arsenal work has almost ceased, due to ping up huge quantities of war supplies just after the war. In Rock Island arsenal, for example, where 15,000 were employed when the armistice was signed, only 400 remain. But the navy yards are not being further demobilized, because 30,000 men are required to care for the existing naval establishment.

"WISCONSINIZE AMERICA," PLEADS GOVERNOR BLAINE AT PHILADELPHIA WHILE MALONE FEARS COMMUNISTS

By ALEX BAIL
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 27.—Governor John G. Blaine of Wisconsin was the chief speaker at a poorly attended meeting arranged by the LaFollette campaign committee at the Arch Theatre in this city.

There was not a single outstanding remark in his long, monotonous harangue delivered in an uninteresting and colorless manner. Blaine was a complete disappointment to all those present.

He held up Wisconsin as the ideal co-operative commonwealth. He pointed out that Wisconsin is enjoying industrial peace but forgot to say that the average wage per month in Wisconsin is $91, while that of the country as a whole is $95.

Plenty of Pathos.

He spoke with pathos of the poor, poor children who were taken out of the factories and placed into schools but forgot to mention that there were still in the factories in his home state twice as many children as in the factories of the state of New York, altho that state has twice as many children.

He "pointed with pride" at the number of milch cows Wisconsin has and at the great percentage of dairy products produced but forgot to mention how this great number of cows is distributed among the farmers of that state.

He forgot to mention the fact that his legislature during the 1923 session rejected bills providing for the eight-hour day on public works and state printing, for one day rest in seven, for unemployment compensation, for old age pension and for the abolition of the private detective agencies. He forgot to mention that the courts of Wisconsin and the state militia are being used against labor just as in the cossack ridden state of Pennsylvania.

Every important issue in which the American workers are vitally interested were conspicuous by their absence from his talk. Instead he repeated the same old twaddle about the government being perfectly good and our institutions admirable. The only defect he could find was that an unscrupulous bunch of politicians have taken control ow the White House and that they, the self-appointed saviors, are going to drive the money changers out of the temple and bring the government back to the people. Blaine finds only one objection to both old parties: "The trouble with them is that they recognize the existence of certain evils, but they are too cowardly to correct these evils." It is certainly to be regretted that there were not more workers present at the meeting to be thoroly disillusioned with the "progressivism" of these politicians.

Communism Danger to Republic.

Dudley Field Malone of New York, one of the other speakers, made a few pointed remarks from which we glean the most interesting. Speaking on the necessity of supporting La Follette, he said: "If we fail in this election two things will happen. There will be a strengthening of reaction on one side and a spread of Communism on the other side. Both are a danger to the republic."

Malone, unlike Blaine, expressed his assurance that there will be organized a labor or third party, but not a party that will bring red revolution to our shores, but rather a party that aims at class collaboration.

One More Capitalist Party.

"We want," he proceeded, "a party of intelligence not of hatred. A party to bring good will among the classes."

If there was any doubt in the mind of any worker present Mr. Malone "spilled the beans" by stating in so many words that, if a new party is organized, it will be just one more capitalist party.

Malone concluded his talk by a strong bid for the feminine vote. He announced to all present that he will vote for every woman running for congress, immaterial whether she runs on the republican or democratic ticket and after praising a few women candidates who are running on a "give us a chance platform" he gracefully retreated.

The chairman here took occasion to warn the audience that the literature being distributed at the entrance was not the official LaFollette literature. He was referring to the Special Philadelphia Campaign Edition of the DAILY WORKER, a copy of which even found its way into the hands of Governor Blaine himself.

Les Miserable.

It would be an inexusable offence not to mention our friends of the socialist party. They have been pushed into the background to such an extent that they will surely welcome a little publicity. There is the manager of the Forward, the agent of "Abe" Cahan, who is doing his level best to "debunk" the Jewish workers from any such silly idea as class consciousness. Leo Harkins, members of the national executive committee of th socialist party and secretary of local Philadelphia is also in the audience.

One would have expected these individuals to look happy, but even a casual glance will prove otherwise. They feel positively miserable and what's more they show it. The menace of the red flag by Blaine is met with jeers and scornful laughter. Blaine speaks about the black flag and a few anarchists in the back of the hall make boisterous objections; but the S. P.ites do not object to the slur against the red flag. No; they are partners in this affair. Not a single speaker from the socialist party takes the stand. They have been relegated to a back seat in spite of the "supreme sacrifice" of giving up the ghost of a once powerful organization.

The Masses.

Every effort had been made to bring out the masses. The Forward was positively hysterical in its attempt to bring its readers and yet the workers of Philadelphia refused to be stampeded. The gallery remained unopened. The balcony was but sparsely colonized and huge gaps were to be seen on the main floor. The poor attendance was so apparent that Malone went out of his way to tell an anecdote in which Abraham Lincoln was said to have had a much smaller attendance at one of his meetings. The character of the assembly can be judged by the long rows of machines parked along Arch street. The owners of these machines applauded vigorously when Blaine spoke of the thousands of miles of good roads in Wisconsin. One red faced individual became so enthusiastic that he attracted the attention of the whole audience by his almost inhuman shrieks of approval, such as any Mohawk chief would have been proud to place in his favorite collection of war whoops.

In spite of the very eloquent appeal for funds the chairman announced a little over $100 collected. This is significant especially since there was no admission charge.

Paper Box Bosses Sign.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.All but two of the paper box manufacturers against whom the Paper Box Makers' Union struck have now signed with the union, says Morris Waldman, general organizer of the union, and the workers have now returned to their jobs. A mass meeting will be held to hear the decision of the board of arbitration on the matter of wage increases and shorter hours for all workers employed by members of the Paper Box Manufacturers' Association. The union asks $5 flat increase in wages and a 44-hour week.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27. — Photo-engravers got over $2,000 a year in 1923, the census of manufactures, is read by the department of commerce, discloses. In 1923 the 145 shops reporting had a total wage expense of $18,621,538, distributed among 8,681 wage workers. This figures out about $2,195 a year each. There was also 2,935 salaried employes, who got $7,472,662. The profit of the business for the year, represented by the difference between value of the product and the wages, salaries, contract work and materials, containers and fuel, were approximately $10,000,000.

WORKERS DRAMA CLUB LAUNCHED IN NEW YORK CITY

New York Labor Shows How to Do It!

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y., Oct. 27.—The drama has been recognized in Soviet Russia and elsewhere as a potent weapon in the task of enlightening the masses in the class struggle.

A beginning of propaganda through the drama is being made by the Workers' Dramatic League of the New York district. The organization of the league has been the work of many months. The first attempt was a pageant for the National Defense Committee. As a result some comrades became ambitious to create a permanent league. By constant work during the summer months our efforts have been finally crowned with success.

By the founding of the Workers' Dramatic League for propaganda through the medium of the drama, of Communist ideas, the Workers Party has laid the foundation of a powerful institution which is destined to play a most important and vital part in imbuing the American workers with revolutionary ideals.

Its goal is now not only to produce plays that will give expression to the struggle and aspirations of the revolutionary movement but to develop all the forces necessary for the production of these plays.

The Workers' Dramatic League has been fortunate in securing as dramatic director Harvey Raymond, who has not only a thorough knowledge of this work but a keen enthusiasm for its educational possibilities. He will aim in acquiring the technique of the drama so that a revolutionary group may be interested and active in producing plays, that are both communistic in spirit and artistic in production.

The league has its temporary headquarters in the studio of Comrade Florence Rouh, 12 East 8th St., N. Y. C. and meets every Friday at 8 p. m.

At present we are rehearsing "Ania," a play of the first stages of the Russian Revolution.

All those interested are invited to come on Friday evening to ths above address.

Officials of Bosses Union Beat it With Funds and Property

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 27.—The scab carpenter union organized by the bosses and the Central Labor Union together is no more. Several score scabs are sad. For one thing just before an agreement was reached between the C. L. U. the carpenters and the bosses, Sid Barton, their secretary and president, disappeared. That was bearable but, all the funds, about $5000 also disappeared! He had even sold the safe and desk.

The carpenters' local offered to admit the scabs—but few could raise the needful $106 fee. Those who could and did, were laid off within a week by their bosses since "their presence delayed work and rendered harmonious relations impossible." Such is ever the gratitude of a boss to his loyal scabs!

Window Cleaners Want Recognition.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27. — A bigger fight than ever is being waged by the Window Cleaners' Protective Union with National Window Cleaning Co., Fifth Ave. and 29th St., as opponent, says Peter Darck, secretary of the union. All window cleaners employed by Louis Frankel for the National have been called out on strike and responded 100 per cent to the union's demands for recognition in the shop.

Judge Edward F. Boyle, arbitrator between the union and the employers' association, has not yet rendered decision upon the wage increase asked by the union.

LOW WAGES AND LONG HOURS IS PATRIOTIC SLOGAN PROPOSED BY THE RULING CLASS IN GERMANY

(Second Article)
By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

Low wages and long hours as a patriotic duty will be the national slogan in the gruelling international trade war which is brewing from the wage slavery forced on German workers by the Dawes reparations plan. In order to undersell the workers of other countries to meet the Dawes plan payments the German government is making the longer working day almost a holy crusade while numerous socialist trade union officials are reported as sympathetic to this plea for the fatherland.

Wages, as the most important item in production costs, are expected by representatives of the U. S. department of commerce to play a large part in determining the competitive ability of the nations in the world market. The Dawes plan will enable the international capitalists to collect reparations multiplied many times over from the workers of all lands. The protrate German working class will be used by the money kings to squeeze tribute out of labor on a world scale.

The significance to American labor of the low wages forced on German workers is indicated in a report of M. L. Goldsmith, assistant U. S. trade commissioner at Berlin.

"At the present time," she says, "both the inland buying power and the foreign exchange value of German wages are further below the American level than they were before the war. Inasmuch as low labor costs will undoubtedly help German industries so offset, at least partially, the increase in other production costs occasioned by the London agreement, the trend of German wages during the next few months will be of special importance to American industry and trade."

Goldsmith's figures for wages in various German industries as of Sept. 1, 1924 expressed in gold marks (1 mark, 25c) are:

Industry	German Hourly wage Skilled	Un- skilled	Weekly income Skilled	Un- skilled
Building	0.66	0.55	35.64	24.20
Chemical	.51	.51	33.28	26.52
Leather	.60	.55	—	—
Margarine	.59	.57	—	—
Metal	.64	.46	34.66	24.96
Paper	.43	.33	—	—
Textile	.45	.42	25.40	21.84

Data as to hours worked in the leather, margarine and paper industries have not been compiled so that computation of weekly income is impossible. The earnings shown include bonuses for wife and two children.

Goldsmith shows the low purchasing power of these wages compared with prewar by comparing the weekly income of skilled workers in the metal trades with the cost of a minimum budget. The present income of 34.66 gold marks compares with a budget cost of 38 gold marks, while in 1914 the weekly income of the same worker amounted to 29.70 gold marks and the cost of the minimum budget to 28.80 gold marks. She says: "These figures indicate that before the war the income of a skilled metal worker somewhat exceeded the necessary outlay whereas at the present time wages represent only about 90 per cent of the necessary living costs."

Radical increases in wages, she concludes, from discussions with German workers and labor leaders are improbable. Wage stability was so welcome that a number of unions accepted wage reductions at the time of stabilization. The treasuries of the majority of local unions are depleted. The lengthening of the working day produces, at least temporarily, a sufficient labor surplus to keep wages down.

JAP FASCISTI ORGANIZED TO BREAK STRIKES

Workers to be Butchered to Protect Capitalists

By NISHIMURA YOSHIO.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

TOKYO, Oct. 27.—The Japanese army department has officially organized the Fascisti in Tokyo.

The organization is made up of ex-service men who were members of the Zaigo Gunjin Kai, an organization similar to Wall Street's American Legion in America.

The Japanese legion was established right after the Russo-Japanese war but they were not interested in strike breaking. Many of them even assisted in the rice riots in Japan.

The army department issued an order to the legion to combine with the Keiku Tai, the Japanese fascisti. The fascisti are to be taught how to run the street cars, locomotive engines on railroads, and autos, etc.

The Keiku Tai has many subdivisions, one of them being the detective division, to spy out strikers as well as Communists. General Kihara was appointed to take charge of the fascisti in case a so-called emergency should arise. Captain Takagi gave out the following statement regarding the organization:

"Disloyal conduct by Daisuke Namba against the Prince Regent hastens us to organize the Keiku Tai. We cannot depend upon the police force or the regular army for the safety of Japan. Recently we experienced the big street car strike in Osaka. We need men to break strikes efficiently. These are the reasons for the organization of the Keiku Tai."

It is pretty safe to foresee that this fascisti on their emergency day will butcher workers under the protection of the minister of war, and for these crimes committed by this lawless tribe, they will offer the excuse of dispersing a fight between civilians.

Japanese workers are bound to face many more Kamaishi massacres, where many young workers met a horrible death by the swords of army officers dispatched from Narashino to do the murderous job. The present tactics of the capitalists of Japan is to drive workers who protest against the Japanese imperial family making use of the state power to do so.

Dr. Sun's revolutionary government is the silent menace to the Japanese capitalists here. It can safely be estimated that they fear workers here may follow the example of their Chinese neighbors and also follow in the footsteps of the Russian peasants and workers.

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

RUSSIAN JUNIORS TO AMERICA'S

Moscow, Red Presnin District, 11th Branch of the Young Pioneers, at Factory "Red Defense" No. 32:

Workers of the World Unite! Pioneers for the sake of the working class, be ready!

Dear Comrades: We are sending you our warm greetings. We are interested to know how you are organized. Have you got companies and branches? How many branches have you got?

The first day of May we had a big celebration in Moscow. When we passed the tomb of our dear unforgetable grandfather, Ilitch, we all lowered our heads and many had tears in their eyes. Everyone reminded himself of our dear Ilitch. We celebrated the first of May but he was not among us, and he will not return to us any more. But altho he is dead, his ideas will never die! Dear children, you should never forget our dear father Ilitch!

The 17th of May our branch went for an excursion to camp for five days. While in camp we helped the peasants in the field. One little pioneer, the smallest of us, asked a peasant to allow him to plough, and was actually ploughing.

We are now real Pioneers. The 23rd of May we have taken the official oath. We had a parade before Comrade Trotzky. Now we are called Leninci (Leninists). Ilitch is dead, but he does not need any dead wreaths, but live ones.

The ranks of the Communist Youth are growing constantly Our branches are also growing rapidly.

Write to us about your life. Is your enemy very strong? Are you helping your parents? Write to us about your organizational work. The struggle for us is an easy one, as Ilitch led us out to the wide road and we are following his footsteps. Good bye. Write to us soon. We will be glad to receive your first letter.

Fraternally yours,
Pioneers at factory "Red Defense," Novo-Slobodskaya ulica, No. 24, Pioneer Branch 11, Moscow.

MacDonald's Dishonesty

Ramsay MacDonald, since his assumption of office, has given a most nauseating exhibition of traditional British ruling class hypocrisy. His rapid retreat from his former professed belief in socialism to a position closely resembling that of the pious fraud, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., caused a revulsion of feeling even among some of MacDonald's supporters in the British labor party.

In an interview to capitalist reporters, MacDonald denounced strikers for asking too much and urged them to suffer and set the capitalists a good example. A few days after making this statement, it was learned that he accepted a "gift" of $150,000 from a tory millionaire, Alexander Grant, who was knighted thru the good offices of the socialist premier. Needless to say the knightee and the knighted denied that the "gift" had anything to do with the honor. While MacDonald was berating the poor wage slaves for demanding a little more bread he accepted a large sum of money and an automobile from the owner of a biscuit factory who sweats thousands of girls out of the product of their labor.

But MacDonald's latest piece of treachery on the Russian treaty is the blackest act in his dishonest career. In the first place he was forced by threats of the left wing of the British labor party to affix his signature to the agreement which guaranteed a British loan to the Soviet government, for the purpose of getting Russia's industrial machinery in working order.

The bankers did not like the treaty and their tory political agents immediately began to attack it. So did Philip Snowden, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. But the British workers were for it, so Snowden kept quiet and MacDonald thot he had won a victory that would stand him in good stead in the election campaign.

Now, on the eve of election, MacDonald has published a forged document alleged to have been received from Zinoviev by the British Communists calling for the overthrow of the British government. MacDonald knows this to be a fake, but he fears the hostility of the bankers and he wants to take the ground from under the feet of the liberals and tories and crawl back to office again as the loyal servant of the empire by dropping the treaty and proving to the satisfaction of the most exacting imperialist that he is more loyal to them than even Stanley Baldwin, Lord Curzon or Lloyd George.

It is refreshing to turn from the spectacle of deceit, treachery and corruption, presented by MacDonald and his crew, to the sterling honesty and revolutionary integrity of the Russian Communist leaders of the Soviet Republic, who fought a capitalist world in arms and brot their revolution from victory to victory, while the millions of capitalism were theirs for the asking.

The Real Workers' Party

There is no better evidence of the fact that the Communists are correct in their policy of staying in and building up their movement among the labor unions, than the news from New York City showing how the workers in the clothing industry are using their Trade Union Educational League groups to rally support for the Workers Party.

In spite of the fact that the officials of even the supposed radical Amalgamated Clothing Workers have gone over to the LaFollette camp and have tried to drive the membership to support his fake labor program, the membership grouped around the Trade Union Educational League raised a revolt and are holding under their own auspices many meetings every night all over New York City in behalf of the Workers Party.

How much good it has done Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers and Kaufman, of the Furriers, to expel the revolution from the unions they consider as their private property, is shown by the way the left wing groups in these unions are waging a wide campaign, in the union and upon the streets and in halls for the party of Communism, the Workers Party.

In both these unions, supposedly nailed down and clinched on the other side by yellow-socialist reactionaries of the Abe Cahan school of mendacity, strong bodies of workers are rallied to the party, auto trucks are hired, platforms provided and everywhere members of the union arise to take the lead in the fight for a party which makes its basic demand the proletarian dictatorship.

We see two things in this, first that it is just as impossible to stop a really revolutionary political party from working in the unions as it it to stop it working in society as a whole; second, that the Communists are pursuing the correct tactic in America by staying in the unions and winning the workers in them for revolution regardless of whether officials like it or not.

Cal's Final Effort

It is entirely fitting that the so-called "final political effort" of Coolidge in the campaign, should be a speech favoring imperialism abroad and reaction at home delivered at the dedication ceremonies of the building erected by open-shop labor at Washington, D. C., as a home for the American Chamber of Commerce.

In foreign policy, Cal champions "semi-isolation and independent action." In plain Yankee this means that American imperialism feels strong enuf to stand alone, without sharing loot with any ally, in the fight for world hegemony. It is a declaration of war upon every power which obstructs the world-encircling triumphant chariot of the House of Morgan.

It even declares that, tho the League of Robber Nations may be treated with politeness in some circumstances, the prime requirement of those circumstances is that American imperialism shall receive the lion's share, as in Germany. That this bald declaration should be covered with sugary phrases about "being helpful to Europe" and "anxious for peace," is merely another instance of imperialist ethics.

At home, Cal sets his face like flint against more "deflation in agriculture," but failed to explain how and why the recent one was not prevented. Nor does he show how the capitalist financial system can avoid inflation, the necessary forerunner of deflation.

"Wages," he boasts, "are more than twice the highest European wage." That the rate of surplus value taken out of labor by reason of the speed-up system of American industry is five times that of Europe is a corrollary concerning which Silent Cal was especially silent.

This and the claim of food consumption are deceptive devices to secure support for a reactionary program which, by including the Dawes plan, openly, frankly and definitely aims to make American labor reduce its wages, accept a lower standard and compete with German slave labor in long hours, or go into the streets in millions hunting for jobs that are not, high wages that are gone forever and a "consumption of food" out of garbage cans.

The Dictatorship at Gary

There is no such animal as the capitalist dictatorship, according to those who allege that the Communists are extraordinarily full of gall for openly advocating the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Unfortunately, such critics disagree with facts. We have not got to go further than Gary, Indiana, nor to any history more remote than yesterday for a clear example of the capitalist dictatorship.

Some nameless white collar underling of the Steel Trust who runs the educational department of the capitalist dictatorship in Gary, caused the withdrawal of the lease held by the Workers Party on the auditorium of the Froebel high school, because he learned that Foster, Communist candidate for president and organizer of steel workers, was going to speak there.

This was accompanied by the force department of the capitalist dictatorship arresting two Communists who were distributing the DAILY WORKER. And inside the steel mills, the bosses of the United States Steel corporation, the steel and iron department of the capitalist dictatorship, have issued orders that any worker caught reading the DAILY WORKER will be fired.

This is the kind of "white terror" the workers face day after day and year after year. Millions of them take it for granted. Only the Communists know how and show how to abolish it. Nobody else knows or gives a tinker's damn.

But when the Communists openly state that the only solution is the dictatorship of the proletariat, a host of "libertarians," "humanitarians" and sentimental boobs and bourgeois spring up wildly protesting. And they, well, they are the pacifist-individual-liberty department of the capitalist dictatorship. Nothing more, nothing less.

The Fascisti cabinet of Italy decided to recognize titles of nobility conferred by the Vatican. These titles had hitherto been ignored by the Italian government since the fall of the temporal power of the church. His Holiness will no longer be considered a foreign potentate by Mussolini, and the names of the families honored or dishonored by papal titles will be inscribed in the Golden Book of the Italian nobility. The stock of our American Papal Knights should now rise and the female aristocrat chasers of this country will not be obliged to go to Europe for thrills in case the Prince of Wales is otherwise engaged.

In a debate on capital punishment with Clarence Darrow of Chicago, Judge Talley of New York, a Catholic, held that the only cure for murder was enforcement of the death penalty. It appears that 2,000 years of Christianity have not proven an efficient crime deterrent. The capitalists and their apologists have a grudge against individuals who sometimes break in on the ruling class monopoly on murder.

The comedians who went to Washington to see the president, are demanding increases in salaries on the ground that they made the president laugh. But judging from the photograph of Little Silence the facial contortion looked more like what a stiff dose of salts would induce on the physiognomy of a wayward child who swallowed a family of hot dogs against mother's advice.

Is "The Nation" Turning Fascist?

By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY

THE New York Nation, edited by Oswald Garrison Villard, an organ of American "liberalism" and pacifism, in its issue of October 29, makes a most vicious and unwarranted attack on Dr. Sun Yat Sen, president of the Canton republic, and the leader of the national-revolutionary party of China.

Unusual importance is attached to the abusive editorial owing to the pose maintainined by Villard as a radical and defender of oppressed peoples everywhere, and his professed opposition to Coolidge, Dawes, the American legion, the Minute Men of the Constitution and the other agencies of American reaction.

But unless Villard repudiates the editorial referred to, the conclusion is inescapable that he is one of those wolves in sheep's clothing who maintains an outward camouflage of pacifism in order to petrify the minds of the workers and blind them to the fact that our so-called democratic form of government is an illidisguised dictatorship which rules by force and violence.

The Nation accuses Sun Yat Sen of unloosing war after war on Canton until he paralyzed the economic life of the city. It upholds the Chinese Fascisti which were financed by the British government. It declares that the Chinese merchants gave Sun "numerous chances to practice the kind of government he preached." The Canton Merchants' Volunteer Corps—this is the liberal name for the Fascisti—is no Fascisti in the European sense, says the Villard organ "it is an expression of Canton weariness with twelve years of revolutioneering by Sun Yat Sen and his cohorts." This is the language of the stoolpigeons of capitalism.

Oswald Garrison Villard, the defender of the I. W. W. against the persecution of the American capitalist government seems to have just about as sincere in his profession of sympathy for the struggling slaves of the colonial empires and protectorates as he has for the American labor movement. While he upholds the principles of American trade unionism in theory, and favors the class war prisoners, he operates a scab iron mine. His defense of British imperialism in China raises the question: Is the deficit of the Nation, paid out of the proceeds of his scab mine or what relations has Villard with the Cowdray oil interests that makes him come to the assistance of British Imperialism whenever it is in trouble? The Irish nationalist revolutionists have long claimed that Villard was an agent of British imperialism. It must be confessed that his attack on Sun Yat Sen whose government the British bankers tried to overthrow by force of arms lends color to the charge.

Villard says that the Canton merchants "organized, not for any political purpose, but to rid the city of politics altogether. This threatened Dr. Sun's supremacy, and his troops tried to disarm the merchant forces, whence the collision." Aside from the stupidity of this argument, we will prove that The Nation lies. In the first place nobody but a particularly befuddled anarchist would talk of getting rid of politics. He might as well talk of abolishing governments. Mr. Villard has not yet posed as an anarchist.

But the Nation lies, when it says that the clash between Sun and the merchants came when his forces tried to disarm the merchants. The DAILY WORKER has told the story before, but we will tell it again for good measure.

The British bank at Hong Kong, sent a shipload of arms and ammunition to the Canton merchants with which to arm their Fascisti for the purpose of overthrowing the Canton government. A British warship accompanied the munition ship and threatened to bombard the city if Dr. Sun did allow the guns to be delivered to the merchant forces. Under the threat Sun was forced to comply, but the Canton labor unions, afterwards seized the guns, not relishing the idea of becoming fodder for British bullets.

The Canton merchants then made an attack on the Sun forces and suffered a severe defeat. All this has been admitted even by the London Daily Herald, official organ of the British Trade Union Congress and severe criticism was levelled against Ramsay MacDonald by the British trade unionists for sending His Majesty's warships to threaten war on a friendly nation.

The Nation knows quite well that Sun Yat Sen has done more than any other individual to overthrow the hated Manchu dynasty, that tyrannised over the people of China for centuries. Sun traveled over China suffering the greatest discomfort, at inment risk of death, carrying on the war against the Manchu tyrants until they were overthrown, and ever since he has stood like the rock of Gibraltar against the capitalist pirates of the world who have robbed and plundered his people.

Communists are not surprised to see Villard and his organ come out openly for the Chinese Fascisti. Our liberals claim to be against violence and dictatorship. But they scout the idea that the capitalist government of the United States is a dictatorship. It is a democracy in their eyes, and can be reformed. Hence LaFollette. They abhor violence but if they must have violence they prefer that it should be capitalist violence. Hence the preference given to the opponents of Dr. Sun Yat Sen.

This interesting question will not be pursued further here for the present, but let us assume out of charity for Villard that his vicious and stupid attack on the Chinese revolutionary leader, was due to irritation over Sun Yat Sen's exposure of the knavery of Ramsay MacDonald—the LABOR leader of Great Britain—and not to a suspected association with the payroll of the British Foreign Office.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who net only believe—but ACT!

A Campaign like ours to "Build the DAILY WORKER" brings strongly to the fore the fact that the Labor movement is founded not on any ephemeral dream but on the actual needs and desires of the working class. In such a campaign, the all do not participate, some to plain view the splendid efforts of the militant "vanguard of the vanguard." That group in the Labor movement ever willing, ever trying, are the main cogs in the POWER that takes the movement a step forward always.

There have been hundreds of examples of real effort, of splendid loyalty and of sacrifice. One of the many cases is such as you will find in this letter:

Dorchester, Mass.

Dear Comrades: Enclosed find one brick (3 Month). Am sorry I can't do better but the 7th of August put me on the "bum."

I fell then during my work, down two stories with the result that the bone-setter, eleven days after, had to amputate my left leg above the knee. So you understand that at present or until I get my artificial leg I ain't much good for anything.

STILL SO LONG AS THEY DON'T CUT MY HEAD OFF I will try to do all I can for the only paper worth anything, among my friends that come to see me during my lay-up.

Comradely Yours,
For the present a little depressed.
J. KINLUND.

The Labor movement may have its "ups and downs." But it need never fear for its final victory when in the ranks are such loyal workers. Men and women whom even adversity cannot stop from working for its welfare. Who under any conditions will work for the DAILY WORKER SO LONG AS THEY DON'T CUT THEIR HEADS OFF.

What a Cruel Land!

By ANISE
Federated Press Staff Writer

She was a frail little lady
With white hair.
She told me
Sitting on a park bench
In the Caucasus
How her husband a famous PROFESSOR
Retired on ample pension,
Was CAUGHT by the Revolution!
She spoke of street-shooting
And the search of dwellings:
Our pension was lost
When the ruble sank;
Our furniture was sold
In the FAMINE;
And we are living now in ONE BIG ROOM.
We should have reached the age
Of comfortable REST,
But he must teach again to earn our food.

Things are getting BETTER now,
The Social Insurance gave us
Six weeks in the mountains,
And we are feeling stronger.
Then she asked me
About RICH America
Inquiring WHAT SIZE PENSIONS We give old teachers?

And I said: We don't give ANY, as a regular matter.
There is a Carnegie fund
For special colleges
Controlling the standards of teaching.
And few CITIES give pensions—
If you teach all your life
In THAT CITY.
But general teachers' pensions
We don't have in America.

She sighed: Is America also
PREJUDICED against intelligentsia,
That it does not teach
What is the right of all WORKERS?
And I laughed: Our workers also
Have NO PENSIONS, neither for old age
Nor unemployment, and only sometimes
For ACCIDENTS . . . .
But your country is rich, she stammered,
And very efficient.
What then is its PLAN for old folks?
We expect them, I said to save money,
Or to live on their children,
Or to DIE or go to the poorhouse.
If you talk of pensions they call you Communistic
Discouraging private initiative
Encouraging lazy people.

She stared at me in Horror
With the eyes that had looked
On WAR and FAMINE:
What a CRUEL land, she shuddered,
What a CRUEL land!

Ten Commandments Religious Propaganda for the Masses

By JOHN SCAR.

The Ten Commandments, a photoplay by Jeanie MacPherson (Cecil B. DeMille), is an elaborate and costly piece of propaganda for the "people's opium." Elaborate and costly, and yet lacking in any quality of artistic distinction or realism, especially in the second or principal section of the picture.

The first part or prologue depicts the biblical story of Exodus. The flight of the children of Israel and their pursuit by Pharaoh's chariots afford an opportunity for some gorgeous pageants in colors and a remarkable piece of trick photography in the opening and closing of the waters of the Red Sea. Moses is shown receiving the tablets of the law on Sinai amid much firework on the screen and great uproar from the orchestra and the back-stage noise battery. He descends and finds to his horror that the people have already become addicted to other and unauthorized kind of gods, so he flies into a rage, smashes the holy doorstone, exhorts the people to repentance and destroys the golden calf.

The plot of the principal section is laid in present-day America. It is the story of a young man who, tried by the restrictions of a fanatically pious mother, scoffs at her religion and sets out with the avowed intention of breaking all the ten commandments. He prospers as a grafting building contractor, but finally the collapse of some rotten concrete in a church he is building kills his mother. Next, learning that his light-of-love has infected him with leprosy, he kills her, and loses his own life while attempting to escape in a motor-boat. His pious brother is rewarded for his sanctimonious sentimentality by receiving the repentant wretch, who is miraculously healed of leprosy, which she had developed overnight(!). A "touching" scene is that wherein the holy brother (who is a carpenter, by the way!) takes his erring sister-in-law, chilled and drenched by a terrific storm, into his home. As a first aid measure against the effects of severe exposure he sits down and reads to her from the Bible! This part is atrociously written and directed, in the style of the ten-twenty-thirt' blood-and-thunder "mellerdramers" of twenty-five or thirty years ago.

Especially amusing to a Communist are those titles which denounce idolatry of the golden calf. Surely today one could quote Mephistopheles in addressing that brute: "Of the world the lord art thou!" Not forgetting, of course, the one all-important exception, Soviet Russia. Russia alone today among the nations of the earth points the way toward the abolition of all idolatry, and the growth to full stature of all the noblest faculties of mankind in the glorious sunlight of true freedom and enlightenment.

THE CAMPAIGN FUND CAMPAIGN! Two hundred and fifty mass meetings rallies if you'll help finance them.

FRANCE RECOGNIZES RUSSIA

British Communists Greet Workers Party Election Struggle Against U.S. Capitalism

MOST BITTER FOE OF SOVIET REPUBLIC FINALLY BENDS ITS KNEES TO THE WORKERS' RULE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Announcement was made by the foreign office today that a French note recognizing the Russian Soviet government would be sent to Moscow later in the day.

The Petit Journal, in commenting upon Premier Herriot's decision to grant de jure recognition to the Soviets, said that this action placed France in a position to discuss the debt which Russia owes France.

"The first result of recognition will be the re-establishment of diplomatic relations," said the Petit Journal. "Jean Herbette is mentioned as the possible French ambassador to Moscow. M. Rakovsky, who has been representing Russia in England, probably will come to Paris."

At this moment relations between the Russian and British governments are somewhat strained owing to the forgery of an alleged letter from Zinoviev.

Great Britain has recognized the Moscow government and has negotiated a treaty with the Soviets, but it has not yet been ratified by the British parliament. A similar treaty probably will be effected by France to protect commercial interests in Russia.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

RAMSAY MACDONALD'S outburst against Gergory Zinoviev, served the same purpose in the present British election campaign as LaFollette's denunciation of the Communists of America served here. No matter what government succeeds the present in England, it cannot afford to ignore Russia. It should be remembered that when the German government raided the Russian trade legation, a few months ago, it acted very impudently. But it crawled on its knees afterwards and begged the Soviet's pardon.

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD is grateful to Ramsay MacDonald because that gentleman brought about peace in Europe. Peace! What about the 23,000 workers in Spanish dungeons and the thousands in the prisons of the other European countries. MacDonald the pacifist never spoke a word in their behalf, tho he made a long speech in favor of the bloody bandits of Georgia, who want to get the czar back on the throne again. And to get nearer home to MacDonald, he did not bring peace to the 250,000 Hindu rebels who are filling the Indian jails, because of their war against British imperialism. But, beg pardon dear Villard, they are Hindus not Europeans. You said MacDonald created an atmosphere of peace in Europe, and of course you mean "to European capitalism." We admit you have us on a technical point.

EACH capitalist party has its own set of labor fakers. The republican party has Messrs. John L. Lewis and T. V. O'Connor to issue its "labor statements." The democrats have the notorious George L. Berry and P. Morton, the latter head of the Structural Iron Workers, while LaFollette heads them all with Sammy Gompers who was forced to desert his old affinity, the democratic party, by the great mass revolt against the old parties. Sam is getting sick now and the rival chiefs will soon be fighting over his office.

NOT since the republicans planted the stink bombs in the Rhode Island legislature to oust the democrats, was there so much consternation created in Providence, the capital of the state, as when patriotic and somewhat startled citizens noticed inscriptions chalked on the sidewalks and public buildings advising people to vote the Communist ticket. The police are looking for the miscreants. Perhaps Spolansky can tell in what mail the orders to do this arrived from Moscow. The republicans and democrats who tried to "stink" each other out of office have now united their odors.

3 SHOT FIRERS MEET DEATH IN INDIANA MINE

Spark Blown Into Gas Pocket Blast Cause

(Special to the Daily Worker)

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Oct. 28.—Laboring 14 hours between walls of flame, a rescue party of eight men, recovered the third body from the Black Hawk coal mine, 12 miles south east of here today, following an explosion.

The dead:
George Ettle, Brazil.
John McKee, Terre Haute.
Frank Hawkins, Pimento.

Victims of Windy Shot.

Three men, shot firers at the Black Hawk mine, were the victims of a "windy shot" which caused an explosion 1,300 feet from the entrance last night.

Early today the bodies of two had been recovered, one of whom was identified as Frank Hawkins, 27, of Lewis, Ind. A spark blowing into a gas pocket caused the explosion, it was believed.

The three men were employed yesterday as shot firers to substitute for three men injured last Friday in a gas explosion at the mine, and they had been in the mine only one hour when the blast occurred.

FATHER AND SON ARE VICTIMS OF SAME SAW, IN THE SAME SAWMILL

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Oct. 28.—Lester Kimball, 17, suffered the loss of his right arm at the elbow and the left hand was so severely mangled that amputation may be necessary when he fell into a portable saw mill near Grass Creek, near here.

Three years ago the boy's father, Edward Kimball, was killed when he fell into the same saw.

Pledge Support in Fight on Alliance of British and American Imperialism

THE campaign waged by the Workers Party to win the American workers for a revolutionary class struggle against American capitalism is being watched with great interest and hope by the workers all over the world, is the word received by the Workers Party in a cablegram from the Communist Party of Great Britain.

The success of the Workers Party in the fight it is making in the election campaign will give the workers of other countries new courage for their own struggles, the cablegram declares. The part played by American capitalism in Europe thru the Dawes plan makes the fight which the American workers make of great importance to the workers of all other countries.

The cablegram in full reads as follows:

London, Oct. 27-28.

Workers Party of America,
1113 W. Washington Blvd.,
Chicago, Ill.

Communist Party of Great Britain sends Workers Party of America wishes for success Comrades Foster, Ruthenberg and other in presidential election. Eyes of workers of the world turned today upon efforts of vanguard of American proletarian to consolidate and lead to victory class alliance of workers and exploited farmers.

Workers of Great Britain see in your great fight first serious challenge of American capitalism, which today is center of world imperialism.

Congratulate you on exposing class co-operation policy of socialist party which is following the trickster LaFollette.

In your success the workers everywhere will gain new confidence and strength for own struggle against both British imperialism and lackeys of imperialism masquerading as labor party leaders, who want British workers to co-operate with British capitalists in exploiting subject races of British Empire and of Europe.

Against unholy alliance American and British imperialism we fight with you for united battle front of American and British workers and of all exploited peoples.

ALBERT INKPIN, Secretary.

To this cable the Workers Party has sent the following reply:

Communist Party of Great Britain,
16 Kings St. S. W., Covent Gardens,
London, England.

Workers Party welcomes your fraternal wishes of success and pledge for a united fight against British and American imperialism.

The MacDonalds and LaFolettes are the capitalists' last line of defense, to which they turn when the workers can only be held in check thru such betrayers. Your splendid fight, which has made Communism and the Russian Workers' Soviet Republic the issue before the workers of Great Britain in the election gives promise that these workers will soon repudiate MacDonald, the tool of British imperialism, and take their stand with the Communists in a revolutionary class struggle thru which they can alone win their freedom from the oppression of capitalism.

The efforts of world imperialism, still shaking under the blows dealt it by the war and the Russian workers, to reconsolidate itself must be met by a united working class the world over, under whose iron blows it will go down forever.

C. E. RUTHENBERG, Secretary.

German Workers Watch Fight Here Seeking Aid in War on Dawes Plan

THE German workers, who under the Dawes plan are becoming the slaves of American capitalism as well as of their native exploiters, look with hope upon the struggle which the Workers Party is carrying on against capitalism and its candidates in this country.

The following cablegram from the Communist Party of Germany, which the German capitalists and their social-democratic supporters are trying to destroy, expresses the attitude of the German workers on the fight the Workers Party is making here:

Berlin, Oct. 28, 1924.

Workers Party of America,
1113 W. Washington Blvd.,
Chicago, Ill.

For the first time in the history of the United States, which is the strongest capitalist nation of the world, a representative of the revolutionary workers is a candidate for the presidency. He stands alone in the fight for the interests of the workers against the candidates of the capitalists, Coolidge, Davis, and LaFollette. The German workers, persecuted and tortured by the capitalists of their country under the sway of the American bankers, call out to the American workers as a result of their ten years of misery and suffering: DOWN WITH THE CAPITALIST AGENTS, COOLIDGE, DAVIS, LA FOLLETTE! LONG LIVE THE AMERICAN WORKERS! LONG LIVE THEIR PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE FOSTER!

Central Executive Committee,
Communist Party of Germany.

COMMUNISTS IN CHICAGO IN BIG MEETING DRIVE

Thousands of thinking Chicago workers are signifying in no uncertain manner that they are thru with the elephant, the jackass and the bobcat, and the rest of the capitalist political zoo.

In the last week of the campaign a storm of carefully planned and faithfully executed meetings, indoors and open-air, are being held all over Chicago.

Monday night a special drive of many street meetings were held in the first congressional district for Gordon W. Owens, our colored comrade and candidate. Tuesday, in the sixth district, six meetings were arranged.

But this is not all. The meetings are only the opening gun in a rapid-fire attack of street corner appeals, mass meetings, factory gate and house-to-house distribution of Communist literature which will mark the final week of the campaign in Chicago. All workers must watch the

STEEL TRUST DECLARES AN EXTRA DIVIDEND TO COMMON STOCK HOLDERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Directors of the U. S. Steel corporation at their meeting this afternoon declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock, in addition to the regular dividend of $1.25 a share.

Net earnings of the corporation for the quarter September 30, 1924, were $30,718,415, against $47,053,680 in the same quarter last year.

Surplus after taxes and charges amount to $15,078,110 equal after preferred dividends to $1.72 a share on the common stock.

Taste of Boycott.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 28.—The League of Nations council this afternoon voted to exclude Americans from bidding for the construction of the $1,000,000 league peace palace. Only citizens of member nations will be allowed to compete.

U. S. Busy Protesting.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The American legation has handed the Persian government a note protesting against the tardiness in punishing the slayers of Vice-Consul Imbrie, according to an agency despatch from Teheran.

NEW YORK'S EAST SIDE RALLYING TO COMMUNISM

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 28.—The Communists en masse invaded the former stronghold of the socialist party, Abe Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward, and the labor fakers on the lower east side.

The Red Night there not only resulted in the complete rout of the socialist forces, but it brought a wonderful response from the Jewish workers, now becoming disgusted with the yellows.

Socialists Get Busy.

As soon as the socialists heard of the proposed Red Night in this district, they decided to prevent the Communists from reaching the workers at all costs. Therefore they sent a squad of socialists to Rutgers' Square with instructions to camp there from noon hour in order to hold the meeting place, in spite of all their efforts, however, the series of meetings ar-

BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS ACCEPTS ZINOVIEV INVITATION TO INVESTIGATE FORGED DOCUMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The Trade Union Congress announced today that it would accept the offer of G. Zinoviev, president of the Communist International to send a mission to Russia to investigate the forgery published by the foreign office.

All indications now are that the "plot" will prove a boomerang. Whether MacDonald's apparent duplicity will have damaging effects on the labor party's interests at the polls, or only on his own personal fortunes is too early to predict with any degree of certainty.

It is not too early to say, however, that the rank and file of British labor are thoroly disgusted with the attitude of the premier and also of Snowden and the other pronounced Communist haters in the labor party government.

The Soviet government has sent a sharp note to England demanding an apology for the charges of subversive propaganda.

No Such Letter.

In his message to the British trade union congress, Zinoviev, said "There was not and there could not be such a letter. The fabrication is so crude that no one, not even a too literate official of the foreign office, but could see its falsity.

"It seems that the laurels of Mr. Hughes are being divided by some one in England. It is obvious that we have in this case a too clear election manuever."

Zinoviev also referred to an offer he made to Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, to establish the falsity of certain documents which the latter was using in his campaign against Soviet Russia, but Hughes ran away from the offer fearing exposure as an arrant liar.

Special Commission.

"We are prepared to offer to the foreign office even more than that, namely, to allow the general council of the Trade Union Congress, thru a special commission or thru its delegation appointed to visit the Soviet union, to investigate immediately the question, regarding the authenticity of the alleged document. The decision of this commission will be accepted by us as final."

Most of the members of the MacDonald ministry have accepted the Rakovsky statement that the letter is a forgery. The following statement was issued from the labor party headquarters:

"Several statements have got into currency during the week-end which are untrue; first, that the letter, attributed to Zinovier, had been discussed by the cabinet; second, that it had been intercepted in the post, photographed and delivered to the Communists in the ordinary way, and finally that instructions had been sent to labor candidates not to speak of the Russian treaty.

"Foreign office officials consider that the document is authentic. Rakovsky declares that it is a forgery, and obviously this issue cannot be finally settled one way or other until after election. The whole circumstances, surrounding the letter attributed to Zinoviev, are regarded with deepest suspicion in labor quarters. It is singular that copies of the letter were in the possession of The Daily Mail and conservative headquarters before it had been issued by the foreign office to the general press.

"While the question of the authenticity or otherwise of the document remains open, there can be no doubt at all that the vigorous note to Rakovsky entirely disproves the allegation, made by the enemies of labor, that the government is under the heel of Communists. It gives a guarantee that the agreement between this country and Russia will be enforced by the government, both in letter and in spirit.

"Labor invites the conservative leaders and The Daily Mail to be frank with the public and state how they came into possession of the documents."

Foreign Office Trick.

The Daily Herald, official organ of the British Trade Union Congress seeks to throw the blame on the foreign office, of which MacDonald is

FOSTER SPEAKS TO BIGGEST NEW HAVEN AUDIENCE

Receives Hearty Ovation From Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 28.—Foster's campaign speech in Music Hall, New Haven, Conn., will remain the talk of the class conscious workers for some time to come. He won his audience and held them for two hours while he preached the message of Communism.

Music Hall, the largest in town, is used by all political parties for their rallies. The Communists succeeded in attracting a larger crowd than any other party, even tho they charged an admission fee. The democrats with all their candidates, with an outside state governor and a band of music, could not muster as many as the seven hundred who came last night.

The attendance far overshadowed that at the two previous political meetings run by Local New Haven.

A Different Speech

How different from the spread eagle type of political oratory indulged in by capitalist politicians! Foster gave a masterful presentation of the underlying facts of modern civilization, of the capitalist system of wage slavery. He was not concerned with a mere discussion of personalities, but with the necessity for a change to a new

CONFERENCE FOR FOSTER AND GITLOW HOLDS TWO MEETINGS THIS WEEK

The Foster-Gitlow conference will hold two mass meetings this week, to forward the support of the Communist candidates of the Workers Party, who advocate the only program which brings real working class rule—a Soviet Republic and the dictatorship of the proletariat as against the powers of capitalism.

To-night.

At Liberty Club House, 3420 Roosevelt Road. Speakers in both English and Jewish, including J. Louis Engdahl, candidate for U. S. senator, Arne Swabeck, Frank Pellegrino, candidate for congress, N. Shaffer, speaking in Jewish, and S. Lifschitz, representing the Left Paola Zion.

Friday Night!

At Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd. Speakers in both English and Jewish, including Arne Swabeck, Sam Hammersmark, candidate for congress, M. Loonin, speaking in Jewish for the Workers Party, and M. Schuchter, of the Left Paola Zion.

nominally in charge. According to the Herald, D. J. Gregory double-crossed MacDonald while he was absent. This comment is quoted for what it is worth:

"The statement made during the week that the document had been considered by the cabinet is absolutely false. It was not a cabinet matter, but a foreign office matter, and as soon as experts had convinced themselves (albeit wrongly) of the authenticity of the document action was taken without delay. A draft note was prepared for use first as a basis for a friendly request for an explanation from Rakovsky in accordance with the normal diplomatic procedure. During MacDonald's absence in South Wales that note was completed and sent to Rakovsky by Gregory and issued to the press. This action was taken as a routine matter without consulation, either with MacDonald or Ponsonby, who was also away in his constituency. Those are the simple facts about which so much mystery has been made."

Blames Second International.

Albert Thomas, head of the league of nations' labor bureau, branded as silly and impudent the charge that the Amsterdam International framed the letter. He declared however, that it is quite possible the forgery was the work of the Second International with which Ramsay MacDonald is connected.

The election campaign, which will terminate at the polls tomorrow, is winding up in a storm of hatred.

A Press Plot.

The opposition press today was unanimous in its denunciation of Premier MacDonald while the Daily Herald, the labor organ, continued its "exposure" of what it termed "the machinations of a plot by the press of England."

The real truth of the "Soviet plot" note which G. Zinoviev, its supposed signer, denounces as a forgery, will not be known until after election.

Disorders continue to mark the closing hours of the campaign.

Predictions as to the outcome tomorrow still were difficult to make, but it seems fairly certain the tories will gain in seats and may be able to form the next government, with labor as their chief opponents. Liberal strength seems dwindling.

THE following spicy statement from the lips of the versatile genius, George Bernard Shaw, is worth money to those who consider it a form of suicide to take dead animal into the human stomach. It came out of a three cornered debate between Shaw, G. K. Chesterton and Dr. Josiah Oldfield, well-known dietetic physician. Shaw said: "I have repeatedly commented on the characteristic ferocity of vegetarians. The bull rhinoceros, elephant and human vegetarian are typical examples of dangerous and unbridled fury. Vegetable eating. Armies fed on barley have conquered half the world; clans fed on oatmeal or potatoes have had to be exterminated because of their incorrigible pugnacity. Meat keeps people quiet, if they get enough of it. A week of beefsteak would change me into the mildest of men. Meat has not much value as food, but it is incomparable as dope."

THE New York Times takes some of its contemporaries to task for branding as "Communists" Americans who are merely out to reform the capitalist system. It is poor sportsmanship, the Times argues, to call a man like LaFollette, a Communist. LaFollette may be all right according to the oracle of Times Square, but not a menace like William Z. Foster, who is a real enemy of mankind. Such rare intelligence in a capitalist paper and particularly in the editorial columns of the New York Times, proves that the resources of the human race are inexhaustible, and that even a capitalist editor can learn something.

WE learn with considerable interest that the National Association of Ice Industries has formulated a code of ethics for icemen. The code has not yet reached us but no doubt the iceman staggering under a big chunk of frozen water, will be told how to raise his hat and utter polite grunts as the lady of the house condescendingly opens the door so that he can lodge his load in the ice box. It is not very likely that anything will be said in the code about the ice merchants who cheat the drivers.

system, the Communist order. A student of economics and politics, he exhibited not only conditions in America, but throughout the entire world, with an intimate grasp of his subject.

The Communist campaign was again shown to be a means of education, and not a vote catching device. The main part of the talk dealt with the evils of modern society, and with the cure. Unemployment, poverty, misery, and war were laid at the door of the capitalist system, which gave them birth.

Another War Coming.

The economic nature of the last war, and the inevitable trend toward the next one, were clearly demonstrated. The growing antagonism between Japan and the United States over control of the East meant war. Foster then showed how the capitalists mould public opinion, so as to draw them to the workers into war, even as in the last. As against the silly proposal of LaFollette to have a referendum on war, Foster urged the substitution of the class war for imperialist war, and pointed to the Communist International as the body that would lead the working masses in their effort to bring about the world revolution.

Whose Dictatorship?

For the benefit of those in the audience who knew little of communism, Foster, by examples drawn from his own experience in the steel strike of 1919, showed how the capitalists used the courts and the police to crush the strike. He pictured the sinister influence of the masters, who controlled the schools, the newspapers, the factories, and the churches. The destruction of the Inter-World Church Federation was laid to the Steel Trust, because the former dared to investigate and tell the truth about the brutal Empire of Steel.

The dictatorship of the proletariat was explained as the rule of the workers and farmers; while the slogan "He that does not work, neither shall he eat" was met with thunderous applause.

Foster exploded the social democratic notion of buying the industries. He showed that every decaying class, even as the slave owning aristocracy of the South, fought to retain its special interests. He showed that every rising class confiscated the property of the previous ruling class.

Social Democratic Traitors

The role of the social democrats in the various European countries, being the last bulwark of capitalism, when the reactionary parties could no longer dominate the minds of the working class, was linkened to the role which the LaFollette movement will play in this country, under similar circumstances.

The middle class was termed a doomed social class, and no amount of political bellowing could bring back competition, and the comparatively primitive days of 1776. LaFollette and his movement, charged Foster, would do nothing for the middle class, but would act as the defender of the interests of big capital.

Industry For Use

After showing that unemployment was inevitable under capitalism, Foster urged the working class to form industrial unions, so as to present a strong fighting front on the economic field, and to band together with the poor farmers on the political field, in order to take over the reins of government, and to take possession of the industries. Industry for use, as opposed to industry for private profit, was the cry.

When the name of LaFollette was first mentioned by Foster, a few of his followers applauded, but they shriveled up, as Foster fired shot after shot into the record of this false leader. This was too much for a local socialist, who is one of the prominent speakers in the LaFollette movement; in a little while he left the hall.

District Organizer Simons appealed for support of the state ticket of the Workers Party. He took up the record of the candidates on the other tickets, showing their connection with business corporations and banks.

WU PEI FU PLAYS FOR "NEUTRAL" HELP TO ROUT JAPAN'S SATRAP AND REGAIN CHINESE CAPITAL

TIEN TSIN, China, Oct. 28.—Complications, probably unexpected by the Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, who turned traitor to Wu Pei Fu and seized Peking from the rear, have arisen by the about face of General Wu, who, leaving a strong rear guard holding back the Manchurian forces of Chang Tso-lin, has arrived here with picked troops to attempt to regain the Chinese capital.

General Wu, recognized as the tool of British-American interests, is thought to have secretly called for help from the battleships of these imperialist powers. This he could get camouflaged as neutral intervention as he himself has violated, by moving troops into Tien Tsin, the protocol of 1901. Also, the supposed, "rescue" of "endangered foreigners" at Peking's capture of Peking, would provide a fine screen for American and British imperialism to advance on Peking to dislodge the Christian instrument of Japan.

U. S. to the Rescue.

TEIN TSIN, China. — Confirming previous dispatches to the DAILY WORKER, that American imperialism would come to rescue of its tool, Wu Pei Fu, in his fight to regain the Chinese capital, the U. S. S. Huron is landing strong armed forces of marines.

These forces are much larger than is admitted by capitalist correspondents and American authorities, as the 100 marines first landed are added to hourly. In addition, Americans, many of them of adventurer and mercenary type, are forming armed battalions. These moves are all carried on under the camouflage of "defense of foreign settlements."

RAIDS OF RAILWAY DETECTIVES ON HOMES OF WORKERS IS DUD

DANVILLE, Ill., Oct. 28.—Armed with search warrants, a squad of New York Central Railway detectives and special investigators, headed by Lieutenant Manning of the Chicago offices, swooped down on a score of homes of trainmen at the Danville-Chicago division of the road, whom they suspected of pilfering merchandise cars. Nothing has been given out and it is said that the investigation was a sad failure. All inquiries were referred to the U. S. marshal's office, where it was said that nothing was known as to what steps would be taken. The raid created a good deal of excitement and indignation.

PRISON AND NEW EXILE FACING JOHN SCHEDEL

Dramatizes Brutalities of Deportations

Torn from his wife and four small children, in the midst of a happy family reunion following four years of bitter separation, John Schedel, formerly of Fort Wayne, Ind., who had just worked his way back to this country after being deported in 1920, now faces a possible term of five years imprisonment, followed by immediate re-deportation to Germany.

Schedel was formerly a member of a socialist party branch in Fort Wayne, which voted to go over to the Communist movement.

Membership in the Communist Party was the sole charge against him at the time of his deportation.

Victim of Palmer Raids.

The case of Comrade Schedel dramatizes, in unforgettable fashion, the callous, brutal, inhuman deportations, separating husband and wife, and father and children, which have been going on in the United States, ever since the black days of 1920.

Schedel was a victim of ex-Attorney General Palmer's sensation-seeking "red raids," which have been thoroly exposed by the Labor Defense Council in articles published recently in the DAILY WORKER. He was arrested in 1920, and was deported to Germany as "an anarchist," altho even the reactionary Chicago Tribune quotes Fort Wayne friends as declaring that his "anarchism" consisted of protesting volubly against a weekly wage of $17.50.

When Comrade Schedel was deported, he left behind him a wife and four children. His wife was expecting a fifth.

The baby came and died within a short time. The wife had to be placed in an insane asylum. Neighbors in Fort Wayne, Ind., cared for the family and wrote regularly to the father, who was piecing a living together abroad.

Returns to United States.

Schedel could not bear to remain separated from his family under those conditions. He made his way back to the United States, despite the fact that it is a felony, punishable by five years in the federal prison, for a deportee to return to this country without permission. He hastened to Chicago and summoned his wife, who meanwhile had recovered. She arrived Monday, with their two youngest children.

A great family jubilation was being held at the hotel at 603 N. Clark St., which is operated by Comrade Schedel's sister, Mrs. Karl Mattman. In came a pair of federal "dicks" to interrupt the smiles and tears by taking Schedel to the detective bureau, thence by Division and Hoyne, by the N. W. Jewish branch; Fullerton and Western, by the Karl Marx Scandinavian branch; North Ave. and Orchard, by the Hungarian and German branches. Many well-known speakers. All in the 7th congressional district.

Defense Council Has Case.

Comrade Schedel's defense has been taken up by the Labor Defense Council, which has retained I. E. Ferguson as counsel. Money is needed for this case. In addition to the legal expenses, the Labor Defense Council is endeavoring to raise a fund to go to the assistance of Mrs. Schedel, who is in a condition of deprivation, intensified by her weak condition. FOLLOWERS OF TOBIN EXPECTED TO QUIT DAIL

DUBLIN, Oct. 28.—When the Dail Eireann meets late today it is expected that the members who are adherents of General Tobin and his "mutineer" followers, will resign and leave the assembly.

Tobin was one of the chief ring leaders in the army plot against the Cosgrave government. When the plot was exposed the leaders of the "mutineers" claimed to have been actuated by patriotism because of weak members in the cabinet.

Broke Word.

Supporters of Tobin in the Dail claim that President Cosgrave agreed with John Devoy and Judge Cohalan, of New York, that all the "mutineers" would be restored to their old positions. Cosgrave now has balked.

It was reported also that Timothy Healy, the English governor-general, might retire.

The "mutiny" and the Ulster-Free State boundary dispute, are the leading issues before the present session of the Dail.

Hungarian Countess Is Allowed to Enter Gates of American Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Countess Catherine Karolyi, wife of the former president of Hungary, is safely arrived in the United States.

She passed the portals at Ellis Island, only after slight delay, caused by the anti-Bolshevist watchman at our gates, Stanwood Menken, of the National Security League.

But the visit of Krupskaia Lenin, widow of Nikolai Lenin, to this side of the Atlantic, is still delayed. She was forbidden entry to this country two years ago, and the refusal has never been lifted.

• • • •

The Karolyi family in Hungary is possessed of great wealth. It has a high social position under capitalism. It is accepted. The Countess comes to this country for a series of lectures. She will be received into the best circles. So she passes the sacred gates that are trying to hold back the rising tide of revolution.

• • • •

Someone whispered into the sensitive ears of the superpatriot, Menken, that "The Countess" was coming to preach "Bolshevism," to "organize Communistic groups," and that in Europe she was known under the name of "Red Catherine." Such fearful tidings immediately stung Menken into action "to save America."

• • • •

But "The Countess" had plenty of connections on shore. Heading a list of women acting on a committee to receive her were Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago, campaigner for La-Follette, and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of one of Coolidge's most ardent supporters. These readily proved that "The Countess" was not tainted with "revolution," and she was allowed to land, just in time to attend the luncheon that had been arranged for her at the Metropolitan Club.

• • • •

Our comrade, Krupskaia Lenin, one of the foremost women in all Soviet Russia, did not even start the journey for these shores. She was told by Morgan's great American government that she would not be welcome.

She had but one object in coming here. That was to raise funds in aid of the Russian children who were then in dire need.

She is at the head of Russian activities on behalf of the children of the Workers' Republic. But funds were needed. The workers of the United States had contributed liberally to the relief funds of the Friends of Soviet Russia. Surely they would continue that aid on behalf of Russia's children.

• • • •

But Morgan's government at Washington declared that would be "Bolshevist propaganda." Our comrade was cabled that she would not be allowed to enter the United States. So she remained at home, worked with the means at her disposal, and a new generation of children in Soviet Russia, is blooming to manhood and womanhood knowing that the capitalist United States of America not only fears them but hates them; that many of their numbers died because of the aid that was refused under Morgan's Rule.

• • • •

Countess Catherine Karolyi will give her lectures under the auspices of women who believe in the capitalist social order; women who are supporting Coolidge, Davis and La-Follette in this year's presidential struggle. She is not a threat against, but an aid in support of things as they are.

Our comrade, Krupskaia Lenin, would have spoken to the great mass meetings of workers and farmers, greeting her with the singing of "The International." They would have contributed of their meager savings, to help the children of Soviet Russia.

Our comrade would have brought a message of the new day that is dawning everywhere, that is a menace to world capitalism. Therefore she was rejected.

• • • •

Thus the government at Washington shows its class character. It confesses itself again but the agent of capitalist rule.

Communists have not created the class war. The war between the classes is here. Communists merely organize and lead the workers and poor farmers to victory in that war.

BIG JOHNSTONE RALLY IS GOOD START FOR FINAL CAMPAIGN WEEK

The successful mass meeting at Imperial Hall, when J. W. Johnstone, candidate for congress, addressed a filled hall of workers and pointed out the necessity of a Soviet Republic of workers and poor farmers, marked a good beginning of the final campaign week in Chicago.

Red Lights Announce Meeting.

The north side of Chicago in the vicinity of Lincoln, Fullerton and Halsted streets was lit up by blazing red lights and announcements telling of the Workers Party campaign rally at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted street, were so thoroughly distributed that no worker living in that district failed to know of the meeting.

As a result the Imperial Hall was well filled with an interested audience of workers who came to hear the Workers Party candidate in the ninth congressional district.

Speaks to Workers.

Johnstone, member of the Painters' Union, has been active in the labor movement of this country all his life. When he speaks of the labor movement and its leadership, he knows what he is talking about and it does not take any audience of workers very long to appreciate that fact.

When he showed that the trouble with the labor movement today was not with the trade unions but with the class collaborating leaders and that the Workers Party was for making the unions truly representative of the workers by ridding it of false leaders and replacing them with men who truly represent the workers, the audience understood and agreed, judging from the applause.

Many workers came up after the meeting to ask questions about the north side branch, about Workers Party literature and a few of them signed up for membership.

Street Meetings.

At several corners in the first congressional district, where the colored Communist, Gordon W. Owens, is the candidate, big crowds were held by several speakers. On the near west side, at Madison and Green streets, one of the best meetings of the night took place, a large crowd gathering, and over 100 DAILY WORKERS were sold.

I. W. W. MEMBERS MAKE CHANGES IN CONSTITUTION

Attempt More Closely Knit Organization

By KARL REEVE.

The Industrial Workers of the World have been forced by recent disintegration of the organization to make changes in the constitution which will aid better future leadership and more centralized control of the policies and propaganda of the I. W. W.

The present convention, meeting in Emmet Memorial Hall, has ruled that the general executive board shall have full control over policies advocated in all I. W. W. papers and that in future administrative officials may run for re-election.

This ruling eliminates the clause making it compulsory for administrators of the I. W. W. to return to the point of production after serving one year in office.

Rowan Sticks by Injunction.

Meanwhile James Rowan, in Master in Chancery Fred Berstein's office was refusing to withdraw his injunction against the Doyle-Fisher group against even the advice of Bernstein himself. One of the I. W. W. members told the DAILY WORKER that Rowan's lawyer, William Bigelow, has declared that now that the I. W. W. has been forced into the courts, "the organization must behave itself," and the entire organization "must submit to law and order."

The funds of the I. W. W. have all but given out, the convention has already been indorsed by thirty I. W. W. branches thruout the country, and defense work is being hampered by the injunction. Attorney Rowan, more vicious in pushing the injunction than the capitalist judge before whom he pleads, continues to give his testimony against the Doyle-Fisher faction. Rowan repeated to the court yesterday, testimony which he presented in the injunction, emphasizing his claim to have been assaulted by "gunmen" in the I. W. W. headquarters, and afterwards thrown down the stairs.

William Cunnea told the DAILY WORKER that his clients are anxious to withdraw the injunction and he believes disputes within the I. W. W should be settled out of court. He declared the case might take as much as a week or more. Rumors are afoot that two other members of Rowan's self-appointed general executive board have followed James Griffith's lead and come out for the withdrawal of the injuction, leaving Rowan with practically no following in his stubborn action.

The arguments advanced yesterday for more centralized control of the I. W. W. press were that in the past many publications issued by branches and subordinate parts of the I. W. W. have misinterpreted the principles of the organization. Chairman P. J. Welinder cited examples of past straying of the "Industrial Worker" from I. W. W. principles.

The convention also empowered the general executive board to institute a uniform system of bookkeeping in all subordinate parts of the organization and to examine and audit the books of all industrial unions or branches. The general executive board was also empowered to settle questions by mail or telegraph which come up for action in the field.

The offices of general organiser and assistant secretary-treasurer were abolished by vote of the convention. The clause in the constitution naming the term of office as one year was amended so that administrative officers may be re-elected. Nominees for office must be members of the organization for three years, acording to another change in the constitution, and 18 months of this period prior to nomination the nominee must be continuously in good standing.

Industrial unions were instructed by the convention to pay per capita dues to the temporary administrative committee.

ranged by the Workers Party on the lower East Side was in every respect among the most successful ever arranged in New York City.

On no less than eight crowded corners various well-known Communists of New York exposed the role of the yellow socialists as allies of capitalism, and pointed out the necessity for a working class revolution. These meetings were followed by the grand wind-up meeting at Rutgers' and Grand Broadway.

Here an enormous crowd gathered. Speaking a few doors away from the Forward building, Comrade Ravitch told of the betrayal of the working class by the so-called labor paper, the Jewish Daily Forward. He gave numerous examples of how this sheet had served the interests of the capitalist class against the workers. Numerous other speakers held the crowd until midnight as they explained what the socialist party was doing to their unions and to their political movement. Comrade Poynts in a scathing attack on the paper she called "The Jewish Daily Backward," pointed out that this organ of the socialist party was but another proof of the fact that the Workers Party was now the only party which represented the workers.

New York comrades, watch for your meetings, below, and all workers of New York, turn out! Turn out!

On a Labor Faker's Trail

LEWIS AND HIS FORMER FOE IN UNITED FRONT

Farrington Again Eats His Own Words

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.
(Article Fifteen)

In view of the correspondence published in the previous articles and the excerpts from the speech delivered by Frank Farrington at the special Oklahoma convention, in which he pledged undying enmity to John L. Lewis and undying loyalty to the cause of Alexander Howat, the right-about-face of this Napoleon of labor fakers is astonishing. Or at least it would be to anybody who did not have the privilege of following his crooked career.

There is one serious flaw in Farrington's technique and that is his weakness for putting his thoughts on paper. Had he not on several occasions declared in writing that Alexander Howat was not a dual unionist and that the progressive miners' movement which which Howat identified himself was not out to smash the miners' union, he might be able to deny his former position on this matter.

The Damning Evidence

The policy followed in these articles from the beginning, is to leave nothing to the imagination of our readers but to rely solely on documentary evidence and make only charges that can be substantiated. Rumors and hearsay are only given for what they are worth the any lawyer will admit that circumstantial evidence is sometimes the most damagingly effective.

For a while Farrington thought he could use the progressive movement and the Howat case as a club against Lewis. He was in that frame of mind when he wrote the following letter:

"Springfield, Illinois, May 5, 1923

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I am returning herewith the circular letter which accompanied your letter of May 3rd. I do not think the men behind the so-called progressive movement have any intention whatever of establishing a dual organization of mine workers, instead their activities, I think, are due entirely to their determination to clean up some of the corruption that is going on in our international union.

"I think they are making a mistake by terming themselves the progressive members of the United Mine Workers of America, but I am quite certain they have no intentions of trying to establish a dual organization. Instead of trying to establish a dual organization I think they are trying to mobilize those who are opposed to corruption in the United Mine Workers of America, so that an effective protest may be made.

"Alex Howat has repeatedly declared that he will have nothing to do with the establishment of a dual organization of mine workers and I am satisfied that he meant just what he said, I do think however, that Howat has much reason for complaint and he will no doubt identify himself with this element in our union because he believes that is the only way he can secure justice for himself and the Kansas mine workers.

"Yours truly,

"F. Farrington, President."

When Crooks Unite

Yet shortly after writing this letter and thru the good office of Sam Gompers and "Honest" John L. Walker the two notorious labor fakers got together and are now united in the work of nailing to the cross every militant in the miners' union who will not bow the knee to the machine.

Therefore the following letter:

"Springfield, Illinois, May 21, 1923

"Mr. John L. Lewis, President,
United Mine Workers of America,
Indianapolis, Ind.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I have been observing with considerable concern the activities of the various elements that are working to destroy the long standing sane, constructive and effective principles of the United Mine Workers of America. These elements are becoming greater in number and stronger in influence and the result of their work is becoming more obvious every day and cannot but fill with concern progressive and conservative men who have the interest of the United Mine Workers of America at heart, and my belief is that if the men who believe in the principles and policies of the United Mine Workers of America do not soon get together and fight shoulder to shoulder in combatting these destructive elements it is only a matter of time until they will gain control of our union and the red flag will be our standard, or else demoralization and division in the ranks of the mine workers will prevail and the effectiveness of our union will be destroyed.

Admits He's Honest!

"I have no political ambition to gratify, neither have I any selfish ends to serve and I have no fear of any personal consequences. As for myself I am confident that I would be able to get along nicely and with more peace of mind regardless of what happens to our union, (perhaps as president of the Peabody Coal company—T. J. O'F.) but I have a deep concern over what may happen to the United Mine Workers of America, and I feel that those who believe in constructive thought and action, should get together if the mine workers of the country are to get the best results and those who are actuated by a desire to destroy are to be defeated.

"I feel that the interests of our union are far superior to any personal interests it could possible have and that my personal interest I may have should be submerged in the interest in the United Mine Workers of America. Therefore I write to suggest, and I do so on my own initiative, that you and I have a conference to see if we can find some honorable, common ground upon which we may stand so that instead of fighting each other we may get together and fight those who are vigorously trying to destroy the United Mine Workers of America. This letter is not written in a spirit of submission nor in personal interest, but because of the belief as I already stated, that the time is not far distant when those who believe in sane and constructive progress must get together if those who advocate the impossible are to be defeated and our union is to continue to protect and promote the interests of our membership.

"If you feel the same way as I have expressed myself, herein, I shall be glad to hear from you as to whether or not my suggestion, as to the conference, is acceptable to you."

"Yours truly,

"F. Farrington, President."

Lightning Change Artist.

Only fifteen days intervened between the date on which this letter was written and the one of May 5. in which he commended the progressive miners for their efforts in trying to clean the union of the corruption, which Farrington held could be attributed to Lewis. Why the change of front in so short a time? It seems to me the letter explains the reason.

Lewis in a brief letter accepted the peace offer of Farrington. He writes:

"Raleigh Hotel,
Washington, D. C.
May 25, 1923

"Mr. Frank Farrington, President,
District 12, U. M. W. of A.,
Springfield, Ill.,

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Your letter of May 1 was forwarded to me here. I have no objections to your suggestions for a personal conference. When I return to Indianapolis or Springfield, which I expect will be in the course of a week or ten days, I will communicate with you so that we can arrange the time and place of meeting.

"Yours truly,

"John L. Lewis, President."

They Buried Their Dirks

The proposal conference was held and the pipe of peace was smoked and the following letter by Farrington tells the story:

"Springfield, Ill., June 10, 1923.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Enclosed herewith is copy of letter written by me under date of May 31st, 1923, and addressed to President John L. Lewis. Enclosed also a copy of his reply to my letter.

"As a result of this correspondence, President Lewis called at my office on June 6th, and we had a conference lasting several hours. As a result of this conference, I felt that from now on, there will be co-operation instead of antagonism between the International and District Unions, and that a more harmonious relationship will exist.

"No doubt stories will be circulated, many of which will be false as to why the old antagonism no longer exists between President Lewis and myself; therefore my reason for sending you the enclosed subject matter, which will enable you to know why and how the change was accomplished.

"President Lewis seemed to be in accord with my opinion as to the dangers and difficulties that are confronting the United Mine Workers of America, and readily agreed that if we were to get the best results for the mine workers of the country there must be closer co-operation between men who believe in constructive progress.

"In this whole matter I have no personal interests to serve, no selfish ambition to satisfy and I do not fear the antagonism of any man. My only desire is to do what my conscience tells me is necessary to promote the interests of the United Mine Workers of America.

"Yours truly,

"F. Farrington, President."

To Save His Job

The effect of the deal between the erstwhile enemies, Farrington and Lewis was soon apparent. The president of the Illinois Miners' Union in his two rambling letters makes it quite clear that he made up with Lewis and forgot his thieving brother's and his own corruption, in order to make a desperate attempt to save his own official neck from the wrath of the members of District 12. He soon found good and sufficient cause to desert Alex Howat despite his letter of May 5, published above and his noble declarations at the Oklahoma special convention.

The following letter is self-explanatory.

"Springfield, Ill., June 2.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Replying to your letter of recent date I advise that I assume that the case of Alexander Howat will be an issue in our next International Convention and that a decision will be rendered by that body. I have done everything in my power to get him reinstated to membership in our union as a matter of fact. I led his fight from the very beginning and I not only gave him my moral support but I recommended that he be given the financial support of District No. 12, and financial support was given him and the Kansas miners without stint.

The Fake Excuse.

However recently he has aligned himself with Wm. Z. Foster and other well known leaders in the I. W. W. all of whom are working to destroy the United Mine Workers of America. Under the circumstances I cannot longer identify myself with Howat and I have written to him to that effect. When he identifies himself with men whom he knows are enemies of the United Mine Workers of America, then I am done and I refuse to identify myself with men of that calibre.

"It was a great disappointment to me to learn that Alex had lined up with the enemies of our union. He surely could not do his own case any good by following that course while on the other hand he had done his case irreparable harm.

"I shall continue to do everything I can for the Kansas miners but now that Alex has joined forces with the enemies of our union he will have to make his own fight in his own way. Under the circumstances I can do no more for him.

"Yours truly,

"F. Farrington, President."

The Unholy Alliance

This was the fruit of the deal between the two noted fakers. From then on the two waged a relentless fight against the progressive forces within the union. The basis of the bargain made by Lewis and Farrington was that Farrington on his side agreed to drop Howat, stop pilloriying Lewis and his brothers as convicted crooks, while Lewis on the other hand agreed to forget his private war on Farrington. The result was a united front at the Indianapolis convention, where Farrington went down the line with Lewis on every big issue that shook the convention. Had the struggle between the two fakers continued until January 1924, it is not likely that Lewis would be today president of the International Union but would have been thrown out of his office under impeachment proceedings.

The climax of the Lewis-Farrington deal was an official statement denouncing the progressive miners' movement and placing it in the category of a dual movement to the U. M. W. of A. Officials of the international Union and the Districts were ordered to take steps to bring charges against any member belonging to this organization and have them expelled if found guilty.

This closes a chapter in Farrington's career which compares in blackness, treachery and deceit with anything recorded in the history of the American trade union movement. But while Farrington is sinking lower and lower in the esteem of the miners the star of Alexander Howat is rising and the rank and file of the coal diggers are preparing to give Farrington the price of his treachery in the coming for officers that will take place in the first week of December next.

The concluding articles of this series will deal with Farrington's efforts to dispose of Duncan MacDonald and the progressives of the Springfield District and other incidents in the career of Len Small's chief labor lieutenant.

New Revelations Are Expected in Doheny Oil Leasing Scandal

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 28.—Further chapters in the story of E. L. Doheny's leasing of the navy oil lands were scheduled to be told here today by Edward C. Finney, first assistant secretary of the interior, when trial of the government's suit to cancel Doheny contracts and leases in the Elk Hills district, California, was resumed in federal court.

Finney, who is appearing as the government's "star" witness, was expected to reveal details concerning testimony he gave late yesterday as to "impatience," he said Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, had shown relative to progress made in "the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii matter."

It is also expected Finney would be questioned further relative to instructions of Fall that negotiations regarding leasing of the California oil lands be kept secret. Information on the California leases was ordered withheld by Fall, Finney testified, until "the Pearl Harbor deal was closed."

Would Compel Religious Instruction

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 28.—Not content with efforts to eliminate textbooks on evolution from the schools of California and substitute compulsory reading of the Bible, the religious zealots of the state are urging that children be permitted to leave school early once a week and receive religious instruction in a private institution instead of using the time to acquire education. A bill to this effect is sponsored by the state council for religious instruction, and is said to be backed by all denominations. It provides that children whose parents do not wish them to be taught Biblical legends shall be obliged to learn "practical ethics" during this period.

BIGGEST BOSTON MEETING HEARS FOSTER SPEECH

Communist Carries His Campaign to Boston

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 28.—More than a thousand workers filled Scenic Auditorium to capacity in Boston and listened to the Communist candidate for president, William Z. Foster, on the Workers Party ticket.

The meeting was the most successful ever held in Boston by the Workers Party from every point of view.

Analyzes LaFollette Movement.

Comrade Foster held the attention of his audience from start to finish with the clearest and most direct Communist message delivered in this city for a long time.

LaFollette buttons were very much in evidence on the coats of union men and women who had been swept off their feet by the LaFollette illusion. Comrade Foster's handling of the LaFollette movement was masterful in its clear and concise analysis. Foster in Boston explained the class basis of the LaFollette movement so convincingly and so clearly that it made a lasting impression upon every worker present.

Without one unnnecessary word or phrase, Comrade Foster laid bare the basis of capitalist society and the capitalist state; with simple illustrations drawn from the daily lives of the workers, Foster sent home the Communist message. The capitalist dictatorship was exposed by citing the actual experiences of the workers in the coal, steel and railroad strikes while the grip of the capitalist class upon all existing institution was shown by a simple examination of the function of school, church and press.

Unemployment, the menace of imperialistic war and capitalist exploitation was stressed as the real issues in this campaign.

The role of the Workers Party and the Communist International in the proletarian revolution was simply and plainly told by Comrade Foster and the necessity for the dictatorship of the proletariat in the place of the capitalist dictatorship was brought out so clearly that on one present could mistake the aims of the Communist movement.

LaFolletteite Disillusioned.

As one disillusioned LaFollette trade unionist who joined the party said: "I have waited to hear Foster before finally making up my mind on these issues. To hear Foster is to be convinced."

And that about sums up the attitude of the great majority of those present.

Comrade Foster made the collection appeal and a total of nearly $350 was taken up.

Comrade Harry J. Canter presided and Comrade John J. Ballam, Communist candidate for governor of Massachusetts, made a brief introductory speech.

Meeting Splendidly Arranged.

The meeting was splendidly arranged and managed under the direction of Comrade Robert Zelma, secretary of the Boston City Central Committee, and the effect of the meeting will be to stir up greater enthusiasm and spur our comrades on to more tireless efforts for our party in Boston.

Where They Speak

Communist campaign meetings planned before election day are as follows:

Greatest Radio in Europe Broadcasts Speech in Esperanto

By GEORGE SAVILLE.

NEW YORK CITY.—The Esperanto Weekly published at Leipzig, Germany, gives an account of radio broadcasting, in the name of the Comintern, from the Moscow station on Sept. 1, of a speech by G. Demidjuk in both Russian and Esperanto at the Fourth Congress of the Anti-Nationalist World association held in Brussels.

The Moscow wireless, the greatest in Europe, with a wave length of 3200 m., and a radius of 5,000 kilometers, gave the story in detail so that Esperantists in distant lands picked it up and, in Soviet Russia, the press of the provinces printed detailed accounts of the congress at which Comrade Ernest Toller was chairman.

BOSSES IN THE PRINTING TRADES WAR ON WAGES

Union Draws Up Its List of Counter Demands

The bosses have begun their expected attack on the workers in the printing trades. They started with an offensive to cut wages and further reduce the living standard of the workers. Only a united and militant defense can defeat the attack.

The Chicago Franklin Association (the employers' organization), on Oct. 21, notified the Chicago Typographical Union of their intention to reopen negotiations on the commercial job scale. According to the contract either group can open negotiations after 60 days' notice.

Try To Reduce Wages

The letter of the Franklin Association shows an attempt on the part of the bosses to reduce wages. This reduction in wages will undoubtedly be followed by attempts to force the union to relinquish many conditions which it has won. This aggressiveness on the part of the employers is in line with the policy of the bosses' associations all over the country. They are preparing for a wholesale attack on the unions in the printing trades.

The members of the Chicago Typographical Union No. 16 in a meeting at Hodcarriers' Hall, Sunday, Oct. 26, decided to enter the following counter demands to those of the employers.

1. To demand an increase in wages to cover the deficit in budget.
2. Reiteration of the demand for 40 hours for night workers.
3. Double time for overtime.
4. Retention of percentage system governing wage standards of apprentices.

Get 47 Weeks' Work

According to the U. S. department of labor statistics for May 1924, stated the chairman of the scale committee, "the budget of a skilled worker calls for an income of $2,334.48. In San Francisco the arbitrator decided that 47 weeks is the average printing workers' year. The Chicago members receive $51 per week, making an income of $2,297. In order to be able to live according to this government budget, the minimum scale in the commercial shops should be $50.75."

Sam Gompers Backs Author of Red-Baiting Immigration Laws

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 28.—A circular from the American Federation of Labor, endorsing for re-election Albert Johnson, chairman of the House Committee on Immigration and author of the radical-baiting immigration law passed last April, has been received by the labor unions in Southwestern Washington.

The circular asserts that Johnson is a "friend of labor."

Johnson's record: Johnson voted against the Howell-Barkley bill, against the seating of Socialists in Congress, against an adequate workmen's compensation act for the district of Columbia, against permitting a more through investigation into the character of Harry Daugherty.

Johnson voted in favor of higher tariffs, in favor of the ship subsidy bill, in favor of reducing taxes on large incomes, in favor of control by the fish trust over Alaskan waters.

Third Set of Twins.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Oct. 28.—The third set of twins within four years has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Tedlock. The latest arrivals tipped the scales at six and four and one-half pounds and today were reported "doing nicely."

ONE of the most important tasks for the Communists is to build their press and get a wide circulation for it. By doing that we can build a Communist mass party in the United States. The last census of the U. S. government shows that there are 140,624 Finns born in Finland, residing in the U. S. Of that number 8,000 are members of the Workers Party—about 5 per cent of the total number. What's the reason? The Finnish Federation of the Workers Party has THREE daily papers with a circulation of about 30,000 combined. A circulation of 100,000 for the DAILY WORKER means a Mass Communist Party in the U. S. Do your share to accomplish that and the work will bring results. It puts us closer to our goal.

ANNIVERSARY OF MUSSOLINI RULE SEES IT TOTTER

15,000 New Members in Communist Party

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ROME, Oct. 27.—The celebration arranged by the Mussolini government to commemorate the march of the Fascisti on Rome two years ago has been boycotted by every labor body in Italy.

The four-day legal holiday proclaimed by the Fascisti began yesterday with furious attacks on the blackshirt government by workingmen all over the country.

Workers Are Defiant.

Italian labor promises to make the anniversary of the march on Rome a memorable day—for the proletariat.

The contrast between the drunken orgy of glee last year and the bitter defiance of the reactionary government with which the workers greeted the opening day of the celebration this year shows how far the Italian working class has travelled on the road to revolution.

Call Huge Strikes.

Instead of Fascist parades, huge strikes have been called in almost every city. Instead of Fascisti demonstrations by the militia in the streets, pitched battles go on between workers and blackshirts. Instead of the Fascist emblem appears the red flag.

The crippled veterans of the world war, who have been used by the government to arouse "patriotic sentiment," have this year refused to participate in any way in the celebration.

A last year's idol of the blackshirts, the blind war veteran Del Croix, has turned furiously against the Mussolini regime. Del Croix's Fascist address at the celebration last year so pleased the government that it ordered the speech printed and plastered on all public buildings.

He Changes His Mind.

"I shall make another address this year," said Del Croix today. "But for what I am going to say this time Mussolini will order me crucified."

Class Lines Grow Sharper.

With the present celebration, the class lines are being drawn more sharply than ever before. In Naples, the Fascisti opened fire on a group of workers, wounding one, Esposito Raffaele.

In Milan, the workers employed in the shops where the Caproni aeroplane is manufactured have finally forced the bosses to grant a substantial increase in pay. The steel workers in the same city have also forced gains from their employers.

A manifesto launched by the Communist Party urges students at the universities to group themselves together in order to prepare to fight the Fascisti to the best advantage.

Membership figures of the Communist Party offer the most significant proof that working class sentiment in Italy is turning from the socialists as well as from the Fascisti. In two months alone—August and September—the party gained 15,000 new members.

Building trades group, Trade Union Educational League, will meet Friday, Oct. 31, 8 p. m. at Workers' Hall, 722 Blue Island Ave., 2nd floor. Building trades workers! Get there!!

The Workers Party in Action

DECISIONS OF WORKERS PARTY CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

October 14 and 20.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party at its sessions October 14 and 20 adopted the following decisions.

Negro Work.

To instruct party units wherever possible to have Negro speakers address the party campaign meetings, and urging that the party campaign literature be distributed among the Negro population and that wherever Negro speakers address party meetings, these meetings be advertised in the Negro papers.

Authorizing a special pamphlet on the Negro question to be approved by the C. E. C.

Educational Work in New York City.

The following resolution was adopted.

Resolution on New York Workers' School.

The C. E. C. conceives the New York Workers' School as a fighting instrument for the bolshevization of the party. It must not be a neutral academy standing between various tendencies, but a weapon of the party in the struggle against all deviations from the line of the Communist International. It must consistently promote an understanding of the principles and tactics of the Communist International and take upon itself the task of permeating the party membership with the doctrines and spirit of Leninism. All subjects in its curriculum must be dealt with from a clearly defined and intransigent revolutionary standpoint.

To this end the C. E. C. considers it necessary that the Educational Committee of the C. E. C. shall exercise a close supervision of the curriculum and teaching personnel of the school and regularly review all of its activities.

For the guidance of the District Educational Committee in carrying out this policy, the following general provisions are laid down:

1. The teaching personnel must consist of reliable, active party comrades, who have demonstrated by their relations to the party and by their record of activity that they are themselves active and conscious followers of the Communist International and capable of imparting the living spirit of Leninism.

The C. E. C. considers it undesirable that the teaching staff should consist of either non-party members or of party members who take a passive or scholastic attitude toward the problems of the party and the Communist International since such teachers would be incapable of developing and promoting a real, genuine Leninist ideology among the students. The District Executive Committee in charge of the school should again review the teaching staff from this standpoint.

In order to bind the school more closely to the general work of the party it is desirable that the District Organizer shall be added to the committee and that he shall actively participate in all of its administrative work.

Young Workers' League Controversy.

The C. E. C. considered the controversy in the Y. W. L. over instructions issued by the N. E. C. of the Y. W. L. in connection with the Paterson strike work of the New York District of the Y. W. L. and arrived at the following decisions:

1. The N. E. C. was correct in insisting upon concrete and economic political demands by the Young Workers' League in the Paterson strike. We must criticize, however, the careless wording of the N. E. C. letter to the District Organizer of District No. 2 on the 23rd, specifically the phrase which read "the end on militarism and the Workers' Republic are merely abstract and economic demands to be used in strikes" which phrase is open to misinterpretation and misunderstanding as can be seen in the letter from the D. E. C. to the N. E. C. of September 11.

2. The leaflet issued by the D. E. C. also the Zam note to be criticized on the ground that neither their contents nor the demands are sufficiently local in their nature, that they lack specific economic and political demands and give a false formulation for our slogans against capitalist militarism.

3. The D. E. C. should be criticized for having continued the controversy about the N. E. C. letter of August 23, after the N. E. C. has explained the intent of the letter and the real policies of the N. E. C. in the Paterson strike.

Literature Publication.

The C. E. C. authorized translation and publication of a collection of the works of Lenin, the pamphlet "Lenin and Leninism" by Comrade Stahlin and authorized Comrade M. J. Olgin to write two books and a pamphlet as follows: "Without a Boss—a Study of a Russian Factory," "The Russian Communist Party—a Working Class Organization," and "The Communist International as the Center of the World Revolution."

Hungarian Section Convention.

The Central Executive Committee authorized the Hungarian section of the party to hold its national convention December 4 and 5.

Industrial Workers of the World.

The C. E. C. authorized the sending of a letter to the convention of the I. W. W. proposing a united front of the Workers Party and the I. W. W. for a struggle against criminal syndicalist laws, for release of all political and industrial prisoners.

Y. W. L. Controversy.

The C. E. C. considered the disciplinary action taken by the N. E. C. of the Y. W. L. in the cases of comrades who did not carry out certain decisions of the N. E. C. of the Y. W. L. and approved for carrying into effect in the party the following decisions:

1. To suspend for a period of six months, Morris Goldstein.

2. To suspend for a period of one month, Peter Herd.

3. To publicly censure, Al Schaap.

4. To expel Julius Jessmer.

LaFollette in Action -

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

A GOOD example of LaFolletteism in action can be found in what happened at 111th St., and Lexington Ave., New York City, Monday evening, Oct. 13.

In that section of the city, (Harlem) the LaFollette-Socialist candidate for congress is Major F. H. La Guardia, the present republican congressman, who in days gone by was a rabid anti-socialist, pro-war jingo, who was so anxious to fight that he went back to his home country Italy, long before America entered the war and helped King Victor Emanuel make the world safe for democracy. Today, he is a member of the American Legion and is helping to make America safe for democracy—the LaFollette brand.

His opponent on the Workers Party ticket, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, sent him a challenge to debate by registered mail which he never answered, and when he was speaking about a week ago and Comrade Poyntz asked him why he does not debate, his private thugs and socialist fascisti tried to mob her.

To get back to what I was referring to, viz: LaFolletteism in action. At the above mentioned place and time the Workers Party was holding a open-air meeting at which the writer was the first speaker followed by Comrade Poyntz. After she had spoken a short time a rival meeting was started across the street by the LaFollette-Socialist-LaGuardia group and later the 110 per cent superpatriot himself, none other that Major LaGuardia, started to speak.

Comrade Poyntz again shouted a challenge to debate, and received an answer, "No, I will not debate with you. You are sailing under false colors."

The crowd did not like that for an answer and continued to demand a debate.

The socialist-fascisti got busy and tried to shove Comrade Poyntz off the platform, but she stood her ground and continued to hurl her challenge supported by the majority of the crowd. At last, seeing that the only thing he could do was to accept the challenge, LaGuardia said that Comrade Poyntz should speak first and that he would follow her.

Comrade Poyntz started to speak, but had only spoken about three minutes when several police automobiles with six policeman appeared and going over to Comrade Poyntz said she would have to stop speaking.

All of a sudden we hear LaGuardia's voice bellow out, "Arrest that woman!" and before you could count ten, the police had her in an automobile on the way to the station house with the majority of the crowd applauding and cheering her.

LaGuardia apparently got cold feet as he did not appear in the station house to press the charge.

The only comment necessary is, that this is a good example of how the LaFollette gang act when it comes to a showdown. The counter-revolutionary socialist party of America and the fascists' methods of the LaGuardia followers are a good mixture and fit well together in the LaFollette camp. The workers should be told in large numbers how these "progressives" act when they are caught in a corner.

LaGuardia did not want to debate, but was forced to do so by the will of the crowd and by having his opponent arrested he had an easy way to crawl out of it.

What will those workers who are supporting LaFollette have to say to these methods?

Against LaFollette and his socialist-fascist allies there stands the Workers Party with William Z. Foster and Ben Gitlow!

Against LaGuardia the fascist, Poyntz the Communist!

RED NIGHT ON RED EAST SIDE MAKES BIG HIT

Tremendous Crowds at Each Meeting

By MARY RUBIN.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—New York's east side witnessed one of the most stirring series of meetings in the history of that wide-awake part of New York City. Accompanied by flaming torches, tons of red literature, speeding automobiles, streaming banners and squads of party members, the Red Night was celebrated in the heart of the former socialist territory.

Carl Brodsky, Ludwig Lore, Sadi Amter, George Siskind, J. Brahdy, C. Mitchell, M. Hartmann, B. Sparer, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, J. C. Ohlans, N. B. Sparer, M. Kordon and a number of others spoke at the eleven meetings.

On the 7th Street and Avenue A, the meeting was carried on in Russian with a number of fine Russian speakers. In spite of an attempt by a Russian, white guard reactionary to disturb the stirring account of conditions in Soviet Russia, the gathering continued and developed the greatest enthusiasm among the workers.

On 2nd Street and Second Avenue, C. Mitchel gave a most interesting talk on conditions in Soviet Russia. D. Benjamin showed up the utter futility of placing any faith in the election of either Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette and made a stirring appeal for the support of Foster and Gitlow.

At 7th Street and Second Avenue, Juliet Stuart Poyntz shattered the meeting of a young misguided East Side lawyer, who from the end of a large expensive moving van, tried to advertise the virtues of Louis D. Gibbs, democratic candidate for supreme court judge. Poyntz ridiculed him effectively, pointing out while Gibbs and his crowd come before the workers only before election day, the Workers Party is working every day in the year in the interests of the toiling masses. It was not very long before the Gibbs outfit moved out for a better location.

At Tenth street and Second avenue, the Workers Party meeting competed with that of the socialists-LaFollette combination, who had hugged this corner from four in the afternoon in great fear of terrible Communists. In spite of the demogogic antics of their best and leading headlines, and in spite of the efforts of the socialist-LaFollette clique, who made strenuous efforts to swell the crowd and made ineffectual efforts at stirring up a semblance of applause—in spite of all this machinery, the Workers Party meeting, slowly but surely drew the crowd to its platform.

Ludwig Lore, local candidate for congress spoke on the rule of capitalism and the lot of the workers in America. Ford he said, paid an income tax of $9,000,000 while the workers in his factory, who made the automobiles, made only about $1,600 a year. He attacked LaFollette as a misleader of the workers.

Sadi Amter, just returned from Soviet Russia, the First Workers' Republic, gave a vivid description of her experiences and appealed to the workers to establish a workers' and farmers' republic in the United States.

Charles Krumbein pointed out the futility of the LaFollette movement and told of his own experiences in Wisconsin as a worker in the state of which LaFollette is boss. The injunction and the state machinery is used against the workers as effective ly in that state as it is elsewhere.

The meetings lasted until after midnight and occasioned much discussion at the close. The response in the sale of literature, collections and enthusiasm developed, was far beyond the expectations of even the most optimistic. The Workers Party is planning a series of meetings for the final wind up the campaign.

Thursday, October 30, Hopkinson corner Pitkin Avenue, and Hopkinson Mansion, 426 Hopkinson Ave., Brooklyn.

Friday, October 31, 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, New Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Avenue.

Saturday, November 1, McKinley Square, Worker Party Hall, 1347 Boston Road.

ENGDAHL SPEAKS AT FINAL RALLY IN DETROIT, MICH.

Wind Up Campaign at Finnish Hall, Friday

(Special to the Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 28.—The Workers Party of Detroit will hold its final mass meeting of the election campaign Friday evening, Oct. 31 at Finnish Hall, 1963 Fourteenth St.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and candidate for senator on the Workers Party ticket in Illinois, will be the principal speaker.

The recent ruling of the officials of Michigan barring the Workers Party from the ballot was one of the most brazen pieces of Newberryism.

The Workers Party and the LaFollette forces both following identically the same procedure in the holding of county and state conventions, selecting presidential electors and certifying them to the secretary of state and the 83 County Board of Election Commissioners. But while the Workers Party was barred from the ballot, these same officials ruled that the LaFollette ticket should not be molested.

The party brought suit in the circuit court of the County of Wayne (Detroit) to place the party candidates on the ballot.

The Workers' Party is meeting this political trick by instituting a campaign to get the class conscious workers and farmers of Michigan to go to the polls on November 4, and write in the names of Foster and Gitlow, the Workers Party (Communist) candidates for president and vice president. This tactic will be fully explained at the meeting Friday night. Every effort is being made to bring out a big attendance.

STRAW VOTE AT FACTORY SHOWS WORKERS THINK

Foster Runs Ahead of Coolidge and Davis

By G. S. SHKLAR.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 28. A presidential straw vote taken by the DAILY WORKER at the International Harvester company here gave the following result: LaFollette, 167; Foster, 24; Coolidge, 5; Davis, 1.

The result of the straw vote is very significant. It indicates that the working masses are leaving in mass the leadership of the old capitalist parties.

Also Hold Big Meeting.

While it is of great historical significance that the workers are finally breaking away from the influence of the old parties, nevertheless, the revolutionary movement should not overlook the danger of this dissatisfaction being utilized by the middle class politicians. It is very fortunate indeed that the Workers Party is in the field pointing the danger to the misguided workers.

In connection with the taking of the straw vote, a meeting of over 400 people was addressed by the secretary of the party and his address was well received by the workers.

Many workers were interested in the position of the party and while fully in sympathy with the movement, could not understand why the party opposed LaFollette.

Discussion is Interesting.

"How do you know that LaFollette will betray the workers? Why do you compare the LaFollette movement and explain it in the light of experiences of the social-democratic party of Germany and of the labor government of England?" we were asked by the workers and a very interesting discussion followed.

Workers Party in Milwaukee is systematically conducting factory meetings and will continue to do so every day until the end of election.

HUNGER STRIKE BY WOBBLIES IN CALIFORNIA WINS

Food Improves and They Get New Clothes

By MAUD MC CREERY
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—A successful hunger strike of five days has been called off by I. W. W.'s waiting for trial in the Lincoln Heights stockade for alleged violation of the Busick injunction issued to strengthen the criminal syndicalism law. James Barry, one of the prisoners whose case was dismissed Tuesday, brought the news.

As a result of the strike the food has improved. The prisoners are given hot gravy with their meat and potatoes and they were given new underwear to replace their own which was taken from them when they were thrown into the jail. They were also given sufficient bed clothing for chilly nights. The I. W. W.'s are particularly gratified at the success of their hunger strike, Barry says, because the sergeant in charge of the stockade was responsible for brutalities against their brothers when he was in charge of the central station.

Barry was arrested August 14, in a private house in San Pedro when the police entered without warrant and hooked him up after a search disclosed his red card and some anti-California boycott stickers. He was held in jail 60 days without trial. At the end of the time that he could be held legally without trial his case was dismissed by the judge because of insufficient evidence when Barry demanded a trial.

Taking It Over.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—America's new dirigible, the Los Angeles, will undergo her official inspection preparatory to being taken over by the United States next Friday at Lakehurst.

BOSTON CODFISH ARISTOCRACY TREMBLES AT THE APPEARANCE OF "LENINGRAD" IN SYMPHONY PROGRAM

BOSTON, October 28.—"Gone—all gone!"

That is the wail of Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, in telling of the loss of a fortune of more than a million dollars at the hands of the Bolsheviki in Russia, and explaining away the terrible suspicion cast on him during the past week by members of the codfish aristocracy—that it is he who is responsible for the name of the Russian "metropolis "Leningrad" appearing correctly on the programs of the symphony.

Use Czar's Pet Name.

With the statement of Koussevitzky that he would be the last man in the world to honor Lenin and Trotsky—it was they, he explains, who were directly responsible for the loss of the thousands of American dollars in his possession—the correct name of the former capital of Russia, Leningrad, will be stricken from the programs and the incorrect name—St. Petersburg—will be used hereafter.

The matter has caused no little excitement even in this city of anachronisms. Ever since the matter first began to be talked about Boston has been a city of lifted eyebrows.

Here is what Courtenay Guild, director of the Harvard Musical association, has to say about the audacity of a group of musicians who have dared to recognize the facts of history:

"As the name of Lenine (Guild probably pronounces it Lee-nyne) is abhorrent to Americans who value the blessings of civilization, and as our government has refused to recognize the usurping oligarchy that is called the Soviet government of Russia, it comes as a shock to conservative Bostonians to find the city that was known as St. Petersburg until ten years ago referred to as "Leningrad" on the program of the Boston Symphony concerts.

Appeared Four Times.

"Not once only but four times does the obnoxious Leningrad appear on the first program of the season.

"There can hardly be a doubt that the people of America would rather honor the memory of the man who founded and built St. Petersburg than that the man who nearly destroyed it and caused the death of millions of his fellow countrymen."

There's no doubt at all about it. Peter the Great? Even the conservative authors of the Encyclopedia Britannica admit that they hold no brief for even ordinary decency on the part of Peter the Great. Here is what they have to say:

"His (Peter's) rage was cyclonic; his hatred rarely stopped short of extermination. His banquets were orgies, his pastimes convulsions. There are deeds of his which make humanity shudder, and no man equally great has ever descended to such depths of cruelty and treachery."

Breathe More Freely.

No, there's no doubt about it. For who are the "patrons" of music here? Courtenay Guild, the gentleman who expressed such violent opinions on the subject of Lenin, is the owner of a newspaper called the Boston Commercial Bulletin.

And only this week there comes from New York the news that Elbert H. Gary, president of the steel trust for which thousands of men still work twelve hours a day and seven days a week, has bought a box at the New York Opera—the price is said to be somewhere around $200,000. But then Gary is an admirer of Dawes—and Gary probably hopes to make the workers of the whole world dance to the tune of Dawes' well-known "Symphony in A." Hence the interest of Gary, and men like Gary, in things musical.

In any case, Bostonians are breathing more freely since the stand of its "patrons of music" has been made known.

30,000 Coal Miners in Belgium Fight Reduction in Wages

ANTWERP, Belgium, Oct. 28. — More than thirty thousand miners in the Borinage district are fighting a reduction of 5 to 10 per cent in wages. The strike began on August 15, and in spite of police violence and the treason of reformist "leaders," not a single man goes to the mines today.

Only the treachery of the social-democrats has prevented the calling of a sympathetic strike among the miners in the Charleroi and Liege districts. The Belgian Communist Party has given constant aid in every way to the strikers.

Also Star Wrestling Bout.

John Meyers, ex-champion middleweight wrestler, and Joe Parilla, also described as ex-champion, divided honors with John W. Davis, soon to be a third ex-champion, at a democratic mass meeting at Polish Union Hall, Chicago. In billing Davis and the wrestlers the democratic managers back everybody welcome and promised good entertainment.

MINERS FIGHT OWN OFFICIALS AND COAL CZARS

Battle for Rights in the Anthracite Field

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH,
(Special to the Daily Worker)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Oct. 28.—The coal diggers of this district are seething with discontent at the renegade Rinaldo Cappellini and Czar John L. Lewis.

This arises over the way these worthies have ignored the miners' complaints at the excessive delays of the company in settling grievances.

Grievances of Long Standing.

The agreement of the district calls for final adjustment of any grievance in not more than sixty days. In spite of this plain provision, there are many grievances which have been standing for seven months without any effort of the Pennsylvania Coal company to adjust them.

To add to this, when the miners of the Glen Alden Coal company, after standing for such tactics by the operators until they were sick of it, went on strike two weeks ago, John L. Lewis sent a telegram threatening them with dire penalties if they did not at once go back to the pits. He followed this up by instructions to the executive board of District 1, that "drastic action" would be taken if any more strikes were called.

Strike is Called.

Despite the effort by the turn-coat Cappellini to hold down the miners for Lewis and the operators, the miners were compelled to seek their only method of protest. The general grievance committee held a meeting last Thursday and after thoro discussion decided to call a strike against the Pennsylvania Coal company, to withdraw all pending grievances and notify Cappellini to that effect.

However, the Cappellini - Lewis gang, discovering that the situation was getting out of their hands, succeeded in jockeying about between the company and the grievance committee, and getting the strike called off.

Suspicious of Officials.

But the miners of District 1 are becoming very suspicious of their officials and more trouble is expected unless Lewis and Capellini go straight, and the coal diggers can think of no more impossible a contingency.

LOW WAGE "MADE IN GERMANY" WILL HIT U. S. WORKERS HARD AS DAWES PLAN GETS UNDER WAY

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

American capital will put hundreds of thousands of low-paid German wage earners to work underselling workers in America.

This is the significance of the $110,000,000 German loan which has just been put over with a whoop as a result of the Dawes reparations plan. Other hundreds of millions are ready to follow thru private investment trusts to provide the German industrial magnates with working capital.

While over 3,500,000 British and American workers unemployed, acceptance of the Dawes plan has resulted in great increases in industrial activity in Germany where wages are below world levels. The unemployed in that country are being rapidly absorbed. The severe competition this will mean for the American worker with a consequent beating down of wages is indicated by reports on German wages from foreign representatives of the U. S. department of commerce. These show that the low wages which enabled Germany to underbid competitors in prewar years are even lower today. According to R. C. Miller, assistant chief of the department's western European bureau, "Practically all foreign markets of any importance have felt the effect of the influx of cheap German goods during the postwar years."

The wages which enable German producers to undersell competitors are revealed by Miller's figures which show wages in gold marks (1 mark, 25c) and percentage figures for the average standard of living of the German worker compared with that of 1913:

Average Weekly Earnings of German Workers.

Wages in gold marks per cent of 1913 Standard.

Year	Un-Skilled skilled	Un-Skilled skilled
1913	35.02 24.31	100. 100.
1923	21.80 19.33	62.3 79.5
1924
Jan.	25.43 21.22	72.7 87.4
Feb.	26.85 22.08	76.7 90.8
Mar.	27.57 21.85	78.7 89.8

The figures showing wages in gold marks look very much like average wages in the United State until it is remembered that a gold mark is worth approximately one quarter of a dollar. In other words the weekly wages of German skilled workers last March were $6.89 and of unskilled $5.46. These averages cover mines, construction, wood, metal, textile, factory, government enterprises and printing.

Close to Pauper Level.

The table shows that the wages of skilled workers have been pulled down close to the pauper level of unskilled workers and that both are much below the prewar level of purchasing power.

Miller illustrates the resulting drop in the proportion of wages to total cost of production by an estimate which places labor's share of the cost of manufacturing a Diesel engine at 9 per cent in 1923 as compared with 20 per cent in 1914.

The significance of this in terms of the competition which American workers will face is revealed by Miller's description of the argument against wage increases in Germany. Industry, he says, "argues that the wage element in costs must continue to be kept below world levels if German participation in foreign markets is to be maintained."

SALARY GRAB FOR BRITISH OFFICIALS IN INDIA KILLED

Repeal Law Hitting at Right of Association

(By The Federated Press)

SIMLA, India.—The salary grab for British officials in India went down to temporary defeat when the national assembly, the popular legislative branch of the legislative body for British India, voted 68 to 46 against it. The 46 in favor were jobholders and nominated, not elected, members.

The salary increases were to take the form of additional expense money. Each British civil servant was to have four free roundtrip passages to England for himself and his wife with an extra passage for each child. The top salary now for these alien rulers is $30,000 a year. The top salary for civil servants in England itself is $9,000 a year.

The grab can still be put over. The upper house, all appointed or ex officio, voted in favor and the secretary of state for India, who is a member of the British cabinet in London, has the power to put it in effect regardless of the popular vote against it.

By a safe majority the lower house voted to repeal the criminal law amendment act under which the government could declare any association, political or otherwise, to be unlawful and put its members in prison without trial. Several members of the house had themselves been jailed under the act's provisions and said they would again defy it unless it was repealed and the right of meeting accusations restored. It is now before the upper house.

There have been very serious disturbances in Kohat, Lucknow and elsewhere, but mostly these must be put down to economic causes. The Kohat outrage was at first principally aimed at a Hindu landowner who had come into conflict with Mohammedan landowners, against whom he had obtained several judgements. Subsequently a mob of Mohammndans attacked the Hindus, the first point of attack being the landowner's house.

The military, who were in possession of the town before the Hindu quarters were burnt down by the Mohammedan mob, were mysteriously removed. After the removal the shops were looted.

DISRUPTION OF O. B. U. DEFEATED IN NOVA SCOTIA

Russell as Aid to Ben Legere Is Failure

By JOHN A. McRURY.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

STELLARTON, Nova Scotia, Oct. 28.—The disrupting tactics of the One Big Union have failed completely in Nova Scotia.

Ben Legere, of Lawrence, Mass., was the first disruptionist to be sent into the province. After many vain attempts to gain a foothold in the miners' ranks, he declared himself baffled and sent to Winnipeg for assistance.

Has His Own Strategy.

Reinforcements arrived in the form of Bob Russell. He, in his usual platform strategy, devoted all his time to harping on the discomfiture of the miners. Were it not for the indifference displayed by the provisional officers of the United Mine Workers of America, Russell would not have remained in the province one hour.

One of Russell's favorite platform stunts is to procure at irregular intervals, from various recesses upon his person, pamphlets, cards, letters etc., and in a flaunting manner wave them before the assemblage. During these maneuvers he tells the audience that the papers are evidence of traitorous acts of local labor leaders. However, no one has been so fortunate as to ascertain the validity of the papers.

Recently Russell succeeded in calling a vote of the miners in an outlying section on the Mainland. These men are at so great a distance from the miners at Glace Bay that they are unable to keep up with events that transpire in other parts of the district. This was sufficient to give Russell his toe-hold. The vote was held a month ago. There are over 2,500 men in that particular section, and only 800 voted. Out of that 800 the O. B. U. received a majority of only 267.

Miners Realize Mistake.

The vote had hardly been counted when the miners realized that they had made a mistake. However, that short interval gave Russell ample time to connect with his lawyer and an injunction was placed on the funds of the Stellarton local. The amount tied up is in the vicinity of $7,000. The case will be tried in Halifax in the course of a few weeks.

Russell may not be successful in stealing the miners' funds and placing them in far away vaults in Winnipeg. But if he does his mission here will be accomplished.

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

A STORY OF A MINER.

By EVA STOLAR, Age 14

Paul Zello was happy. Intensely so. Why shouldn't he be? Wasn't he going to the U. S. A? How wonderful this Pennsylvania must be. His brother, John was there for a long time. What letters John wrote home! Why, in Pennsylvania, you could afford such luxuries as candy and shows. How good John was to lend them money to go there!

Paul was a young man of thirty at the time he left his native Poland. His wife and son were going too. He was a strong healthy man. His son had hopes of being as strong as his father was. Paul Zello was the hero of his young son, Joe.

At last the day arrived. Paul, his wife, and Joe went abroad the steamer that was to take them to the harbor of Philadelphia. On the steamer Joe made friends with several children who were also in such great luck.

When they got off the steamer at Philadelphia, passed the immigration inspector and went thru the doors to liberty, each gave a sigh of relief. They had been frightened. What if they had been sent back. But thank the good Lord they were thru with the hardships of the long journey.

When John and Paul met each other again they were so happy that they couldn't express the words of greeting. John was glad to see his young brother so happy and well. He couldn't imagine that this pretty young woman he was talking to was the little Anna of the old days. And Joe! Why he didn't dream of seeing such a big boy of ten.

Greetings over, they all went to John's home. What a wonderful place. This was almost as good as the home of the wealthy of Poland. Electric lights, carpets, what more could one want? Just push a button, and there is a light. What marvels there were in this America.

He was supplied with a miner's cap that had a lamp on it. He was in overalls. But Paul was happy. He was going to make some money for Anna and Joe. He would pay John little by little for the passage. Down, down went the elevator into the ground. Where is he going? He is going into the mine.

He looked around him in wonder when he got out of the elevator. It was damp and cold. Black rock was all around him. It was coal. He had to mine this coal to make a living and to pay John. It wouldn't be hard. Chopping this would be play, was his first thought. But later, he didn't find it play at all.

He was sweating and all tired out before long, even tho it was damp and cold. He heard the men whisper ing to each other. What about? He didn't know. On inquiring from a Polish friend, he heard that the men knew it was becoming more dangerous day by day. They expected an explosion. "Why didn't the boss have it fixed to prevent one?" he wanted to know. "Said he hadn't enough money. But really, I think he has, but he doesn't want to spend it. If he does, he might lose some pleasure and money," was the answer.

Five years later, one could not recognize Paul. His features were old and he would have been taken for a man of forty or forty five.

This is what the mine had done to him. His health was gone. Joe, his only child, now fifteen, was a worker in the mine too. They couln't afford to send him to school.

Anna was tired out and much changed from the pretty girl who had come to Pennsylvania five years ago. She was disappointed and discouraged. For all she knew Paul might be brought home dead any minute of the day, like Mr. Severos of the next cottage, and Joe too. Explosions happened often nowadays. But what could they do? One must eat.

As it was, they were in luck. Many accidents had happened but Paul was still safe.

Paul, bitterly, said to himself: "So this is what I came for. To be worked to death in winter and not to have enough to eat in summer. Anna to work all the time and Joe to slave with me."

Chinese Workers May Object

Sun Fo, the son of Sun Yat Sen, head of the Republic of South China with its capital at Canton, has been making diplomatic advances to the somewhat victorious Manchurian, Chang Tso-lin, known as the fighting man of Japanese interests in China. Chang is said to have accepted Sun's ideas "in principle," adding like a good anti-political politician that he was "not a politician but a soldier."

If young Sun is correctly quoted, his father is trying to avoid trouble with Chang by surrendering too much. He is willing to aim no higher than a "full fledged constitutional democracy," which is the worst lesson that young China could learn from the capitalist dictatorship of the Occident.

By giving the Japanese bourgeois devil a finger, the Chinese workers and peasants may lose the whole arm. So it is to be doubted if any such sickly compromise will be appreciated or permitted by the revolutionary workers and peasants who have been targets for Fascist-capitalist bullets.

True to one fact only was young Sun's utterance. He said that Canton "had no quarrel with Moscow and no reason not to be friends." Indeed, Russia is the only friend the workers and peasants of China have.

This will be found out eventually, as will the fact that the less they lean on flexible liberals who want a "democracy," and the more they depend for leadership upon the Communists of China who are fighting for a rule of workers and peasants without sharing power with any capitalist element, native or foreign, the sooner will the Chinese people be really free. If Sun Yat Sen doesn't discover this in time, it will be too bad for Sun Yat Sen.

Holy Hypocrites

The convention of the United Lutheran Church of America says, "Christians may engage in just wars and act as soldiers." It gives as reason, "We recognize the fact that sin is still in the world." But it defeated a resolution urging the church "to suppress militarism as sinful."

That this is perfectly consistent with Christianity is quite obvious. It is also quite consistent with the life and exploits of Martin Luther. Luther and his modern followers are now known to be the ones meant by the carpenter who said "He who is without sin, charge bayonets!"

Strangely enough, if sin were to justify human slaughter, Luther, pampered son of an iron foundry owner, might never have given these American hypocrites such good imperialist ethics, had the husband of Frau Cotta of Eisenach resented being made a cuckold.

But, we are told that Luther had a "practical turn of mind." He did. Altho he objected to the selling of indulgence, and raised all Germany at his protest, he later found it quite in line with this "practical turn of mind" to grant Philip of Hesse the right of committing bigamy.

The reason was exactly similar to the present Christian logic about war. "Bigamy is a bad thing and must be condemned. Nevertheless, there is sin in the world. Lamech, the heathen, and Abraham were bigamists. So in exceptional cases bigamy is justified." Substitute "war" for bigamy" and you have the Lutheran convention resolution. Anyhow, it was profitable to Luther. Princes made him presents of money and royalty was his most devoted supporter.

Why not? Luther was the pacifist-Fascist fraud, the LaFollette-Villard-Christian who talked peace to the peasants, trying to get them to bear unbearable miseries. But when they could no longer bear miseries and chose rather to bear arms, Luther issued the pamphlet in which he encouraged, nay, demanded that the ruling class massacre the peasants without mercy.

Those "sinful" peasants! Today their remote, and Lutheran, descendants, who may rise in revolt against enslavement by the Dawes plan, may feel consoled if, when disemboweled on the field of battle, they are handed a tract explaining that the American Lutherans did it because "there is sin in the world."

Daniel Willard of the B. & O. railroad has a united front with William H. Johnston on a plan to work the railroad in the interests of the railroads, but Willard is for Coolidge, because Silent Cal is a known friend of the owners. In a letter to his 60,000 employes, Willard warns them that a reduction in rates would mean bankruptcy for the roads. In the beautiful class-collaboration scheme between the roads and the employes, the latter do all the hard work and get nothing but backaches and callouses in return. The liberal owners never get callouses on their hands and their chairs are cushioned.

A Note from the Mad House

The contradictions in the political bedlam known to the public as the "LaFollette Party" is sometimes very amusing despite the tragic circumstance of seeing so many workers and exploited farmers following the trail of the Wisconsin charlatan, his battalions of labor fakers and "independent" millionaries into a new political wilderness.

Republicans, democrats, socialists and hybrid progressives are all mixed up in an undistinguishable jumble, clamoring for votes, and caring little how they get them.

Take Wisconsin for instance. The socialists are supporting LaFollette nationally, but opposing Blaine for governor who has the support of LaFollette. Now, another LaFollette candidate for Congress from a Wisconsin district charges the socialists with splitting the labor movement in running a candidate against him, even tho he is endorsed by LaFollette and by the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor. The LaFollette man accuses the socialists of "boring from within."

This is terrible. It is the very accusation LaFollette made against the Communists and which was echoed and applauded by the socialists.

The Milwaukee Leader, Berger's organ, refused to accept an advertisement from the LaFollette candidate, on the ground that it has a standing policy of not accepting advertisements from capitalist parties and that there is no doubt but the party on whose ticket the LaFollette man is running is a capitalist party. Verily, indeed there is much humor inside the fat noodle of the considerable Mr. Berger.

Berger insists that the socialist party will not extinguish itself until a third party is formed. This he declares was the agreement reached in Cleveland with the officers of the C. P. P. A.

Not so very long ago, Morris Hillquit declared that LaFollette was a socialist. Berger says his party is a capitalist party. Yet Berger is willing to merge his socialist party with LaFollette's capitalist party and turn his red flag over to the nearest auctioneer.

Berger may not be "boring from within," but he is a considerable bore from without.

The Klan Roorback

Norman L. Jones, democratic candidate for governor, introduced the Klan issue as a roorback into the campaign at the eleventh hour against his principal capitalist opponent, Governor Len Small, who is supported by the hooded order, or at least a large faction of it, and who gave the Klan the use of cavalry horses and the state grounds for parades in return for support on election day.

There is no doubt but Small is guilty of trading with the Klan and that he deserves defeat not alone for his alliance with one of the most menacing organizations (to the welfare of the working class) in this country, but for his consistent espousal of the interests of capital against those of the workers. If Small were as much opposed to the Kluxers as he is for them, it would be the duty of the workers to oppose him, even if his character were lily white, which it is not. The very fact that Small is the candidate of the republican party, is enough to damn him in the eyes of the workers, who are exploited by "honest" capitalists and "crooked" capitalists; who suffer alike under the so-called clean administrations and so-called crooked administrations.

But what about Norman L. Jones? What has he to offer the workers? He is using the Klan against Small in the hope that he may gather in the anti-Klan vote. But while Glenn L. Young was raising hell in Williamson county, burning the homes of the workers and smashing the miners' union in the interests of the coal operators and big business generally, Norman L. Jones was silent.

Jones' motive in injecting the Klan issue into the political debate is an ulterior one. If nothing else could be said against Jones except that he is cursed with the support of the Chicago Tribune and the Daily News, that alone would be enough to damn him in the eyes of the workers of Illinois. In choosing between Small and Jones, the workers of Illinois are choosing between two evils.

But there is no necessity for the toilers of this state to make such a choice. There is a candidate in the field, whose position on the Ku Klux Klan was not taken yesterday or even since the opening of the election campaign. William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, and Communist candidate for governor, stands with his party as the uncompromising opponent of the Klan and all other organizations of its kind that are used by the capitalists to divide the workers along religious and racial lines, thus weakening them in their fight against the common enemy of all workers: capitalism.

The class conscious workers of Illinois will disregard the advice of the bought-and-paid-for labor fakers, like Farrington, Walker, Olander and Fitzpatrick, who tell them to vote for their enemies in the capitalist parties. They will vote for the candidates on the Workers (Communist) Party ticket, from Foster and Gitlow to Dunne and all the other candidates on the state ticket.

The New York State Federation of Labor put the microscope on candidates Roosevelt and Smith and saw Al. Teddy Jr. was a blurred interrogation point on the political horizon, but poor, Reverend Doctor Norman Thomas, the socialist, who has grovelled in the mud before the labor fakers was totally invisible.

Every day get a "sub" for the DAILY WORKER and a member for the Workers Party.

The Progressive Carpenters Program

DEAR Brothers:—During the week beginning Sunday, November 16, the membership of the U. B. of C. & J. of A. will cast their vote for the incoming National Administration. It it therefore of great importance for the members to know the different platforms of the three candidates for International President, so that they may be able to vote intelligently.

Never was the Carpenters' Union in great danger than now. The bosses have taken full advantage of the present building boom to organize themselves into powerful building associations. They are welding their forces into one big union of building employers. The building trades workers, on the other hand, are divided into some forty different unions along craft lines, fighting among themselves over trade jurisdiction.

There is hardly a single functioning Building Trades Council in the country. Meanwhile the end of the building boom is now in sight and the powerful bosses' association are eagerly waiting the moment when conditions will warrant their attacking our weakened and demoralized unions and, with a solidified force, trying, as in the past, to defeat them craft by craft.

The basic evil in our union is that it does not recognize that the interests of the workers are diametrically opposed to those of the employers, and that the struggle is continuous, of a class nature, and, in its finality, becomes a struggle for power.

To meet this situation we must adopt a real fighting program, and elect officers who believe in, and who will put such a program as the following into effect. Every candidate in this election should present to the membership a policy as a basis for the future activity of the organization, and upon which they ask the members to vote.

Morris Rosen, member of Local 376 New York City, candidate for General President, who has a record as a real fighter for all progressive measures, presents the following program for your consideration:

Progressive Program

1. Affiliation to the Building Trades Department.
2. Abolition of the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards.
3. Development of job control, so that the workers can put an end to the speed-up system and stop the discharge of workers at the mere whim of the boss. Building strong job committees means building a powerful union.
4. A five-day, forty-hour week, for the purpose of reducing unemployment.
5. Uniform agreements for all building trades workers, to expire at the same time in each district.
6. All agreements to Be ratified by the rank and file.
7. A joint drive to organize the unorganized, with the slogan, "A 100 per cent organized industry."
8. Old age pension. The need of pensioning our old members brings out in broad relief the brutal nature of the class struggle. Industry eventually must be compelled to maintain its employees, old or unemployed, thru a general fund raised out of the profits of the employers.
9. Reinstatement of the Los Angeles expelled members, and readmittance to union activity of Fred Burgess of Philadelphia.

The right of minority opinion to freedom of expression within the union.

11. The right of the General President to suspend members of locals, to be abolished. Such right to be vested in the General Executive Board, who will act only on the recommendation of State or District Councils.
12. National Conventions to be held biennially.
13. Committee on Rules to govern conventions, to be elected by the delegates assembled.
14. Organizers to be elected by a referendum vote in the districts they represent. No appointed organizer shall be a delegate to state or national conventions
15. Amalgamation of the building trades upon a departmental basis, along the lines laid down by the 1913 convention of the Building Trades department, this will abolish the ruinous jurisdictional disputes as well as centralize the activities and unify the forces of all building trades workers.
16. International affiliation with the Building Trades International Secretariat, to include the Russian building trades unions.
17. Independent working class political action to protect the political interests of the workers.
18. Recognition of, and trade relations with Soviet Russia. It is disgraceful to think that while such mild liberals as Senators Borah, La-Follette, and others, are urging the recognition of Soviet Russia, the Carpenters' Union is still silent on this important matter.

The Carpenters' Union, the largest in the building industry, should and must take the lead in the fight to unify the forces and advance the interests of the building trades workers.

It is impossible to elaborate on all of these points in this short space, so if any local union wishes more information regarding them, Brother Rosen will be glad to speak before any local. Where locals outside of New York City desire such meetings, Brother Rosen's expenses for the trip will have to be met.

If you believe in these progressive measures, then vote for Morris Rosen for General President. This is the first time in the history of the Carpenters' Union that the membership has been asked to vote for a policy and not for an individual.

1924—RUSSIAN RECOGNITION YEAR

By ALEXANDER TRACHTENBERG.

DURING this year the following capitalist government have graciously admitted the existence of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and made the best of it under the circumstances:

February 1	England	March 15	Sweden
February 7	Italy	May 31	China
February 13	Norway	June 18	Denmark
February 20	Austria	August	Mexico
March 8	Greece	September 16	Hungary

The year has still more than three months to go. France is already with one foot on this side of recognition. It is up to Russia to say the word. French recognition would complete the cycle of recognitions by all west European countries with the exception of Switzerland, which would be only too glad to grant full recognition, if Russia would lift its boycott against it.

Recognition by Hungary last month means a break among the Little Entente countries of central Europe and the Balkans and, before the year will be over, we shall see those vassal states marching up hat in hand seeking recognition by Russia.

With the signing of the Russo-Japanese treaty, which is expected almost daily, Asia will be fully in the recognition column.

The American continent is still behind the schedule. But a beginning has been made. Canada and Mexico have full diplomatic relations with the Soviet Republic It is getting dangerously near home and our state department must be feeling rather nervous in reading the diplomatic news these days. Before we know the little Central and South American republics will run off to Berlin and sign agreements with the Russian Ambassador. What will happen to the dignity of Mr Hughes? Will it really come to Mr. Hughes, as the last of the Mohicans, to recognize Russia in order to make it unanimous? It is too cruel even to contemplate such a predicament for our distinguished, if unwise, secretary of state. Won't some one have pity on our foreign secretary and suggest a way out?

All we can say is: Poor, Mr. Hughes.

Capital Concentrates in Film Field

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE

THE movies are a strictly capitalistic "Big Business" and therefore, go thru the same stages of economic evolution that characterizes capitalist development in other industries. During their infancy any rash promoter with a few dollars to risk plunged into the game and tried to exploit, individually, all its many phases. The early movie man was inventor, producer, actor, and showman all in one. The next stage was one of specialization and on its heels came that of combination. We found hundreds of small fry each working at his own little specialty until a combination of the most powerful elements reduced them all virtually to the position of wage or piece workers in the system. Under the present stage of trustification these super-combines control not only the bulk of production but also the distribution and exhibition in all branches and down to the last little detail.

So far has this trustification followed the methods common to the process in other industries, that one of the largest of the "independents," Warner Bros., recently announced a ten million dollar theater building and buying program in order to get a theatre to market their product. Thus the great American fairy tale of "equality of business opportunity" gets another kick in the slats. He that would embark into the movie game today needs not only the stupendously costly studios, actors, press agents, and other production machinery, he needs a complete distribution force with branch offices in all key cities and heavy advertising bills to buy favorable press comment, and he also needs a chain of theaters of his own in order to show his stuff. These conditions effectively freeze out all except the film trust, which is exactly what is intended. Even the leading trade journal, the "Motion Picture News" admits that this is just about the situation.

Admits Squeezing "Independents."

"Few who are at all familiar with general business conditions in the industry," writes this trade journal, "will doubt that Warner Bros., or any other independent producers, have abundant reason for doing something to insure more and better bookings for their product. The first-run situation for any producer who doesn't have some kind of inside arrangement with leading theaters has been becoming more and more difficult during the past few years. It seems pretty well established that the 'independents' are having plenty of trouble in getting first-runs when the rentals they are asking are the same, or even less then those asked by other companies who are definitely tied up with theaters thruout the country, even if the pictures they are offering are the equal, or even the superior, of those offered by the other companies.

"And recently one of the biggest combinations in the trade is said to have adopted a policy of getting its products into every available theater in the country, regardless of price—meaning that this particular company is selling its pictures at prices which the independents cannot meet and live."

The "independents" are doomed in this as in other capitalist business. What this really means to the workers is that the film trust, part and parcel of the innermost circle of big business will soon control absolutely without competition, the entire film diet of the American workers. This diet is largely standardized even now, with "independents" in the field, thru competitive box-office technique. The so-called "independents" are independent in profit-seeking only, certainly not in ideology. They make no pro-labor firms today because these don't "pay." Their aim is "Broadway"—the circle of theaters that are big business' very own—where no labor picture can live.

Labor Organization the Only Remedy.

The only sound basis for "independence" in movie production and distribution is a class basis. The working class must eventually produce its own film diet, and it must use its economic power to support only such theaters as will guarantee distribution to such labor films. Labor is overwhelmingly the heaviest patron of the movie theater, and once the demand for labor film is organized then that demand will be met.

In thousands of cities the workers could easily own their own movie theaters or equip their labor temples to show films. In thousands more they could operate thru small independent show houses as long as such exist. The I. W. A., 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill., will gladly answer inquiries on how even the smallest labor organizations and workers' fraternal societies can help, right now, in organizing the proletarian movie theater, and in showing labor film, immediately, thruout the country.

Superior, Wis., Shows "Beauty."

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik" will be shown in Superior, Wis., on Nov. 5. Efforts are being made to give the film to Duluth, Minn., for their Nov. 7 celebration. The show at Hancock, Mich., on Oct. 30-31 will be held in the "New Auditorium Theater."

Toronto Has Marxian Classes.

TORONTO.— Weekly classes in Marxian economics opened in Toronto Oct. 24, when Maurice Spector, editor Toronto Worker, discussed primitive tribal Communism. "We are aware," reads a statement of the Communist Party of Canada which is sponsoring the course, "that educational classes already exist locally and elsewhere in the dominion, but we are opposed to that so-called workers' education which preaches class collaboration. We insist that the only education in the interests of the working class is that which explains the economics and politics of the class struggle and prepares labor for revolutionary action to destroy capitalism and establish the socialist commonwealth."

RUSSIA REJOICES OVER FRANCE

Call for World Aid to Communists of Germany

GERMAN GOVERNMENT WITH AID OF SOCIALISTS IN ATTEMPT TO DESTROY COMMUNIST PARTY

The German government, with the co-operation of the social-democrats, and with the consent of the social-democratic president Ebert, is endeavoring to extirpate the Communist Party of Germany in order to prevent it from participating in the German elections as the representative of the German workers in the fight against the Dawes plan, and to head off the coming German revolution.

This information has been received by the Workers Party thru a manifesto of the executive committee of the Communist International, received by cable today from Moscow, in which the Communist International calls upon the workers all over the world to rally to the support of the German workers in their struggle against becoming the slaves of the American bankers.

The Communist International calls upon the workers of other countries to hold mass meetings in protest against the Fascist attack upon the German workers and to enter with them into the struggle against world imperialism which is involved in the fight against the Dawes plan.

The manifesto of the Communist International cabled to the Workers Party reads:

To the Workers Party of America:

Manifesto protesting against violent assault on German Communist Party and against social democratic oppressors of the German Proletariat.

To the Workers of all countries,

To the German working class,

Comrades:—We exhort you to protest with vehemence against the unmitigated violence of the German government and the social democratic bureaucrats.

Communist representatives in parliament, executive committee of the party and all important officials are now to be arrested in order to secure victory at election to the German bourgeois and their social democratic lackeys. The German republic thus overshadows all previous reigns of terror by a systematic campaign to exterminate the Communist Party. Thus they hope to secure the "peace and order" essential to ensure accomplishment of Dawes' plan and complete subjugation of the workers. To achieve that four million Communists are being outlawed and gagged. The republic of Ebert and Seeckt now stands unmasked as the instrument of fascist counter-revolution.

Their terror and panic are due to the successful bolshevization of the Communist Party of Germany, and fear of revolution.

In this fight between the united front of finance capital and its implacable enemy the Communist International, proletarian solidarity, unshakable solidarity of Communist International must be demonstrated.

International Red Aid must help the victims of white terror despite the ban of the German government.

German workers, demonstrate to your oppressors that this persecution will bring but increased prestige to the German Communist Party and strengthen its position as leader of the masses in the fight for dictatorship of the proletariat. Harbor no vain illusions. The new reichstag can be nothing but the tool of American and entente capitalists and purveyor of further misery for the masses.

In your hour of need be assured of our support.

Workers of all countries, organize strengthen its position as leader of the fight of your German brothers. Forward, German comrades, close your ranks. Entrench yourselves in the factories.

Every soldier of the revolution must be its leader. Expose the social democratic counter-revolution.

Social democratic workers! Realize that your leaders have proved themselves enemies of the working class. Every vote for the Communists is a vote for the working class, for the fight against misery, for socialism.

Vote for the social democrats are votes for capitalism and counter-revolution.

Down with the dictatorship of Dawes' robbers and their social democratic nationalist agents. Fight for the proletarian dictatorship.

Long live the Communist Party of Germany.

Long live the German revolution.

The Executive Committee of the Communist International.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Boston Post, recently published a dispatch from Trebisond, China, telling horrible stories of Cheka atrocities in Georgia. Even a scant acquaintance with geography would convince the most skeptical that Trebizond, is no more a part of China, than Bug House Square, Chicago. The dispatch bears all the remarks of a Chicago Tribune reporter, who is having a tough time with European governments who cannot stomach this particularly stupid liar.

THE story in the approved style of the William J. Burns' school of prevarication, trots out the three trusted ogres of the Cheka, Peter the Sailor, Pankatroff and the Chinese Li. The latter gave Georgia the Chinese flavor but made a chop suey out of an otherwise perfectly good atrocity. Over 20,000 Georgians have been executed the Post reporter tells us. No doubt Li, the Chinaman is supposed to be an expert in refined cruelty, hence his unlimited engagement as an axman.

WHETHER the Cheka was in a hurry or not to bury their dead we do not know but we are informed that suspected counter-revolutionaries were buried alive but before this was done, they were obliged to dig their own graves, and when they felt that the hole was long and deep enough they whistled to the understrappers of the Chinaman Li, who tapped them on the head, after which they dropped into their earthen bed. The Boston Post reporter forgot to say that after those who were only stunned into temporary unconsciousness began to stick up their arms thru the soft earth, hungry dogs came along and began to devour them. It is a fine yarn and shows what a liar will do when hard pushed.

THE New York socialists are very angry because the Communists exposed their deal with Tammany Hall. The situation is this: the socialists would like to have Dr. Norman Thomas poll a large vote, but they want Smith to beat Roosevelt. Every vote cast for Thomas—in the language of capitalist politics, is a vote for Roosevelt. Smith is not openly against Davis, tho it is a public secret that Tammany is knifing him. LaFollette is for Smith, and so are the labor fakers and the most prominent of the bourgeois supporters in New York, including Daniel F. Cohalan, Dudley Field Malone and Frank P. Walsh.

THIS makes the situation somewhat complicated. Speaking recently in New York, William Z. Foster exposed the skeleton in the socialists' closet. This caused a howl of rage to come from the editorial sanctum of the only remaining socialist weekly in the United States that mirrors the sentiments of the executive committee of that party. But on the front page of the same issue there is a declaration by the owner of socialist party, Morris Hillquit, in which he states that Alfred Smith, Tammany governor of

AMALGAMATED LOCAL HOLDS CANNON MEET IN OWN HALL IN BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Thursday night James P. Cannon, Workers Party candidate for governor of New York, will speak at a meeting called by Local 54 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Amergamated Clothing Workers of Amergamated Temple, at Arion Place, Brooklyn.

The comrades in New York thru their splendid campaign have been successful in getting across the Communist message to the rank and file of numerous unions. These unions are letting their leaders ride on the LaFollette band wagon alone and as class conscious workers are rallying around the Communist candidates.

Local 54 of the Amalgamated called this meeting for the special purpose of getting Comrade Cannon to address their membership.

CROWDS GREET COMMUNISTS IN EIGHTH DISTRICT

Many Hear of Party's Stand for First Time

In a whirl of open air demonstrations and hall meetings, the Workers Party of Chicago is carrying the Communist message to thousands of workers, who are hearing for the first time the proposal that they vote for a political party which advocates as the leading item of its program, the dictatorship of the proletariat and a Soviet republic.

The party members have thrown themselves into the struggle wholeheartedly, and are actively supported by the Young Workers League. Even the Junior Groups are furnishing chairmen of meetings, calling attention to the child's protest against capitalist exploitation of child labor.

A series of meetings Tuesday night on street corners in the eighth congressional district were addressed by candidate George Maurer, J. Louis Engdahl, candidate for U. S. senator, and Comrades Manuel Gomez, Hyman Schneid, I. A. Davidson, E. D. Earley and Elsa Bloch. Everywhere the workers who gathered were educated as to the reasons for their conditions and the road to Communism explained.

Every workers in Chicago should note the location and date of the meetings now going on and rally the workers around him to turn out and listen to the Communist message. The meetings tonight and tomorrow are as follows:

Thursday, Oct. 30.

3203 South Wabash—Hall meeting, at Community Center. Subject: "The Negro Worker and Communism." Speakers: Gordon W. Owens and J. W. Johnstone.

3142 South Halsted—Hall meeting, at Milda Hall. Speakers: Zokaitis, candidate Podkulski and John Edwards.

Open Air Meetings—Start from Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd. Autos wanted, lots of them, to take speakers out. Report not later than 7:15 p. m. Speakers will be: Bittelman, Cannon, Shachtman, Hammersmark, candidate for the 7th district, Earley and Williamson.

ANGLO-SOVIET TREATY IS ON TRIAL AT POLL

MacDonald Backs Down on Fake Letter

LONDON, Oct. 29.—It's all over now as far as the election is concerned but the counting of ballots. Never in the history of England was there such a short and bitter election contest, with the fake "Zinoviev letter" providing the eleventh hour roorback which is so common in American politics.

It is freely predicted here that both the conservatives and laborites will make gains, but that the liberal party will be all but wiped out.

The alliance between the leaders of both the two old parties did not take well with the rank and file, and while in case of tory victory, the old hacks like Asquith and Lloyd George may be thrown a bone to pick on, it is not likely that the owners of the conservative party, the bone and marrow of the British ruling class, will give any real power to the old leaders of the decadent liberal party.

Committed Blunder.

MacDonald appears to have made a bad mistake in at first stating that the Zinoviev forgery was genuine. He is now the most quoted man in England on the matter and no two seem to get the same opinion from him. The fact is that the fake was so crude that a careful reading of the letter would convince even those not acquainted with Communist phraseology, that it was written by a stool pigeon of the William J. Burns school.

The statement of Albert Thomas that the Second International may be responsible for the forgery was given wide publicity here. All in all whether the labor party wins out in the election or not, it does seem likely that Ramsay MacDonald will find his influence considerably weakened as a result of his muddling of the situation.

Had MacDonald denounced the "red plot" as a tory election stunt from the start it would have proved a boomerang to the tories and buried them at the polls under a wave of public disgust. It would strengthen the labor party grip on the foreign office and would place them in a favorable position to begin cleaning out the permanent officials who run that office regardless of what government is in power.

The French Policy.

Aside from the inner political aspect of the case, diplomatic circles discussed the affront to Russia, of the Gregory note, in the light of French recognition of the Soviet Republic, unconditionally and without reservations, and accompanied by the traditional French politeness, which is in striking contrast to the boorishness displayed by Ramsay MacDonald in warning the Russian delegates to the Anglo - Saxon conference against "monkey tricks."

Coupled with the information that France has entered into an iron-clad deal with Turkey, gaining control of the Bagdad railway and several important concession, in return for which France agrees to back up Turkey, diplomatically, against England in the Mosul oil controversy, the Soviet recognition, leaves a bad taste in the mouth of British diplomacy this morning and there is a tendency to look around for a goat on which to

YOUNG WORKERS TO OPEN DRIVE IN COAL FIELDS

Militants Must Stay In Miners' Union

By BARNEY MASS

(National Industrial Organizer of the Young Workers League.)

The campaign to be launched in the coal mining industry, planned by the Young Workers League is now taking on a more definite character.

Preparations are being made to send organizers in the field. The questionaires sent out to all miners asking for information on the conditions prevailing in the mining industry, were greeted enthusiastically and prompt attention given them.

Word, as received from the mining sections of the country, show that conditions are very bad. Companies violate union regulations, discrimination in the employment of miners, thru bribing mine officials, etc. The complaint that the young miners are disgusted with the union officialdom is very common.

Must Attend Meetings.

Despite the chaotic condition of the mining industry, the union officials remain inactive. They are making no efforts to represent the rank and file miner.

Young miners do not attend union meetings as a result of their contempt and lack of confidence in the miners' union officialdom. The fighting young element in the miners' union are leaving. This must be stopped.

The basis for the destruction of the powerful miners' union is laid thru the betrayal of the Lewis family. But Lewis, Farrington, Murray, Green and the others of this ilk shall not succeed. The Y. W. L. raises the slogan, ALL YOUNG MINERS STICK TO THE UNION!

Send in Information.

All information on the present conditions of the young miner will be highly appreciated by the national office. Send in all information to the Young Workers League of America, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Illinois.

FRENCH RECOGNITION BIGGEST VICTORY YET ACHIEVED IN MANY SOVIET DIPLOMATIC CONQUESTS

MOSCOW, Oct. 29.—There was great rejoicing thruout all Soviet Russia today over the recognition of the Moscow government by France.

"This action is in contrast with that of imperialistic England that is seeking all sea routes to Russia," commenten Karl Radek, former Soviet envoy to Germany. "France has no territorial interests bound up with world trade routes which would threaten enmity toward Russia."

Recognition Unanimously Accepted.

The All-Russian Central Executive Committee unanimously adopted a resolution accepting France's recognition. Speeches were made pointing out that France's action will mean important things for Russia in the near future.

Diplomatic relations with France will be established soon and a Soviet delegation plans to go to Paris to open negotiations for a treaty.

Chicherin Makes Announcement.

Formal announcement of France's action was made to the committee by Georges Chicherin, Commissar for Foreign Affairs.

WASHINGTON IS UNHAPPY OVER SOVIET VICTORY

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The French recognition of the Soviet government was expected in Washington since Herriot assumed the office of premier, nevertheless the news of the accomplished fact caused much uneasiness in governmental circles and particularly in the department of state.

Slam at Whiskers.

Herriot's action is looked on as a slap in the face to the Washington government and particularly to Hughes who was the fairy godfather of Boris Bakmeteff, the Russian ambassador without a country, who lived at the expense of the United States and ate, drank and otherwise wasted $187,000,000, which the United States treasury kindly lent him against the day when the Romanoffs would again be back on the throne and the heads of the Russian Communists would adorn the lamp posts.

But alas, alas, the czar is very much dead and so are the hopes of his followers. Every important country in the world with the exception of Japan and the United States have recognized the Soviet regime and Japan is expected to sign up shortly.

Calvin's Silence Holds.

The state department declared today that recognition of Russia by France has not changed the anti-Soviet policy of the Coolidge administration in any way. Coolidge, as usual, declined to comment on the Paris note, but it is not impossible that after the election is over, even in the event of the republican party winning, pressure from business circles will cause the Standard Oil secretary of state to realize that Soviet Russia will continue to exist and do business with other nations regardless of what attitude the United States adopts towards it.

With the recognition by France, the Soviet is now recognized in full by 19 nations and has partial recognition from two others. Germany was the first to recognize the new nation after the downfall of the Kerensky provisional government and since then has been followed by Austria, Denmark, Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Afghanistan, Finland, Poland, Persia, Great Britain, Italy, Greece, Mexico, Norway, Sweden and China. Czecho-Slovakia has a trade agreement with the reds that is looked upon as defacto recognition, and Hungary has completed all but the formalities leading toward the actual exchange of representatives.

The United States, Japan and Belgium form a little bloc of irreconcilables holding out against Moscow, but there is said to be some possibility that Belgium will follow the lead of

FRANCE EXPECTS ADVANTAGES TO HER COMMERCE

PARIS, Oct. 29.—There is an air of rejoicing in the French metropolis today over the resumption of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Republic.

Aside from the commercial advantages expected by France, the manner in which Herriot's telegram was taken in Moscow, was looked on here, as a diplomatic gesture on the part of the Soviet Republic against the repeated insults offered to the Workers' Republic by England, Russia's greatest foe in Europe.

Take Slam at Britain.

The Soviet leaders, particularly those not directly associated with the government took occasion to point out the contrast between the French wording of the message of recognition and the brutal conduct of the British foreign office, even under the direction of Ramsay MacDonald. In view of the struggle between French and British interests in Mesopotamia, the Soviet government is in a favorable position to make capital out of the conflict of interests between the two rival European powers.

The French note reads:

"Following the ministerial declaration of June 17, 1924, and our communication of July 19 last, the government of the republic, faithful to the friendship which united the Russian and French peoples, recognizes de jure from this date the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as the government of the territories of the former Russian empire, where its authority is accepted by the inhabitants, and in these territories as successor to the preceding Russian governments. Consequently it is ready at once to establish regular diplomatic relations with the government of the Union by the reciprocal appointment of ambassadors."

Agreements Expected.

"In notifying you of this recognition, which cannot affect any engagements entered into or treaties signed by France, the government of the republic believes in the possibility of a general agreement between the two countries, of which the resumption of diplomatic relations is a preface.

"In this respect it wishes it to be understood that it expressly reserves the rights of French citizens acquired under obligations contracted by Russia or its dependents under anterior regimes, obligations the respect of which are guaranteed by the general principles of law, which are for us the rule of international life. The same reservations apply to responsibilities assumed since 1914 by Russia toward the French state or its dependents.

"In this spirit the government of the republic, wishful once more to serve to the utmost the interests of peace and the future of Europe, designs to seek with the union a just and practicable settlement which will

WOBBLIES VOTE NOT TO RECEIVE R.I.L.U. MESSAGE

Issue Livens Day of Technical Wrangling

After a day spent in technical wrangling on changes of the constitution, in which nothing more militant was at issue than whether the I. W. W. should be centralized a little bit or not at all, the unwelcome issue of the proletarian revolution was brot upon the floor of the 16th general convention of the Industrial Workers of the World by representatives of the executive bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions, Harrison George and Mike Nowak, appearing and asking the privilege of the floor in the name of the Red International of Labor Unions.

Single Lively Issue of Day.

No sooner were the credentials read and the request made known, than the one significant fight of the day broke loose. Hendrickson, who had previously shown his ignorance by confusing the R. I. L. U. with the Communist International, maintained this tradition by weighty remarks against "politicians." The chair recognized a motion to file the credential.

Fred Mann pointed out the folly of filing credentials, and an amendment was made to return them. Delegate Cole of the agricultural workers amended the amendment with a motion that Harrison George be given the floor for 15 minutes. The fight came on Cole's motion.

The issue illustrated the division in the convention between right, left and center, the center voting with the right on this issue of revolutionary importance. The job unionist lumber workers were solid against hearing what the R. I. L. U. might say. After two weeks of avoiding revolutionary issues, a stand was called for.

The center group, vaguely gathered around the I. U. 330 and I. U. 510 delegates with Winder of I. U. 120, and some of the I. U. 310 delegates went with the right wing reformist industrial unionists. The center, speaking thru E. Rumbaugh, found technical reasons sufficient to justify it against a revolutionary stand. "These credentials bear the name of Nowak, an expelled member," Rumbaugh protested. He was allowed by the anarcho-syndicalist to dwell upon this at length. Swanson, of I. U. 310, objected to the whole subject, saying that the Red International had occupied attention in other conventions. Other delegates objected technically against discussion of the revolutionary issue.

Anarcho-Syndicalist to the Rescue.

When Mann, openly announcing that he "would not play to the gallery," fought for a hearing for the R. I. L. U. on the grounds of courtesy and fair play with important revolutionary organizations, he tried to answer Rumbaugh, but was shut off by the chair who rushed down to his desk with upraised gavel.

What was not brought out was that Nowak was expelled by Bowerman and Raddock two years ago, as a Communist.

One Revolutionary Speaks Up.

The one delegate who argued on the question as a revolutionary issue was Cole, of I. U. 110. "This organization comes to us from other revolutionary workers and wants to discuss with us how to overthrow capitalism. I am not afraid of being poisoned with what they have to say. I am a wage slave and want to learn all I can and do all I can to overthrow the capitalist system."

Cole, also, tried to show that delegates who attacked Nowak were defending the injunctionites, but again the chair shut it off. "Anyhow," Cole continued, "Harrison George is an I. W. W. besides being a representative of the Red International. We talk of free speech, but we don't want to listen to talk of revolution. I don't believe in free speech myself as between capitalists and workers, it don't exist under capitalism, but while in the working class only. But I want Harrison George to be granted the floor."

A record vote was called for, and the privilege of the floor was refused by a vote of six to nineteen. Those who voted to give Harrison George the floor were delegates Mann, Jordan, Cole, Hanson, Mattson and Obermann.

Rowan Financially Stumped.

Meanwhile, in court, the customary refusal of Rowan to withdraw the injunction took place, along with the usual testimony about gunmen and violence. It was a very tedious farce.

The only thing possible to get the injunction removed appears to be the possible lack of funds for Rowan to carry on the fight in court. It developed that his idea of having the court expenses of several hundred dollars a day taken out of the I. W. W. funds tied up in the bank was altogether wrong.

Master in Chancery Bernstein declared it impossible, and added that Rowan as plaintiff must furnish cash at once for the two days' hearings already held, and pay cash in advance each day before the court would sit. This may make Rowan draw upon the union treasuries under control by his group or lose by default in court.

For this reason, and because Rowan had to go back to Judge Sullivan and ask for modification of the injunction only to allow documents to be removed from I. W. W. offices, hearings were suspended yesterday.

MASSACHUSETTS may join Georgia and North Carolina is killing the child labor amendment on November 4. If it does not it will not be the fault of Louis A. Coolidge, treasurer of the United Shoe Machinery company and the Prince of the Church, Cardinal O'Connell. Calvin Coolidge has not yet opened his lips on the question. Mayor Curley, of Boston, who until the time the cardinal stated his position, was denouncing the "abominable system of sweating children in industry" discovered a few days after he made this speech that the amendment was planned in Moscow and that the instructions to put it over bore the signature of Trotsky. His honor the mayor, seems to have known that Lenin was dead but the name Trotsky sounds better in a team. It seems that "Zinoviev and Trotsky" does not rhyme so well. I would not be surprised if they picked Rykov as a team mate for him before long.

THE 1920 census showed that there were over 400,000 children between the ages of ten and fifteen years employed in industry other than agriculture. Massachusetts is a great mill state. David I. Walsh, also a catholic, who is running for re-election, is keeping silent on the question. The Catholic Church has mobilized its black shirts on the side of the bosses. Those who imagine that the Roman agency is a religious organization, should open their eyes. The cardinal sent out a letter to all the clergy in his diocese calling for a meeting of catholic women to discuss the amendment.

THE letter reads in part: "I would recommend that you bring to the attention of your parishioners at all the masses on Sunday, Oct. 5, the dangers hidden in this proposed child labor amendment and the necessity of their registering during the week and of their voting on election day to protect the interests of their children." How horrible! The women are called to protect their children form the horrible monsters who would keep them out the factories, in their infancy!

THE Catholic Church is one of the strongest bulwarks of the capitalist system all over the world. It is no accident that Mussolini should make friends with the Pope, and recognise the Papal right to grant titles like other potentates. It is not surprising that some of the leading officers in American industry have honored by the Pope and that on the occasion of the raising of Archbishop Hayes and Mundelein to the cardinalcy American capitalism rendered these two flunkies royal honors. The Catholic Church is worth the money it officially and unofficially spend on it. Cardinal O'Connel's opposition to the child labor amendment means money in pocket to the sweaters of child labor. The cardinal is willing to wreck their little bodies "in order to save their souls."

permit restoration between the two nations of useful relations and normal exchanges, when the French conscience shall have received the appeasement to which it is entitled.

Will Welcome Delegates.

"As soon as you have made known your assent to opening negotiations of a general order, and more particularly of an economic order, we shall welcome to Paris your delegates, furnished with full powers to meet our negotiators.

"Until a satisfactory conclusion of the negotiations, the treaties, conventions and arrangements having existed between France or French citizens and Russia shall not have effect. The individual legal relations formed before the establishment of soviet power, between Frenchmen and Russians will remain as hitherto and the auditing of accounts between the two states shall be deferred in all respects, all measures of conservation in France being taken or about to be taken.

"Finally, it must be understood once for all that nonintervention in internal affairs shall rule in the relations between the two countries.

Text of Soviet Reply.

The Soviet reply reads:

"The central executive committee of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has received with greatest satisfaction the proposal of the French government fully and entirely to restore regular diplomatic relations between the U. S. S. R. and France by the reciprocal dispatch of ambassadors and to open immediately negotiations with a view to instituting friendly relations between the peoples of the U. S. S. R. and France.

"It expresses confidence that all the questions mentioned in the telegram of the president of the council of the French republic of today's date can be settled by full agreement between the two governments to the greatest advantage of the U. S. S. R. and France, good will existing on both sides as well as absolute respect for each other's interests."

throw the blame for the forgery and the stern note to Moscow. MacDonald cannot evade complete responsibility.

In Strong Position.

With French recognition, Russia is now in a position to risk breaking relations with England, unless an apology is made for the gross insult offered to the government of the workers and peasants.

The Moscow note in reply to the foreign office dispatch after demanding an "adequate apology" from the British government declares "in the most categorical terms that the alleged letter of the Communist International constitutes as has been fully established, an impudent forgery, aiming to wreck the Anglo-Soviet treaties and ruin the friendly relations between the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics and Great Britain."

The Soviet demand for an "adequate apology and punishment of both private and official persons involved in the forgery" is a harsh pill for the proud British rulers to swallow. Coming from a government of workers and peasants it is doubly distressing.

The prime minister, after the first outburst of anti-Communist rancor is now supporting the Russian treaty. No doubt he heard from the trade unions. He did not stress the clash angle of the Anglo-Russian treaty, but emphasized its value from a business point of view.

He Talked Business.

"An American firm," he said, "has secured the whole manganese field in the Caucausus — one of the richest fields in the whole world. Our opportunities go; the raw material goes. America get in. Goodness knows who is going to get concessions tomorrow. Come and let us get business now, even at the risk of a few millions, and we will get a settlement of things in a normal way. British trade will be expanded and a market will be found."

It should be noted that the oil fields of the Caucausus are the cause of the Georgian counter-revolutions which were liberally financed by the British government.

Washington Very Unhappy Over Soviet Victory

France. Other small nations in central Europe that look to France for diplomatic guidance are also expected to negotiate with Moscow since Paris has resumed friendly relations.

Jap Treaty Expected.

Japan has been negotiating with Moscow for months both at Tokyo and at Peking, leaving the United States the only leading power which has adopted a strictly hands-off policy concerning Russia.

Russia has exchanged ambassadors with Germany, Italy and Turkey, and has also sent an ambassador to China altho China is still represented in Moscow by a trade delegation. Ministers have also been sent to all countries which have recognized the Red regime with the exception of Great Britain. Charge d'Affairs Hodgson represents British interests in Russia pending the appointment of an ambassador, and Russia's representative in England does not as yet have ministerial rank.

Trouble in China.

The sending of an ambassador to Peking completely upset the political situation in the far east as the Russian envoy's rank has always been that of minister. The present ambassador, M. Karakhan, is now in conflict with representatives of other powers there on the question of rank for no other country has sent an ambassador to China, and the doyenship of the diplomatic corps carries important considerations. Russia also upset precedent by appointing Madame Kallontai as minister to Norway, the first woman to hold a diplomatic post.

Lotta Burke Talks in Cleveland Campaign At Hanna Hall Tonight

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29.—The labor movement is not fortunate in having a large number of women in it, but one of these few will speak Thursday, Oct. 30, at 8 p. m., in Hanna Hall, 5311 Woodland Ave. The speaker, Lotta Burke, of Cincinnati, is a candidate for presidential elector on the Workers Party ticket, and will present the Communist program with particular reference to the women. This is one of the final meetings in the present election campaign, and all Workers Party members and sympathizers should turn out to this meeting not only to hear a rousing good speech, but to add enthusiasm to the meeting.

Hughes Pleads for Life of Morgan's Golden Goose, The Capitalist System

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the discredited Charles Evans Hughes, Secretary of Standard Oil in the Coolidge cabinet, is going up and down the land losing votes for "Cautious Cal."

Secretary Hughes, of the republican administration, like Premier MacDonald, in Great Britain, tried to palm off forged documents in his diplomatic war on the Russian Workers' Republic.

But in the hour that Hughes was delivering his most bitter broadside, in Chicago, against Soviet Rule, the French diplomats, at Paris, were taking their medicine, in difficult swallows, and admitting that the government of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics rules undisputed thruout all the Russias.

• • • •

The French notified Hughes last week what they were going to do. But that is as far as the French-American entente held. It couldn't stop the French imperialists from bending their knees and knuckling down before the growing Workers' Power.

Recognition by France of Soviet Rule is an admission of the defeat of the whole imperialist war, supported by France, the United States and the other Paris allies, against the Russian workers. Perhaps Hughes still has hopes of renewing that war.

In his Chicago speech Hughes blatantly declared:

"The extreme radicals have never been able to understand why they could not have the gold eggs after the goose was killed."

And again:

"The dictatorship of the proletariat is the effort to distribute the eggs that are no more."

There is no doubt good material for a crossword puzzle in this diplomatic language. But it looks as if Hughes were trying to go "Silent Cal" one better in the uttering of pure nonsense.

• • • •

Hughes no doubt likens the capitalist system of private ownership to the goose that lays the golden eggs. Since the workers and peasants in Russia abolished private ownership, Hughes tries to infer that industry is stagnant, that the land fails to produce, and that the Russians are on the road to "the demnition bow-wows."

But that is only a Hughes nightmare. That is as he would wish it to be; not as it is.

The golden goose of capitalism has been busy these many years working for the landlords, the bankers, the industrialists, but not for the masses of the workers and the peasants. Under that system the workers and peasants decided they were being made geese of, and they decided to have a change. They wanted to get some of the golden eggs for themselves.

It is only now, for the first time in all Russian history, that the workers and peasants of Russia are enjoying the full fruits of their labor, and building a social order where the golden eggs resulting from human effort will not go to the parasites, but to the producing many in a classless society.

Hughes claims that the dictatorship of the proletariat in Soviet Russia, that is gradually ushering in the Communist society, is a losing proposition. Of course, he has no arguments to support this stand.

If what Hughes says were true, then there would be no reason for the capitalist nations, one after the other, to yield recognition to Soviet Rule. Instead the United States is today the only great power that has not recognized the First Workers' Republic as the established successor of the czarist regime. Only within the past year the procession has included England, Italy, Norway, Austria, Greece, China, Sweden, Denmark, Mexico, Hungary and now France.

• • • •

Let Hughes peddle his piffle over the land. It will lose votes for Coolidge. It will help the Communists. It will help reveal to the workers and exploited farmers what a puddinghead administration Morgan has placed in power in Washington.

It should set the rising waves of American working class protest to churning in fury against Morgan's rule; demanding not only that the United States grant recognition to Soviet Russia, but calling upon American workers and exploited farmers everywhere to rise in the struggle for "All Power"; organize and struggle to establish their own Soviet Republic.

Let Hughes' plea to save the golden goose of capitalism fall on deaf ears. Let the workers and poor farmers get a golden goose of their own.

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL SENDS $50 TO SCHEDEL'S FAMILY AND AIMS TO GET HIM OUT ON BAIL

Responding to the appeal of the Labor Defense Council, Chicago friends of John Schedel, who is in federal custody, facing a five-year prison term and re-deportation to Germany, away frim his wife and four small children, have raised the sum of $50 for the relief of the Schedel family. A representative of the Labor Defense Council left for Fort Wayne, Ind., early yesterday morning to Mrs. Schedel and to turn the money over to her.

Comrade Schedel was deported to Germany during the "red raids" of 1920, the sole charge against him being membership in the Communist Party. His wife went insane for a time as a result of the hardships following the separation. The family is now in dire need. Contributions should be sent to the Labor Defense Council, 166 West Washington St.

Attorney I. E. Ferguson has wired to Washington in an endeavor to get an agreement reducing Schedel's bail which is considered exhorbitant. The bail was set by the local authorities at $2,500. Comrades and sympathizers who wish to see Schedel out on bail and able to rejoin his family, at least temporarily, can help by loaning money and Liberty bonds to the Labor Defense Council for use as bail. All bail loans will be returned as soon as they are released by the authorities following disposition of the Schedel case.

CANNON HITS AT TWEEDLEDUM AND TWEEDLEDEE

Exposes Backdown of LaFollette

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 29.—James P. Cannon, Workers Party candidate for governor, has just made public the following letter sent to Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for the same office:

"My dear Mr. Thomas: In the letter issued by your campaign committee, which letter purports to be signed by 65 labor leaders of the state, certain claims are made which I beg to question.

"The letter indorses your candidacy on the ground that you are supporting LaFollette who stands for cooperation between the nation and the states in the control of super-power. I notice that Smith also stands for the control of super-power. Is there to me that there is a very faint line of demarcation between the socialist and the democratic program, the difference in fact between tweedledum and tweedledee.

"What is more important however, and what the so-called labor leaders entirely ignore is the fact that LaFollette is beginning to back down on his demand for government ownership, a demand for which the socialists have stood for years.

"The letter furthermore makes no mention of the possibility of the formation of a labor party, which you and the socialist party have been holding out as a glorious prospect to come out of the LaFollette movement All that is mentioned is a 'new party.' May I ask what kind of a party is meant? Is it to be a third capitalist party, another party to mislead the workers with high-sounding hypocritical phrases?

Questions Endorsement.

"Incidently I notice that ten of the 65 labor leaders are members of but one organization, the Teachers' Union. It might therefore be pertinent to ask how many of the 65 signers are acting as the authorized representatives of recognized labor organizations.

"I hope you will be kind enough to make the issues, which I have raised, clear to both myself and to the workers, who are deeply interested.

"Very truly yours,

"JAMES P. CANNON,

"Workers Party candidate for governor."

On a Labor Faker's Trail

MACDONALD IS EXPELLED BY FARRINGTON

Miners Fighting For His Reinstatement

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.
(Article Sixteen.)

While Frank Farrington was fighting John L. Lewis he could not very well afford to take on any more quarrels in his own bailiwick. But when Gompers got busy strengthening the reactionary lines against the rising tide of progressivism, and Frank and John kissed and made up, the Czar of the Illinois Miners' Union felt that the time was ripe to try conclusions with his enemies in District 12.

Duncan MacDonald, former secretary-treasurer of the Illinois miners and former state president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, has long been a thorn in Farrington's side. MacDonald could not be bribed by the coal operators or muzzled by a job in Farrington's machine. MacDonald was not only hated by Farrington, but also by Lewis and in no less degree by the king of the labor fakers, Sam Gompers.

Tore Into Sam.

It was Duncan MacDonald, who bearded Gompers at the Rochester convention and gave the latter a tongue thrashing that he will remember for the rest of his life. In retaliation, Gompers sent two organizers into Illinois, ostensibly to organize territory that was already 100 per cent organized but really to organize the election campaign in the miners' union against MacDonald.

Farrington has recently compelled Local 448 to drop MacDonald from the rolls on threat of revocation of charter. This the local did under protest. Farrington had hoped that the local would give him the opportunity he was looking for, to revoke its charter, thus killing two birds with one stone, i. e., getting rid of MacDonald and also of John Watt, treasurer of the Springfield sub-district and one of Farrington's most implacable opponents. But Czar Farrington was disappointed.

Farrington's feud with MacDonald goes back to the time when the former decided to aspire to the presidency of the union. He was opposed by Adolph Germer, at that time vice-president of the district. Farrington flooded the district with pamphlets at the expense of the international union with which he was connected in an official capacity.

Stole the Votes.

When the ballots were counted it was found that he was elected by about 900 votes. Later it was discovered that he had stolen two thousand votes. Of this number there was positive proof. How many more he got away with was never learned. It was found that one local that had given Germer three votes for every one given to Farrington, did not send in the vote until it was too late. In three locals, the vote was reversed, giving Farrington Germer's votes. This was done in several sub-districts and got away with thousands of votes.

After Farrington got into office, he began to reward his friends and punish his enemies. He immediately placed fourteen men on the payroll. Duncan MacDonald, secretary-treasurer, protested on the ground that the men were doing nothing but building up a personal machine for Farrington. John P. White, international president, and Gompers flooded the state with organizers who confined their activities to knocking MacDonald and boosting Farrington. This drive resulted in the defeat of MacDonald and the election of the rubber stamp Nesbit, the present incumbent.

Lots of Money.

The treasury was in good condition at this time, and the friends and relatives of the official family had a jolly good time. The president was openly dealing with the capitalist politicians and getting paid for his activities. This he admitted before the special convention, called to place him on trial for his deals with Frank L. Smith, at present chairman of the Illinois republican campaign committee.

While Duncan MacDonald was in office under Farrington, the latter was in the habit of sneaking into his office and stealing the carbon copies of letters sent out during the day.

When MacDonald began the publication of the Illinois Industrial Review, and started in to expose the grafters in the district office, Farrington made a deal with the almost defunct Oklahoma Leader and loaned them $46,000 of the miners' funds, ostensibly because they were fighting Howat's battles in the southwest. Arrangements were also made to supply every member of the Illinois miners' union with a copy of The Illinois Miner, a weekly publication, edited by a renegade socialist of the court-clown type. This paper costs between $50,000 and $90,000 a year and is used to boost Farrington and his machine.

Machine Angry.

Duncan MacDonald retained his membership in the union and received invitations to speak all over the state. This angered the gang who were in charge of the treasury, so they decided to "get" MacDonald. Farrington called in his auditors, who are really traveling stool-pigeons for the "boss" and ordered them to get the goods on MacDonald. They were told to check up and find out how much the latter had paid into Herrin assessment fund. Lewis had informed representatives of District 12, that he would hold the assessment illegal. This was one of the issues between Lewis and Farrington that died when they made up last year.

Some two years ago MacDonald was unable to attend his local meetings so he wrote the secretary asking how much he owed for a three-month period, as he was in the habit of paying his dues every three months. He paid the amount specified by the secretary. Later on he paid for another three months and then the secretary informed him that Farrington's auditors were around to examine his books. They paid no attention to any account but MacDonald's. On their request for information as to how much MacDonald paid on the Herrin assessment, the secretary informed them that he did not charge those members who were not then engaged in mining for this assessment, this being the usual practice. The auditors found MacDonald in arrears four months on the Herrin assessment, but paid in advance on dues and other assessments. This was in February, 1923. In September, 1923, Farrington notified the local to drop MacDonald from membership, notwithstanding the fact that when he was notified of his arrears MacDonald paid up in full.

MacDonald Intervenes.

The local refused to drop him and the matter hung fire for another year. Immediately prior to Labor Day, 1924, Farrington notified the local to have representatives present at a board meeting on Wednesday, Sept. 3, to show cause why the charter should not be revoked for failure to drop MacDonald from membership. No charges had been filed against him, so the local refused to drop him. At their next meeting they again refused to comply with Farrington's demand and MacDonald had to appeal to the local to drop him in order to save their charter prior to the election. They finally consented to do this.

Every provision of the constitution had been set aside in this autocratic action. The laws of the union provides for the manner in which charges shall be filed. The power to revoke charters is vested in the International President. On the question of suspension or expulsion owing to failure to pay dues and assessments the law reads: "Any member becoming three months in arrears for dues and assessments, unless officially exonerated from the payment of same, shall forfeit his membership," etc. MacDonald was not at any time three months in arrears for dues and assessments. The secretary of the local offered to pay MacDonald's assessment taking the blame for non-payment on himself.

Special Convention.

An appeal has been taken to the International Union and the local union has asked for a special district convention on the matter and has notified every local union in the state.

Thus the autocrat of the Illinois miners has succeeded in winning a temporary victory over a men who is hated by the coal operators as he is esteemed by the rank and file of the miners.

Not alone do the miners demand the special convention for the reinstatement of MacDonald, but they also want an accounting of the $2,000,000 Herrin fund and insist that something be done for the unemployed, the greatest problem confronting the miners today.

The following is an extract from the letter sent out by Local 448 to every local union in the district calling on them to back up the demand for a special convention:

The Legal Way

"Our Local contends that if a member gets in arrears it is the duty of the local to drop him from membership, but where a member pays what he is told is due the fault lies with the Local Officers and not the member affected. If any member is charged with the failure to pay or other offense there is a provision in the law to govern this. Section two, Article XVIII, provides as follows: "When any Local Officer or any member not an Officer is accused of violating any of the Organization's laws or of ANY transgression against the Organization or any of it's officers or members, the charge must be first lodged with and prosecuted before the Local Union of which the alleged offender is a member, etc." Up to this time no charge has been preferred against McDonald in compliance with the provisions of the Constitution.

"An investigation made in many parts of the State as well as here in Springfield, develops the fact that many of the Locals did not charge the outside members for the much talked of "Herrin" assessment. One member here was found to be seven months behind in dues and was told to pay up and it would be all right. One Local was a year behind and then was exonerated for part of it.

The Missing Boodle.

"Up to this time no one outside of a very few knows who got the money collected for the Herrin fund. Some thing like Two Million Dollars was collected and few know who were the beneficiaries of this fund. Before this case is finished we may find out who got it, how it was spent and how many automobiles it paid for as well as Christmas presents and other gifts to people other than the Herrin miners.

"On Saturday, September 27, a committee from our Local appeared before Vice-President Murray in Indianapolis, and asked for a hearing before action was taken to revoke the charter, but were informed the Local must first comply with the decision of Farrington before they would be given a hearing on the matter. Our Local has complied under protest and will fight this thing out to a finish. If they can take a member's card by reason of a mistake of the Secretary then no man's card is safe if he is not on friendly terms with the Official family.

"We challenge any Officer to meet McDonald here, either in our Local or in Public Meeting to discuss this matter and find out who is wrong. It is a plain violation of the laws of the organization and if permitted to go unchallenged will set a precedent that spells the break up of the organization. We will not submit quietly to this decision and take this means of notifying the members throughout the State. McDonald is a charter member of our organization. He held office for many years but it is not on this account we take the appeal but a matter of common Justice." If our charter is taken perhaps yours will be the next so we learn every day of members who did not pay the mis-named "Herrin" assessment.

Another Howat Case

"We ask every Local to take this matter up and go along with us in our fight against an action that is worse in its violation of law than the case of Alexander Howat. Pretty soon any member who does not agree with the policies of the Official family will be expelled from membership and a blacklist established worse than was in effect before the organization was established.

"And for the information of the rank and file below is quoted President Farrington's own language concerning the expulsion of Alex Howat, read it carefully and then compare his action on Duncan McDonald. This language is taken from a speech made by Farrington at Muskogee, Oklahoma, May 15, 1922 and reads as follows:

" 'I don't understand the laws of the United Mine Workers of America to mean that the President of our International Union can wire from New York or Washington or some other place to Tom, Dick or Harry out in these various Districts and Mining Camps, Dick or Harry, I expel you from the organization, you have violated the contract. I don't think that can be done legally in the Miner's Union, I will tell you why I don't think it can be done. Here is what the Constitution says: Section 1, Article 18, (He quotes section which provides for charges and trial and continues as follows) Now, Gentlemen as God is my judge, down to this day, even at this minute, Alex Howat has never been given a trial as this section or our Constitution says he must be tried, and I repeat that, as God is my judge, Alex Howat has never, down to this minute, had a fair trial as prescribed by the laws of our organization.'

"Continuing in his speech President Farrington declares that 'I claim that Alex Howat is the victim of a huge political conspiracy to discredit him with the rank and file of this organization, and by that means eliminate him as the possible aspirant for election to official position in our International Union in the future.'

"We claim that this is the same motive behind the expulsion of Duncan McDonald from our Union, because he is the strongest man that can and will displace some of the tyrants that sit at the top of the Mine Workers' Union in the future. We ask that your Local Union protest to the limit this autocratic ruling and back us in our demand for a Special District Convention to secure justice for Duncan McDonald and to punish those responsible for the breaking of the laws of District No. 12, by ordering Local Union No. 448 to expel Duncan McDonald, without having preferred charges against him or without giving him a fair and impartial trial.

"Notify us of your action on this matter, by addressing your communications to our Secretary, Mr. William McAulay, 1837 South 19th Street, Springfield, Illinois."

"Adopted by Local Union No. 448, "October 6, 1924.

"WILLIAM McAULAY,
"WILLIAM JONES,
"ROBERT HOLVEY,
"Committee."

Accomplished Traitor

This finishes a brief and condensed story of the career of one of the most accomplished traitors to the cause of labor in the United States, a country, that boasts of a generous crop of labor fakers. Since his entrance into the miners' union, Farrington has an unbroken record of loyalty to the master class and treachery to the workers, particularly to the miners.

Other specimens are undoubtedly as crooked, but few, outside of the gas pipe brigade that brazenly operates in the underworld, flaunts their crookedness before the public.

As these lines are written the progressives in District 12, and those who are sick of Farrington and his gang of looters and capitalist lackeys, are marshalling their forces for the coming election. All the power of the coal operators, the machine of Len Small and the formidable aggregation of patriots on the district payroll will be mobilized against them. But it is impossible, that Farrington should be able to continue his career of treason to the miners any longer. While the ranks of the coal diggers are thinned with unemployment, this notorious servant of the coal barons spends his time and his energy, boosting the unspeakable Klan governor, Len Small for re-election and paving with dollars his way back to the district office for two more years.

The problem confronting the Illinois Mine Workers is similar to that facing the members of practically every union in America. Most of the labor leaders are now bound with a golden rope to the capitalists. The Trade Union Educational League shows the way, the militants and progressives must follow if they are to rid the unions of the labor fakers, oust the agents of the bosses and make of the unions revolutionary instruments of the struggle against the capitalists for the emancipation of the workers.

The DAILY WORKER will follow up this series on Frank Farrington with news of the progressive struggle in District 12. The election for District officials of the Illinois Miners' Union will take place the first part of December. The mine workers should order bundles of The DAILY WORKER and help the fight to free the union from the grip of the coal operators.

Chicago Party and League Members!

Poll Watchers Needed for Election Day.

PARTY and League members are asked to help the Party on election day, Nov. 4, by acting as poll watchers. This is to ensure an accurate count of all votes cast for the Workers (Communist) Party candidates. It is easy to be released from work on election day. The Party will need about 300 watchers. Are you ready to help? If you are, sign below and send it in to the Local Office, 166 W. Washington St., Room 303.

CUT OUT HERE

I will be a poll watcher on November 4th.

A COMMUNIST daily is a mighty weapon in the hands of the workers. It is a teacher and leader at one and the same time. It not only spreads knowledge but is also leading the proletarian struggle against capitalist exploitation.

The American workers need such a daily. They need therefore the DAILY WORKER which is giving expression, fearlessly and bravely, to the needs and aspirations of the working masses.

To "Build the DAILY WORKER" is to mobilize the workingclass against capitalism. Help "Build the DAILY WORKER."

SPOLANSKY LIES HIS WAY THRU TO FAT SALARY

His Fakes Cause Innocent Men Much Misery

By KARL REEVE.

Jake Spolansky, former secret service agent of the United States government, brags about his aid to the steel trust in the 1919 strike of the steel trust workers under the leadership of William Z. Foster.

Spolansky couldn't give the steel trust much aid, but he shows himself proud of the fact, in one of his closing articles in the Daily News, that he managed to milk the steel barons out of a fat salary by putting innocent steel workers in jail.

R's Haymaking Time.

The fall of 1919, when the steel strike was called, was haymaking time for even the stupid denizens of the underworld, who were then acting as stool pigeons in the ranks of labor.

Altho Europe had long since released its war time political prisoners, in America, working class newspapers were being raided, meetings were being broken up by chamber of commerce mobs and thugs in the secret service or in public office.

The right of the workers to organize was being systematically curtailed, and workers were no longer permitted to have their own legislative representatives. Lusk committees were being formed and Palmer was about to begin his shameful deportation raids.

Even the most stupid and lowly "dick" could get a job organizing phony "anarchist" organizations like the "Knights of the Red Star," so Spolansky was given a job.

On Steel Trust Payroll.

While Spolansky was getting paid to do his dirty work for the steel trust, William Z. Foster was writing the most glorious page in the history of the American labor movement. Foster's genius for organization had fully roused the deadened steel trust slaves for the first time. They rebelled at the long hours and small pay, compared to the millions of dollars in profits reaped by Elbert H. Gary, and answered the strike call of the A. F. of L.

Speaking of this activity of the various agents of the steel trust who attempted to break the strike, William Z. Foster, secretary-treasurer of the National Committee to organize the steel industry, of the American Federation of Labor and leader of the strike, tells the true reason for such activity. "Realizing full well the real spirit of the times, the steel companies proceeded safely to extremes to crush the strike, dubbed by them an attempt at violent revolution," Foster stated shortly after the strike. "To accomplish his, their end, they stopped at nothing. Thruout the strike, whenever and wherever they could find municipal and court officials willing to do their bidding, the steel barons abolished the rights of free speech and free assemblage, so precious to the strikers.

Gunmen to Intimidate Strikers.

"To carry on the terror so well begun by the suppression of free speech and assembly, the steel trust turned loose upon the devoted strikers the great masses of armed thugs it had been recruiting since long before the strike." And the federal agents including Spolansky, freely enlisted in this terrorizing of labor. Spolansky charges that Foster sought the co-operation of J. W. W. "agitators," that the Federation of Labor not only refused to place its aproval on the strike, but even denounced it as unauthorized and threw all its co-operation to the government."

Spolansky's Chief Stock in Trade—Lying.

This is another bare-faced lie of Spolansky. True that some of the American Federation of Labor officials were tardy in indorsing the strike. But the great mass of the workers were heart and soul with it. Even the officials indorsed the strike from necessity, are about equivalent to the space occupied by 40 New York apartments.

Wall Ten Feet Thick.

"The easterly wall is 10 feet thick and the three other walls eight feet thick and are of a type selected after a series of tests conducted by the federal reserve board with the assistance of the U. S. bureau of standards. At these tests all kinds of modern vault construction were subjected to the action of such powerful agents of destruction as TNT, dynamite, oxy-actelyine torches, and jackhammer or pneumatic drills."

He describes three cylindrical revolving doors weighing with their frames 230 tons apiece and three emergency doors 8 feet thick and weighing 185 tons each. Such weights have never before been attempted in bank construction. There are listening galleries with instruments to detect any attempt to tunnel in the neighborhood. There is special provision for locking in the armored cars which bring accessions of wealth and for their unloading under the control of an overhead gallery of bullet proof steel. From this unloading platform the gold and securities will be transferred to the vault on hand trucks operating thru a corridor controlled by a bullet proof screen pierced to command the whole length of the corridor.

The financial oligarchy intends to protect its title to exploitation against all comers.

Gompers down. We learn from Foster that:

"President Gompers pledged the support of the A. F. of L. to the strike two day after it started and labor generally has shown its determination to stick by the steel workers. Even the officers of the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers indorsed the strike."

Spolansky repeats an old charge that Foster was instrumental in creating the railroad strike which followed the steel strike. Foster said in answer to that charge:

"Probably there never was a strike in this country more spontaneous and unplanned than the one in question. But that does not worry our department of justice. It announced to a credulous world that the whole affair is a highly organized plot to overthrow the government."

At that time Foster declared. "I do not know a solitary one of the men advertised as strike leaders, nor has there been any communication whatsoever between us. I have not attended a strike meeting nor have I even seen a man whom I knew to be a striker. But, of course, such details are irrelevant to the department of justice and the newspapers.

Bosses Hide Behind Flag.

"The steel strike was a drive straight at the heart of industrial autocracy in America. It could expect to meet with the most unscrupulous resistance," Foster stated. It was to be expected that some means would have been found to thoroly discredit the strike. This conviction was intensified by the unexampled fury with which each important move of labor during recent years has been opposed, not only by the employers, but by the government officials as well.

Box Makers Get Increase.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. — Wage increases of $1 and $2 a week have been granted paper box workers employed by the Paper Box Manufacturers' Association by the board of arbitration which acted between the union and employers after the recent strike. Working hours remain the same. For two years all differences on these points must be submitted to the board of arbitration.

CAPITALIST DICTATORSHIP HAS MADE ELABORATE PREPARATIONS TO PROTECT ITS HOARD OF GOLD

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Have you heard about the new capitol building designed expressly for the real government of the United States? No, not in Washington, where the constitutional government designed for aristocratic landowners and small business men continues like a fifth wheel on a coach. But on Nassau street in New York City. It houses the federal reserve bank of New York.

The federal reserve bank of New York is the public representative of the dictatorship of the capitalist in America. It is really nothing more than an integration of the great private banks of New York district thru which the giants of finance have been steadily organizing the country into industrial provinces under their rule. It is the largest bank of issue in the world with assets in the neighborhood of $1,500,000,000 and annual business figured in tens of billions.

Move to New Building.

October 1 was moving day for this pool of economic power and during the ensuing weeks its personnel numbering approximately 2,000 quietly took up quarters in the new building representing the last word in material protection for the gold and securities that give New York financiers control over our economic life.

The symbol of this dictatorship is a horde of gold unequaled in the world. The continuance of this dictatorship rests upon the belief of the people in the divine right of the gold and security owners to rule the economic life of the country.

The new capitol building centers in the extraordinary vault designed to protect these symbols, ownership of which is supposed to confer on New York bankers the right to rule. Will Nassau in The Wall Street Journal Oct. 18 describes this vault:

"The vault is probably the largest and strongest in the world. It is below tidewater, an additional factor of safety, and the lower floor rests upon piers imbedded in a foundation of solid rock. It contains three levels which, while no more than the bank needs, are about equivalent to the space occupied by 40 New York apartments.

Wall Ten Feet Thick.

"The easterly wall is 10 feet thick and the three other walls eight feet thick and are of a type selected after a series of tests conducted by the federal reserve board with the assistance of the U. S. bureau of standards. At these tests all kinds of modern vault construction were subjected to the action of such powerful agents of destruction as TNT, dynamite, oxy-actelyine torches, and jackhammer or pneumatic drills."

BIG MEETING IN TRAFALGAR SQUARE, LONDON

Trade Union Rebels Hear Communists

By JACK McCARTHY.
(Special Correspondence.)

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Under the shadow of the Nelson monument on Trafalgar Square, London, the national minority movement of Britain held its first public meeting. Today the huge crowd swarmed into the square from all directions, marching behind bands and assembled around the base of the monument which served as the platform for the speakers.

The bands played the International, the Red Flag and other revolutionary airs. The marchers carried banners with inscriptions, "Down with the Dawes report," "A wage increase of a pound a week for all workers," "44-hour week and no more." Then came the Young Communist League placards reading, "Communist Youth Will Win," "Up Young Rebels," etc.

There were scores of unions marching, each with its respective banner, but perhaps most significant of all was a large group from the National Union of Railwaymen, of which C. T. Cramp is secretary. Cramp is as hostile to the minority movement in Britain as Sam Gompers is to the T. U. E. L. (He and Cramp) was instrumental in getting thru the resolution at the labor party congress calling for the exclusion of the C. P. members from the labor party.

Tom Mann Cheered.

When the meeting was opened by Sam Elsbury, of the garment workers, who was chairman, the crowd was so large that it became necessary for the opening of a second meeting on the other side of the monument. The appearance of the veteran labor leader, Tom Mann on the platform, was the signal for a roaring demonstration from the assembled workers which could be heard in Buckingham palace. Tom Mann spoke in no uncertain terms about the Dawes' report and what it meant to the workers of the world. He severely criticized the labor government for its acceptance. He outlined the program of the minority movement and explained what it meant to the trade union movement of Britain.

In replying to the actions of the reactionaries who were responsible for the resolution carried at the labor party congress in reference to the exclusion of the Communists, he said: "I have been in the labor movement all my life and I want to tell the officials who are responsible for these resolutions that I am in it to stay for the rest of my life." This brought shouts of "hear, hear," and prolonged applause from the twelve to fifteen thousand assembled workers. "The Communists," he continued, "are in the trade unions, not as we have been accused by the reactionaries, 'to destroy the trade unions,' but to co-ordinate and amalgamate them into one powerful, industrial organization for each industry, to make of them effective weapons thru which we can enforce our immediate demands; to develop them further as instruments of the class struggle, not to patch capitalism, but to destroy it."

Workers Against War.

The next speaker was J. R. Campbell, editor of the Workers' Weekly, and who is responsible for the present general election. The prosecution of Campbell by the labor government was withdrawn because of the protests of the trade unions, the tory and liberal members in the house of commons passed a vote of censure on the labor government for dropping the Campbell case, hence the general election at this time. When Campbell stepped on the platform this was a signal for another demonstration from the workers. They shouted their approval of what he had said in the Workers' Weekly.

The other speakers were Jack Tanner, George Hardy, Harry Pollitt, Walt Hannington, T. Winter, J. Springhall and Alex Gossip, each of them representing a different union.

Fascisti Got Theirs.

Just as the meeting was about to close, a few tories could be seen in the crowd and when the chairman called for the singing of the Red Flag, the tories were compelled to remove themselves or their tall hats. While the workers were singing the Red Flag and the International, a small group of fascisti tried to sing God Save the King, but they were soon scattered. One member of the Y. C. L. got 21 days in jail for putting one of the fascisti singers out of order.

The huge crowd dispersed. Marching behind their bands, with their red flags and banners they returned to their respective localities, confident that they had demonstrated their strength to the enemies of the working class.

LAFOLLETTE'S HOKUM IS PUT INTO PLAIN LANGUAGE BY SOME WISCONSIN COMMUINSTS

By JOSEPH R. BOOTH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

SUPERIOR, Wis., Oct. 29.—The Communists of Wisconsin, being so familiar with our great statesman Billy Sunday's stuff, can truthfully interpret LaFollette's platform in the following 14 points:

1st. I, the representative of the middle class cannot bear to see the big capitalist parasites so barbareously suck the blood of the working class without also giving a show to the smaller parasites.

2nd. I'm here to avoid the spread of Communism, the outcome of centralization of capital, and therefore my policy is decentralization.

3rd. I boost my liberal reforms to cause workers to forget their revolutionary aims.

4th. By running independently I have so far succeeded in destroying the Communist's plans of a class farmer labor party.

5th. I oppose proletarian dictatorship in preference to a la LaFollette dictatorship.

6th. Down with workers and peasants soviets. Hail to commercial clubs.

7th. I have a clean fighting record against the late war, altho sceptics meanly place it to pro-Germanism.

8th. I am entitled to all labor support, after getting the endorsement of labor leaders like Gompers & Co. who render great service to labor by drawing the swellest salaries.

9th. Even the "practical" socialist party has renounced Marxism as bunk and is with me.

10th. It is also not to be underestimated that thru my power the socialists forever declared their firm bankrupt.

11th. I am a specialist in combating the Bolsheviks. While the reactionaries do it in a clumsy way, I, in a remarkably liberal fashion grant their constitutional right to free expression, but not to association, because they get orders from such terrible men like Zinoviev, Trotsky, Bucharin, Radek, and Kalenin, who surely cannot be compared with the gentlemen, LaFollette, Gompers, Hillquit, Berger, and Cahan.

12th. Don't fear my radicalism as long as I am solid for capitalism.

13th. Fellow citizens, this time will I and Wheeler are running please stay away from the corrupt republicans and democrats, who make no such promises as ours.

14th. In the name of Spreckles and Co. send us to the White House because you know we can deliver prosperity to everybody—workers, farmers, businessmen, bankers, etc.

These are LaFollette's 14 points. They will meet the same fate as Wilson's.

We have only one point to offer. The workers' and farmers' only salvation is the revolutionary Workers Party, with its true fighting standard bearers William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow.

Organize Box Workers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—With a brass band whooping up the music, several big busses full of striking paper box workers rode thru the streets of New York past their shops and spread the word of their fight for organization and for decent conditions.

The issue of the fight is organization of small shops. The union has an agreement signed for two years with the box makers' association but many small shops are not organized. The union asks a $5 flat increase in wages and the 44-hour week.

RUSSIAN STUDENTS CAMPAIGN AGAINST CHINESE INTERVENTION

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, Oct. 29.—Numerous demonstrations were held here today by students against foreign intervention in China. Besides a message of welcome to the Chinese students and the leaders of the national liberative movement, a resolution was passed to send a message to the students of England, France, America and other interventionist powers, calling upon them to do all in the students' power to prevent intervention in China.

NEW LENIN FILM IN MILWAUKEE ON NOV. 7TH

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE.

The anniversary of the bolshevik revolution, Nov. 7, is to be celebrated in Milwaukee, Wis., with an especially fitting number on the program—a motion picture story of the "Life of Nicolai Lenin." The film opens with the front page announcement by the DAILY WORKER of the death of the greatest working class leader, and then reviews his six years of service to the Soviet republic.

He is shown agitating the masses toward Kerensky's overthrow with the slogan, "All power to the Soviets," then before the congress explaining the "New Economic Policy." We see him "on the job" as well as "off duty," and the tribute paid him by the workers of Russia and of the world at large are truly inspiring. Two other celebrations in the country can run the picture on Nov. 7. Send applications to International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill., at once as only two more showings are available.

"Russia-Germany" Picture Makes a Hit.

A very successful showing of the workers' film, Russia and Germany, produced by William F. Kruse for the International Workers' Aid, was held in Oakland, Cal., and netted a profit of $300 for the relief funds.

The picture will be shown on Sunday, Nov. 2, in the High School Auditorium at Berkeley, permission having been granted by the board of education. It is expected that a showing will soon be arranged in Sarcemento.

California and other Pacific coast cities can arrange for showings by getting in touch with F. Siegman, 128 Valencia St., San Francisco, Cal.

Duluth to See Beauty Film.

Duluth is not to be outdone by its sister city across the state line, even tho the other may be called Superior. Both will see the new Russian feature film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," Superior on Nov. 5 and Duluth on Nov. 13. The film is in Hancock, Mich., Oct. 30-31, and in Rock, Mich., on Nov. 2. Kettle River, twenty miles south of Duluth, will see The Fifth year, on Nov .2.

Loses all Civil Rights.

RIO JANEIRO.—M. J. Pasquali, a Brazilian citizen of Alfredo Chaves, has been deprived of citizenship because he refused to undergo military training. His objection was religious.

MURDER SHOWS SALVATION ARMY CHEAP LABOR AID

Girl Held as Slave in Home of Rich

(By The Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 29.—The aftermath of an unsolved murder case in which a young Scotch girl employed in the household of a wealthy Vancouver family was murdered under peculiar circumstances, brings to light the fact that the salvation army is acting as a recruiting office for cheap domestic labor for Canada.

The murdered girl was brought to Canada under the auspices of the salvation army and placed as a virtual chattel in the kitchen of a wealthy home.

Girl Robbed of Wages

For doing all kinds of domestic work with no fixed hours the girl received $5 a month. The remaining $10 of her $15 a month salary was taken to pay back to the salvation army her passage money.

When asked if this were not a fact, the "army" officials evaded the question by asserting that it did not concern The Federated Press whether the murdered girl had to refund her passage money to the salvation army.

The salvation army's activities in Canada for the past two years have been to assist destitute English, Scotch and Welsh domestic workers to Canada where they are immediately placed in the homes of the well-to-do at wages less than those paid to Chinese servant help. The army makes no demand for a specified wage in conformity with that received by Canadian domestic workers, all it is concerned about is bringing the girls to Canada, placing them in a job and making certain that the passage money advanced will be refunded.

Call It Suicide

When the girl was first found dead, a verdict of suicide was returned and all possible haste made to have her buried. In the hurry to bury her many clues of value were of course destroyed and the frenzy to put her away roused the suspicion of the local Scottish societies, who demanded, and finally secured, an examination of the body and at a further inquest it was proved beyond all doubt that the girl was foully murdered, her clothing stripped from her and burned, and, to strengthen the suicide contention, she was redressed in fresh clothing.

One of the police was subsequently dismissed but as soon as the thing had blown over had enough influence to secure reinstatement.

Suspicion fell on a Chinese house-servant who was employed in the same household as the girl but after several grillings this was dispelled. It now transpires that the Chinese interpreter, who acted between the police and the accused Chinese, spoke a different dialect of Chinese to that understood by the accused. This interpreter was murdered about 10 days ago in Vancouver's Chinatown.

Rumors persist that the girl was murdered in a drunken carousal of the family at which she was forced to serve guests with food and liquor and that the person committing the murder was powerful enough to block police investigation.

EVERYTHING MOVING SMOOTHLY IN SOVIET RUSSIA, SO EVERYBODY IS TAKING A GOOD LONG VACATION

KISLOWODSK, Caucasus, Sept. 5. (By mail.)—If you should walk along the main road of the "park" in this charming little health resort in the mountains, and if you could know by sight all the people, you would wonder whether the seat of Russia's government was Moscow or Kislowodsk.

Russia runs so smoothly now that all the higher-ups are taking their months' or six weeks' vacation, in order to be ready for the coming year of work.

When at work, most high Communists of my acquaintance work about eighteen hours a day, being unable to escape from the numberless demands on their time; so when a break comes, they all take to the health resorts.

Trotsky Works While Resting.

Trotsky is here with a few dozen members of his staff and secretariat in a house on the edge of the town. Krupskaya, the widow of Lenin is here, in a large quiet room with a wonderful view of the distant mountains; she has been ordered by her doctor not to talk business to anyone for two months. Zinoviev and Bucharin are still here, unless they have left in the past day or two. Ryckoff has finished his Volga trip, and came here to rest. I met him the other day on top of one of the high mountains.

It is rather amusing, the way I met Ryckoff. We held him up for a ham, seven bottles of mineral water and one of madiera. We were a party of twenty people, going by horse or on foot to Mount Jenal, one of the popular excursions which offers a beautiful view. On the way we discovered that one of the hampers of food, containing all of what we had to drink, had been left behind. This was serious, as the trip takes a whole day, and is on top of a dry, grassy slope, without water.

No Trimmings Here.

But just before we reached the top of the mountain, we met a couple of red army boys galloping down the path. Already we had seen a group of people on the summit, with three or four carriages. "Who is up there?" we asked the soldiers. "Ryckoff," they shouted in reply, just as informally as that.

So as we met the descending carriages two members of our party, who are old Communists were acquainted with Ryckoff, got out in the middle of the road. "Hands up," they cried, laughingly, and when Ryckoff's carriage stopped, they asked him: "What have you left in the way of grub?" "A ham, seven bottles of Narzan, (a famous mineral water) and one bottle of medeira." . . . He waved us to the wagon containing the food hampers and we helped ourselves. Such is the casual way in which in Russia one runs into the highest official of the land.

Scores, even hundreds of lesser officials, are also taking their rest here. I met yesterday, the head of Rosta, the government news agency which now has representatives thruout the world. Hodorovsky, the chief assistant of Lunarcharsky, and head of all the higher schools of Russia, is also here. Members of state planning board, and heads of industries of all kinds, are among those present.

Workers in Sanitariums.

Among the best of all the sanitariums are the ones reserved for the Sostrak, or Workers' Insurance. These are full of workers from mine and factory in every part of the Soviet federation. Sent for rheumatism or heart trouble or the various things that can be cured or helped by these mineral waters. And truly, the mineral waters of the Caucasus are wonderful. My roommate tells me that after ten baths of Narzan water, her dilated heart has gone down two-thirds of an inch.

Some ten or twelve different sorts of baths are on tap here. And certainly the sanitariums scattered thru the various resorts number far above one hundred. In the old days they were the exclusive property of the aristocracy of Russia. No worker was even allowed to enter the train on the branch line railway that leads to them. A man who is here now in one of the best sanitariums, tells me how once, as a worker, he was put out of the train by the police, because his clothes showed his social status; and altho he had a paper showing that he was wanted farther up the valley, to work on some buildings, he was not allowed to go thru this exclusive domain. . . . And no Jews, even from the merchant princes of Moscow, were allowed to patronize these exclusive places.

New Rich Have Hard Time.

Now the hotel in the center of the town, run for the new rich at very high prices, is full of Jewish profiteers. But the finest sanitariums in the park and on the hills, are full of workers direct from the bench, traveling here on free tickets, and supplied free of charge not only with medical attendance and mineral baths, but with bath cloaks and new underwear and sandals, so that they take mountain walks or repose after their baths without wearing out their own clothes.

We'll Bet This Bureau Will Step Easy on Toes of Anti-Labor Judges

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Following up the records of men nominated for the federal bench and other important federal jobs will be one of the most important tasks of the Citizens' Federal Research bureau, which is asking the public to give it $50,000 for a period of three years. Frank Vanderlip laughingly, and when Ryckoff's carriage stopped, they asked him: "What have you left in the way of grub?" "A ham, seven bottles of Narzan, (a famous mineral water) and one bottle of medeira." . . . He waved us to the wagon containing the food hampers and we helped ourselves. Such is the casual way in which in Russia one runs into the highest official of the land.

Scores, even hundreds of lesser officials, are also taking their rest here. I met yesterday, the head of Rosta, the government news agency which now has representatives thruout the world. Hodorovsky, the chief assistant of Lunarcharsky, and head of all the higher schools of Russia, is also here. Members of state planning board, and heads of industries of all kinds, are among those present.

Workers in Sanitariums.

Among the best of all the sanitariums are the ones reserved for the Sostrak, or Workers' Insurance. These are full of workers from mine and factory in every part of the Soviet federation. Sent for rheumatism or heart trouble or the various things that can be cured or helped by these mineral waters. And truly, the mineral waters of the Caucasus are wonderful. My roommate tells me that after ten baths of Narzan water, her dilated heart has gone down two-thirds of an inch.

Some ten or twelve different sorts of baths are on tap here. And certainly the sanitariums scattered thru the various resorts number far above one hundred. In the old days they

Amalgamated Fights Bosses Who Are Half Scab and Half Union

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. — Return of 4,000 more shirt workers to settled shops leaves only 1,500 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers still on strike in this branch of the trade. A ten per cent wage increase has been gained by agreement between the newly formed Shirt Contractors' Association and the Shirt and Boys' Waist Makers' Union of the Amalgamated.

Besides the wage increase another important victory feature is noted in the agreement which ends the strike. The contractors pledge themselves not to handle any work for manufacturers who give out work to non-union shops. In other words manufacturers cannot remain half union and half scab.

Knitgoods Workers Plan Big Organization Drive in New York

NEW YORK.—The Amalgamate Knitgoods Workers' Union, which is about to receive a charter from the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, by an arrangement with the United Textile Workers' Union, which formerly claimed sole jurisdiction, will stage big mass meetings as part of an organization drive in Great ea New York.

The rapid growth of knit goods has created a serious organization problem. Many newa shops have been opened up. In some classes knitgoods sales are fifty per cent above last year's.

CHARGE G. O. P. IS RAISING MILLION DOLLARS IN N. Y.

Industrial, Financial Groups Are Organized

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Confession by Charles D. Hilles, vice-chairman of the republican national committee that every industrial and financial group in New York is now organized for the collection of campaign funds to insure the election of Coolidge, and that $1,000,000 will be raised in New York alone, marked the examination by the senate committee of this first spokesmah of Wall Street.

Between 500 and 600 men, Hilles said, are members of these special committees that are combing the financial and business district of New York for contributions.

Hilles had personally secured $15,000 from Mortimer Schiff, $10,000 from Wm. Nelson Cromwell, $20,000 from four of the Guggenheims, $5,000 from Marshall Field & Co., and $10,000 from Harding, a banker.

But the fine work was all done by the trade committees. They send their contributions chiefly to Guy Emerson, head of the contributors' committee, who forwards it to the G. O. P. headquarters. Hilles admitted that $850,000 had thus far been sent to the republican national committee from New York.

Untermyer asked, and Borah granted the request, that the state committee chiefs of the republican party be summoned from Illinois, Ohio, New York and New Jersey, to show where they got their funds which are used in furthering the national ticket.

He pointed out that while the biggest financiers and industrial magnates are the ones most interested in the outcome of the struggle, their names do not appear in the list of contributors. Gary, Ford of Standard Oil, J. P. Morgan and many others are not accounted for. Their campaign contributions might easily be sent in lump sums to individual states and not appear at all on the books of the national headquarters.

N. Y. Association of Theater Bosses Quits Fight on Actors' Union

NEW YORK, Oct. 29. — Actors Equity Assn. conferred honorary membership upon the actors and actresses of the Odeon Theatre company, French National Theatre, headed by M. Firmin Gemier, for the duration of their tour of the United States, Frank Gillmore, Equity's executive secretary announces. Notification was sent by radiogram to the steamship France upon which the Odeon company is traveling to this country.

Producing Managers' Assn., group of "die-hards," who refused to sign with Actors' Equity Assn., has disbanded and is arranging the distribution of its $250,000 fund raised to fight the actors' union. The fact of disbanding is proof of the failure of the managers' fight, Equity members assert. The Managers' Protective Assn. started by Lee Shubert and other managers who would not stay with the dichards led by A. L. Erlanger, is signed and satisfied with Equity. Members of the dead Producing Managers' Assn. will have to accept rating as "independents" with Equity and use 100 per cent Equity casts, with the exception of certain members of Fidelity actors for whom Equity made special provision.

LOS ANGELES JOB SURVEY REVEALS EVE OF WORST WINTER IN COAST CITY

By MAUD MC CREERY
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES.—The eve of the worst winter for crime which it will probably ever experience confronts Los Angeles, according to the Los Angeles Times. This serious prophesy was made by the Times in an editorial knbcking the police chief for dismissing several officers from the service. Perhaps unemployment will have a bearing in bringing the prophesy to realization.

While thousands of men and women are looking for work, large factories and shops are working on part time. The labor market surrounding the public employment offices is so crowded every day that traffic is blocked. There is not an industry or trade in the city that is not suffering from a serious unemployment, according to labor union officials.

Clothing Industry Slack.

In the clothing industry October is usually the busiest month in the year, but this year not more than 50 per cent of the workers are employed, according to Maurice Biell, local manager International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Gabriel A. Vastano, local manager, Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Those working are only getting in three or four days a week. Last year at this time both the ladies' and men's apparel factories were working overtime to handle the business, the union officials declare.

How serious this is becoming was brought home to me when a worker became hysterical while attempting to explain what he believed lay back of it and I learned at union headquarters that he had been out of work for eight months. Perhaps The Times knows of this case.

In the printing trades a year ago men were working overtime. Today all the shops are running with fewer men and there are eight or ten men waiting in the union offices all the time for a chance to go to work. One of the newspapers has cut the night side force of printers from 12 to 5 men and the day side proportionately.

Carpenters Put Up Fight.

Union carpenters are striving to maintain a $9 a day scale in the face of thousands of men flocking to jobs offering their services for $6, $7, and $8 and in some instances $4 and $5, any price to get work. It is reported that on a big stockyards job men were recruited from the auto camps at $2.50 a day. In the building trades all the unions are feeling the effects of similar conditions, which are reflected in a serious drop in membership.

In the shipyards work is practically at a standstill and work is unusually slack in the oil fields. In the metal trades the same. In the big machine shops hours have been cut from eight to six—with an accompanying cut in wages. In some shops men are working four days one week and six the next, according to the machinists' union.

There is only one union in town that is holding up its wage scale — the house owners' union. Despite the fact that in every bloc in the city there are several houses to let, the rent scale of from $50 and up prevails for everything but shacks unfit for habitation. Owners blame the hoof and mouth disease scare of a few months ago and "anti-southern California propaganda by labor unions" and the like for the surplus of houses to rent this year but are still holding up their prices hoping for the usual annual crop of tourists.

That the publicity given conditions here by labor unions is bearing fruit might be gathered from the fact that one auto camp of 42 units that had a waiting list last year, today has but seven families in it.

Thus on every side an investigator may find grounds for the editorial statement by The Times that "Los Angeles is on the eve of the worst winter for crime it will probably ever experience."

Machinists Sign for $1.15 an Hour.

DETROIT, Oct. 29.—In signing the Scotten-Dillon Co., as a union shop, the Detroit machinists' organization obtained a wage scale of $1.15 an hour and an eight-hour day. Other former open shops are expected to sign this week.

TAMPA CIGAR MAKERS WIN BIG VICTORY

Triumph in All Their Demands on Bosses

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 29.—The five-months' strike of the 15,000 cigar makers here has come to an end at last, with every demand granted.

The workers asked and received an increase of 15% in wages, recognition of the union, an extra half-hour with pay at lunch time, the installment of an adequate and comfortable reading-room in conjunction with the shop.

100 Per Cent Victory.

It has been a 100 per cent victory—and more. The cigar makers have had to contend not only with the power ist pressot their bossesa mfe p vmm of their bosses, with the force of the capitalist courts and the capitalist press, but with the many other factors as well.

The officials of the International Cigar Makers' Union, of which Sam Gompers is a member, have refused support of the strikers, and have consistently hindered these workers in their fight.

Rank and File Stands Solid.

In spite of the attitude of the officialdom, however, the rank and file of the union have stood solidly behind the Tampa workers. The union members of Chicago, for example, defied the officials outright by voting that each member pay one dollar every week for a fund to support the strikers.

Most of the cigar workers here are Italian and Spaniards.

Dinner Pail Epics by Bill Lloyd

I see that John D.'s Bible class is newly organized in mass, along summilitary lines, thru which the (H)oly gospel shines.

It seems attendance ain't bit big such that John could say, "It beats the Dutch." Too many pagans still remain who might celestial blessing gain, if they could only hear John tell about the sulphur fires of hell and learn that tale of needle's eye is just a wornout ancient lie, and that the rich man is for fair enfolded in God's special care, and that the poor man really must crush out his evil money-lust. For if he's good until he die, he'll get a mansion in the sky, where golden harps will not be dumb and he can burn petroleum.

So now the school they organize, to bring it up to Standard size, with majors, generals and such, and of duck privates not too much. Each man who drags in four recruits will get a captaincy that suits.

The army's useful, John is sure, where oil concessions ain't secure. And army discipline should work when Bible hounds their duties shirk. Our khaki we'll keep in crease while singing of the Prince of Peace, and try to keepour powedr dry until we call for wings on high.

Praise God from whom oil blessings flow! The rise in gasoline ain't slow. Now Onward Christian Soldiers all; the Rockefellers have the gall. Lead Kindly Light of kerosene. The Ten Commandments we don't mean. At least we throw them overboard when wars are fought by Christian hordes. We'll all be saved if God will let us. If not, a soldier's grave will get us.

O, Bethlehem's little shining star; John D. has got you beat by far.

Liberal Press Agents

One of the most nauseating features of the present political campaign is the indecent willingness on the part of near-radical journalists to enter the lists on the side of prominent capitalist politicians and their labor lieutenants. Many of those journalists received their training in the labor movement, at the expense of the workers, but the working class organizations with a revolutionary objective and an uncompromising attitude towards the capitalist class are not usually in a position to retain the services of those whose feet they placed on the road to prominence.

While attending the Peoria convention of the Illinois Miners' Union a DAILY WORKER reporter was informed by a flourishing capitalist journalist, once associated with the Federated Press, that he was ready to sell himself—he did not use these words exactly—to the labor press but the workers were not willing to pay as much for his services as the capitalist class. His virtue was for sale but the workers were not ready to place as high a price on it as the capitalists, therefore he sold himself to the latter.

We are prompted to make these observations on reading a Cleveland Federated Press dispatch from Harvey O'Connor, formerly of the Seattle Union Record and now a press agent for Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. We learn from the O'Connor dispatch that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, has two officials of the International in Cleveland telling the story of Stone's refusal to recognize the miners' union in his Coal River Colleries company.

Stone does not deny the facts, and boastfully says that he will run his own business as he sees fit—just as any coal operator would say. Stone is lined up politically with LaFollette. Lewis is a political labor agent of Coolidge. Both are tarred with the same brush. Both are traitors to the working class. There is no choice between them.

But O'Connor, instead of telling the truth about those two worthies, enters the fray on the side of his paymaster, Stone, and quotes the latter's defense, which is not even that. The locomotive chief merely attributed Lewis' interest in the case to political exigencies.

After giving Stone's curt comment on his union-scabbery, O'Connor makes the following revealing comment: "Impartial labor men are inclined to stand on the side lines and watch the battle between these two dominating figures of the labor movement."

Those who are more devoted to their pay checks than to their principles will always stand on the side lines while the crooks battle, but always ready to be placed on either payroll. Journalists of this type are more dangerous to the working class movement than the avowed defenders of the capitalist system.

A Complete Repudiation

The recognition of the Soviet government by France, once the most bitter foe of the Workers' Republic, is not alone a recognition of the stability of the soviet power, but it is also a complete repudiation of the anti-soviet policy of the United States.

Thru an agreement entered into between Poincare, Herriot's predecessor, and the Washington state department, the latter was kept informed of every move in the French policy toward Russia. It is an open secret in Europe that Hughes exerted considerable pressure on the present French government in an effort to prevent de jure recognition. It is reliably reported that this pressure went so far as to threaten France with an immediate request for the payment of the big United States debt if Paris resumed diplomatic relations with Moscow.

But the "lone Baptist" of Tepot Dome, failed in his conspiracy. The most formidable military power on the continent of Europe has finally decided to go to Moscow carrying a white flag. The recognition is without conditions and without reservations.

With the news of the belated French act comes the information that Japan is ready to sign up with Moscow. Poor old Charlie Hughes, the whiskered diplomatic Rip Van Winkle! He will need all the oil his friend Albert B. Fall, left in the Tepot Dome to brighten up his corner. Let us hope that some of Jess Smith's liquor is still available to cheer him up.

The students of Clemson College, a military academy, South Carolina, went on strike in protest against the suspension of one of the cadets. The secretary of war has not yet published the Zinoviev "secret orders" calling the strike. What's a matter John? Head too fat?

The Plot That Failed

The great "red plot," sprung by the British foreign office on the eve of the elections, has turned out to be a great big fizzle. Tho Ramsay MacDonald was undoubtedly acquainted with the preparations to spring it on the public he is now in a very embarrassing position, as most of the prominent leaders of his party brand it as a fake.

Even Albert Thomas, head of the labor bureau of the League of Nations, declares it is quite possible that the Second International, to which Ramsay MacDonald belongs, was the active agent in the forgery. He repudiates the charge that the Amsterdam International is guilty of the deed.

That the "expose" will prove a boomerang to those that tried to profit politically by it, is indicated by the fact that the British Trade Union Congress has accepted an invitation from Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, to visit Russia and investigate the authenticity of the document. The Communist International will accept the findings of the commission as final.

Of course the abundant proof that the Zinoviev letter was a forgery will not prevent the American capitalist and socialist press from persisting in villifying Soviet Russia and the Communist International. But these liars will be eventually exposed as their prototypes in England have been.

Navy Day in Gopher Prairie

It's a hard job to get the Atlantic fleet to parade up and down Main street and make all the patriotic hearts rejoice while awesome workers have their hats knocked off by ebullient sons of profiteers. However, the navy did the best it could to raise the fervor of back-country folk for more and bigger battleships.

In the great cities, where the working class has been well fed on such bunk, the absence of armored cruisers was particularly annoying. The best that could be done was some papers on "port administration" read before the absent minded members of engineering societies who had been inveigled into coming to a meeting in hope of wetting their lips with liquids too costly to float a battleship.

The one insidious element was the knee-crooking flag raisings, flag waiving and flag worshippings carried on in the schools to pollute the children of the workers with the virus of imperialism. This is a sort of vaccination worse than cow pus, but no "humanitarian" arose to protest. But with all of the programs of windy flag wavers, "Navy Day" was a fizzle.

Considerable excitement was created in Washington recently, when Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the former secretary of state, announced to a bevy of female parasites, interested in keeping the Czarist refugees in coffee and doughnuts, that no less a person than the Grand Duchess of Cyril of Russia was coming. The Grand Duchess has a long list of deeds to her credit, not the least important of which is that she is a daughter of the late Duke of Edinburgh and grand daughter of the late Queen Victoria. Cyril, himself has high notions, but lives from hand to mouth in Berlin. It is reported that a vaudeville circuit is making handsome offers to Cyril for an American tour. The Duchess, we assume will be open for engagements, and perhaps for "engagement."

Among those who have endorsed Frank Comerford, notorious red baiter, candidate for the superior court, is Clarence Darrow, money making anarchist and defender of the "oppressed" for a fancy consideration. Darrow has already endorsed John W. Davis and Robert M. LaFollette as candidates for the presidency. If Coolidge came to town he would also be endorsed by Darrow.

"I blush for my sex," declared General Dawes, referring to the male members of the republican national committee. Let that stand as perhaps the only contribution made by Hell an' Maria to the vocal part of this campaign that will strike an answering cord in the hearts of the American workers.

A good way to celebrate election day, after you vote for William Z. Foster and the rest of the Communist ticket, is to hustle around and get a subscription for The DAILY WORKER. Election days do not happen always, but The DAILY WORKER is on the job every day in the year except Sunday.

Ramsay MacDonald should follow the example of Silent Cal and say nothing about the Zinoviev forgery. Had he kept his peace, he would not have so much to explain later on. Even the Chicago Tribune reporter now seems to be convinced that it's a forgery.

If it is as hard for a rich man to go to heaven as it is for a camel to go thru the needle's eye, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., may damn himself for all eternity cursing the publication of the tax reports. God has surely got the goods on his Sunday school teacher.

The united front between Len Small and the Ku Klux Klan fills the governor's cup of infamy to the brim. The association of Small with the knights of the night shirt, leaves him morally shirtless, so to speak.

The recognition of the Soviet Republic by France on the seventh anniversary of the Communist revolution will not dampen the ardor of the November 7th celebrations in Russia.

Red International Appeals to I.W.W.

After being denied the floor at the I. W. W. convention, the following communication was delivered in writing to the convention by the representative of the Red International of Labor Unions (the R. I. L. U.).

To the delegates assembled at the 16th General Convention of the I. W. W. and to the membership of the I. W. W.

FELLOW Workers:—The Red International of Labor Unions greets with fraternal good will the revolutionary workers organized in the I. W. W. and expresses its pleasure that the I. W. W. united after overcoming the recent danger, faces with stout heart the power of capital.

The Red International of Labor Unions regrets that its message of May 8, addressed to the whole I. W. W. through your then general officers, remains without other reply than an acknowledgement of its receipt. The acknowledgment dated May 9—states that our communication was turned over to the general executive board. Perhaps internal difficulties interfered with or prevented executive consideration. In any event we hope the convention will hear from the officials upon the matter, as not only has later inquiry gone unanswered, but we note that our communication, or even the notice of its receipt, has never been given to the membership

Misunderstanding Has Arisen

It naturally follows, by reason of the membership not being permitted access to this or any other communication to them from the R. I. L. U. in explanation of its principles or its invitation to affiliate, that the members are scarcely in a position to act. The convention is consequently handicapped, however, informed its personnel may be. But as the convention does have both the power and the duty of providing the members with full information on both sides of any question so vital as international affiliation, the executive bureau of the R. I. L. U. asks your consideration of some important points, briefly stated, upon which we feel that misunderstanding has arisen that can be and should be removed.

It is an inevitable result of the international organization of capitalist production that the working class seeks, in fact is compelled, to organize itself internationally. Nevertheless, some members of the I. W. W. taking too limited a view, have questioned the necessity of international affiliation. This would be comprehensible if it came from workers with no revolutionary tradition, or from the traitorous labor fakers of the Gompers type who teach submission to capitalist interests. But we are astonished when such expression comes from workers whose foundation reason for organization is summed up in the words of Marx—"Workers of the world, unite!" Nor does international affiliation exclude intensive organization in the national field, in fact it would immensely assist the I. W. W. to greater organization.

Granted, then, that there should be the closest possible international organization of revolutionary industrial unionists, there has been some question as to the method of attaining it.

Affiliation Healthy Move

Labor union centers on a national scale naturally united sectional unions. The I. W. W. itself was formed by the amalgamation and affiliation of existing organizations. Just so, on the international field, the healthy and natural method of extending organization is by affiliation. But some voices in the I. W. W. say: "Let the world come to us. Unions across the seas, the I. W. W. will not unite with you, but will fight you, and take away your members one by one and absorb the ruins of your once proud organization." This is the policy of absorption advocated by some who have held general administrative office.

This method is even being put to trial. And what is the verdict? The verdict is written in the "Open Letter to the Membership of the I. W. W." dated from Hamburg, Germany, on August 30, 1924, and signed by eleven members of the I. W. W. And from the verdict of these members the lesson is drawn that the policy of affiliation should prevail instead of the policy which is politely termed "absorption," and which is proven to be both shameful to attempt and impossible to accomplish.

There remains the question as to what existing international center best represents the cardinal principles of the I. W. W. Is there one which approximates the I. W. W. in structure, method and revolutionary spirit and goal? Yes, there is only one, although there are three internationals.

Internationals Analyzed

The first, the International Federation of Trade Unions, the Amsterdam International, is the property of the social-reformists—although a fighting left wing is beginning to challenge their title. But Amsterdam as organized at present is completely dissimilar and unattractive to the I. W. W.

There is an anarcho-syndicalist international at Berlin, which all honest anarchists and syndicalists have need to blush for. The first principles of the I. W. W. admitted of neither anarchism nor syndicalism, but as these theories have been from time to time imposed upon the I. W. W. it would be well for the convention and for the membership, in view of the fact that the war and the Russian revolution have upset all the blue prints of revolutionary theory, to stand all anarchist and syndicalist theory up in the light of working class experience and examine them throughly and objectively.

The result would show what an examination of the anarcho-syndicalist international shows, namely, that it has nothing in common with revolutionary industrial unionism—does not believe in that structure, that Berlin is a Tolstoian, utopian, pacifist group, impotent to oppose imperialist capitalism, and lives solely for no nobler purpose than to slander and attack the revolutionary Soviet Government of the Russian workers and peasants. Beside this broader aspect, the character of Berlin's anarcho-syndicalist group may be shown by the facts cited in recent months by the English and Spanish I. W. W. papers.

R. I. L. U. Misrepresented

But some fellow workers will exclaim that there are also differences between the I. W. W. and the Red International of Labor Unions. And we will agree. Yes, there are differences But they are not basic. Above all, there are far more important principles we have in common Moreover the differences are those which the I. W. W. itself at present recognizes as allowable differences of opinion existing among its own membership. And if it be asked of the workers in the R. I. L. U. are permitted to have these differences, we reply, certainly. The I. W. W. is asked to affiliate with the R. I. L. U. upon the basis of active revolutionary class struggle against capitalism, and if it will fight together with us upon that program, then the basis of cooperation will be established.

The R. I. L. U. has been misrepresented to the I. W. W. in many ways. The European custom of calling any labor union, either craft or industrial in form, a "trade" union, has been seized upon by enemies and confusionists. Yet from its very beginning the R. I. L. U. has based its organization upon industrial unionism. At its first congress it declared:

"The chief problem of organization consists in passing from the system of craft unionism to industrial. The slogan, 'One Union for One Industry' should become the slogan of the militant revolutionary unions."

Again at the second congress it asserted: "The most important task is the creation of centralized industrial unions." While the third congress, during July this year, said: "The trade unions should be welded into industrial unions and the industrial unions of the various countries should be united on an international scale." It warned however, as the experience of the I. W. W. with the danger of job unionism and federalism also warns, that—"The form itself does not possess any magnetic power which might take the place of our revolutionary activity and struggle."

R. I. L. U. for Industrial Unions

All of these provisions are known to the detractors of the R. I. L. U. But we have not been permitted to see them set forth to the I. W. W. membership. These quotations show that the R. I. L. U. not only favors industrial unionism as a theory, but fights to realize it by amalgamation of the craft unions.

Against this argument, false analogy has been opposed. The craft unions, composed of living, thinking, dynamic fellowmen, are compared to out-of-date sailing vessels, composed of inanimate timbers. Yet the R. I. L. U. points to the storm of rank and file revolt inside the craft unions, compelled by the conditions of capitalism and stimulated and organized by R. I. L. U. adherents. We interpret it as indicating that the spirit of the workers will not much longer brook the restraining bonds of the craft system. The R. I. L. U. asks merely that the I. W. W. members who are also members of craft unions, unite with the R. I. L. U. adherents to organize them in the craft unions and give it revolutionary expression. At the same time the greatest efforts of the I. W. W. should be to organize the industries that it has by experience found to be its most fruitful field. This has been suggested by many I. W. W. among them Fellow Worker George Williams in the General Office Bulletin for June.

For One Front of All Labor.

The Red International believes in unity. It holds that the goal to be aimed at in this respect is the complete unity in one great fighting organization of every labor union in America. But it is pure fiction to assert that the R. I. L. U. wishes to "liquidate" the I. W. W. and "drive" its members into craft unions. Yet this tale has been circulated, in spite of the fact that no document adopted by the Red International of Labor Unions in its whole existence has every intimated such a thing. Moreover, in practice it should be noted that other independent industrial unions in America which have been affiliated with the R. I. L. U. not only remain, but are strengthened. In addition, considering the loyal activity of R. I. L. U. adherents in the I. W. W. in fighting for unity and against the danger of disruption and injunction, anyone who questions the R. I. L. U. desire for unity of the I. W. W. merely reveals himself as completely uninformed or entirely mendacious.

There should be no mistake as to the origin of the R. I. L. U., in view of the publication twice, once in February and again in April 1920 issues of the "One Big Union Monthly" of the very first call, which was issued by the industrial unions of Russia and which reads as follows:

"The Central All-Russian Council of Industrial Unions invites all economic organizations based on the real and revolutionary class struggle for the liberation of labor through the proletarian dictatorship, to solidify anew their ranks against the international league of brigands, to break with the international of conciliators, and to proceed in unison with the Central All-Russian Council of Industrial Unions toward the organization of a truly international conference of all the actual labor unions and veritable revolutionary workers' syndicates. We beg of all economic labor organizations that accept the program of the revolutionary class struggle, to respond to our call and enter into direct relations with us." This was signed by nine officials of the Russian industrial unions, including Tomsky and Losovsky. That was the beginning of the R. I. L. U.

The R. I. L. U. does believe, none the less, that the formal "non-political" and actual anti-political attitude of the I. W. W. is harmful to itself and to the working class. The R. I. L. U believes that this attitude would be discarded if the membership fully understood the distinction between a Communist Party and the reformist socialist party from which, quite naturally, the I. W. W. members derived their conception of a workers' political party. The two are so different, however, that they cannot be compared. Your disagreement with this view is no bar to affiliation, of course, but we merely assert important facts which, being known, should guide you.

A revolutionary Communist Party is not territorially based, but is founded upon shop nuclei organized at the point of production. It does not accept the permanence of capitalist parliamentary forms, nor does it deceive the workers with the hopes and promises that by voting in capitalist elections and by passage of laws in capitalist congresses they can by peaceful means supersede capitalist rule with their free workers' commonwealth. A Communist Party teaches nothing of the kind. It does, nevertheless, when possible, utilize the wide interest in elections and legislative action, to point out to the exploited masses that all history shows that the ruling capitalist class will not surrender power without a desperate struggle, and that, in order to win, the workers must destroy capitalist parliamentary forms and substitute —until the need no longer exists— a form of government completely different in form and content, a proletarian dictatorship thru a Soviet government of workers' delegates to wipe out resistance of backward and capitalist elements.

The attempt by anarchist elements in the I. W. W. and by capitalist elements outside it, to misrepresent such a proletarian dictatorship in Soviet Russia as being against the interests of the workers, is a preposterous invention. It is known by every intelligent worker, even slightly acquainted with historical materialism, that every political party and every form of government, is a reflection of and is founded upon the material interests of some economic class. What class interests are reflected in the Communist Party, if not those of the working class? These arguments would, of course, have no place here, but opposition to the R. I. L. U. upon these compels it.

A thorough consideration of the principles and program of the R. I. L. U. would, we believe, result in affiliation. There is no reason for any variation of conditions peculiar to any country. But if differences exist, the I. W. W. could and should contend for its point of view in the International, just as does an industrial union within the I. W. W. Affiliation would mean much benefit to the I. W. W. just as present isolation means much limitation.

Fellow workers, the revolutionary workers of other lands have too long awaited the organic solidarity with them of the I. W. W. The lack of unity is not a problem of mere academic interest. Daily, the contradictions of capitalist imperialism, intensified by the world war, threaten new wars, or on pain of starvation, perpetuate great masses of exploited into revolutionary struggle against a ruling class savagely fighting to maintain it supremacy. History compels not only the one class, the capitalist, to fight, but also the workers are driven to bitter struggle.

In America the case is not different, tho until to-day a more favored economic position has given that illusion. But there is no more security. Unemployment and crisis are becoming chronic as in Europe. By enslaving Europe with the Dawes' plan, American capitalist imperialism openly announces its ability to reduce American standards. The I. W. W. shares with other labor and revolutionary groups the attacks of capitalism. Scores of its members are in prison, and scores more will go if the I. W. W. remains isolated from revolutionary zeal. The ranks of the industrial unions are weakened by the loss of a few thousand members in the last year. Above all, imperialist rivalry for exploitation of China threatens immediate war with Japan.

Comrades and affiliant workers in the left wing of the craft unions are sharing the attacks of reaction. What argument in favor of sectarian separation can weigh more than the great need for united action? Can reconstruction for a union which has outlived the conditions that gave it birth, now justify the I. W. W. before the working class for inaction, disunity and standing aside from the struggle? At any moment we may be called upon by the capitalist government to destroy a workers' Germany or a revolutionary China. At any moment we may be asked to submit like sheep to another world war or to turn such a war into a revolutionary struggle for capitalist overthrow. These are questions which require an unequivocal stand from an organization which speaks of revolution.

Upon all these questions, as well as upon the problems of the daily struggle, the R. I. L. U. trusts that the I. W. W. will find a way to unite, if not organically, at least upon specific points of offensive or defensive struggle with other revolutionary workers in America and throughout the world.

The R. I. L. U. hopes that not only this brief message may find space in the I. W. W. papers which reach the membership, but that a period of free discussion may be opened, and all points of differences with the R. I. L. U. thoroughly aired in published communications to and from both organizations. When this is done, the R. I. L. U. is confident that the revolutionary workers in the I. W. W. will, on their own initiative, unite with those who fight for the overthrow of capitalism under the banner of the Red International of Labor Unions.

Hands Off China!

To all followers and sympathizers of the Red International of Labor Unions in the United States of America, France, Germany and Italy:—

COMRADES!

The present crisis in China and the part played by the foreign powers in this crisis has created an unusually serious situation.

The imperialist intervention in China must be stopped at all costs. The slogan of the revolutionary workers and followers of the Red International of Labor Unions in every country must be: HANDS-OFF CHINA! You must meet the intervention of the capitalists of your respective countries in the inner affairs of China, and their support of the reactionary militarist clique against the national revolutionary government of Sun-Yat-Sen, with a solid front of resistance and with a storm of mass protest. You must turn this protest campaign into a comprehensive revolutionary movement directed against the imperialist government of your country.

All revolutionary and national trade union organizations, the revolutionary shop councils and all followers of the Red International of Labor Unions should, together with the revolutionary and political organizations of the working class, take most active part in organizing "Hands-Off China" societies.

The laboring masses should be fully informed about the imperialist intervention in China. The "Hands-Off China" organizations are to maintain the closest contact with the workers, whom they are to inform on their activities.

There will soon be issued a periodical information bulletin on the situation in China and the activities of the "Hands-Off China" societies.

We hope, comrades, that you will proceed with the organization of such societies without delay, and that you will succeed in winning the attention and support of the broad masses, thereby compelling the governments of your respective countries to abandon their imperialist policy towards China.

With fraternal greetings,

A. LOZOVSKY,
General Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions.

GREATEST COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN

Workers Party and LaFollette

Statement by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America.

MARTIN W. LITTLETON, speaking at an American Defense Society dinner in New York City, sought to prove that the progressive candidate, Senator LaFollette has the support of the Communists and the "Reds." This charge by Littleton has since been taken up by newspapers and is being spread over the country.

The Workers Party has no brief to defend Senator LaFollette against accusations of this character. It does, however, hold a brief to defend Communism and the Workers (Communist) Party against any insinuation or suggestion that Senator LaFollette's candidacy can or will aid it in realizing its aims in the United States—that is, a proletarian revolution, establishment of a dictatorship of the proletariat, thru building a Soviet government, and the transformation of capitalism into a Communist society.

The basis of Mr. Littleton's charges is an article entitled "Are We For LaFollette," by C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, which appeared in the Daily Worker of April 10, of this year.

This article, after repudiating everything that LaFollette stands for, and declaring categorically that no Communist could be for LaFollette in the following terms: "We are not and cannot be for LaFollette because we are Communists and when we say we are Communists we say that the road to the emancipation of the workers and exploited farmers from the oppression and exploitation of capitalism is thru a proletarian revolution, Soviets and the dictatorship of the proletariat and not thru a LaFollette government," continues and makes the following statement of policy:

"What has been said above does not, however, answer the question whether we shall support LaFollette if he is nominated on a farmer-labor ticket. Should that come about, and it seems very likely, then we will unquestionably support La-Follette in the election campaign along with the masses of workers and farmers who are behind the farmer-labor movement. We are against LaFollette. We know that the political victory of the workers and exploited farmers lies over the dead body that is politically of La-Follette. We will say this to the working class of this country."

The conditions here laid down, on which the Workers Party conceived it was possible that it might accept under protest the candidacy of La-Follette, was that he be a candidate on the farmer-labor ticket.

This policy was further emphasized by the Workers Party at the St. Paul farmer-labor convention at which it made the following declaration:

"The only basis upon which the Workers Party will accept LaFollette as a candidate is if he agrees to run as the farmer-labor candidate, to accept that party's platform and its control over his electoral campaign and campaign funds."

The Workers Party has carried on a campaign for two years for the formation of a farmer-labor party. Its aim and object was to create a party representing an alliance between the workers of the city and the workers of the land who would enter the political struggle fighting for their class interests. With such a party formed on a national scale, standing on a platform into which was written the class interests of the industrial workers and farmers, it was not a question of principle with the Workers Party who happened to be the candidate of such a party. The essential thing was the formation of a class party with a class program which represented opposition and a struggle against the capitalist system and the capitalist parties.

If Senator LaFollette was ready to be a candidate for the presidency of such a party and on such a platform and the great majority of those organizing and supporting such a party desired him as a candidate, then the Workers Party was ready under protest, however, to accept his candidacy. But even then, it declared its purpose of relentlessly criticising him and that the success of the workers' and farmers' movement would only come "over the dead body (politically) of Senator LaFollette."

The Present Situation.

The situation which came about however, was not that described above. Senator LaFollette is not the candidate of a farmer-labor party. Senator LaFolette is not running on a platform representing the class interests of workers and farmers. Senator LaFollette is not the candidate of a party which is fighting against capitalism.

Quite to the reverse. Rudolph Spreckles, the multi-millionaire San Francisco banker, one of the most ardent supporters of LaFolistte, a member of the joint national committee running the LaFollette campaign, states the situation quite clearly in telling why he is for La-Follette. He says: "Today I am fighting for Bob LaFollette, not because I am socialistic or radical, for I have quite a stake in the capitalistic system and I want to save that for my children. If reactionary interests continue to ignore the will and well-being of the masses, upon whose sanction all property rests, the masses may some day rise up in their wrath and destroy."

Spreckles is for LaFollette because LaFollette will save capitalism. The Workers Party's aim is to destroy capitalism. It is against LaFollette and considers LaFollette a danger to the labor movement of the United States because LaFollettelism is creating the illusion that labor can gain something for itself thru his candidacy and the movement of which he is a part. Whereas, actually, LaFollettelism and the LaFollette movement can only betray labor as did Scheidemann in Germany and MacDonald in England.

LaFollette and LaFollettelism do not represent the industrial workers and farmers. It represents the independent businessmen of the type of Rudolph Spreckels, who want to save capitalism because they are making big profits out of the exploitation of labor. LaFollettelism represents the revolt of independent business against big business and not a movement of labor against capitalism. It is because the Communists really see that LaFollette is trying to destroy the movement of workers and farmers for independent class action against the capitalist dictatorship in this country that the Workers Party, when its aim of creating a great mass farmer-labor party was not realized, nominated its own Communist candidates, William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow against the candidates of Wall Street, Coolidge and Davis and the candidates of the little capitalists, LaFollette.

LaFollette and LaFollettelism is doing capitalism its greatest service. It is endeavoring to mislead and destroy the movement of the industrial workers and farmers for a class fight, thru a class political party against their exploiters and oppressors, by making this movement the tail of the progressive movement which is a supporter and an upholder of the capitalist system.

In place of supporting LaFollette and LaFollettelism the Workers (Communist) Party considers it its first great task to destroy the LaFollette illusion and to clear the way for a class movement of the workers and farmers against capitalism.

ELECTION DAY, TUESDAY, IS NEW MILESTONE FOR WORKERS PARTY AS POLITICAL FACTOR IN U. S.

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
Executive Secretary, Workers Party.

The greatest Communist propaganda campaign ever staged in this country is coming to a close. This campaign spells a new advance for the Workers Party as a political factor and also in the field of bringing to the working masses an understanding of Communist principles and tactics.

Altho the Workers Party has never before entered into an election struggle on a national scale it has been successful in placing its presidential candidates on the ballot in thirteen of the states among these being both of the great industrial centers of the country.

In addition it has been successful in placing local or state candidates in three other states so that the workers in at least on third of the states of the country embracing the larger part of the industrial sections will have the opportunity to cast their ballots for Communist candidates thus expressing their support of Communist principles.

Great Communist Propaganda Campaign.

During the past two months more workers have heard Communism discussed than ever before in a similar period in this country.

Comrade Wm. Z. Foster, the presidential candidate, has addressed over fifty large mass meetings thruout the country having travelled from the Atlantic to the Pacific and return.

Benjamin Gitlow, the vice-presidential candidate, has spoken before some seventy-five audiences covering a large section of the country. In addition scores of other speakers, nationally and locally, have addressed great mass meetings at which the Communists' claim for support of the workers has been presented.

Public meetings have not, however, been the only means of Communist propaganda. The literature distributed free and sold by the party has reached even larger masses of workers. The national organization has distributed thru the party units some two million leaflets dealing with the issues of the campaign. A million copies of the national platform of the party were distributed and hundreds of thousands of copies of leaflets on "Workers' Rule vs. Capitalist Dictatorship," "Work or Wages For the Unemployed," and the address to the socialist voters. In addition to these leaflets distributed free, 40,000 copies of the three pamphlets issued by the party for the campaign have been sold. These include the "LaFollette Illusion" by Jay Lovestone, "Unemployment" by Earl R. Browder, and "Parties and Issues in the Campaign" by Alexander Bittelman. 10,00 copies of the program and constitution of the party have also been sold, bringing the total of pamphlets up to 50,000.

Not Votes But Communists.

The efforts of the Workers Party have been not merely to have the worker vote for the Communist candidates, but to win their support for Communist principles.

That this aim of the campaign has been achieved is indicated in the new members who have been brought into the party and the new party branches which have been organized during the campaign. Both the number of members and the application for charters has increased materially as a result of the widespread propaganda for Communist principles carried on during the campaign.

A Stronger Party.

The Workers Party went into the campaign with no illusions as to the result...I knew, however, that it could achieve one thing during the campaign and that was to build a stronger Communist Party in the United States.

Efforts have been directed towards that end. The result when the elections are over will show that for it the campaign has been a victory, because the Workers Party will be stronger in membership, stronger in political influence, stronger in the number of workers who stand behind the party and support it in its struggle to abolish the capitalist system in the United States by establishing a workers' and farmers' government which will use its power to build a Communist society.

The Wokers Party will go on from this, its first great campaign for Communism to greater achievements and greater victory in the future until the time comes when it will face American capitalism as the leader of the working class of this country in a decisive struggle for power.

DEBATE BETWEEN TWO WORKERS ON SATURDAY IN MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 30.—Great excitement is stirring here in anticipation of the big debate to be held on Saturday evening, Nov. 1, at 8 p. m., at the New Labor Temple, 416 N. Franklin St., between two working men, both active in their trade union. The subject for debate is, "Is it more expedient for the labor movement to support Robert M. LaFollette rather than William Z. Foster." Sander D. Genis of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers taking the affirmative and Clarence A. Hathaway of the Machinists' Union in the negative.

A big crowd is expected. Workers Party members be there.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE biggest piece of news that reached the United States in many months, was the recognition of Soviet Russia by France. Yet the capitalist papers relegated it to a few lines in inconspicuous parts of the papers. This was no mere coincidence. France was Russia's chief enemy in Europe, at least her most open enemy. In my opinion, England is the most efficient and smooth contrarian against the Workers' Republic while the United States is the most implacable and boneheaded. But France did the dirty work openly and spent millions financing wars and rebellions against the Soviet Republic.

NOW, France has followed Boris Savinkoff in deciding that the power of the Russian workers and peasants cannot be broken. It makes the best of a bad situation. Charles Evans Hughes must receive the news with a shudder. His last hope is gone and when Japan makes a treaty with Moscow, as is expected in a few days, the hoarded Fall and Sileot Cal, will be alone in their isolation, but for Switzerland and a few other countries of little importance. The capitalist papers did not want to feature this news tho they made much of the British foreign office forgery, and editorialized on the Soviet Republic's lack of morals and respect for treaties.

FROM the start The DAILY WORKER branded the alleged Zinoviev note as a forgery. It was just as crude as the bunk William J. Burns was in the habit of putting out. The capitalist papers lied consistently about the incident. They claimed that France was holding up Russian recognition on account of the "plot." The DAILY WORKER correspondents in Europe sent the news and time has proven that it was correct. Now even Ramsay MacDonald's ministers admit that the thing was a forgery. The moral is, that anything appearing in the capitalist press should be held guilty until proven innocent.

SENATOR King of Utah, a Mormon, if that is anything to be proud of, delivered a speech in Salt Lake City recently, in which he stated that Kerensky could have stamped out the Russian revolution, if he had gotten after it in time. "He was a

RAYMOND, MONT. HAS COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN MEET

Dunne Tells Farmers About Soviet Russia

By WM. F. DUNNE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

RAYMOND, Mont. (By Mail.)—Morning. The branch line train stops. A few passengers alight from the single day coach.

Two elevators, a general merchandise and a hardware store, a pool hall, a restaurant and a half-dozen houses, a long, low tower hall.

So this is Raymond.

The fields of amber wheat stubble stretch in an unbroken line to the horizon. Miles away is the smoke of a belated threshing rig.

So this is Raymond, Montana, and there is to be a Workers Party meeting!

There is no mistake because in the windows of the two stores are the bills—"Vote Communist!" and the pictures of Foster and Gitlow look out across the prairie.

On the counter of the hardware store are dodgers advertising the meeting.

At dinner in the little restaurant there are eight people. In the whole village there are no more than fifty living beings even tho one counts the dogs and a tame coyote that is chained up back of the restaurant.

But at Night!

Night.

The little town is lighted by the glare from a hundred automobiles. The one street is crowded. Farmers and their families have come from fifty miles around. The town hall is crowded with 400 men and women. Kerosene vapor lamps are hung up and sunburned neighbor greets sunburned neighbor. There are more women, perhaps, than men.

The crowd settles down as the chairman and speaker take the platform. The speaker is introduced in a few well-chosen words and for an hour and twenty minutes the audience alternately applauds and listens in perfect silence.

Like to Hear About Russia.

Every reference to Soviet Russia brings an outburst of approval and the Communist program provokes stormy applause.

A collection of $40 is taken and the meeting thrown open for questions. And such questions—questions that gladden the heart of a Communist speaker, because they relate directly to the daily problems of these men and women—questions that show not mere curiosity but real attempts to find a way out, questions that show thought and study.

The chairman announces that the floor will be cleared for a dance and that the restaurant will be open until one a. m. to take care of the hungry ones.

Questions Asked and Answered.

Men and women crowd around and shake the speaker's hand. More questions are asked and answered. "If you had time for another meeting in the southern part, we could carry this county for Foster and Gitlow," says a farmer who has been in the forefront of every struggle for the last seven years.

"Fifty women have told me tonight that it's the Communist ticket for them," says another.

Every few minutes someone slips up to the speaker and assures him that "this crowd is for the Workers Party candidates, Bill," and then asks a question himself.

It is half-past two in the morning when the speaker answers a last question and is driven across country to Plentywood.

The pictures of Foster and Gitlow and "Vote Communist!" are still in the store windows and show up well in the glare of the headlights as the corner is turned and Raymond left behind.

LABOR GAINS VOTES; TORIES GAIN SEATS

Liberal Party Ready for Undertaker

Bulletin.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—With only 25 more constituencies to be heard from, the election returns show: Tories, 392; Labor, 150; Liberals, 39; others, including Communists, 9. The Tories are expected to win 400 or more seats.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—One of the most impressive facts arising out of the British general election is the almost complete annihilation of the liberal party; its old chief Asquith going down to defeat in Paisley, a constituency that had steadily gone liberal for over ninety years.

The conservatives appear to have a parliamentary majority, tho the labor party polled more votes than it did in the last election.

The Communists have elected at least one candidate on the Communist Party ticket. He is Saklatvala, a Hindoo. He won out in the Battesea constituency.

Tories Blustering.

Conservatives are in high glee and are already boasting of adopting a more vigorous foreign policy, strongly hinting that the new government will call on France for payment of its debt to England.

Threats are also made to talk plain English to Rakovsky, the Soviet envoy. But it should not be forgotten that Rakovsky speaks French quite fluently and is very welcome to come to Paris and occupy the palace formerly used by the czar's ambassadors to the French metropolis.

"We will hand Rakovsky his treaties and tell him to take them home and burn them," said one tory fire eater today. But tempers will have a chance to cool off before the tories come into office and while the labor party has lost in the parliamentary sense it emerges from this election stronger than ever. The strength of labor under capitalism is never manifested in the houses of parliament. It is outside in the shops and on the streets and it is admitted here quite generally that the temper of the British working class has risen to such an extent within the past year that the battle for supremacy between the workers and their masters is certain to grow in intensity as a result of this election rather than the reverse.

Fascisti Booster Elected.

The election of Winston Churchill, the favorite leader of the British fascisti is the cause of considerable comment. Formerly, a liberal Churchill ran this time on the tory ticket. He is one of the most rabid anti-labor baiters in England and the leader in the move for a united front between tories and liberals against labor.

While the labor party did not lose as far as votes are concerned, it is generally admitted that MacDonald's subserviency to the capitalists true to his social-democratic role, impaired the fighting efficiency of the labor organization.

The right wing leadership can be blamed for the extent of the conservative gains. In the first place, the Communists were refused membership in the labor party. This was done to show the capitalists that the MacDonald government "was not under the heel of the Communists." The half-hearted defense of the Campbell action, the capitalistic attitude toward the Anglo-Russian treaty and finally, the muddling over the Zinoviev forgery, placed himself and his followers in a defensive position.

Trying To Be Good.

MacDonald lost prestige thru his efforts to prove his loyalty to the capitalists. It is common talk here that after he put thru the Dawes' plan, big business was ready for a new deal. It is safe to say, however, that the withdrawal of the Campbell prosecution and the signing of the Russian treaties, both as a result of pressure from the left wing in the labor party and trade union movement was the real cause for the sudden decision of the capitalists to get rid of the labor government. They did not fear MacDonald, but they feared the masses behind him.

The reactionary elements in the north of Ireland are cheered over the prospect of a tory government. It is quite possible that new disturbances in Ireland may result over the boundary question.

Right Wingers Beaten.

Out of a total of 545 seats reported, the tories are credited with 359; labor, 137; liberals, 37, and other parties, 12. The total membership of the house is 615.

United States Tries To Bully Persia to Kill Three for Imbrie

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30. — Increasing pressure is being brought to bear on Persia by the United States for carrying out the death sentences imposed on the murderers of Major Robert W. Imbrie, American vice-consul, it was admitted by the state department today.

No formal note has been dispatched, however, the representations being conducted by direct contact with the Persian foreign office.

Three men were convicted and sentenced to death for Imbrie's murder, and only one of them has been executed. It has been reported to this government that the other two have been commuted to short terms of imprisonment.

Wall Street Money Bulls Gore Each Other Over Roads

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.— A terrific fight involving hundreds of millions of dollars, between E. H. Harriman and the Gould interests for railroad supermacy was revealed here today for the first time by Edwin Gould. He was testifying in the suit for an accounting of the $82,000,000 Jay Gould estate. The fight ended, he testified, before a refree, in the collapse of the Gould lines.

CHICAGO RALLIES FOR FINAL RED CAMPAIGN DAYS

Much Literature Going Out to Workers

The great final "Red Week" of the Workers Party campaign in Chicago and vicinity is being given the enthusiastic support of the membership in Chicago and thruout the district.

About 100,000 copies of the DAILY WORKER special campaign editions have been distributed and many branches are mobilizing their members to cover the factories in their territory, passing out papers and leaflets at the factory gates.

Fought Vicious Ruling.

"In spite of the vicious effort made to keep us off the ballot," says Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party, "in which the LaFollette forces of Wisconsin failed to attain their ends, and the injunction obtained by the K. K. K. and "progressives" in Indiana, we are putting up a good fight to bring the message of proletarian revolution before the working class voters who now have their ears open.

"In each state we have formulated local issues in such a manner as to attract the local voters' interest, and joined these to our goal of a Communist society by revolution.".

Many Speakers Tour State.

Ella Reeve Bloor has made 37 meetings in Illinois alone, while W. F. Dunne, candidate for governor, has toured the state, as have many others. Street meetings are going over strong everywhere.

In Chicago dozens of street corner meetings are bringing out thousands of workers who, being interested in the elections, are discovering for the first time what Bolsheviks advocate. That the program is attractive is shown by the enthusiastic receptions given the Workers Party speakers get whenever they confront a crowd of workers. At the street meeting at St. Louis and Roosevelt Road Tuesday, for instance, at least a thousand people gathered to hear speakers in both English and Jwish. Especially in the densely populated districts do the street meetings attract the larger number of workers.

Readers of the DAILY WORKER should note carefully the locations and dates of the following meetings, whether open air or indoors, and rally the workers around them to attend:

Go to the Meeting Tonight.

Look for the meeting nearest to your location and turn out to make the election campaign a great forum for Communist education.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Military police made a series of raids in Dublin during the day. It was reported ten arrests were made, according to a Central News dispatch from that city. The purpose of the raids was not disclosed.

CZAR'S PROPERTY IN FRANCE GOES TO THE SOVIET

Kerensky Followers May Be Held for Theft

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Following recognition of the Soviet government, Premier Herriot today issued an order placing all Russian government goods, houses and properties of every kind, under an order pending a settlement.

Whites Looted Treasures.

These valuable properties will be turned over to the Soviet government as soon as the necessary arangements are made.

Kerensky and his followers have gotten away with great amounts of art treasures belonging to the Russian state. How they can be compelled to cough up this stuff is not apparent.

Herbette to Moscow.

Jean Herbette will go to Moscow as the first French ambassador, it became known today. M. Rakovsky, who is now in London as chief Russian representative, is expected to be the Soviet ambassador to Paris.

Czarist refugees in Paris are figuratively tearing their hair over the recognition of the Soviet power. They have warned Herriot that in the event of the overthrow of the workers' power, that the new government will not recognize any agreement reached by the French and Russian governments This ultimatim is not bothering the French any, who see more danger of the capitalist system coming to an end than that the Soviet government will give way to the czarists.

Vote Communist This Time!

LABOR EDITOR BOUGHT BY CAL DUE FOR QUIZ

Lochray's Switch Had Cash Basis

By JAY LOVESTONE.

The senate committee investigating the campaign funds spent most of its time in an attempt to find how certain labor leaders are attempting to use their organizations to force the workers to vote and work for LaFollette and how and why certain papers flopped from LaFollette to Coolidge.

The Midwest Labor News, published at Omaha, Nebr., and edited by Lochray was especially under fire by Mr. Untermeyer who was bent on getting at the details of the monetary transaction occasioning the flop by Lochray to Coolidge.

Sheppard On Stand.

The first witness before the committee was Mr. Sheppard who is president of the Order of Railway Conductors. He told the committee that the protective fund of its organization which was gathered thru an annual $2 per capita tax on the membership was now being used largely for defraying the expenses of LaFollette campaign to elect Senator LaFollette and other "friends of labor." Mr. Sheppard emphasized that his organization was not departing from its old nonpartisan political policy of supporting "the friends of labor" when it lined up for LaFollette. He assured the committee that he had been a lifelong republican and that there were many republican and democratic senators and congressmen being supported by his organization.

Senator Shipstead also emphasized this non-partisan policy for President Sheppard.

Cautioned Stuart.

Attorney Kirkland of the republican national committee then introduced a copy of a letter signed by President Sheppard to a certain conductor, Mr. Fred Stuart of California. This letter showed that Mr. Sheppard was urging conductor Stuart not to support Coolidge at this time and especially drawing his attention to the action of the conductors' union in endorsing LaFollette. Mr. Sheppard was shown to have cautioned Mr. Stuart that he should be careful not to violate the decisions of the organization in working against LaFollette. Mr. Sheppard was emphatic in declaring that such violations might incur expulsion.

This communication was referred for thoro consideration in an executive session.

The next witness was Mr. Frank L. Smith, chairman of the republican state committee. He declared that his committee had so far collected approximately $70,000. When Mr. Untermeyer and chairman Borah tried to get the names of the contributors or the amounts of the individual contributions, Mr. Smith declared that his committee kept no books, had no records and was not in a position to give the names of the contributors, the amount contributed or where the expenditures went.

The Go-Between.

The feature of the session was examination of Mr. Ralph J. Peters, a German publisher of the Omaha Daily Tribune, the Welt Post of Lincoln, Nebraska, and other German papers. Mr. Peters told the committee that he had entered into an arrangement with the republican national headquarters whereby 200,000 of his papers would be circulated amongst the German readers in Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota. For this work he is to receive $12,500 of which he has already gotten $10,000 in cash. Every attempt made by Mr. Untermeyer to find out the circulation of Mr. Peter's paper before this deal was made with the National Republican Treasurer, Roy West, failed. Mr. Peters simply declared, "that I stand on my rights as a citizen and also as a businessman."

Mr. Untermeyer then turned his guns on the deal which brought about the flop of the Midwest Labor News into the Coolidge camp. Mr. Untermeyer established that the Midwest Labor News changed front after Mr. Peters had seen Republican Treasurer West in Chicago. It was further clearly shown that the very first issue in which the Midwest endorsed Coolidge appeared after Mr. Lockray had been in session with Mr. Peters at the Hotel Atlantic in Chicago. Mr. Peters told the committee that Lockray's paper had gotten into bad financial straits and it owed him $1500 for publication.

Met Him Accidentally?

Attorney Untermeyer then shot this question to Peters, "Where did you just stumble across Lockray in Chicago?" To which Peters replied that he met Lockray accidentally thru his wife. Mr. Peters refused to state what it cost to distribute 50,000 papers.

When Mr. Untermeyer asked Mr. Peters whether he had told Lockray to jump on the Coolidge bandwagon, the witness answered, "I don't remember." When Senator Borah asked him whether he had talked about Lockray's becoming a supporter of Coolidge, the witness replied, "I don't recall."

It was obvious to the committee that Mr. Peters had been the go-between in arranging the deal with the republican national treasurer by which the Midwest Labor News became a Coolidge organ.

Millionaire Comes Across.

W. T. Rawleigh, owner of an open shop in Illinois, gave $35,000 to the LaFollette campaign.

Up to Oct. 20, the LaFollette committee collected $345,710.84, exclusive of money collected from the American Federation of Labor, socialist party, railroad organizations, and other labor bodies. This means that they collected from non-labor sources alone over a quarter of a million.

Lockray testified that he got $1,000 from the national committee of the republican party for boosting Coolidge.

Special Meeting of Amlagamated Militants Saturday.

All members of the Trade Union Educational League in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers are urged to attend the general meeting to be held on Saturday, Nov. 1, at 2:30 p. m., at 3322 Douglas Boulevard.

Important matters will be discussed and your presence is needed at this meeting.

ADMIRAL PULLS OLD GAG WHEN CALLED TO TESTIFY IN OIL CASE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 30.—Rear Admiral Arthur E. Gregory, chief of the navy bureau of docks and harbors, refused to answer questions on the witness stand here during the government's suit to cancel contracts of the E. L. Doheny interests in the Elk Hills oil reserve as to plans of the United States navy for fuel oil storage facilities.

Gregory said answers demanded by the questions would force him to reveal navy secrets.

The admiral, however, did reveal that the navy has prepared a plan for submission to congress which contemplates expenditures of $103,000,000 for building such facilities.

Workers in St. Paul Are Supporting Emme, the Communist, for Congress

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, William Mahoney, editor of the Minnesota Union Advocate, cuts a more pitiful figure than ever in the labor movement of his own city and state.

Mahoney has always vigorously protested his sincerity in seeking to build the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota. He has always claimed he was seeking to build toward a class party of the workers and farmers; that he was fighting the reactionaries within the ranks of labor who were seeking to betray the Farmer-Labor movement into the hands of the political agents of Wall Street.

The Oct. 23rd issue of Mahoney's paper, however, reveals its editor as no better than the Johnsons and Shipsteads, who have allied themselves with the LaFollette war on the efforts of city and land workers to build a party of their own.

Mahoney uses nearly two columns to excoriate A. B. Gilbert, former manager of the Farmers' Nonpartisan League, for renouncing the Farmer-Labor Party and coming out for the republican ticket; but on the same page, in an editorial, Mahoney calls upon the workers and farmers to knife J. F. Emme, the Farmer-Labor Party candidate in the St. Paul district, and elect the republican, Oscar E. Keller, to congress.

Mahoney has put himself in the same class with all the other wreckers of the Farmer-Labor movement. It has taken him a long time to reach his goal, but he has finally arrived. He has broken his allegiance to the Farmer-Labor Party. His loyalty to LaFollette's republican party has proved stronger.

* * * *

To be sure the wavering, vascillating Mahoney has his alibi. Emme's awful crime is that he is a Communist. He belongs to the Workers Party. Therefore, Mahoney urges the workers to desert to the enemy. He has a little "red" scare all his own.

Mahoney now tries to tell the workers of St. Paul that they didn't know what they were doing when they nominated the Communist, Emme, in the primaries, as the candidate of the Farmer-Labor Party.

Mahoney makes the startling discovery that, "The members of the Communist, or Workers Party, have publicly declared that they are going to engage in a whirlwind campaign to defeat Oscar E. Keller for congress, and elect in his place J. F. Emme." We couldn't have stated the ambition of the St. Paul Communists any clearer.

Mahoney certainly isn't fool enough to believe that the Communists would betray the decision of the workers in the Farmer-Labor primaries and support the candidate of the Wall Street republican party. He knows Communist loyalty to principle better than that.

This is the same Mahoney who remained loyal to the LaFollette campaign when the Wisconsin senator turned his back on the Farmer-Labor Party at the June 17th Farmer-Labor Conference in St. Paul. This is the same Mahoney who went to Cleveland to attend the LaFollette Conference, but who was refused a seat, because he had dared for a moment to espouse the Farmer-Labor cause.

Mahoney has now passed the acid test of allegiance to the LaFollette illusion. He has joined in the betrayal of the Farmer-Labor movement. He has joined in the open attack on the Communists. He will be acceptable to the LaFollette-Wheeler republican and democratic politicians from now on.

While Mahoney goes over completely into the camp of the enemy, the rank and file workers stand loyal to their principles.

Machinists' Lodge, No. 459, of St. Paul, has adopted a declaration repudiating the endorsement of Keller, showing that it is a direct violation of Section 8, Article 5, of the constitution of the Farmer-Labor Federation of Minnesota and "strikes a deadly blow at the principles of the organization."

The machinists declare that "such action establishes a most dangerous precedent and will tend rapidly to destroy the fundamental principles upon which the Farmer-Labor Federation of Minnesota is built and will lead to demoralization and disunity within its ranks."

That is a strong indictment of Mahoney and the crime he committed against the workers. It is an indictment on which he and his kind will be found guilty by the masses of workers and farmers in Minnesota who demand class political action.

J. F. Emme, the Communist, is the Farmer-Labor Party candidate for congress in the St. Paul district at Tuesday's elections.

Every worker who realizes where his own interests lie, and cannot be fooled, even by the renegades within the ranks of organized labor, will cast their ballots on Tuesday for Emme, the Communist, whose loyalty to his class, the working class, has never been questioned.

BIG WINDUP RALLY IN N. Y. SUNDAY, NOV. 2

Brings Street and Indoor Meets to End

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 30.—The New York City "Red Week" campaign drive is going over in a blaze of glory. The final rally of the campaign will be held on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 2, at Webster Hall, 11th street near 3rd avenue, when the candidates James P. Cannon, Ben Gitlow, M. J. Olgin, Ludwig Lore, Harry Winitsky, Juliet Poyntz and A. Trachtenberg are expected to address a record-breaking meeting in both English and Jewish.

Election Day Help Wanted.

The New York City campaign committee of the Workers Party is asking every member and every sympathizer to enroll at the section headquarters to assist in watching the polls, distributing literature and so on. As election day is a legal holiday, those who have the day off are asked to enroll now at the following addresses of sections: 108 E. 14th St., 64 E. 104th St., Harlem, 64 Graham Ave., Williamsburg, 105 Eldridge St., 1347 Boston road, Bronx, and 1844 Pitkin Ave., Brownsville. Especially are members of the party and the T. U. E. L. urged to enroll at once, or early on election day.

Meetings Going Heavy.

Street meetings and indoor meetings are being put over with great success thruout Greater New York. Thursday night was a banner night in Brooklyn.

Speakers Do Fast Work.

On the same night, Thursday, two meetings in Brooklyn were covered. One was at Workers' Hall, 1373 40th St., in Borough Park; the second at the Hopkinson Mansion, 426 Hopkinson Ave., Brownsville. James P. Cannon, candidate for governor spoke at both meetings. The speakers were Wm. M. Weinstone, S. Epstein, Alexander Trachtenberg and Fannie Warshafsky. Friday night is expected to turn out an overflow audience at the New Star Casino in Harlem.

Instructions to Voters.

The New York campaign committee has issued detailed instructions to voters. Early votes are asked, the poll opening at 6 a. m. "If you have registered on the last registration day," the committee states, "you are entitled to vote. Let no one stop you. If you are stopped, call the Workers Party phone, Stuyvesant 6647 and we will assist. Or visit the section headquarters given above.

"Do not tear your ballot, as this will make it void. Use only the pencil in the booth. If you use your own pen or pencil the ballot will be declared void. Place your "X" in the center of the square before the name of every Workers Party candidate. Make no other marks on the ballot. Fold your ballot before leaving the booth in the same way as you received it. Do not give it to anyone, but place it in the ballot box yourself. Do not allow anyone to intimidate you. Vote for your class candidates of the Workers Party only."

WORKERS RAISE FUNDS TO FIGHT SCHEDEL EXILE

Contributions are pouring in from workers for the support of the case of John Schedel, who faces deportation or prison for his return to America after having been illegally deported for membership in the Communist Party.

Comrade Schedel, formerly of Fort Wayne, Ind., was a member of the socialist party branch that joined the Communists in 1919, and on the basis of mere membership in the C. P. he was deported in 1920.

The presence of his wife and four small children in this country drew him to the shores of the "land of the free," and he was arrested in Chicago at a family reunion that had been arranged. The Labor Defense Council, which is in charge of the case, has issued an urgent appeal for funds to fight this brutal system of deportations.

The following workers, employed in the DAILY WORKER building, have contributed to the special John Schedel fund:

F. Martin	$1.00
C. Anzilotti	1.00
Ernest	1.00
T. L. Cateriacci	1.00
A. Faticanti	.50
M. Sader	.50
P. Ebner	.50
G. Struve	.25
P. Albano	.50
M. A. Stolar	2.00

MORGAN BREAKS WORKERS' RANKS IN MILWAUKEE

LaFollette is Silent Against Big Trust

By KARL REEVE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 30.—J. P. Morgan with his International Harvester trust which he organized in 1918, is allowed by LaFollette to break up the unions here altho LaFollette has been the political czar for 45 years.

The Milwaukee works of the International Harvester company, covering thirty-one acres, and having an annual capacity for turning out 150,000 engines, tractors and cream separators, has laid off thousands of men without making any arrangement for their welfare.

Organize Company Unions.

LaFollette, who brags about his accomplishments in this state, allows J. P. Morgan to break up the workers' union in this plant, and institute instead the scab "International Harvester Industrial Councils," which are controlled by the directors of the company.

Morgan, who has one of his servants, Charles Dawes, running for vice-president on the republican ticket, and his lawyer, John Davis, candidate for president on the democratic platform, owns practically all of the stock of the Milwaukee harvester company plant.

Morgan Formed Trust.

Morgan was presented with millions of dollars worth of stock in the Milwaukee factory for joining the large agricultural machinery manufacturing companies into one gigantic trust, which has reduced the wages of millions of workers thruout the country and has raised the price of farm machinery to an exhorbitant degree.

LaFollette's State Worst.

Now thousands of workers are going hungry in the J. P. Morgan plant here which is part of the International Harvester trust. The company union is blacklisting every worker found favoring a union run by the workers. Workers who favor workers' control of industry are fired immediately.

Some workers who have been employed in the plant for many years have been forced to send their wives and daughters out looking for work because practically the entire plant is on part time, with many not working at all. No provision has been made by Morgan, who makes millions of dollars yearly out of the International Harvester company workers, to take care of these hungry employes. Now that Morgan does not need them, they are turned out on the street after years of faithful service.

Fight Hi Living Cost.

TORONTO, Oct. 30. — A campaign against the high cost of living is in full swing. The city council has ordered a probe of milk and bread prices. A proposal to set up a city coal yard was defeated, and a motion that the city sell gasoline was side-tracked to a committee.

Celebrate November 7th

To All Units of the Workers Party and of the Young Workers League.

DEAR COMRADES: The Communist International has called upon all Communist Parties and organizations of Communist youth to unite in making the celebration of the Seventh Anniversary of the Russian Revolution a great demonstration for Soviet Russia and Communism.

New attempts are being made by international capitalism thru its henchmen, the leaders of the Second International to encircle Soviet Russia and to weaken the Soviet regime in that country.

These attempts of the MacDonalds, Herriots and German social-democrats must be met by a great demonstration of the revolutionary workers.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League join in calling upon every unit of these organizations to immediately make preparations for a united celebration of November 7th. Joint committees for arrangements should be organized wherever possible to carry out the following program.

1. To hold November 7th celebrations in shops and factories wherever such celebrations can be arranged at which the speakers will point out the meaning of the great victory of the Russian workers.
2. To send speakers for noonday addresses before shops and factories.
3. To have both forms of shop meetings adopt resolutions in support of the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.
4. To unite in great mass celebrations on November 7.
5. Those Party and Young Workers League branches which are located in cities where no city central committees or large group of Party members exist must hold branch meetings to which sympathizing workers should be invited for the celebration of November 7th. A special program is being prepared for these meetings and will be published in the Party press.

In addition to the celebration among the masses, the celebration of November 7th must be used to inspire in our Party membership the Bolshevik spirit and the necessity for the Bolshevization of our Party. It was thru the application of the Leninist principles that the Russian revolution achieved its victory. Clear understanding of these principles is a task for every member of the Party. November 7th is especially significant as a day on which we must take up with great energy the achievements of the Bolshevik spirit and understanding among the Communists of this country.

Fraternally yours,
CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA,
William Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.
NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF AMERICA,
John Williamson, Secretary.

YOUNG WORKERS INAUGURATE TREMENDOUS DRIVE ON FIVE LARGEST MAIL ORDER HOUSES

The first city central meeting of the working area branches was very well attended, besides the regular 15 delegates to this body, many comrades interested in the Chicago league were present.

A long list of recommendations was brought in from the city executive. The most important among them were: That a campaign on mail order houses of Chicago which employ about 35,000 young workers at a miserably low wage was to begin the morning of November 10, when leaflets advertising the Young Worker will be given out at the five largest mail order house in Chicago, namely Butler Bros., Montgomery and Ward, Philipsborn's, Sears, Roebuck and the Chicago Mail Order House. Comrades from the area branches where these houses are located will be on hand selling The Young Worker which contains stories of these houses, and to talk to the workers as they come out.

Whereever possible open air meetings will be held in front of these houses the latter part of the week. On Friday, November the 14th, every area branch will call the mail order house workers to its shop meetings, where a capable speaker will tell them about the exploitation of young workers not only in the mail order houses where they work but in every single shop in every single country on the globe with the exception of Soviet Russia and will explain to them the program and principles of the Young Workers League and urge them to join the league on the basis of our demands.

A pamphlet dealing with the conditions of the young workers in mail order houses was ordered written by Comrade John Harvey to follow up the sale of the The Young Worker.

When the reports of branches were called, delegates from the six branches all reported enthusiasm and increased activity on the part of the members. In every shop where two or more comrades were working comrades were put in charge of forming a nucleus and several definite nuclei had already been formed in shops and high schools and many more are in process of formation.

Branches are completing the registration of their members and gathering data on the shops in their various districts. When this is completed organization of shop nuclei will take a more systematic course.

It was decided that beginning with the third week in November an intensive campaign in economic trade union work be begun and systematic drive made to get our members into trade unions and the T. U. E. L.

At the next open propaganda meeting (these are held last Friday in month by all branches) prominent speakers from the league and party will speak on THE VOTELESS YOUNG WORKER.

A meeting of branch functionaries (taking in Organizer, Secretary, Educational Director and Literature Agent) will be held every second Tuesday of the month, where the work of these important offices will be discussed with the point of view of securing better response from the membership and coordinating the work of all the branches.

SMALL USED GOLD DUST ON FORMER FOES

Now They Eat Honey Out of His Fist

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 30.—When the "pay-roll special" was run from Springfield to Kankakee some months ago carrying the job holders and their friends to a pow-wow in the interest of the "small" governor of Illinois, it had aboard the president of the State Federation of Labor, John H. Walker.

Four years previous John was a candidate for the position himself and said that Small was so crooked he couldn't lie in a roundhouse. On this occasion, however, he made a speech in the interest of Small in which he is quoted as saying, "The hope of the farmer and wage worker is Small," meaning the governor, of course.

John Makes 'em Wonder.

Some people marveled at Walker's position as he had completely reversed himself in the four years of the Small insumbency. Going back a few years again we find where he was an ardent booster for Dunne "the hope of the wage worker" and he and his executive board issued a statement boosting Dunne as a friend of labor and Lowden as the arch enemy of progress. In spite of his denunciation Lowden was elected even though his opponent gave Frank Farrington a thousand dollars for his support and while Lowden had the apparent undying opposition of Walker and Farrington he soon had them both in his vest pocket and at the Bloomington convention of the State Federation a few years ago he presented Lowden as "a loyal friend of labor."

Some are now wondering what it takes to make a friend of labor out of former enemies and especially out spoken enemies such as Lowden with his connection and close association to the Pullman Company or Small who was on the unfair list of the Kankakee Federation of Labor. Small is now a "friend of labor" even though every piece of hard road from the Wisconsin line to Cairo was built by non-union contractors at scab wages. The cement that is used is produced under non-union conditions and when Small boasted of how he made the cement companies come to time in the price of cement and secured a reduction in price of approximately twenty per cent, the wages of the cement workers were reduced some fifty per cent.

Small Spread the Vaseline.

Where business agents attempted to interfere with the program of the non-union contractors they were chased off the job and threatened with arrest if they sought to interfere. When Farrington threatened to call a strike of the Illinois miners unless Small permitted him (Farrington) to have some say so in naming members of the Industrial Board the governor in effect told him to go ahead and naturally the governor was an enemy of labor then. But it is all changed now. Small is the "candy kid" and the State Federation is out for him strong. When the nominations were being made Farrington sent a telegram to every miners' local in the state urging them to support Small on the very eve of the primary.

An investigation here shows that all that was required to make a friend out of an enemy in the person of the governor was to permit Walker and Farrington to have some say in getting jobs for their friends and relatives. This does the trick and now Small is a hundred per cent all right for labor. The question of his stealing two million dollars of interest money does not interfere with his purity and undying devotion to the cause of labor. The fact that he put every member of the family on the payroll even to the house-keeper and added another job as assistant secretary to the governor for his son Leslie is beside the mark. The cheap wage non-union contractors who get the state jobs operating under non-union conditions is a question aside from the issue. Small is now our friend and savior. Hurrah for Small.

HIDEOUS CRIMES OF KLUXERS CONCEALED FROM THE PUBLIC

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 30.—In barbarous Birmingham early Sunday morning, between four and five o'clock on 8th Avenue, a man and a woman were seen to come out of a house and enter a taxicab. The man's back was a mass of bleeding wounds, where he had been whipped, evidently a short while before. The woman was seemingly his wife. The newspapers here have made no report of this crime. There have been no arrests.

The victim and the public are intimidated to silence. Sheriff Shirley is said to be a K. K. K. man.

Birmingham, Ala., is a nest of night-prowling vermin, protected by the press and the government.

Many Speakers at Fourth Co-op Meet in New York, Nov. 6-8

NEW YORK, October 30.—Speakers selected for the Fourth National Co-operative Congress to be held in New York November 6, 7 and 8, at the Co-operative League House, promise interesting sessions.

Edward Solem, who will lead a discussion on "How to Salvage a Sinking Co-operative," is manager of the City Co-operative Dairy of Cleveland. Benjamin Levine, leading spirit in the Federation of Massachusetts Jewish Bakeries, will lead on the discussion of bakeries. For store management the leader will be Leo LeLievre of a co-operative operating six stores, a butcher shop and the largest bakery in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. Miss Mary E. Arnold will discuss organization of consumers' co-operatives. She is general manager of the Consumers' Co-operative Services in New York, a cafeteria organization with 1,900 members.

BAN MUST BE PUT ON INCOME TAX PUBLICITY

Exposure of Profiteers Is Too Dangerous

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The big bow-wows of the capitalist system are much wrought up over the publication of names of income-tax payers together with the amounts paid.

The leading figure of the capitalist government, little Silent Cal, called his cabinet into solemn session yesterday to determine ways and means of how to stop the exposure of the customary profiteering committed by profit-taking from wage labor.

Following the method of trying to suppress the scandalous graft of the Teapot Dome governmental crooks, the administration of Coolidge is now endeavoring to hush up publicity showing how much each capitalist is getting out of the hides of the working class, not in any special illegal graft, but in the legalized, customary way capitalists have of getting rich by paying wage labor barely enough to keep alive and taking all the surplus values produced for themselves.

Desperately Search for Law.

Attorney General Stone, successor to the malodorous Daugherty, is doing all he can to find a law to use as an excuse to force the newspapers to stop publishing the names and details. Unluckily the espionage act is repealed, or the government could say it was interfering with the war on the kaiser.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon one of the biggest capitalist exploiters and bankers of the country, said today that he knows that even if there is no law to prevent publication of capitalist profits, there is certainly no law compelling such exposure, and he thinks that capitalist newspapers ought to have more sense than to expose other capitalists to the working class. The capitalist department of justice says that it is going to issue a statement about it at once.

From various points reports state that the workers are in high glee at this exposure, brought about by the competition between and rivalry with one capitalist towards another, and efforts of the petty bourgeoisie to fight the big capitalists. Some workers are clamoring to know even what income and its sources supply LaFollette and his immediate family with luxurious and special cars to tour the country.

PITTSBURGH WORKERS TEAR OFF LA FOLLETTE BUTTONS; PUT BUTTONS FOR FOSTER-GITLOW IN THEIR PLACES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 30.—A challenge to debate election issues was sent the LaFollette campaign committee by the district committee of the Workers Party, after the recent meeting here addressed by C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party who exposed the LaFollette illusion before an audience of 600, many of them LaFollette followers.

Speaks at Carnegie Hall.

Ruthenberg's meeting was held in the north side Carnegie Hall, and many questions put to the speaker by LaFollette followers were answered in a way that brought home the anti-labor and capitalist nature of the fake progressive.

Some workers, indeed, demonstratively tore off the LaFollette button, then were wearing and demanded Foster-Gitlow buttons to show their conversion to Communist principles.

The Challenge to LaFollette.

As A. J. McNamara, head of the Pittsburgh LaFollette forces, had been challenging the republicans to debate, the Workers Party in the following letter asked them to join issues with the Communists:

"LaFollette-Wheeler Campaign Committee of Allegheny County.

"Gentlemen:—The present presidential election is of more than ordinary importance to the working class of the United States. The masses of the workers are discontented and are politically on the move.

"They have learned from repeated bitter experiences that they cannot expect to gain anything from the rule of the parties of Wall Street, the two old parties dominated by the small group of financiers and industrial magnates who own and control the bulk of the wealth of this country.

"The rights of workers violated, strikes crushed by the use of injunctions, of the army and of the police forces, growing imperialism and increasing armaments, widespread unemployment—these are the blessings bestowed on the American working class by the U. S. government operated internally by the republican and democratic parties.

The Only Vital Issue.

"The workers are at last breaking away from their traditional political affiliations and are seeking new political leadership. They are giving serious consideration to the claims of the two groups contending for their support. You are trying to corral the discontent of the workers in support of the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket. We, the Workers (Communist) Party, contend that ours is the only party truly representing the interests of the working class. You have declared as the paramount issues of the present campaign the question of "honest" versus corrupt government and the question of monopoly versus price-strained competition. We contend that for the working class the only vital issue is the question of private, capitalistic ownership of the means of production and distribution versus social ownership and the operation of industries under workers' control and for the benefit of the producers.

State the Issue.

"On behalf of the Pittsburgh district organization of the Workers (Communist) Party, I challenge your committee to select a spokesman for your side to debate with a representative of the Workers Party the issues of the election on the basis of the following resolution:

"'Resolved that the LaFollette platform and the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket do not represent the interests of the working class.'

"The issues raised by this challenge are of great interest to every workingman and woman, and I trust that you will not follow the example of Mr. Gardner of the republican party, who ignored the challenge of your chairman. You will find me ready at any time to meet with a representative of your committee to settle the technical details. In the meantime, I remain, yours for emancipation of the working class,

"(Signed) Israel Blankenstein,

COMMUNIST POSTERS MAKE EASTON COPS AWFUL MAD, BY HECK

EASTON, Pa., Oct. 30.—Someone in this town has played a mean trick on the cops! He has gone and pasted notices on poles thruout the city telling the voters of Easton to vote for the Workers Party ticket on November 4. Maybe he didn't know that it would make the cops so awful mad. This has so aroused the ire of the moonshine cops here that they are drunker than ever. Frothing at the mouth and tearing at their chins they swear vengeance. In the meantime, of course, they keep a watchful eye on the local politicians to see which one of them will receive a nice fat juicy political job.

CLEVELAND TO HEAR ENGDAHL AT BIG RALLY

Big Program Planned for Close of Campaign

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 30.—The closing meeting of the Workers Party campaign in Cleveland will be held on Monday, Nov. 1, when J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER and Illinois Workers Party candidate for senator, will speak in the Bricklayers' Hall, East 21st and Prospect Ave., at 8 p. m.

This meeting will be his first appearance in Cleveland for a long time and he will surely be greeted by a very large atendance. All party members must come. All sympathizers are urged to attend.

During this campaign, the Cleveland local of the Workers Party succeeded in getting the names of the congressional and county candidates on the ballot in Cuyahoga County. We distributed many thousands of leaflets and held a large number of meetings. The clear cut working-class stand of the Workers Party has been brot to the attention of tens of thousands of Cleveland workers. As the workers thru the development of conditions escape from the spell of the LaFollette illusion, the effect of this campaign will show even more than it does at present.

A special effort has been made by the committee to make this closing meeting a rousing success and to give Comrade Engdahl a hearty welcome. Admission is 25c. Be there!

Workers Party Lays Plans for Work in Textile Territory

EATON, Pa., Oct. 30. — The City Central Committee of the Workers Party recently organized here has laid many plans for big meetings here in addition to the organization of an English branch of the Workers Party and a branch of the International Workers' Aid.

Our first big understaking will be a mass meeting to celebrate the 7th anniversary of the Russian revolution with a speaker from Philadelphia. This meeting will be held on Sunday evening, Nov. 9, at the Lithuanian Hall.

Eaton is located in a good textile industry territory as not only Eaton but all the surrounding towns are well covered by this industry. This makes this locality very promising for effective party work.

Big Italian Mine Strike.

LONDON, Oct. 30. — Fifteen thousand miners of the Iglesias Sardinia district in Italy are striking, demanding higher pay, according to despatches from Rome.

15th U. S. INFANTRY ORDERED TO TAKE FIELD FOR MORGAN IN CHINA

TIEN TSIN, China, Oct. 30.—The armed forces of American imperialism are ordered into action to assist America's tool, Wu Pei Fu, to regain Peking from the turn-coat instrument of Japan, the "Christian" General, Feng Yu-hsiang.

The 15th U. S. infantry regiment was ordered yesterday to take the field in order to open the railway line between Tien Tsin and Peking. Charge d'Affairs Ferdinand L. Mayer has been in communication with Secretary Hughes, with this result.

While this is done ostensibly to "protect the railway line" between the two cities under authorization from the "diplomatic corps" acting under the humiliating protocol thrust down China's throat in 1901, the purpose is plain that American and British interests stand to gain by opening the way for Wu Pei Fu's troops to take Peking.

News from Japan shows tremendous activity in supplying war materials to Chang Tso-Lin, and thru him to General Feng. It is admitted that tens of millions of dollars are being given to Chang in money as well as unlimited munitions.

At Peking, Tsao Kun, imprisoned in his palace after being forced to resign, is calling for American assistance. His bodyguard is disarmed by Feng's soldiers and, fearing assassination he has asked that American troops be allotted from the embassy to protect his life.

Advertising Used as Club Over Negro by Republican Party

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Indorsement of the Coolidge-Dawes candidacy was required of Negro newspaper editors before they were allotted advertising by the republican national committee, the senate campaign fund committee was informed this afternoon.

The witnesses were Carl Murphy and H. F. Arnold, editor and business manager of the Afro-American, a Negro newspaper of Baltimore.

The paper refused to make an agreement with the republicans, Murphy and Arnold said.

Killed by Mounted Police.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 29.— In a running gunfight with Canadian mounted police and immigration authorities, John Pearson, an American, was shot to death Tuesday, at Emerson, Man., on the international border, after a dash for freedom following his arrest on a Winnipeg-bound rain crossing the line.

Open Forum, Sunday Night, Lodge Room, Ashland Auditorium.

Season Dull in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 30. — Cutters are already being laid off in the men's clothing factories, Amalgamated Clothing Workers' officials state.

The workers are being laid off much earlier than usual, the union men say, possibly to forestall the possibility of having surplus garments cut in the event of a strike by the union to increase its organization. Manufacturers assert that the season is dull and hint that wage cuts may become necessary.

I. W. W. CLAIMS INJUNCTIONITES HELPED FINKS

Rowan-Bowerman and Co. Are Expelled?

By KARL REEVE.

Unpublished proof that William J. Burns used the department of justice as a strike-breaking agency competing with the Thiel detective agency in disrupting labor organizations, is in the hands of Thomas Doyle, suspended secretary-treasurer of the I. W. W., he told the convention of the I. W. W. yesterday.

Doyle, who is defending himself against charges in the convention at Emmet Memorial Hall, started his testimony just after J. Rowan, F. Bowerman, Harry Tretter, James Griffith, P. D. Ryan, and all others bringing the injunction into the capitalist courts and refusing to appear before the convention, were expelled from the I. W. W. provisionally upon referendum.

Doyle Goes to Washington.

Doyle took a trip to Washington, he declared, at the request of Robert Dunne of the Civil Liberties Union, as the evidence he had in his possession was said to be certain to cause Burns' resignation as head of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice. "Burns resigned the day before I arrived to testify before the senate committee investigating his bureau," Doyle told the convention. Doyle did not say that Wheeler refused to use the evidence against Burns, but this is known to be a fact.

"There is danger that a national criminal syndicalism law will be brought up in Washington. This evidence is still wanted in Washington, and I believe the juicy exposures it contains will knock on the head any blow up any national syndicalism law proposed," said Doyle.

Doyle declared that it was only because of the insistent demand of Industrial Union 210, which had gathered some of the evidence that he and Joe Fisher, suspended general organizer, were able to induce the Rowan-Bowerman faction of the general executive board to make public even a part of this evidence.

Bowerman Against Expelling Dick.

Bowerman, Doyle said, made a speech against printing this evidence, "because they didn't have the guts to let it out, as they were afraid of going to jail or being raided." He charged that Bowerman and his cohorts voted against expelling the two Burns' agents who had been uncovered as stoolpigeons in the I. W. W.

"Even a bootlegger doesn't get a 'fair trial' in the I. W. W.," said Doyle. "Why give a bonafide fink that you have the goods on a fair trial? If you call him for trial he'll disappear. Yet these men on the G. E. B. did not want to expel Halnes and the other fink, because they said they wanted to give him a fair trial. A man who will do that is not far from being a fink himself. Bowerman made some very peculiar statements in the G. E. B."

Doyle charged that only half of the scandal relative to Burns in labor organizations has come out and he believes it should be printed. No one appeared to prosecute Doyle on any charges yesterday.

Expel More in Afternoon.

Three more men, Dr. Frederic A. Blossom, James Quinlan and Bert Lorton were expelled by the I. W. W. convention in the afternoon session, after an argument as to whether or not their expulsion should go to a referendum vote.

Delegate Claude Erwin led the faction which tried to keep Blossom and his pals in the organization by relying on a referendum. Erwin claimed the former convention had violated the constitution in providing for suspending these men. One of the 110 delegates charged that "Blossom has a following in this convention and the referendum ballot is a last life line they are using to keep these men in the organization."

The delegates who spoke for sending Blossom's expulsion to a referendum were relying on the lumberjack vote to keep Blossom in the organization, as the lumber workers have a reputation for blocking progressive legislation passed by conventions, and left to referendum.

Delegates Erwin, Grad, Murray, Nelson, Anderson, Nelson and Swanson who favored Blossom in the debate, voted against his expulsion. Delegate Joe Oates refused to vote.

Train Guns on Downing.

The delegates trained their guns on Mortimer Downing, editor of the Industrial Worker, printed in Seattle, when a telegram was read by the grievance committee from the business manager of the Industrial Worker, condemning William Hanley, secretary-treasurer of I. U. 110 for not paying a bill of $223 which he owed. Hanley told the grievance committee that he would not support the Industrial Worker as long as it printed matter of an controversial nature, and favored Rowan.

"We find Hanley's statement to be true," said the report of the grievance committee, "and direct Hanley to pay the debt as soon as the Industrial Worker publishes retraction of articles siding with acts of Rowan." A motion to condemn the editor of the Industrial Worker and demanding his expulsion was tabled, to be acted on later.

Expel More in Afternoon.

The Rowanites in the convention also stood up for Mortimer Downing in this dispute. Delegate Swanson demanded that Hanley be condemned, "for boycotting the Industrial Worker."

Oates' Motion Has Joker.

Joe Oates did Rowan, Ryan, Trotter, Bowerman and the Rowan faction a good turn when he presented a motion for their expulsion with a joker in it that it go to a referendum vote. Oates' motion was finally passed, after many of those who voted for expulsion had opposed putting the matter to a referendum. Most of the delegates who favored the original expulsion by the convention, voted for expulsion thru a referendum only in the interests of unity.

Oates thus scored a victory, saving Rowan and his tribe from outright expulsion. Delegate Anderson was one of the few who wanted the matter to go to a referendum vote, and the motion expelling Rowan and his followers was carried 22 to 3 and Oates' little scheme worked.

Starts Bravely Off for Europe.

Over the question of sending credentials to au I. W. W. administration to Czecho-Slovakia, in answer to an appeal sent from that country for aid in organizing an I. W. W. group there, arose a discussion involving the entire problem of international connections and political affiliations.

In spite of the fact that the discussion ended in the adoption of a resolution empowering the general executive board to call a conference of foreign I. W. W. administrations to discuss the problem of organizing in foreign countries, the debate brought out the fact that a great deal of disagreement exists as to the scope of the I. W. W.

That the organization, altho calling itself Industrial Workers of the World, is designed particularly to fit conditions in America, and that the establishment of foreign administrations would result in "disastrous entanglements," was the view taken by Charles Gray, delegate from I. U. No. 110.

That the capitalist class, in the course of its fight on the I. W. W., will deport enough of the active members to carry on propaganda in other countries was the somewhat novel stand taken by Joe Jordan, I. U. 110.

The view of most of the delegates who voted in favor of the international conference was that too many foreign countries, the debate brought out calling themselves I. W. W., which are in fact, not affiliated with the I. W. W. organization here. The chief purpose of the conference, according to these delegates, would be to clear out imposters.

Unwittingly Support Anarchists.

If such conference is held it is freely predicted that the I. W. W. will find that it has unwittingly been shelving a choice brood of plain anarchists, who reject all centralization such as is inherent in industrial unionism and who are mere camp followers of the labor movements in their own countries.

Such has been the experience of the Marine Transport Workers' attempt to organize the I. W. W. in Germany with a scoundrel named Rieger at Hamburg. Also, it recalled how the I. W. W. published the book attacking the Soviets, written by A. Souchy of the anarcho-syndicalist international. This book put the I. W. W. in the light of endorsing the White Guard banditry of Makhno, now sheltered by Catholic Poland.

SOCIALIST THOMAS TRIES TO TALK AWAY TAMMANY HALL FRIENDSHIP

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 30.—Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for governor, in a lame speech at Rutgers Square tried to give the impression that there was no alliance between the socialists and Tammany Hall. Speaking of Smith, he said that the latter was a good man. The only thing wrong with Smith was that he belonged to Tammany Hall.

Thomas also claimed that Smith had captured the platform of the socialist party in regard to the public exploitation of water power.

No mention was made of the fact that Smith killed the welfare program which the labor movement of the state had for years been trying to get on the statute books.

No mention was made of Smith's stand on the injunction issue. Immediately after this tame speech, Thomas' good man Friday, Levinson, took the platform saying, "The other day the DAILY WORKER charged that the socialist party was lining up with Al Smith. Did you hear how Thomas attacked Smith just a minute ago?" The crowd was so impressed with this argument that it moved across to the Workers Party meeting in a body.

The prize speaker of the evening, however, was one Weinberg, who stood helplessly before a crowd of Jewish Communists and begged them to have the "decency" to listen to him. It seems that Weinberg had some time ago deserted the Communist movement and the crowd had little use for a renegade.

Instead it broke into little discussion groups which berated vehemently the betrayal of the socialist party. Weinberg charged that the Workers Party had praised LaFollette to the skies, but when asked to read such a statement he ignored the question.

"Just see," said one worker in utter disgust, "the socialist party is now acting in the same way as the republican and democratic parties. It is trying to fool the worker."

COAL OPERATORS WIN VICTORY IN WILKES BARRE

Lewis and Cappellini Aid in Breaking Strike

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Oct. 30.—Without attempting to deny that the operators have flagrantly violated the existing agreement between themselves and the U. M. W. of A., the union officials have succeeded in getting the 10,000 miners in this region to return to work without a settlement being reached.

On the plea that the contract must be lived up to, and that only the officials have a right to call strikes, the general grievance committee which called the two recent strikes in this region, voted last Saturday to refrain from calling any other strikes in the future unless sanctioned by the district officials.

Damaging Effect.

While agreeing to the centralization of authority for the purpose of strengthening the position of the miners in their constant struggle for their rights, the latest action on their part in surrendering the only thing that they have had to protect their interests, will show itself as the most damaging act they have committed since the formation of the general bodies a few years ago.

It is safe to predict that before long grievances will pile up in greater proportion than is the case now, the machinery for settling same will move slower and the miners will once more feel the need for acting in the only manner that brings to them the desired results.

Agreement a Joke.

There is a clause in the agreement which is now in effect, that provides for the settlement, within sixty days, of all grievances coming before the conciliation board for adjudication, but that committee responsible, and justly so, for the latest strike, here claims that two grievances against the Pennsylvania Coal Co. have been in the hands of that board for nearly seven months and are not yet settled. They are not settled yet, but the men have returned to the pits and more promises have been made to them.

Their Idol Faded.

The miners hereabouts, and particularly those who contributed to Cappellini's success are now looking about for a successor to their fallen idol, and before long it is expected that an outstanding figure will be asked to conduct a campaign, if progress is to be made in one more act to take place next June. However, there are those among the rank and file of the miners union, who are convinced that the only way to bring about a satisfactory solution for their problems, is to fight the fight on class lines and on general principles and not on a program of personal and mercenary gain, as was the case with Cappellini.

What is needed is one who recognizes that there are no interests in common between the operators and the miners, that the work of mining coal is just as hard in one mine as it is in another, and that, consequently, there should be a uniform rate of pay prevailing.

Separate Agreements.

At the present time every company has a separate agreement, no two companies pay the same rates, and the miners of at least some of the companies, when paid on the day basis, are rated on a ten-hour day, despite the argument that a uniform eight-hour day had been established in the anthracite region by Lewis.

The recent action here, in calling off the strike is a victory for the operators, Lewis and Cappellini, and a stinging defeat for the miners. It means a continuation of the struggles for their rights, altho they have thrown away their best weapon, but long is not expecting to be able to announce thru these columns that they have again recovered their lost love, the strike weapon, and are again on the warpath, fighting for the things that rightfully belong to them, also that they were forced to do so when their officials failed to secure redress for them.

FARMER-LABOR CANDIDATES IN NORTH DAKOTA ANNOUNCE THEY ARE FOR COMMUNIST TICKET

WILLISTON, N. D., Oct. 30.—Many false stories have been circulated by the kept press of North Dakota about the position the farmer-labor candidates of North Dakota are taking in the present campaign. So that their stand may be clear to all they have issued the following statement to the farmers and the workers of Williamis County in North Dakota:

"In view of the misleading stories that have been circulated by the Farmers' Press at Williston, and also from other sources, in regard to our candidacies, as well as our position on the national election campaign this year, we find it necessary to issue the following statement:

Regularly nominated at the Primaries

"We were both regularly nominated at the primary election, and we are still candidates at the general election November 4, for the offices for which we were nominated last June. All stories to the effect that we have laid down as candidates are absolutely false.

Will You Stand For This

"A sinister attempt is being made by office-hungry politicians to flout the will of the people of this country. The Farmers' Press at Williston takes upon itself to say who is going to be sheriff of Williams county. It ruthlessly sets aside the decision of the nonpartisan league convention as well as the verdict of the primary election and without consulting the rank and file of the farmers and the workers of the county, suddenly decides that Andrew Omholt and A. C. Miller cannot be elected to either state or county office because they are communists. For sheriff the Farmers' Press is now going to support one R. A. Marshall, an I. W. A.

Farmer-Labor Party Neutral

"The Farmers' Press at Williston has stated that the farmer-labor party of North Dakota has endorsed the LaFollette movement. This is not true. At the party's meeting in Bismark on September 3, last, it was decided that the farmer-labor party of North Dakota should maintain a neutral attitude on national candidates.

The National Campaign

"We favor William Z. Foster for president for the reason that he stands for: 1. A Farmers' and Workers' Government; 2. The Abolition of the Mortgage System and the Land for the Users; 3. Nationalization of all great industries, including the Farmers' Marketing System; 4. The Industries for the Workers. Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette are either silent or pussyfoot on these vital needs and demands of the farmers and the workers of America.

State Program

"In the interest of the farmers and the workers of North Dakota we advocate the following: 1. All public funds to be deposited in the Bank of North Dakota and the establishment of state-owned branch banks, one in each county within the state; 2. Compulsory state hail insurance with an acreage tax levied on all tillable land in the state; 3. Exemption of farm improvements and workers' homes from taxation; 4. All tax titles to revert to the state.

Stand by Your Rights!

"We use this means of bringing the facts before the voters of the country and the state and record their stand on these issues. We will stand by us in this fight for their real needs and demands. Anything that is for the farmers and the workers and against the capitalists is always called "un-American" by the yellow and the capitalist press.

"(Signed) Andrew Omholt, candidate for sheriff of Williams county.

"(Signed) A. C. Miller, candidate for state representative, 41st legislative district."

Mexico Sells its Liberty.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 30.—The steady rise of Mexican bonds in the international markets is being explained by the $50,000,000 Orlitt loan to Mexico, which practically assures resumption of payment of the debt to the United States by Dec. 15, and by the fact that American and English capitalist interests have secured from the government all that they sent their agents to get.

This means in spite of contrary statements by President Obregon that article 27 of the constitution has been practically nullified (especially the part providing that the subsoil of the land belongs to the Mexican people).

MINOR'S SPEECH MAKES BIG HIT WITH FARMERS

They Join Discussion; All Have Lively Time

By W. J. McVEY.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 30.—Robert Minor spoke here in Turner Hall to the best pleased crowd of workers and farmers that has listened to revolutionary theories in many a moon.

A local capitalist paper had a reporter at the hall, who asked Comrade Minor why the Soviets in Russia had not socialized industry more than they had. Perhaps the reporter thought this would stump Comrade Minor.

Comrade Minor's answer was clear and to the point.

Some S. L. P. members took a sling at Comrade Minor with their usual questions; one making a short talk on the S. L. P. stuff.

Comrade Minor knew this was about the last question, so he replied that it was easy for writers to write their theories down on paper and print it so it will look nice to the reader, but that is not saying the theories are practical. He said the socialist labor party can find more excuses to keep out of a fight than any other organization on earth. The crowd roared, stamped their feet and laughed at this reply.

One devout LaFollette advocate, who had been editor of a local defunct socialist paper, remarked after the meeting that "A fellow might as well go up against a buzz saw as against Minor."

Many LaFollette supporters were present and well pleased with Comrade Minor's splendid talk.

Baku Workers Greet Soviet Georgia On Victory Over Foes

MOSCOW, Oct. 30.—A joint session of the Soviet and representatives of labor organizations of Baku (Caucasus) sent a message of greeting to the workers and peasants of western Georgia in view of the quick and resolute resistance they offered with their own forces to the menshevik "putsch" (attempt at revolt).

In another resolution, likewise adopted unanimously, the Baku Soviet expresses indignation at the spreading by foreign papers of fabricated reports of an alleged insurrection at Baku and generally in the Republic of Azerbeidjan. The resolution goes on to say that "after their miserable fiasco, the organizers of this menshevik action, such as Jordania, Tseretelli and others, are trying to find consolation by disseminating avowedly false reports of alleged revolts in Georgia and Azerbeidjan, thus trying to mislead public opinion in Europe.

"We hope," concludes the resolution, "that the workers of Britain and France will estimate at their real value the intrigues of Georgian emigrants representing the interests of alien capitalists against the peoples of Caucasus having at last entered into an era of national cultural revival."

Can't Sell Land for Ten Years.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 30.—President Obregon's recent important land decree provides that the land granted to the peasants cannot be sold nor mortgaged for 10 years from date of acquisition. This it to prevent the re-hogging of land by the large land-owners of Mexico.

AUDITS OF BOOKS SHOW LEWIS GANG WASTES FUNDS

Figures Certainly Had Wild Time of It

By JOHN McURY.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

GLACE BAY, N. S., Oct. 30.—Two audits of the books of District No. 26, United Mine Workers of America, have been made in less than seven weeks. The district charter was suspended over a year ago. International President John L. Lewis sent three men to the district some weeks ago to make an audit.

These men were paid $15 per day, and took exactly thirteen days to go over the books and make a report. This cost in the vicinity of $600.

The report revealed a high carnival of money spending—items were charged against men who had not received a cent in order to hide deficits. Glaring mistakes were made in simple additions, and other items were tampered with in order to hide the truth from the miners.

Lewis Restores Charter.

Hardly had this trinity reached Indianapolis with its report, when John L. Lewis decreed that the charter of District 26 be restored and the miners be given full autonomy. Lewis also ordered that a complete audit was to be made. Lewis restored the charter because of pressure of the miners of the district, and because he is unwilling to be responsible for the coming wage battle at the expiration of the present contract.

The new audit covered the fourteen month period of the Lewis regime in the district—from the time that the duly elected officers of the district were deposed until the Lewis' appointees were discharged, who, because of ignorance, ran the district into such a mess that Lewis gladly washed his hands of the whole affair.

The second audit discovered a shortage in the funds to the amount of $1,481.51. Louis McCormack, a Lewis appointee is being held responsible for the disappearance of the money. The case has been handed over to a bond company for collection. Provisional President Houston is still in the district and it is reported that his sole purpose in remaining here is to prevent McCormack. It will be remembered that Silby Barrett, the first provisional president of the district, ran into such a mess that he was finally evicted by Lewis.

Miners are Indignant.

The miners are indignant over the startling disclosures made by the audit. While the miners have been literally starving on two and three days' work per week, the provisional officers of the district have been loling in luxury created by their hard-earned money.

After scanning many pages of the financial statement one is amazed at the amount of money paid out to officers and field workers, which totaled $45,262.57. During the entire career of provisional activity not one local union was visited by one of the so-called field workers. These and other parasites have so devoured the money that little now remains in the treasury. Individual loans comprise an important item when it is shown that the largest amount was "loaned" to Silby Barrett, one of the first district wreckers.

These and many other items comprise a record that will be handed down as evidence of one of the basest deeds ever perpetuated in the history of the American labor movement.

The Long, Long Trail

The DAILY WORKER has just finished publication of a series of articles, exposing the career of Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Miners' Union, since his starting in as an official of a local union in Streator, Ill., until today.

Many labor leaders, who later on in their lives, turn traitor to the working class, at last start out with good intentions and without the object of enriching themselves at the expense of their class. But it appears that Farrington made up his mind from the moment he landed the job of secretary in a local union, that he would make a bid for fame and fortune at the expense of the coal miners. He carried out his intentions faithfully.

Farrington stands today, perhaps, the leading labor lieutenant of capitalism in the state of Illinois. Industrially lined up with the coal operators and politically with the unspeakable Ku Klux Klan governor, Len Small, he presents a menace to the workers of this state and praticularly to the coal diggers, the proportions of which words are inadequate to describe.

The DAILY WORKER will not leave Farrington, with the publication of the last article in the series "On the trail of a labor faker." It will continue to expose his treachery and that of the large army of his kind, that is bleeding the labor movement to death.

The elections for officers of District 12, for the next two years will take place the first week in next December. It is a very important contest and the progressives in the district are girding their loins for the struggle with Farrington and his gang. The DAILY WORKER will follow the activities among the Illinois Miners closely and the coal diggers should avail themselves of the support of the only daily paper in the English language that is fighting their battles, by ordering bundles for distribution among the members of the organization.

Something Under the Hat

Supreme Court Justice Ford of New York, recently delivered himself of a statement that will cause a flurry among the judicial servants of capitalism while presiding over a case in which two sets of Russian clergymen are quarreling over church property. A certain John S. Kedrovsky claimed that he holds an appointment from the Holy Synod of the Russian Orthodox church to oust Metropolitan Pleaton from St. Nicholas cathedral, New York. Kedrovsky testified that he represented the Living Church of Russia which showed the Metropolitan the gate.

During the hearing, Justice Ford, evidently irritated at the efforts of the Metropolitan's counsel to associate the word Soviet with horror, delivered himself as follows:

"My hat does not blow off whenever the word Soviet is used. The present government of Russia is one of the most interesting experiments ever attempted and instead of this senseless abuse by wholesale, we ought to study it carefully and scientifically and see whether there are not some lessons in it for us.

"The prestnt Russian government is the outgrowth of a system long extant. The Soviets are councils. While Russia was in the war they supplied the bone and sinew with which to carry on the war."

Such expressions of opinion from the bench are extremely rare. The word Soviet once caused considerable doffing of hats and doffing of heads, but the great powers of Europe, while not taking the same interest in the Russian experiment that Justice Ford suggests Americans should take, recognize accomplished facts, and after warring against the young Workers' Republic for several years, finally decided to take off their hats to the Soviet.

Send in that new "sub" today!

Davis and the Negroes

In his address delivered to the Negroes of New York, Mr. John W. Davis pledged himself to "equal opportunity" for the colored people.

This is a threadbare promise. It is typical of the golden pledges and leaden performances of our employing class politicians. The democratic standard bearer assured his Negro audience that he is for the fifteenth amendment. Of course, Mr. Davis spared no adjectives to convince his listeners that he is an ardent believer in the doctrine of political equality. With New York state being practically the pivotal point in Mr. Davis' presidential fortunes, we would not be surprised to find the democratic candidate being even more lavish in his promises.

We admire the brazen effrontery of Mr. Davis. How a candidate of the democratic party, the party of the decrepit southern slave-breeding aristocracy, can gather sufficient courage even to mount a rostrum in a Negro district, is beyond our comprehension. It has been the party of Mr. Davis in West Virginia and thruout the entire south that has been the most outspoken and frankest opponent of all attempts to grant the Negro the faintest rights and opportunities even on paper.

We recall a speech delivered by Senator Owen of Oklahoma at the democratic convention. Speaking in behalf of the Ku Klux Klan, the mawsh (might as well stay home) senator assured his audience that he was a friend of the Negroes, and in proof of his friendship he said: "Why, I've had Negroes serving me for forty years. Certainly, that shows I have nothing against the Negroes." This is the exact meaning of all of Mr. Davis' ranting about equality of opportunity for the Negroes. Mr. Davis joined hands with Mr. Coolidge in forging chains of oppression and exploitation for the Negroes and the white workers as well. Mr. Davis, in complete agreement with Messrs. Coolidge and LaFollette, is running on a platform which aims to perpetuate an industrial order based on economic class divisions, which serve as a foundation for race prejudice, lynching bees, segregation and Jim Crowism.

For more than half a century the spokesmen of the various capitalist parties have promised the Negroes equality. During all this period the Negroes have only been tied more firmly to the chariot of their white and black capitalist exploiters.

Politics and Money

For the employing class, it is axiomatic to conclude that in politics, more than in any other enterprise, money is the most eloquent spokesman. This point of view is to be found amongst the newspaper men and political experts defending all the layers of the owning class—the Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette supporters.

Using this capitalist method as a political yardstick, Mr. Lawrence Todd, the Washington correspondent of the Federated Press, who has for some time been an over-enthusiastic supporter of the LaFollette movement, jumped to the conclusion that it would enhance his forlorn cause to spread the yarn that the Workers Party was raising a campaign fund of one million dollars. When Mr. Todd circulated this ridiculous report, he must have known, as well as one could possibly know, that his so-called reliable information was utterly unfounded.

Now, Mr. Todd is attempting to crawl out of the miserable position in which he got himself by an effort to prejudice some workers against the Communist ticket. Mr. Todd, breathing the unholy Washington atmosphere, felt that perhaps some of the irritation aroused by huge campaign funds might be effectively turned against the Communists. This alone could serve as a plausible interpretation for Mr. Todd's ventures. Realizing his mistake, Mr. Todd is now attempting to follow up with another ridiculous report. He is insinuating that the Workers Party campaign efforts have failed because its recognized spokesmen admit that they would be glad to have raised one-tenth the million he alloted to them.

The Communists have raised their money to finance the campaign without the support of such LaFollette "angels" as the Vanderlips, Spreckels, open-shop mine-owning Mr. Stone, anti-union manufacturer Mr. Rawleigh. The Communists have not vowed, as the LaFollette organization did, to raise a half-million dollars in Wisconsin or in any other state. We do not expect disemployed workers and exploited farmers to invest so heavily even in so sound a proposition as a Communist political campaign. Mr. Todd is as wrong in his second conclusion as in his first. The success of the Communist campaign is not to be measured simply by the amount of money we may have succeeded in raising amongst poor workers. What is an axiom for the capitalist spokesmen—Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette—holds no water for the working class.

Get a member for the Workers Party and a new subscription for the DAILY WORKER.

LaFollette has forgotten all about government ownership of railways. He has soft pedalled on the supreme court. He has toned down his attacks on the use of injunctions in labor disputes. But the American capitalists will appreciate his services just about as much as the British rulers did Ramsay MacDonald's various acts of submission, to show what a loyal servant he was.

The American capitalist correspondents learned that the Chinese general who captured Peking from Wu Pei Fu, received $3,000,000 from the Soviet government. This may be a good excuse to declare war on him.

The liberal party of England might as well hustle around and find an undertaker. Its leader, H. H. Asquith, went down to defeat at the hands of a labor candidate. The democratic party of America is almost as groggy.

Despite the efforts of Ramsay MacDonald and the right wing of the labor party to keep the Communists from associating with them, Comrade Saklatvala has succeeded in bursting into the house of commons.

charming man," declared the Mormon senator, "but he let Lenin and Trotsky get the upper hand on him." No doubt the czar could also have stopped the Russian revolution if he got ahead of it, but he didn't. The revolution got ahead of the czar. It was the same with Kerensky. The latter wanted to separate Lenin and Trotsky from their heads, but he was unsuccessful, and is now washing dishes, so it is reported. The Russian workers and peasants are willing to provide him with enough dishrags to keep him busy for the rest of his life.

THE Citizens' Union of New York, has endorsed the candidacy of Joseph D. Cannon for sheriff. Cannon is a socialist. The bourgeois organization also places the seal of its approval on other socialists, thus demonstrating that the bourgeois liberals see no distinction between our modern socialists and the capitalist candidates. This is enlightening and deserves wide publicity.

THE British terror in India goes on unabated. Earl Reading, the viceroy, exercised his emergency powers by promulgation of an ordinance supplementing the ordinary criminal law in Bengal with a view to suppressing the revolutionary movement for the freedom of India from the British yoke. Of course, Reading brands the revolutionists "anarchists" in regular American imperialist fashion. Twenty-seven men have already been arrested and the police are searching houses for other suspects. It looks as if the worst—for the British government—was yet to come. Ramsay MacDonald's pacifism confines itself to an attempt at stabilizing capitalism, not lifting the iron heel off the faces of subject peoples, particularly subjects of His Majesty, King George. It is different in the case of Georgia!

GENERAL Plutarco Elias Calles, newly elected president of Mexico, found himself in bad company on his arrival in New York from Europe a few days ago. The very men who carried on a war against Mexico for years and howled for intervention, gave Calles a dinner. Judge Gary was toastmaster. In an interview to the newspapers, Calles said: "I wish to express my goodwill to the American people, particularly to the laboring classes and above all, to President Coolidge." Why spoil a good thing by getting strikebreaker Cal into it? The newahounds expressed surprise at a president showing so much concern over the welfare of the workers, so they asked him why he specified the laboring classes.

CALLES replied: "I desire to send my felicitations to them because I was elected on a labor ticket in Mexico. My principle task after I become president will be to raise the social conditions of the laboring classes of Mexico to a higher plane." This kind of language will not help Judge Gary digest his supper. It will not help Calles get in good with the American bankers. It will cause Silent Cal to at least arch his eyebrows even if he cannot think.

THE DAILY WORKER published a letter from Zinoviev, president of the Communist International, a few days ago, endorsing the Workers Party election campaign. The Riga correspondent of the New York Times, sent a cable from that city, purporting to be a copy of the statement, but it is very wide of the mark. It contains language similar to that used in the famous concoction of the British foreign office. Riga is the home of the czarist Ile factory, and news from that part of the world is false at least nine times out of ten.

THE Minnesota Union Advocate, edited by William Mahoney, godfather of the June-17 convention, at St. Paul, and now among those who are supporting LaFollette, states in a headline on the front page of the October 23 issue of his paper, that the Communists are helping the G. O. P. against LaFollette. The changes have been rung on this silly charge since the election campaign opened, but no intelligent person believes it. The asininity of Mahoney, however, is above the ordinary.

ON the same page in which he accuses the Workers Party of helping Coolidge, he prints a cartoon taken from The DAILY WORKER, without giving us credit for it, which pictures the New England pals of Silent Cal on a public park billboard, with the inscription Keep Cool with Coolidge. Right across from the pictures are three workers huddled on a bench and shivering with the cold. The cartoon is by K. A. Suvanto. Had Mahoney been honest enough to give The DAILY WORKER credit for the pictorial attack on the strikebreaker president, his readers would get wise to him. The he did not show any particular mental agility in meeting the reactionaries of Minnesota, he knows enough to at least save his face from his readers. But the more he crawls to the reactionaries, the harder they will hop on him.

A REPORT got into the papers recently that the National Catholic Welfare Council intended to have the union label on all its printed matter in the future. This caused a protest from some quarters with the result that the church was kept busy for a few days denouncing the story. Why not the union label? The great majority of these who support the powerful Catholic church machine in this country are workers. Is the church so openly in favor of non-union labor?

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

By Trade and Inclination—A Bricklayer!

THERE are really two kinds of bricklayers. Besides dead ones and live ones—there are also bricklayers by trade and bricklayers by inclination. And then there are those who are both.

D. D. Harper of Huntington, W. Va. is one of those dual personalities who by dint of real effort and the use of some imagination accomplish great things for the labor movement. But then, no posies thrown at this bricklayer par excellence could speak better for him than his own letter of deeds well done. Here it is:

Huntington, W. Va.

Dear Comrades: Received your "bricks." Went in to the Bricklayers' Hall and just put it up to them. Then took a collection and got enough to "heave that brick back." Then I went in to the Central body and got $3.00 more for a six-month "brick." And as I was coming out I got another $2.00 for four months making a total of eleven bucks.

Send me ANOTHER brick or two and it may wake me up. Good Stuff!

Yours to the Finish,
D. D. HARPER.

It is "good stuff." And its "good stuff" that this loyal bricklayer is made of. Here's power to his arms to gather more POWER for the DAILY WORKER—and may he never get a sore arm from heaving bricks back to "The National Labor Daily."

And here are the briclayers who have done good work in the first three days of this week having sent in NEW subs on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday—

A Special Notice for Everyone!

"Bricks" to "Build the DAILY WORKER" are not the only things "heaved back" at us to really "Build On It." Many loyal members of the labor movement are serving in the campaign without special mention in our pages. They are the ones responsible for sending their own subscriptions and renewals—all of which is additional POWER to boost the circulation of the DAILY WORKER and promote the best interests of the labor movement. They also serve who are doing it silently. To them goes this special acknowledgement of their good work.

The first issue of the WORKERS MONTHLY is ready. If you have not decided to take a bundle—if you are not on the subscription list—you are missing the first issue of the best monthly labor journal that has yet appeared. Seeing is believing.

THE THEATER

"CONSCIENCE."—A Review
By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

There is now playing at the Belmont Theater, New York, a play called "Conscience," by Don Mullaly, which is a wobbly love story.

The first and last acts are pure theatrical hokum, but the other two acts have some very interesting moments.

The story is about a member of the I. W. W. in the state of Washington who falls in love with and marrie a young waitress who has no conception of unionism and who disapproves most strongly of her husband's strike activities.

We find him leading an unsuccessful strike, in which all the workers except one other and himself are taken back. The bosses' agents try to make him leave the I. W. W. by talking to wife, but he sees thru this trick of the corporation.

As his money gets low, he leaves on a wobbly-run freight train for Butte, Mont., promising to write his wife regularly and send for her as soon as he obtains a job. For a while his letters are on time but latter they suddenly stop.

We find the wife and her girl friend in the company of various "gentlemen" at the rate of a new one every week or so.

After not writing for three months the wobbly sends his wife a letter that he has a job and that he wants her to come to him, to which she answers that she is through with him for good.

He hurridly returns to Washington and finds his wife entertaining one of her "gentlemen" friends in his home and making preparations to leave it for ever with him.

After hustling the "gentleman" out, he tells his wife he will forgive her. He explains that the reason he did not write, was because he was picked up on a freight train and was sentenced to ninety days in jail on a charge of vagrancy, and that he wrote her regularly and gave the letters to the keeper to mail, which he apparently did not do.

She refuses to come back to him and in a fit of anger he chokes her and quickly runs away.

There are many interesting parts in the play which is very capably acted. References to economics and religion are very well presented.

In spite of its minor defects, it is well worth seeing.

Symphony Gives Big Program in Third Concert

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

"Memories of Childhood," by Charles Martin Loeffler of Boston, the composition that won the prize at the North Shore music festival last May, was played by the Chicago Symphony orchestra on the third program of the year. When the work was played at Evanston in the spring the program of it appeared in these columns, but it is not amiss to quote it again:

The composer's memory of life in a Russian village—old Russia, with its folk songs and dances, the chants of the orthodox church, the fairy tales, the pageantry of death; above all, the composer's memory of a great friend, an elderly peasant, a poet."

Loeffler makes good the program in a brilliant fashion. There is one passage where the four solemn horn players of the orchestra play four frisky mouth organs.

Brahms' Symphony Beautiful.

The second symphony of Brahms preceded the Loeffler work. When Brahms wrote a symphony he squeezed all the juice available out of his themes. The themes themselves are invariably beautiful, of that deep, mystical and profound sort characteristic of the composer. But the extensive, scholarly, obviously labored development of them, gives the impression of being the production of a man of infinite skill, not, as in the case of the Beethoven and Chaykovski symphonies, the production of a man of infinite inspiration.

Following were the two nocturnes for orchestra by Debussy. Debussy had an extraordinary gift for the writing of apt titles and descriptive paragraphs. This is what he says of these nocturnes:

"Clouds—The unchanging aspect of the sky, and the slow, solemn movement of the clouds, dissolving in gray tints, lightly touched with white.

"Festivals—The restless, dancing rhythm of the atmosphere, interspersed with sudden flashes of light. There is also an incidental procession (a dazzling imaginary vision) passing thru and thru and mingling with the aerial reverie; but the background of uninterrupted festival is persistent with its blending of music and luminous dust participating in the universal rhythm of all times."

In the second nocturne is an astounding cymbal part. A tremendous variety of effects is produced with them, and the brass plates are raised to a solo position.

Ravel's "Waltz" Disappointing.

Another modern French work, "The Waltz," by Maurice Ravel, which is described as a "chorgeographic poem," closed the program. "The Waltz" is much ado about nothing. There is a lot of noise. Several times during the piece the composer seems about ready to give us a waltz, at the end he seems working up to a bit of keen jazz, but neither results. A most curious, and disappointing work.

The concert opened with the overture to "Egmont" by Beethoven, which is one of the shorter masterpieces of one of the greatest of master minds.

France Jolts U. S. Anti-Soviet Policy—Borah

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

FRANK D. COMERFORD, is well known in Chicago to all those who keep in touch with the radical movement. He was special prosecutor of 1919 Communist Labor Party cases, and when those sentenced were pardoned, Comerford, was one of the loudest shouters against their release. Yet we find among those endorsing Comerford for the supreme court, the name of Clarence Darrow, an alleged radical and avowed anarchist. Darrow makes a lot of noise about "personal freedom" and he is always ready to denounce tyranny but he is also equally ready to line up with the capitalist class and their most vicious servants. Anarchistic consistency!

THE republicans charge the democrats with being in this campaign merely to assist LaFollette throw the election into congress. The democrats claim that Coolidge's candidacy will simmply induce the voters to flee to "Bob" for salvation from four years more of silence and graft. The LaFollettistes say that Davis is aiding Coolidge and preventing the "people" from going back to 1776. And they all agree that the Workers Party is out to overthrow the capitalist system. For once they are all right.

THE uptown dry goods association of New York want Coolidge and Dawes to win, so they advertise. It is a novel form of advertising and incidentally good propaganda for Communism. The ad. writer must have a taste for history as well as for politics. He discovered that for over one hundred years, every speech delivered in the Roman senate ended with "Delenda Est Carthago" which means in plain English, "Carthage must be destroyed." The new slogan suggested by the dry goods men is "Communism must be destroyed."

WE venture to say that when the bones of the dry goods merchants of New York are dry as the dust, that Communism will be flourishing and capitalism a thing of the past. It is well that our enemies realize the issue so clearly. It is between capitalism and the new order which will be erected on its ashes; Communism. Those who understand what Coolidge and Dawes stand for will cast their votes for Foster and Gitlow, the standard bearers of Communism in this election.

A WORKER, who during the course of his employment was severely injured, so badly indeed, that one of his legs had to be amputated from above the knee, sends in a subscription to The DAILY WORKER, which he secured from friends who came to visit him. The short letter accompanying the subscriptions, published a few days in the Power Column of this paper, could not help but encourage any member of the party with a drop of fighting blood in his veins, to greater efforts in pushing the "Build The DAILY WORKER" campaign. If this comrade lying on his back, in a sick bed, could set his mind on building up our Communist daily, how much more could those who are in good health?

THE National Security League was unnecessarily excited over the visit of Countess Karolyi to this country. Despite her title these sterling patriots feared that her presence here would poison the atmosphere. They discovered that she is known in Hungary as "Red Catherine." If that is so our Hungarian comrades are holding back interesting information from us. The countess is about as "red" as Mrs. Borden Harriman, and perhaps not near so revolutionary as Jane Adams who is supporting Robert M. LaFollette for president and Judge Norman L. Jones, for governor of Illinois.

Vote Communist This Time.

HUGHES' SOVIET POLICY DOOMED SAYS SEN. BORAH

French Recognition Big Forward Move

By JAY LOVESTONE.

"A very decided step towards the complete restoration of normal relations with Soviet Russia." This was the way Senator Borah characterized, in an interview given exclusively to the DAILY WORKER, the significance of the recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics by the French government.

Soviet Russia Victorious.

"This event indicates clearly and above all a recognition of the fact that the whole world must deal with Soviet Russia as it is, with the Soviet government as the spokesman for the country," declared the senator who has been amongst the most active official proponents of American recognition of the Soviet Republic.

Hastens American Recognition.

In reply to a query by the writer as to the probable effect of the French move on the attitude and policy of the United States government, Senator Borah said: "The recognition, the unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia by France can have no other effect than advance the cause of the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States. Every great nation has now recognized the Soviet government. All of our allies in the great war have done so. We can gain nothing by standing aside and keeping away. We can help a good deal and we can lose much, otherwise."

Won't Explain Hughes' Policy.

"Well, then, how would you explain the obstinacy and the opposition of the state department in its dealings with the problem of Soviet recognition in the face of the continued increase of the number of nations extending de jure recognition to the Soviet Republic?" asked the DAILY WORKER correspondent. Senator Borah answered that he would not undertake to explain the policy of the state department since he was in such fundamental disagreement with it.

Gompers' Hostility Doomed.

"To what extend do you thing does the hostility of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor play a role in the continuation of the present anti-Soviet policy by the American government?" queried the writer. The senator was quick to reply: "I think that the attitude of so big an organization as the American Federation of Labor has a very decisive effect upon this policy of the government. But I am sure that the leaders of the American Federation of Labor must inevitably come to see that we must have Soviet Russia back into the family of nations in the interests of world peace. It seems to me that Mr. Gompers can do nothing else and will have to come around to this point of view."

Congressional Action Likely.

What the next session of congress is likely to do regarding the recognition of Soviet Russia is not yet known definitely. There is every likelihood that an attempt will be made in the senate to force the hand of the state department. It will be recalled that last year the recognition efforts were seriously interfered with by the Teapot Dome inquiry and by the general political situation which prevented many legislators from doing anything on account of their being afraid to be branded "red" while they were trying to win their return to Washington in the November elections.

Great Increase in Trade.

With the senatorial and congressional seats safe for a while, with the erstwhile bitter foe of Soviet Russia, France, having extended unconditional recognition, and with the economic pressure for a restoration of American relations with the Soviet Republic growing, we may look forward to some lively doings in Washington during the winter.

According to the report issued today by the department of commerce, American exports to Soviet Russia in Europe have leaped from $344,003 in September 1923 to$3,530,001 for September 1924. The increase of American imports from Soviet Russia in Europe was phenomenal, rising from $49,951 a year ago September, to $544,234 in the corresponding six months of 1924.

BROWDER WILL SPEAK SUNDAY IN PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 31.—The Pittsburgh campaign will close with a grand campaign rally Sunday evening, Nov. 2 at Labor Lyceum on Miller street with Earl Browder, editor of the Workers Monthly as the principal speaker. Admission is free.

LaFollettetes Worried.

The following quotation will give some idea of the publicity the Workers Party is receiving in the Pittsburgh press:

"How to mark ballot for LaFollette in Pennsylvania. Place your cross mark in the square after the name of the Labor Party in the first column on the ballot, thus:

"LABOR—X.

"Do not mark your ballot in the square after the name of the Workers Party. The Workers or Communist Party is not for LaFollette and is supporting another candidate."

Cover Town With Literature.

The LaFollette illusionists are worried over the progress made by the Workers Party in the first Communist campaign in the city of coal and steel. Our campaign meetings were very successful. We distributed tons of literature. The workers of Pittsburgh know the Workers Party is in the field.

In the last week of the campaign the LaFollette crowd are wildly attacking the Workers Party. But we will make them wilder yet when they sees us roll up a vote of ten thousand in the Allegheny county.

Pittsburgh readers of the DAILY WORKER who want to volunteer to act as watchers for the Workers Party on election day will please get in touch with our office at 805 James St., N. S., Pittsburgh, Pa., at once.

MUDDLING OF ELECTION ROILS BRITISH LABOR

MacDonald's Leadership is Now Threatened

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The Communist movement in Great Britain has been advanced tremendously by the making of its program for a proletarian revolution an intensive campaign issue. The stunts of the MacDonald "labor" government is trying to outdo the tory conservatives in "exposing the reds" has, unavoidably, brought the issue—"Do you want Communist or capitalism in Britain?" before the minds and into the consciousness of millions of English workers.

"Little Welsh Giant" Punctured.

The political significance of the elimination from the political struggle of the liberal party, the centrist party of capitalism, is most important in itself. The labor party is now the recognized left wing of the capitalist machine, and if it continues it rivalry with the tories in being nasty to labor, and particularly to the Communists, as it began with the publication for political purposes of the forged letter claimed to be from Zinoviev of the Communist International, its identity as a party of capitalism will become clear to workers who now support it because of its labor pretensions.

Liberal Disaster.

The final count of votes shows that the conservatives have 398 seats in parliament; labor party, 149—a loss of 43; liberals, 40; and other parties, 13, including at least one Communist, Saklatvala, elected from Battersea.

Frank Hodges, whom Americans remember was fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention last year and who approved of the Gompers gang throwing out Wm. F. Dunne, was himself thrown out of parliament. The workers of England remember Hodges as the traitor who stabbed the triple alliance in the back on "Black Friday" in 1921.

Resentment at MacDonald Trickery.

It is everywhere shown that workers are disgusted with the MacDonald regime. It has been continually up to cheap tricks to keep in power. The publication as an eleventh-hour trick of the letter supposed to be from Zinoviev, and now known as a bare-faced forgery, has muddled things beautifully.

There was a rumor during the London conference that British imperialism was going to drop Ramsay after he would put over the Dawes' plan. Now, he has not only lost out as a servile bootlicker of capital, but his "god-granted" automobile and $150,000 from Sir Alexander Grant and his cheap maneuvers at the expense of labor's interests has discredited his leadership, and rumors are that he will be withdrawn from leadership of the labor party and supplanted by somebody with more brains if no more honesty.

WORKERS PARTY IN ST. PAUL IN FIGHT FOR F.-L. P.

War on Treason to Aid Republican Candidate

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 31.—The Workers Party, thru its city central committee here, has issued an appeal to the workers to save the farmer-labor party and elect J. F. Emme to congress.

The Workers Party appeal has been issued at the same time that William Mahoney, editor of the Minnesota Union Labor Advocate, has gone over to the corrupt republican party and come out for the republican, Oscar Keller, running against the farmer-labor candidate.

Conspiracy is Defeated.

The Workers Party appeal exposes the conspiracy of the old party bosses, which has now been endorsed by Mahoney to keep the farmer-labor party off the ballot in the fourth congressional district.

"The Workers Party immediately served notice that they would not compromise with a capitalist party and would see that a candidate was filed," says the statement.

"J. F. Emme, farmer-labor candidate for congress, has refused to compromise with those who would sell out the working class movement. From the moment J. F. Emme entered the political campaign he has had the stubborn opposition of such a reactionary as Frank T. Starker, and the one-time progressive William Mahoney. These men have shown that they would betray the farmer-labor party into the hands of the enemy.

An Appeal to Labor.

"Emme, who is a Communist, member of the Workers Party, stands for working class unity on the basis of a militant fight against the present system of society in which the capitalist class gets everything and the workers nothing except a bare livelihood."

The statement then gives the complete program of the Workers Party and urges all workers to support the Communist candidates for president and vice-president, and the farmer-labor party candidates in Minnesota.

Fight Against Poison.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31. — Because "there is great danger of widespread poisoning among men at gasoline filling stations, garages, repair shops, and even among the general public," Dr. Yandell Henderson, Yale professor and authority on gas poisonings, urges that the sale of gasoline containing lead should be stopped immediately.

PLAN MOBILIZATION OF WORKERS PARTY IN NEW YORK AND IN CHICAGO

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—The campaign committee of the Workers Party in District 2, calls upon all members for a mobilization day on election day to distribute literature and act as watchers at the polls.

As watchers only those comrades who are citizens can do this work, but for the distribution of literature and for instructors to voters, all comrades can do this work.

You should report to your section headquarters immediately to be assigned to do this work. There will be comrades in charge of the section headquarters and you must report to them and be assigned for work on election day.

The section headquarters are as follows:

206 East 12th Street,
64 East 104th St., Harlem,
61 Graham Ave., Williamsburg,
105 Eldridge Street,
1347 Boston Road, Bronx,
1844 Pitkin Ave., Brownsville.

Comrades on the job, report immediately to your section to be assigned for work in your section on election day. It is not enough that workers will vote our ticket. We must see to it that the votes are counted for our candidates.

WANTED! To Distribute DAILY WORKER at Factories for November 7th Soviet Celebration.

The place to reach the workers with Communist propaganda is at the factories, shops, mills. That's where the Communists should be organized—in Communist shop nuclei. Communist work at or in the factories and shops brings, as has been proved in Chicago, better results than activity in any other way. Factory distribution here of special editions of the DAILY WORKER and other literature brings industrial workers into the Workers Party and Young Workers League, and workers to our meetings in bigger numbers. But, to get down to the immediate need:

We want comrades to help distribute the DAILY WORKER on Nov. 4, 5, and 6, at the factories. This will be a special DAILY WORKER CHICAGO EDITION for the 7th Soviet Anniversary Celebration on Friday, Nov. 7. There will be stuff on various factories so that the workers can get the lowdown on some of their bosses. Meanwhile,

Send in your name if you are ready to help distribute the DAILY WORKER either Nov. 4, 5, or 6. The distribution will take place when the workers are going home in the evening. So the comrades helping will have to show up at the local office, Workers Party, 166 W. Washington street, Room 303 (telephone State 7955) by 2:30 in the afternoon on those days. Comrades! Let's hear

Illinois Communist Voters! Notice!

When you go the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1924, to vote for the WORKERS PARTY candidates on the presidential, state and congressional tickets, remember to place a cross at the side of each Workers Party candidate. Otherwise, your opinion will not be registered. Acording to the capitalist laws of Illinois, voters casting their preferences for candidates of an independent ticket, for those candidates who are on the ballot by petition, a cross must be placed by the side of each presidential elector and other candidates. This is not the case with the parties that are so-called lawful parties, in which case a cross placed at the top of the ballot for the particular party you vote for registers for the entire ticket. But to record yourself for the Workers (Communist) Party candidates, Foster and Gitlow, you must vote for each of the 29 Workers Party electors, and then for the other Workers Party candidates also. Remember this so that your Communist vote will count.

GARY WORKERS TO HEAR FOSTER DESPITE TRUST

Will Speak Tomorrow in the Open Air

"The Gary steel workers are going to hear Foster in spite of the steel trust dictatorship," says Arne Swabeck, district organizer of the Workers Party.

"First, we had engaged the armory for the Foster campaign meeting. But the banker who has control of that place turned us down, saying that Foster was not a 'good citizen.'

"Then we leased the Froebel school auditorium, but three days later the school superintendent got his orders and cancelled the lease. Then we tried to get the use of East Park from the park commissioners. They had heard of Bill Foster, too. They 'didn't want any agitators.'

Open Air Meeting Sunday.

"But out of house and hall by the steel trust, which somehow has an unfriendly feeling for Comrade Foster, we have engaged a vacant lot in Gary at 19th and Broadway, and are asking every working man in Gary to turn out on Sunday, Nov. 2, at 2 p. m., at 19th and Broadway to hear the messages of the Communist candidate for president.

Steel Workers Keeps Posted.

And indicative of how the steel workers like Bill Foster," said Swabeck, "may be seen in the way they responded to the DAILY WORKER drive. When the party members at the mill gates first went there, the slaves of the steel mills thought that the cry, 'DAILY WORKER for sale,' indicated merely another of the pink sheets put out by labor fakers. They went by without buying.

"But the next day the comrades used another tactic, 'William Z. Foster's paper, the DAILY WORKER, the only Communist paper, for sale,' was the call that resulted in hundreds of papers being sold at the gate.

First Concert by Workers' Symphony Begins on Sunday

The first of a regular series of concerts under the auspices of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America by the orchestra organization of the Chicago Symphony and conducted by Alexander Dukovsky, will be given Sunday afternoon at Ashland Auditorium. Virvilio Lazzari of the Chicago Opera company will render a solo for the concert. Everybody welcome.

North Side English Branch Members!

Our branch meets on Monday, Nov. 3, at 8 p. m., at Imperial Hall, 3409 N. Halsted street. Very important problems will come up at this meeting. Let nothing prevent every member from attending this meeting.

Another thing! This is RED WEEK. Our branch members must distribute literature to put this campaign over big. We have contracted to dispose of a quantity of literature for which you have already paid. Distribute it! Call at 166 W. Washington street at once for your bundle.

NEW YORK CITY T. U. E. L. PLANS BALL FOR ELECTION RETURNS

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 31.—The Trade Union Educational League has arranged on election night, Nov. 4, a ball at Park Palace, 110th St. and 5th Ave. Election returns from all over the United States will be reported by Sam Lipzin between dances.

Every militant in New York will be there as this is the only affair this year run by the T. U. E. L. of New York. Tickets are only 50 cents and they are selling fast.

CAL'S SILENCE IS SYNONYM FOR NEUTRALITY IN KU KLUX JARGON; CHARLIE BRYAN IS FAVORITE

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 31.—In an official document issued from the office of Walter Bossert, grand dragon of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, today, Calvin Coolidge, for the instruction of klan voters in Indiana is listed "neutral," John W. Davis "anti-klan"; Robert M. LaFollette, not mentioned; Charles W. Bryan, "favorable," and Burton K. Wheeler not listed on the klan issue.

CAPITAL HEARS ABOUT THE REDS FROM THEIR STANDARD BEARER, WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31.—The capital of the mightiest bourgeois government on the face of the earth has had the challenge of a Soviet republic of workers and farmers thrown down before it by the message bearer of proletarian revolution in this election, William Z. Foster, Communist candidate for president, speaking here Monday night.

The meeting was opened by O'Hara MacIntosh, acting as chairman, whose interesting introduction was, in part, as follows:

"You have seen the oft-repeated statement in the newspapers to the effect that William Z. Foster is a bolshevik and that the Workers Party is connected with Russia. I am now going to tell you a little secret. We Communists are affiliated with the bolsheviki—and we are extremely proud of that fact. And that is not half of it. When the capitalist editor tells you contemptuously and with a sneer, that the Communists have connections in Moscow, he does not tell you half of it. We workers have a motto, which reads: 'Workers of the World, Unite.'

"If the capitalists would tell you the whole truth they would tell you that the Communists are not only connected with Moscow, but that they are in close connection with Communists in every city of any consequence on the face of the globe. Not only in Moscow, but in Paris, in London, in Edinburgh, in Dublin, Rome, Tokyo, Manilla and in Sydney. Wherever the printed word is carried we have representatives, whether it be amongst the multitudes of the metropolis or on the banks of the Wabash.

"You know the records of the candidates of the other political parties; you know that both Coolidge and Dawes are lawyers; you know that Davis is a lawyer and that Bryan is an editor; that both LaFollette and Wheeler are lawyers. The candidates of the Workers Party, Foster and Gitlow, are union working men. They have been union men during all their working lives. You will hear tonight one of the greatest organizers of laboring men and women that has ever lived.

"You know the life histories of 90 per cent of the leaders of organized labor. You know what happens when the union man rises in the ranks of his fellowmen; how he goes to the citadels of the mighty and the corrupt; you know the result of his association with the boss, and of his mahogany table in the conference room. You know that the traitor's appointment as secretary to some prominent capitalist or his appointment as commissioner of something or other, is his reward for the betrayal of those who trusted him.

"You know that these rewards are bribes. Now, my friends, there is no man in the labor movement in America that is more feared by the capitalist class than William Z. Foster. But Bill Foster is not made of the stuff that is for sale. Because of his adherence to his principles William Z. Foster is the phenomenon of the labor movement.

"You know that it is the custom at political gatherings to introduce the speaker as a man who is known throughout the length and the breadth of the land; that he is a man of national reputation. I have to vary that description a little this evening. Our candidate is a man who is not only known through this country, who has not only a national reputation; he is a man who has an international reputation. In every section of the world, where there is a militant organization of working men, William Z. Foster is known, and honored and respected and loved as a brother."

Comrade Foster was in fine fettle and gave the best speech delivered by any candidate during the campaign. Even the many LaFollette men had to join in the enthusiastic reception accorded Foster's remarks in which he went after the fake progressive hot and heavy.

In spite of the disadvantage of a heavy and continued rain all evening, more than 350 were present, including many political reporters.

HILLQUIT, SOCIALIST, FIGHTS REVOLUTION; PAYS TAX OF $2,668

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 31.—Income tax reports made public today disclose the fact that Morris Hillquit, socialist leader and supporter of LaFollette, pays an income tax of $2,668.94. Hillquit's federal tax payment alone, is enough to defray the expenses of an average worker's family. On the basis of these official government figures, Hillquit, would-be spokesman of the American working-class, sports an income of at least $20,000 a year—an income which entitles him to admission to the first rank of highly paid labor bureaucrats and wealthy middle-class intellectuals.

Much of the money amassed by "Comrade" Hillquit has undoubtedly been obtained by payment of legal fees for services rendered to local trade unions. In other words the bosses exploit the workers in the shop while Hillquit exploits them when they are forced to go to court to plead for capitalist justice.

Another prominent name in the second district list of tax returns is that of Frank A. Vanderlip, millionaire supporter of LaFollette. His income-tax return is listed at $56,704. In his local income Vanderlip lags slightly behind John W. Davis, Morgan's attorney and democratic candidate for president, whose tax is $84,425.23.

Vanderlip and Hillquit are both leaders of the LaFollette forces and typical examples of the middle class capitalist non-working class charac-

"Those who own the industries will always own the government," said Foster. "To protect their privileges, the owners of the industries will own the press, the schools, the churches and all the other machinery for controlling the minds of the workers. When the workers do become sufficiently aroused to vote against capitalist class rule, and vote for social ownership of the industries, then the old ruling class will fight. They will fight as the southern slave-holders fought—until their power is utterly broken. They will fight as the capitalists of Italy are fighting, thru fascism, when the voice of the people expresses itself thru the ballot is adverse. In all history, no ruling class has surrendered to a rising class from below without a struggle to the very death. Do not imagine that the strongest, most alert, most fully organized capitalist class in the world, that in the United States, will hesitate to resist the majority. That is why we say the workers must not pin their hopes on a mere decision at the polls."

Foster described the republicans as "the party of the steel trust, the sugar trust, the packing trust, the bankers' trust, with a strikebreaker as its presidential candidate and a fascist as its vice-presidential nominee." The democratic party he described as twin sister to the republican. No working man could support either, without betraying his class.

Discussing the LaFollette Movement.

He analyzed the anti-war, public ownership and other measures in the progressive program and showed how each of these would be rendered useless to the working class by the fact of the middle class philosophy of the LaFollette movement. If capitalism is to be saved and strengthened big business will be the strongest element in the "reformed" capitalism, the workers will be cheated again.

GHASTLY ANTI-WAR BOOK SHOWS HORRORS OF CAPITALIST WARS

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 30. — The most terribly eloquent anti-war book ever published, horribly filled with war photographs too nauseating to look at but for their anti-militarist lesson, is making its gruesome way among labor circles in Europe.

The War in Pictures, by Ernst Friedrich, is an international weapon against international slaughter. Each picture has captions and explanations in English, French, German, and Dutch. The conscript or volunteer is shown having his picture taken for the folks before leaving for the front. Then a huge mass grave, sides splattered with blood and mud, is reproduced with the soldier corpses thrown into it. Fearfully wounded men, who have survived the war, are shown in hospitals. They have no faces, and have to be artificially fed. Photographs are reproduced of soldiers standing beside army gallows where the victim is still swinging, decorated with a hat placed on him by the soldier who stands below. There are pages of photographs of men hanged on army gallows scaffolds, of which 11,400 were erected.

INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID ADDS NEW DUTY

Political Prisoners to Be Given Assistance

The International Workers' Aid, formerly the Friends of Soviet Russia, in keeping with its aim as published more than a year ago, has decided to enlarge its scope of activity to include aid to political prisoners, their wives and children.

Funds raised for this particular purpose will be remitted to and distributed by the Red Aid International, while funds raised for relief of German workers, will be remitted and distributed thru the International Arbeiter Hilfs Komitee.

Organizations to Co-operate.

Militant trade unions, revolutionary political organizations, sick and death benefit societies, workmen circles, are invited to join in this new undertaking of the International Workers' Aid.

The Workers Party of America is the first workers' organization to extend its co-operation in this work. A letter to all Workers Party local central committees advising them to join in this work has already brought several results.

Youngstown, Ohio; Portland, Ore.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; New Haven, Conn., are among the first to reply.

As in the past, the International Workers' Aid expects that the reactionaries of the Abe Cahan calibre will again attack it for "using relief funds for Communist propaganda"—because the Communists are the first to enter our activities and help us raise funds for needy workers, their families and children. Instead of joining forces with us in this undertaking, these do-nothing critics will no doubt hold off, and just as soon as things begin to hum and we are actually accomplishing something they will come out with their attacks.

Xmas Drive Begins.

According to Red Aid statistics up to May 1923, there are 383,200 workers imprisoned in European countries. They are the casualties resulting from working class battles for higher wages, shorter hours and decent standards of living. Their wives even can get no work, their children are at the mercy of "charitable" people.

The International Workers' Aid feels it its duty to come to the assistance of these workers. Towards this end a Xmas drive is being initiated with the hope of raising one hundred thousand dollars. It is expected that other working class organizations besides the Workers Party will join in this effort, instead of standing off, doing nothing and then helping the critics.

Campaign Meeting in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31. — Rudolph Lisch will speak on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 2, at 3 p. m. at 5607 St. Clair Ave. on the coming elections. Subject: "LaFollette or Foster?" A large attendance of union men is expected. Comrades and sympathizers are urged to attend this meeting.

PICKET LINE OUT OF DATE, SAYS HILLMAN

Amalgamated Head for Peace with Bosses

No more picket lines for the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America if Sidney Hillman, president of the organization can help it. The way to better their conditions, according to Hillman, is to vote for LaFollette, join a nice liberal party, deposit their savings—if they have any—in a "labor bank" and build up the co-operative movement.

All in all a nice little scheme of class-collaboration, entirely worthy of the salvation army apostle of that cult, William H. Johnston, but strange to the tongue of Sidney Hillman, who, publicly at least, was known to favor the abolition of the capitalist system but as painlessly as possible, it is proper to state.

On Tenth Anniversary.

This new policy was sprung on the Chicago Joint Board a week ago on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the Amalgamated. It is not the policy that made of the Amalgamated a fighting organization feared by the capitalists and looked on with admiration by the rank and file of other organizations whose leaders had already knelt down and worshipped the golden calf. Hillman had the reputation of being a revolutionist, tho not, of course, to the left wingers in the Amalgamated, led by the Trade Union Educational League, who knew the difference between his words and his deeds.

In the next ten years, he declared, the members of the Amalgamated will not be on the picket line to fight for better conditions, but only in case of need to defend the union. In the coming ten years the main activity will be on the political and co-operative fields.

United Front With Bosses.

This means in the language of Hillman, on the bandwagon of an American bourgeois liberal party and in the banking business. Sydney is traveling fast. It is well he has dropped the mask and taken his place publicly with the rest of the labor lieutenants of capitalism.

He explained the endorsement of LaFollette by the General Executive Board with the flimsy excuse that had the C. E. B. expected the election of LaFollette the action might have been different. The Amalgamated, he added, had to go along with LaFollette or be isolated from the official labor movement, obviously meaning that the endorsement of LaFollette would be looked up on favorably by Gompers & Co. Out of the LaFollette movement, he declared, would come a liberal party not a third party, but a second party since the democratic party was being pushed out of second place by LaFollette.

Hillman declared for tolerance in politics within the union, while at the same time binding the members to LaFollette in spite of the decision of the last convention.

Rank and File For Foster.

The right wing of the Amalgamated has failed to swing the membership to LaFollette. Outside of Chicago their efforts have met with comparative failure. Even here Local 269 has declared for William Z. Foster and repudiated the action of the G. E. B. in endorsing LaFollette contrary to the convention decision.

Hillman was scheduled to speak in New York to the members on the LaFollette question, but he decided to come to Chicago, where he was sure of less opposition.

The Cleveland joint board of the Amalgamated has endorsed Foster and Gitlow and the locals of the organization in New York have organized themselves to make shop collections for the Communist campaign.

The Communists and progressives in the Amalgamated are grateful to Hillman for throwing off his radical mask and coming out in the open as an exponent of class collaboration and peace with the bosses. The fight in the Amalgamated will no longer be so complicated. Hillman has taken his stand openly with the right wing.

Vote Communist This Time!

Tammany Hall Again Shows Labor Need of Communist Leadership

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, on the eve of Tuesday's elections, the last minute deals are being made; the fixers are busy working overtime.

If there is a trick that can be pulled to win a workers' vote for reaction, it will be put over.

* * * *

Look at what happened in New York City.

Senator LaFollette, who has not missed an opportunity during his campaign to double-cross the Farmer-Labor movement, has himself been made the victim of a double-cross such as only Tammany Hall can be guilty of.

The Tammany Hall-controlled executive council of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York City and vicinity has repudiated its endorsement of LaFollette, early in the campaign, and is now giving its support to the candidacy of John "Wallstreet" Davis, on the democratic ticket.

All the Tammany Hallites in the New York labor movement, from John Sullivan, president, and John P. Coughlin, secretary, down the list, now discover in Morgan's lawyer all the qualities of a "friend of labor," using this expression as it has become infamous under the tutelage of Sam Gompers. In fact, LaFollette can easily behold Gompers himself in the nightmare that this double-dealing will bring to him.

* * * *

The Tammany Hall laborites do not hope to put Davis over with their trick. They hope, no doubt, to bring victory to the standards of Al Smith, the Tammany Hall candidate for governor of New York, and to put a goodly gang of Tammany Hallites in the state legislature, maintaining control of that citadel of graft and privilege. Just across the river is New Jersey, also a seat of democratic power,

If Tammany Hall cannot capture the nation for a democratic candidate, it will resort to every possible deal to maintain its prestige in the great center of population at the mouth of the Hudson River.

LaFollette has been made the victim of his own hallucinations, that political victory, even for the small bourgeoisie, can be built on a straddle of the two Wall Street parties.

* * * *

But the thrust goes even deeper. The Tammany Hall labor gangsters, entrenched by victory on election day, will be in a more formidable position than ever to wage war on the Farmer-Labor Party.

Those are the Tammany Hall gangsters, Sullivan, Coughlin, Costello and the rest, with whom Hillquit, the socialist, has been hobnobbing, in the New York Conference for Progressive Political Action. This was the crowd that Hillquit and the socialists joined with to fight the efforts of the Communists, in New York state, to build the Farmer-Labor Party, of the workers and poor farmers. Hillquit's fight on the Communists weakened the class fight of the workers and farmers. It strengthened the Tammany Hall gangsters in the labor movement and made it possible for them to launch their open appeal for votes and support of the Wall Street lawyer, John W. Davis.

The workers of New York City and state must learn the lesson—that they have been betrayed, not only by Tammany Hall, not only by the LaFollette Conference for Progressive Political Action controlled by Tammany Hall, but also by the socialists, Hillquit and Abe Cahan, of the Jewish Daily Forward, and by the LaFollette-loving labor leaders, Sidney Hillman, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Morris Sigman, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Morris Kaufmann, of the Furriers' Union, and others.

Only the Communist leadership of the Workers Party points the way to building of the class power of labor.

The effort of Tammany Hall's men, boring within the organized labor movement, on behalf of Wall Street, should again teach this lesson to the workers of New York.

CLEVELAND HOLDS TRIUMPHANT CELEBRATION IN DRIVE FOR HOME FOR OUR JEWISH COMMUNIST DAILY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31.—At the banquet room of the carpenters' hall about 200 Communists and sympathizers assembled to celebrate three years of incessant active struggle of the Jewish Branch, Workers Party, towards the abolition of the present system of production and all its evils.

A number of organizations sympathetic to the workers' struggles greeted the branch thru their delegates and pledged full-hearted support to the Workers Party.

Comrade Lunin, national organizer of the Jewish Federation, greeted the branch in the name of the federation and spoke of the development and achievement of our party. When he announced that the Freiheit in spite of its black and yellow enemies is nearing its third birthday and is in the midst of a campaign for buying a home and press of its own, storm of applause broke out. A few strikes, quite a number of twenty-fives, a large number of tens and still more of fives, demonstrated that the comrades are ready to build the party at all sacrifices. A sum of $762.00 was thus gathered.

Comrade A. Bittelman a member of the C. E. C. then greeted the Cleveland branch in the name of the C. E. C. He spoke of the tasks and difficulties of Communists, urging the comrades to strengthen their ranks and to keep up the fight for a new system of society.

The Freiheit Gezangs Ferein as well as their Mandolin Orchestra added to the success of the affair by their singing and playing songs of the class struggle.

Workers Party Sport Activities.

Sunday afternoon beginning at one o'clock sharp, a big game between the Workers' Sport Soccer Football Team and the Swedish-American Third Soccer Football Team comes up at Portage Park. This game is one of a series being held in Chicago. Be there to root for your side!

STANDARD OIL JOB KILLS TWO, SIX GO INSANE

Workers Suffer from Lead Poisoning

By ESTHER LOWELL

Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Two workers are dead and six others lie insane in Reconstruction Hospital as a result of tetraethyl lead poisoning at the Bayway, N. J., plant of the Standard Oil company.

Nearly 20 more workers are under observation for poisoning symptoms. All were employed in the manufacture of tetraethyl lead gas, specially treated gasoline supposed to eliminate "knocks" in auto engines and make possible much more efficient engines than at present used.

Market Dangerous Product.

The Ethyl Gas corporation, half of whose stock belongs to Standard Oil of New Jersey and half to General Motors corporation, is marketing the dangerous product in the middle west, Maryland and northern New Jersey. Thomas Midgeley jr., formerly of General Motors Chemical company and now vice-president of Ethyl Gas, is reported to have worked out the process of tetrahsethyl lead treatment of gasoline.

"Two years ago I warned representatives of General Motors that this substance is not fit for introduction for use by the general public; that lead poisoning is sure to result, not only in garage workers, but in all persons using automobiles," Dr. Yandell Henderson, professor of applied physiology at Yale, asserts in reference to the new cases. "It produces the most dangerous form of lead poisoning. By being volatilized, the lead is inhaled readily into the blood thru the lungs and makes its attack on the brain and nerves." He adds that those poisoned would never fully recover.

Discover Lead Poisoning.

Prosecutor A. J. David, of Union county, New Jersey, has found that the workers were employed in manufacture of ethyl gas and not in laboratory experiments as the Standard Oil company first indicated. Dr. Charles Norris, medical examiner, is performing autopsies on the two dead workers in an effort to discover lead in their systems. Standard Oil company officials say that the workers were warned of the dangers and that frequent physical examinations of the men were made.

Bernard Rodgers of Elizabeth, N. J., quit work at Bayway three weeks ago because of illness from the poisoning and has been in bed since. He suffers from delusions of persecution and has shown no improvement. Dr. Henderson, who is one of the great authorities on the effect of gases on the human body, says that all these workers show clearly symptoms of tetraethyl lead poisoning and that a similar case occurred recently in New York, altho he was not free to discuss it.

Health Department Acts.

The board of health of New York will adopt resolutions preventing the sale or use of gasoline compounds presumably containing poisonous ingredients.

Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, health commissioner, announced the impending action of the board shortly before tetraethy lead gas claimed its fifth life here within a week.

SUPPORT THE COMMUNIST TICKET

HOW TO VOTE COMMUNIST ON ELECTION DAY

Instructions Should Be Carefully Followed

1. Vote early.

2. You are entitled to vote if you are otherwise eligible and have registered. Don't let anyone prevent you from voting.

3. If an attempt is made to prevent you from voting, call up the Workers Party offices. You will receive advice and assistance.

4. When you get the ballot do not open it until you get into the election booth. And do not tear it or soil it, as it may be then declared void.

Use Booth Pencil.

5. Use only the pencil provided in the booth to mark ballots. The use of your own fountain pen or pencil may make void your vote.

6. In states where the party emblems appear beside the party names at the top of the ballot, look for the Communist emblem of "hammer and sickle." In any case look carefully for the name of "Workers Party of America."

7. When you have found the name "Workers Party of America," in most cases a blank circle appears in front and to the left of the name. Mark a good plain "X" in that circle. This means "voting the straight ticket" of the party.

8. But this is not enough, because crooked election judges can make their pencils do tricks when your ballot is being counted. You must begin at the circle at the top of the Workers Party ticket and go downward, making a "X" in the blank squares set in front of and to the left of every Workers Party candidate.

Go Down the Line.

9. Be sure you go down the entire list from the top to the bottom of the column, not stopping at a space where the Workers Party has no candidates, but continuing downwards until the column of names ends. You do not have to vote for candidates for all offices, but only for those where the Workers Party has candidates.

10. Place your "X" mark carefully within the squares. Careless marks reach over and touch other squares, may invalidate your ballot. Make no other marks on the ballot.

11. Fold the ballot before leaving the booth the same way as you received it. Do not give it into any person's hands, but deposit it yourself in the ballot box.

12. In states where the Workers Party is not on the ticket, you may vote the Communist presidential ticket only if you write in on the ballot the following: "For president of the United States, William Z. Foster. For vice-president of the United States, Benjamin Gitlow." And to make it valid you must ascertain the name of one presidential elector of the Workers Party in that state, and write his or her name in after the words, "For electors of president and vice-president of the United States."

Last But Not Least.

13. Lastly, remember that the Workers Party frankly states that the workers cannot emancipate their class from capitalist exploitation by voting in elections or electing candidates to offices. But that it uses the election as a period of intensive education to convince the workers that only by overthrowal of capitalist parliamentary forms and a proletarian dictatorship can a Communist society be developed. The Workers Party candidates, if elected, are under the iron discipline of the Workers Party and pledged to expose capitalist thievery, not only of illegal graft like the Teapot Dome, but the legal robbery of exploiting wage labor and agitate form the rostrum of parliament the overthrowal of capitalism and a Soviet Republic in the United States of America.

NEGRO 'DEFENDER' SLIPPED $10,000 KAL KOOLIDGE KASH

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31.—That the great Negro paper, the Chicago Defender, had betrayed the workers of that race by selling out to Coolidge for $10,000 cash, was the statement made today before the Borah campaign fund investigating committee.

This testimony came from Carl Murphy, editor of the Baltimore American, who, it is stated, was also offered a bribe to betray his race to Coolidge, who is known to be the Ku Klux Klan candidate.

This story, coming over the wire as the DAILY WORKER goes to press, came from the Washington correspondent of the Federated Press. Further details as to this traitorous deal will be published in Monday's DAILY WORKER.

Apollo Club Opens Season.

The Apollo Musical Club will open its regular season on Monday, Nov. 3, at Orchestra Hall. The oratorios, "The Creation," by Haydn, and the "Requiem," Brahms, will be given, with Olive June Lacey, soprano, B. Fred Wise, tenor, and Herbert Gould, bass, as the soloists.

Members Hirsh Lekert Branch!

All comrades of the former Hirsh Lekert branch of the Young Workers League are urged to attend the first auxiliary meeting on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 2, at 3:30 p. m. sharp, at 2613 Hirsh Blvd. Very important matters will come up.

OPEN FORUM SUNDAY NIGHT.

Sunday, Nov. 2, 8 p. m., at the Lodge Room, Ashland Auditorium. Alexander Bittelman will speak upon "Communism versus LaFollettelism." Questions and discussion. Every worker welcome to the floor.

Engdahl on Eastern Speaking Tour Last Week of Campaign

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 31.—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER and Workers Party candidate for senator in Illinois, spoke here tonight before a large audience. He left immediately after meeting for Buffalo, N. Y., where he speaks on Saturday, Nov. 1, at 8 p. m.

Engdahl's eastern speaking tour also takes in Boston, Mass., in Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m., at Paine Memorial Hall, 9 Appleton street and Cleveland, Ohio, Monday, Nov. 3, at 8 p. m., at the Bricklayers' Hall, 2105 21st street, south of Prospect.

Teachers Suspect Cut in Salaries.

A meeting of the Chicago Teachers' Federation attended by over one thousand teachers, was held at the Capitol building to protest against a new plan submitted by Supt. McAndrew, to reduce school expenses. A questionnaire was sent to each teacher to fill out and submit to principals. The questions contained were such as to determine the financial responsibilities of each teacher. The teachers claim this is another of those brilliant schemes of McAndrew's to meet the deficit in the school money by taking it out of the teachers and children instead of getting after those responsible for the deficit.

Welcoming Calles

General Plutarco Elias Calles has just landed in New York. The Reverend Norman Thomas and the remaining few holy socialists, along with a motley collection of liberals, staged a reception for the president as a working class champion.

The Honorable Calles is reported to have told his pseudo-socialist admirers that he was elected by organized labor and that his "first interest is in the labor movement." We know that it was the organized labor movement and the working and farming masses of Mexico in general that were responsible for the election of Calles. This does not blink the fact that Mr. Calles has already shown his teeth and clenched fists to the very working masses that made possible his political ascendancy. More than that, it was these very workers who crushed the attempts of the extreme reactionaries to overthrow the Calles election.

Mr. Calles has nothing to offer to the working class of Mexico. He is in hearty accord with the policies of the present Mexican administration which has been perpetrating travesty after travesty on the hard won gains won by the workers in the various revolutions of Mexico. At the very moment that Mr. Calles was being greeted by his so-called socialist champions in New York, the General Confederation of Labor of the southern republic was threatening to call out its fifty thousand members unless the scabs of the textile factories at Metepec were discharged. While Mr. Calles was enjoying a sumptuous reception in the splendid chambers of the Waldorf Astoria, the electricians were striking for the most elementary demands in Vera Cruz.

While Mr. Calles was boasting of the magnificent social program of the Mexican republic under his joint regime with Obregon, the Mexican government was landing its federal troops to protect the scabs running the refineries of the Gulf Oil corporation. While President-elect Calles was praising his own interest in the labor movement, the federal government was mobilizing all the troops in the capital. At the same time the oil refineries of the Royal Dutch were being run by scabs protected by Obregon's soldiery.

We have no illusions about Senor Calles. Senor Calles is of one stripe with the Reverend Thomases, the Morris Hillquits, and their European friends in the German social democracy now attempting to crush the Communist Party. We know that Mr. Calles will make every effort to disarm the Mexican workers and farmers and thus "stabalize" Mexico for the capitalist interests.

All the Same to Them

The Chicago Daily News is not bothered over the established fact that the alleged letter from Gregory Zinoviev was a forgery and quite likely the work of the British foreign office. It is inconceivable that an institution with centuries of conspiratorial experience behind it, should be taken in by so crude an effort as the alleged Zinoviev letter turned out to be.

When the news of the "red plot" reached America, the capitalist editors immediately got their pens busy to show that this was another example of Communist duplicity and that Charles Evans Hughes was perfectly justified by events in refusing to have anything to do with the workers and peasants of Russia, who do not seem to hold capitalist governments in high esteem.

The Chicago Daily News had one of its usual stupid editorials in this vein. But when it became convinced that the letter was a forgery it did not turn around and apologize for its offense, but simply said in substance: "Well, what if it is a forgery? Perhaps some Communist to the left of Zinoviev forged the letter. Anyhow, read what Zinoviev writes to the German workers on the anniversary of the Hamburg revolt. A man who could write such a letter to Germany is quite capable of writing a like letter to England."

This is a typical example of the manner in which everything relating to Soviet Russia is treated by the capitalist press. They hate the Soviet government with a hatred that is holy. To be fair to Russia is impossible for them. They are class conscious. They know that every gain made by the Soviet Republic is a gain for the working masses everywhere. Therefore they use their press to poison the minds of the American workers against the Communists who are the brains behind the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Class conscious workers who know that the capitalist press consistently lies about the workers everywhere, should just as consistently support The DAILY WORKER, which is concerned with fighting the workers' battle, and never has a kind word to say for the capitalist class or their system. It is just as partial to the workers as the Chicago Daily News is to the capitalists.

Answer this Call

Not only in New York City, where the Workers Party campaign committee has put out a call for T. U. E. L. and party members to volunteer for poll service on election day, will such demand be met with enthusiasm.

Workers everywhere who realize the danger of the LaFollette illusion have been fighting tooth and nail with the Communists. Only the Communists have stood out for a real working class program of revolutionary action against capitalism. In this fight the members of the Trade Union Educational League have stood four-square against the sweep of the LaFollette illusion in the labor unions as engineered by labor fakers of all kinds and colors.

Together with members of the Workers Party, these class conscious workers have taken the floor of the unions from one end of the country to another, have furnished much of the agitating personnel and have made it possible for the Communist clarification to penetrate the masses in the unions which the labor fakers had guaranteed to LaFollette, or Davis or Coolidge.

On election day the Workers Party members will find beside them as election workers at the polls, the revolutionary unionists who know that Communist "politics" is a fight to overthrow capitalism.

The Injunctionites Win

Considering the I. W. W. convention as a whole, it has exhibited abysmal confusion and irresolution. It has been scared to death of taking a clean-cut and positive revolutionary stand. The very word "revolution" is unwelcome, hated by some who are purely reformists, and avoided by others who fear to face a struggle for a program of revolutionary action in which they believe, but which they do not know how to formulate and fight for.

The revolutionists, grouped around the agricultural workers with scattered additions from other unions, who have built the whole I. W. W., have, indeed, done their utmost to attain unity. But in doing so they have left to chance the equally necessary fight for unequivocal plans for actual revolutionary struggle against capitalism.

For sixteen long days the convention has sat. Time, far in excess of any sensible allotment to conclude similar business, has been consumed in the laborious democracy of using a convention pile driver on a lot of constitutional tacks. If we look for results of a positive nature, we see nothing. Everything done is to avoid doing something. Often something revolutionary. It has not even expelled the injunctionites, but left it to referendum.

For fifteen days the delegates fiddled around waiting for Rowan to give them some chance to compromise. Quite naturally, he told them to go to the devil. Then, since he wouldn't compromise with them, they compromised with him. They will fool nobody by saying, "We expelled the injunctionites."

The reformist job-unionist caucus laid its plans well. The trusting left wing of rebels, unwilling to solidify itself, and unable because of that fact to stiffen the center by demanding guarantees of support on revolutionary issues, went down to defeat and even split on the fine demagogic trick of combining the motion to expel with a motion to leave it to referendum, as advanced by Oates.

Oats is the well-known food for jackasses, and much braying about "democracy" will be heard from the long-eared tribe in every quarter, particularly from those who, by denying all workers' democracy themselves, and by exercising a pernicious personal censorship, have kept and continue to keep the membership from being informed of anything but what they choose to tell them, and therefore unable to decide a referendum intelligently.

The Communists have continually pointed out that censorship, begun against the advocates of the R. I. L. U., was perilous. It has proven so. Yet the convention has done nothing effective to remove this danger. On August 13 the Communists and Red Internationalists insisted that this convention be called before either side would admit it was needed. But it declared in addition that "no mere doctering of constitutions" could settle the issues, and that "unless ideological matters are threshed out, nothing will be settled."

Nothing has been settled thus far, for that reason. Tho in the past the I. W. W. found Sandgren and Varney embarrassing company, it retains the complete counter-revolutionary ideology they advocated, and neither in its press or on its rostrum, does not permit the R. I. L. U. to dispel their lies and the confusion of anarcho-syndicalism. Sandgren and Rowan have won. Will they hold the victory?

Samuel Untermyer is a counspicious "public citizen." He is helping to get the goods on the G. O. P. in the interest of John W. Davis, Morgan attorney. Getting "goods" is Untermyer's specialty. A stoolpigeon employed by the noted lawyer to get the goods on W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire, is suing Untermyer for $7,500, which the fink spent in getting the stuff for Untermyer. If the G. O. P. supporters were as tight as Untermyer there would not be much need for a quiz.

We note that the Wage Earners' League has endorsed Len Small for governor and the democrat Sprague for senator. Who owns this Wage Earners' League? Len Small, thru Fred Lundin, thru Percy Coffin, thru the labor fakers Quesse and Boyle.

CONVENTION OF I. W. W. SEIZED BY INJUNCTIONITES

Roll Call Shows They Have Got Control

Late Thursday the I. W. W. convention suddenly came to life and battle when George Speed of 510 moved to rescind Wednesday's action to leave the expulsion of the injunctionites to referendum.

The branded that action as plain support of the injunctionites. But Speed's motion lost on roll call vote, asked for by the lumber workers.

The anarcho-syndicalist center went to the rescue of Rowan and the reformists of the right wing, Welinder and Ruth Rumbaugh, for example, voting to support Rowan on a roll-call vote. The roll-call was called by Speed, the resource of cowards, as the roll-call, like the referendum, gives the reformist lumber workers the advantage.

Charles Gray of 110, altho stating that he favored the referendum, "because I want to know what kind of an organization I belong to," added, "but in this fight I'll stick with the left wing and make the line-up clear."

This action makes very clear that the injunctionites have got control of the convention, the surface condemnation of them by the right wing delegates being more stage play.

Foreseen by Communists.

This outcome was prophesied by Harrison George of the Red International of Labor Unions Tuesday, after being denied the floor. At that time he said, "There is no half-way ground for workers, who say they are revolutionary, between the reactionary injunctionite elements and the members of the I. W. W. who adhere to the Red International because they adhere to revolution. Refusal to listen to the message of the Red International shows that before the convention is over it will be captured by the injunctionites."

Doyle Finishes His Defense.

Thomas Doyle, suspended secretary-treasurer, finished his defense to charges that he violated the I. W. W. constitution, yesterday. Doyle turned his defense into an attack on the injunctionites, and the champions of Rowan, in the convention—Leonard Swanson, Grad, Oates, and especially Erwin, tried by their questions to tone down the offenses committed by the Rowan-Bowerman faction.

Doyle denied that he had forcibly ejected the "rump" general executive board of the Rowan-Bowerman faction from the national headquarters at 1001 West Madison street. When asked by one of the Rowanites in the convention what was his definition of a "rump" G. E. B. Doyle replied "illegal." He declared "The membership was particularly sore because Rowan and his henchmen tied up the hall fund of $12,000 by their injunction, and hampered the defense work and publication of the I. W. W. newspapers."

Accuse Bowerman of Shielding Dicks.

Doyle repeated his charge that Bowerman wanted the G. E. B. to rescind its former action of expelling two Burns' stool pigeons from the organization. Doyle read a letter which charged B. Raddock with being a former member of the U. S. department of intelligence in the U. S. army. The letter declared that Raddock had tried to go to Russia but the Russian committee examining his credentials barred him from going because he refused to reveal what work he did as secret service man in the army. He also read a letter written by Raddock to Bowerman, enclosing a letter to Dr. Frederic Blossom.

"Every action of the Rowanites has had the character about it of injuring the I. W. W., and I have tried to protect the principles of the organization at all times," Doyle stated. He told how Joe Fisher had his head laid open with a piece of iron wielded by the injunctionites. Doyle revealed that he has raised $10,000 with which to finance the present convention.

Welinder Withholds News.

P. J. Welinder, the "press committee" of the I. W. W. convention now meeting here, seems to be making it his principle duty to keep news of the convention from getting out to the public. Welinder has refused to give the DAILY WORKER reporter the minutes of the I. W. W. convention on the grounds that we "have not treated the chairman right." The chairman is none other than Welinder.

Welinder's duties, as the press committee of the convention, were stated to be the preparing of a daily press dispatch which would be the official press notice of the convention, after they had approved it. In spite of the fact that by the time the press committee had laboriously written up his reports of the convention and had them approved by that body, the news was four days old, the DAILY WORKER has patiently given many columns of space to printing these minutes.

But after Welinder was elected to replace Ed Delaney on the press committee, the DAILY WORKER found it had no space for a particularly badly written and verbose report of Welinder's. Welinder immediately induced the convention to pass a motion to give the DAILY WORKER no more press reports on the grounds that "we were not printing them."

Reports Prepared, But Not Issued.

Welinder declined the nomination for an important committee on the grounds that "I am already on the press committee." Now Welinder is seriously going about the farce of preparing lengthy "press reports" every day of the proceedings of the convention, and persistently refusing to give them to the DAILY WORKER. Welinder's main job would appear to be surpressing the news of the convention. His reports, of which he is so proud, are not sought by the capitalist papers, and Welinder refuses the official news of the convention to other working class newspapers.

Play News Suppression Game.

The I. W. W. convention, in its rampage of 100 per cent democracy, has ordered that no news except that given out by the press committee is "official." Now they refuse to give out the "official news," and yet take the time of the convention to hear Welinder read to them his lengthy and entirely useless daily "news dispatches."

However, members of the I. W. W. as well as other workers, read the DAILY WORKER, and get the news even tho it has not been sheep-dipped, chemically analyzed, subjected to microscopic examination by the committee on punctuation, fumigated, painted and duly approved by referendum.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE DRIVE FOR COMMUNIST EDUCATION OF YOUTHFUL MINERS WINS PRAISE

By BARNEY MASS.
National Industrial Organizer, Y. W. L. of A.)

The greatest percentage of young people employed in the mine are trip riders, motormen and the like. A small percentage are actual coal diggers. The tracks in most mines are in bad condition.

The hills upon which the cars travel are very steep and if one were to see them outside of the mine, one would be exceedingly hesitant in taking the chance to travel on them.

Many times the motorman is unable to stop his train and is forced to signal the trip riders to jump in order to escape any injuries. Such occurances are quite common.

The motormen are forced to wear belts to protect their kidneys. Much discrimination is practiced against the young miners in many sections. In Martins Ferry, Ohio, the young workers employed on the tipple, receive less money than the adult workers. They are given what is called "boy's jobs." In accordance with the contract they are paid less. We must abolish once and for all such discriminatory arrangements.

By JOHN WILLIAMSON,
National Secretary Y. W. L. of A.

The mining industry of America offers a wonderful opportunity for the Young Workers League to accomplish good propaganda and organizational results. The thousands of young workers employed in the mining industry by the coal companies, regardless of state laws which are never enforced, offers a fertile field for the revolutionary propaganda of the American Communist Youth movement. Knowing this we enter this campaign, the first real industrial campaign conducted in a basic industry, with a knowledge that the demands and program of our movement are immediate and vital issues demanding the attention of every young miner in the country.

This campaign must receive the unstinted support of every member of the Young Workers League and Workers Party in every section of the country. Those units who are not located directly in the mining territory must rally to the support of the League in this campaign.

The Young Workers League of America must become the expression of the millions of young exploited industrial workers in America.

By C. E. Ruthenberg
Executive Secretary of Workers Party

The young workers employed in the mining industry are suffering to a large degree. They are not given the necessary support due them. We find in many sections of the country much discrimination is practiced against them. Due to their age and inexperience they are exploited in many ways.

As a result of the contemptible crooked officialdom of the United Mine Workers of America, we find the young miners are not taking the necessary interest in the union. This is the greatest danger to the union. We must keep the young fighting element and make of them fighters for the workingclass.

The campaign of the Young Workers League in the mining industry comes at an opportune moment. Only by organizing units of the league in every minning camp, will the young workers be able to fight for their demands. Work of this nature will contribute more in making the Young Communist movement in this country a mass organization.

Every party member is urged to extend the utmost cooperation and support to the Young Workers' League in this campaign. All information on the conditions of the young miners should be sent in to the national office of the Y. W. L. of A.

We hope the Young Workers' League will attain the maximum results from this campaign. Yours for a mass Young Communist League in America.

By EARL BROWDER
Editor of the Workers Monthly

News that the Young Workers' League is making a drive for organization of a nucleus in every mining town of the young workers in the mining industry, is another sign that our Y. W. L. is on the correct road. The Young Workers' League has proved by its activities that it is a real young workers' organization, and not a warmed-over, second-hand edition of the boy scouts, Y. M. C. A., or any other of the associations of cake-eaters, loung-lizards, and dance-hall shieks and shebas. Into the mines, mills and factories, to prepare the young workers for their future role as the rulers of society—that is the task of the Y. W. L. and the drive in the mining fields is a part of that great task. Every revolutionary worker will wish every success to the Y. W. L. and give all the assistance in his power.

WHAT WILL THEY BE
When They Grow Up?

What life work will your boy or girl take up? You are thinking about that. It is the thing that you are most anxious about. Yet, you do not want to push the children too strongly toward any particular calling just because it appeals to you. Why not let them explore the possibilities for themselves? Without their knowing it, they will give you a hint of the way their tastes and talents tend, and upon that you can build in the right direction.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE
SOLVES THE PROBLEM

Give your children The Book of Knowledge. It brings the wide world within their grasp. It teaches them to observe, to think for themselves. It draws them irresistibly to what interests them most. IT WILL HELP YOUR CHILDREN FIND THEMSELVES. And all the while they are learning, learning, learning—from the charmingly written descriptions, from the 10,000 interest-arousing pictures, from the witchery of fact cunningly woven into a moving story of all the world has learned in science, history, geography, literature, art and ideals.

CHILDREN LOVE IT

"The arrival of The Book of Knowledge was hailed with shrieks of delight and the children have made it almost their only reading matter since it came," writes Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart, the well-known novelist and playwright.

The best of it is that The Book of Knowledge educates the children without their knowing it, the process is so pleasant.

WHAT IT HAS DONE

Thousands of letters from delighted parents prove the value of The Book of Knowledge. These letters have come from people in all walks of life. All agree that to give the children The Book of Knowledge is one of the biggest things that can be done for them. In more than a million families, the children already have The Book of Knowledge.

You Will Be Glad You Inquired

What would The Book of Knowledge do for your boy or girl? Would you like to see for yourself? The method of teaching by pictures, with clear, simple explanations and delightful conversational talks, you will find in the wonderful pictures and stories taken from The Book of Knowledge that we invite you to have free. On the Anniversary of the Russian Revolution

By N. Lenin

(A speech delivered by Lenin in Moscow on the Fourth Anniversary of the November revolution.)

We are approaching the fourth anniversary of the November revolution.

The farther we go from this great day, the clearer do we grasp the significance of the proletarian revolution in Russia, and the deeper do we appreciate the experiences of the general struggle. These could be stated in very brief form as follows:

The immediate and direct task of the revolution in Russia, was of a bourgeois democratic nature—that is, to overthrow the remnants of the middle ages, to clear Russia of this barbarism, disgraceful and greatest obstacle to any kind of progressive development in our country.

We have all grounds to be proud of the fact that we in Russia have carried out the abolition of feudalism in a much more radical, determined and sweeping way than has been done by the great French revolution over one hundred and twenty-five years ago.

The anarchists and petty-bourgeois democrats (that is, the mensheviks and socialist-revolutionaries, as the Russian representatives of this international social type) have been saying and continue to say all kinds of things about the relations between a bourgeois democratic revolution and a socialist proletarian revolution. The past four years of the Russian revolution have proved the correctness of our understanding of Marxism with regard to this point. We have completed the bourgeois democratic revolution to its very end. At this moment we continue to move ahead, determinedly and energetically to the socialist revolution, realizing at the same time that there is no Chinese wall between the bourgeois democratic revolution and the socialist revolution, and that only in the process of actual struggle will it be determined, how far we shall succeed in moving ahead, what portion of our great task we shall succeed in accomplishing, and how much of it we shall be able to retain. We shall live and see. But even now, we already find, that we have accomplished gigantic changes —changes to the better for our ruined and backward country on the road on to the up-building of a socialist order of society.

Marxians should have no difficulty in understanding the significance of a bourgeois-democratic revolution. For further illustration, we should take a few concrete examples. To carry thru a bourgeois-democratic revolution means to clear the social relations of a country from institutions of the middle ages, from chattel slavery and feudalism. Now, what were the main characteristics of these remnants of feudalism in Russia in 1917? The answer is: The monarchy, the then existing system of land ownership, the social position of women, the official status of religion and the position of the oppressed nationalities. Take any of these manifestations of feudalism, which, by the way, can be found in a goodly measure in any of the bourgeios democratic countries which had their revolutions a hundred and twenty-five and more years ago, and you will find that our revolution had cleared these manifestations completely out of existence. In the course of about ten weeks, from November 7, 1917, to January 5, 1918, we have done in this respect a thousand times more than have the petty-bourgeois democrats and liberals during the eight months that they have been in power.

These cowards, empty phrase-mongers, these little stage-Hamlets, armed with paper swords, failed even to abolish the monarchy, while we, as soon as we got our chance, cleaned Russia of the monarchistic impurities as was never done before in any country in the world. We have left no stone unturned in the old structure of czaristic oppression. We have removed the very foundations of the old system of feudalism, chattel-slavery and land ownership.

Of course, one could discuss without end (and there are plenty of journalists cadets, mensheviks, and socialist-revolutionists who indulge in this sort of debate) as to what will be the final result of the agricultural changes produced by the November revolution. As to ourselves, we have neither the time nor the desire to indulge now in such discussion. However, there is one fact which cannot be denied, and that is, that the petty-bourgeois democrats have been in power for eight long months without abolishing a single institution of the old feudal order, while we have completely swept feudalism off the face of the Russian earth in the course of only a few weeks' time.

Or take, for example, the official status of religion, or the inferior position in society of the Russian women, or the oppression and persecution of the non-Russian nationalities. All these are problems of a bourgeois-democratic revolution. But what happened? Our petty-bourgeois democrats spent eight months in mouthing phrases, without producing a single fundamental change in the old social and political relations of Russia. Even in the most advanced bourgeois countries in the world, these bourgeois-democratic problems have not been completely solved as yet. And in Russia the November revolution—only the November revolution—succeeded in completing the tasks of the bourgeois-democratic revolution. Our struggles against religion are real struggles. Our November revolution has granted the non-Russian nationalities their own republics and autonomous provinces. We in Russia no longer tolerate the disgrace of oppressing women, which, tho it is a remnant of feudalism, still persists in somewhat modern form in every bourgeois country in the world.

All this properly belongs to a bourgeois democratic revolution. One hundred and fifty and two hundred years ago, the leaders of the bourgeois revolutions had promised to liberate humanity from the oppression of feudalism, to do away with the inequality of women, to destroy the privileges of the dominating church and to establish the equality of nationalities. These promises were never realized. The leaders of the bourgeois revolutions in Europe could not very well complete their own task because of their inherent respect for the "sacred institution of private property." Our proletarian revolution was hampered by no such respect for the institutions of feudalism and for the "sacredness of private property."

But here is what must be kept in mind. In order to insure and retain the victories of the Russian masses in the bourgeois-democratic revolution, we had to continue the revolution further than its bourgeois-democratic aims. This we did. While we were moving ahead towards our main objective which was the proletarian revolution, we kept on abolishing and destroying every remnant of feudalism and czarism. We were acting in accord with our old theories, that social reforms are only a by-product of the revolutionary class struggle. We have proved the correctness of our old saying—that bourgeois-democratic reforms come as a by-product of the proletarian socialist revolution. A very simple truth—is it not? And yet, none of the heroes of the "two-and-a-half" Marxism, such as Kautsky, Hilferding, Martov, Chernov, Hilquit, Longuet, MacDonald, Turrati, etc., could understand this kind of correlation between a bourgeois democratic-revolution and a proletarian socialist revolution. They failed to understand that the bourgeois-democratic revolution if it is to be completed, must naturally, pass over and become a proletarian socialist revolution. The latter in its development, solves the problems and reinforces the victories of the former. The measure in which a bourgeois-democratic revolution succeeds in developing into a proletarian revolution is determined only by actual struggle.

The Soviet system offers the best proof of this. This Soviet system embodies the maximum of democracy for the workers and peasants, while at the same time it is a complete departure from bourgeois democracy and marks the beginning of a new type of democracy—namely, proletarian democracy, or the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Let the dogs and swine of the dying bourgeoisie continue their work of damnation and ridicule of our failures and mistakes in the building of our Soviet system. We never forget, not even for a minute, that we have really committed many mistakes. Who could avoid making them, while carrying out the greatest revolution in history, and building a new type of government? There is one thing certain—that we will continually correct our mistakes always looking after the best and most efficient solution of our problem. But in spite of all our mistakes, we have every reason to be proud of our accomplishments, and particularly of the fact that it was we who started the greatest revolution in human history, which marks the epoch of the coming into power of a new class, whose struggles and victories will eventually relieve humanity of the disgraceful rule of capitalism and imperialism.

Since 1914, the question of imperialist war and of its main driving force, finance capital, which is imposing its rule of robbery, plunder, and oppression upon the weak and backward nations—this question has became the central point in the political life of the entire world. It is a question of life and death for tens of millions of people. It is a question of whether we shall again have to pass thru an imperialist war (which capitalism is preparing right now before the eyes of the whole world) which will again destroy tens of millions of human lives and in this question also, our November revolution opened up a new era in human history.

The servants of the bourgeoisie, such as the mensheviks, the socialist-revolutionaries and the "socialist" democracy of the whole world, have been ridiculing our slogan of transforming the imperialist war into a civil war. And what do we find? That this slogan has proved the only truth in the world of lies spread by the chauvinists and social patriots. These lies are being exposed now. Every day brings new revelations to the masses as to the meaning of capitalist peace and capitalist war. The masses are gradually coming to the realization of the truth of our old slogan—that there is no other way of abolishing the imperialist war except by bolshevist struggles and bolshevist revolutions.

Let the bourgeoisie and the pacifists and all pious Christians and knights of the Second and Second-and-a-Half Internationals keep on condemning the bolshevist revolution. It will not help them. No amount of condemnation and lies will be able to do away with the great historical fact that it was for the first time in hundreds and thousands of years that the oppressed slaves have risen in their anger and have declared that they are not going to fight the battles of their masters. It was for the first time in thousands of years that the vague and blind instincts of the masses found their expression in a clear-cut political program in an organized struggle of millions of oppressed under the leadership of the proletariat, which resulted in the first victory of the working class and the victory of the Russian revolution.

This first victory is not yet the final victory. The Russian masses have paid an immense price for what they have already achieved. We have committed mistakes which we are not afraid to admit. We shall continue to study our experiences soberly and impartially, in order to improve our program of struggle against world capitalism. We know that we have only made a beginning. The triumphant end is yet to come. And altho we cannot say precisely when and in what country the proletariat will make the next decisive step, there is one thing we do know — and that is, that the ice is broken, the way has been shown to the workers of the world, how to fight capitalism and establish the rule of the working class.

NOTE.

This speech by Lenin is part of the Workers Party branch program appearing on Page 2 of Magazine Section.

It has been decided that all Workers Party branches that have not taken part in mass demonstrations in celebration of the Seventh Anniversary of the Russian Revolution must turn their next regular branch meeting into such a celebration.

PROGRAM

For Your Branch Celebration of the Anniversary of the Seventh Victorious Year of the Russian Proletariat

THERE is one event which every party member and every party organization must celebrate. This event is the anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

The Communist International and the Workers Party by decision of the Central Executive Committee has called upon every party unit to commemorate this SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY of the VICTORY OF THE RUSSIAN PROLETARIAT.

In the seventy largest cities in the United States our party organizations will hold big mass demonstrations in celebration of the seven triumphant years of Soviet Russia.

But the Workers Party has branches in hundreds of cities. The decision made by the Central Executive Committee instructs every branch that has not made itself a vital part of these 70 mass demonstrations to turn its NEXT REGULAR MEETING INTO A CELEBRATION OF THE SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.

This means that in every city where we have single party branches, in every city where we have a City Central Committee that did not organize a celebration—in all these cities THE BRANCHES ARE TO CELEBRATE AT THEIR NEXT REGULAR BRANCH MEETING.

The program for your celebration will be found in this paper. Several verses of the INTERNATIONAL; the MANIFESTO of the Workers Party; the speech in support of the DAILY WORKER; the speech by LENIN made upon the fourth anniversary of the Russian Revolution; the speech entitled, "BOLSHEVIZE THE WORKERS PARTY—all these constitute your program. Your meeting program should be organized in the following order:

PROGRAM FOR YOUR BRANCH:

1. SINGING OF THE INTERNATIONAL
2. READING OF THE MANIFESTO OF THE WORKERS PARTY.
3. READING OF SPEECH ENTITLED: "INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925!"
4. COLLECTION: The proceeds of the meetings are to be remitted to the DAILY WORKER.
5. READING OF SPEECH MADE BY LENIN UPON THE FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.
6. READING OF SPEECH ENTITLED: "BOLSHEVIZE THE WORKERS PARTY!"
7. SHORT SPEECHES BY THE MEMBERS OF THE BRANCH.
8. SINGING OF INTERNATIONALE AND ADJOURNMENT.

• • • •

The International

Arise, ye prisoners of starvation!
Arise, ye wretched of the earth,
For justice thunders condemnation,
A better world's in birth.
No more tradition's chains shall bind us,
Arise, ye slaves; no more in thrall!
The earth shall rise on new foundations,
We have been naught, we shall be all.

REFRAIN

'Tis the final conflict,
Let each stand in his place,
The International Party
Shall be the human race.

We want no condescending saviors.
To rule us from a judgment hall;
We workers ask not for their favors;
Let us consult for all.
To make the thief disgorge his booty
To free the spirit from its cell,
We must ourselves decide our duty,
We must decide and do it well.

Toilers from shops and fields united,
The union we of all who work;
The earth belongs to us, the workers,
No room here for the shirk.
How many on our flesh have fastened!
But if the noisesome birds of prey
Shall vanish from the sky some morning,
The blessed sunlight will stay.

Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925

THE DAILY WORKER is the central organ of our party. Upon it, more than anything else, depends the growth and the strength of our party. If the circulation of THE DAILY WORKER is big, our Party will grow. If THE DAILY WORKER is strong, our party will gain strength.

That THE DAILY WORKER has been able for almost a year to continue its existence without financial help is a testament to the health of our party and to the activity of the membership. Never in the history of the world labor movement has any labor daily been able to exist without subsidy. If, in America, in the face of the enmity of the entire labor officialdom, in the face of the bitter hostility of the capitalist class, THE DAILY WORKER had been able out of its income from subscriptions to pay its own way, that would have been a miracle.

But miracles do not happen. THE DAILY WORKER has gone on for nine months without asking for money. It has not been an easy road that has been traveled. It has meant saving and planning, and ceaseless work. But the achievement has been great. From a weak and tiny paper, THE DAILY WORKER has grown into a strong and powerful organ of the revolution. But it has not grown fast enough, nor strong enough yet, to make its own way without the financial support of the militant workers, who alone make THE DAILY WORKER possible.

THE DAILY WORKER does not face annihilation if the funds are not forthcoming, but yet it can no longer go on its way strong and becoming stronger unless the money is available. Therefore, we campaign now to make THE DAILY WORKER safe for 1925; to make it possible that during the coming year THE DAILY WORKER may equal its record achievements of the past year and go on to further and greater victory.

Insure THE DAILY WORKER for 1925! In celebrating the anniversary of the Russian Revolution, we not only greet Soviet Russia on the completion of its 7th victorious year, but we also greet THE DAILY WORKER, emblem of victory for the Workers Party and the American revolutionary movement. Upon this anniversary of the Russian Revolution we pledge our utmost support for THE DAILY WORKER and will generously contribute to make our English daily safe for the coming year.

IT was a Bolshevik party which led the workers and peasants in the triumphant struggle to establish the dictatorship of the proletariat in Russia. When we celebrate this victory we should ask ourselves, "What are the qualities which make a workers' political party a Bolshevik Party?" We must ask ourselves this question and then get to work persistently and systematically to make of our party—the Workers Party—a Bolshevik party.

The basic quality of a Bolshevik party is a clear, fundamenetal grasp of Marxism and Leninism on the part of its members. A party built upon that foundation cannot go wrong in formulating policies and tactics to fight the class struggle. For this purpose, to create this Bolshevik understanding, we must create party schools, nationally, and study classes in every branch of the party and there teach Marxism and Leninism. Our party members must be encouraged to study the literature of Marxism and Leninism and thus to develop the theoreticians and leaders of our movement.

A Bolshevik party, however, is not only a party of Marxist and Leninist educational propaganda. It must be able to apply the Marxist and Leninist theory to the actual struggle of the workers. It must participate in the struggle using the Marxist-Leninist understanding as the guide to its maneuvers to draw the workers into the mass, class struggle against capitalism. The united front tactics as a means of agitation and mobilizzation of the masses, maneuvers in relation to other parties and groups, these are part of the tactics of a truly Bolshevik party. A sectarian propaganda organization is not a Bolshevik or Communist party. A Bolshevik party must be a fighting, maneuvering vanguard in the actual struggle of the workers.

A third requisite to make a party a truly Bolshevik organization is the correct organizational basis. This organizational basis is the shop nuclei—groups of workers organized in the factories—who keep the party in touch with the everyday lives of the workers and make it possible to mobilize them from the factories for the struggles against capitalism. Every factory must be a stronghold of the Workers Party.

With these qualities of the party as a whole must go the strictest discipline on the part of its members. In a Bolshevik party, the convention is the highest power. Between conventions, the Central Executive Committee is entrusted with all authority on all party questions. Once decisions of the highest party authorities are handed down, the party as a whole must carry them into effect. Discussion ceases when decisions are made and action is the order of the day. It is only thru such strict discipline that we can build a monolithic party able to act decisively and meet the great problems which it has to solve.

The Communist International, as well as the Workers Party, makes one of the qualifications for party membership active participation in the party work. We do not want a party merely of dues paying members. Such a party is not a Bolshevik party. Every member of a Bolshevik party must be an active worker for Communism. He must be a member of the trade unions and carry on work for Communism there. He must carry on active propaganda among the working masses. He must be ever on watch to recruit new members worthy of becoming part of the vanguard of the working class, must support every party campaign, must endeavor to increase the circulation of the DAILY WORKER, the Workers Monthly, the language press and thus increase their influence. He must lead a Communist life—that is, all the time he does not give to the actual work necessary to secure his livelihood should be devoted to the upbuilding of the party. Communists must even have their social life in the party environment.

These are the qualities of a Bolshevik party. We must try tirelessly to make the Workers Party such a Bolshevik party. We have achieved much in that direction but there is still a great deal to do. Today we celebrate the Seventh Anniversary of the Triumph of the Russian Workers. When we celebrate the Eighth Anniversary we must be able to say that we have made still greater strides toward making our party a Bolshevik party, which means that we will have made greater strides forward towards the day when the Bolshevik party will triumph in the United States.

"Without a Revolutionary Theory a Revolutionary Party is Impossible."

Principles of Communist Propaganda

Adopted by Fifth Congress of Comintern

III. The Tasks of Organization of the Various Sections on the Field of Propaganda.

9. Agitational and propaganda activity must be regarded as a special branch of work of every party, if possible, or at least, the most highly developed Communist mass parties. Within the central apparatus, a special body must be set up for party training (propaganda) and to guide agitational and propaganda activity. This body must guide Marxian-Leninist propaganda, must work out the system and method of conducting this propaganda, and furnish propaganda literature for educational work in Marxism-Leninism.

10. One of the pre-requisites for organized propaganda activity and systematic development of party training, is to register all propagandist schools in Marxism, to specialize and secure a continuation of their education, and to support them in the educational work of the party. New cadres for propaganda must be formed and the old ones must be revised in the spirit of Leninism: In view of the scarcity of propaganda specialists, they must be used not only for teaching directly, but also for instructing lecturers who do not concern themselves specially with propaganda activity. Moreover, they must be organized into permanent commissions, or into commissions that meet periodically under the auspices of the departments for agitation and propaganda, the task of which will be to render assistance to the party members in their Marxian-Leninist education by word and deed, and to organize the work of education.

11. It is the duty of every party to awaken interest this autumn in the theoretical, political, tactical and organizational questions of Marxism-Leninism by an as extensive campaign as possible. This campaign is to be carried on in connection with the death of Lenin, with the new program of the Communist International, and with the actual political and internal questions of the Communist International and the parties. This campaign must also serve as the starting point for the systematic training of the parties.

12. It will be necessary to raise the question of imposing on all elected officials the duty of study. A special body must be formed within the training apparatus, which will offer the party officials an opportunity to extend and intensify their theoretical knowledge. Wherever possible, education days must be introduced for the party officials after the pattern of weekly party conferences. Every party member must be required to become acquainted with a certain minimum of political and theoretical knowledge at least to such a degree that the masses of the party members will be able to answer the questions of the non-Communist workers on the program, the aims, and the tactical principles of the Communist Party, and to combat the most flagrant petty bourgeois and social democratic prejudices of the working class.

13. The party press must be utilized for awakening interest in the work of party training, in self-education, and in the problems of Marxism-Leninism. The Communist periodicals must intensify the theoretical discussion of the actual political and tactical questions without impairing the clearness of the discussion in general.

The daily press of the party must not refrain from discussing theoretical questions, but only in connection with the political everyday questions and the economic everyday struggles of the proletariat. The daily press must give carefully assembled bibliographical guidance. Every political question and every political event, every important anniversary must be utilized for popularizing Marxian-Leninist literature by linking them up with the minimum knowledge which every Communist worker must possess in those questions. The daily press must also support the efforts of self-education of the party members with advice and in agreement with the departments for agitation and propaganda of the party. The bibliographical sections of the daily press, which must be enlarged for this task, must announce as completely and attractively as possible the appearance of Communist literature and Communist periodicals. The bibliographical sections of the periodicals must not confine itself merely to announcing and criticizing the contents of the literature, but must discuss the ways and means of utilizing the literature in propaganda work. The Communist bibliography must be developed into one of the most important means for awakening a desire for Marxian education among the party and non-party masses.

14. A thoro discussion of the library question is also absolutely necessary. Marxian-Leninist libraries must be established in the party organization. Those who have charge of the libraries must be put at the service of the workers who are trying to educate themselves, and must be instructed for this work. The party must pay attention also to the public libraries (trade union and community libraries) and gain influence in these libraries wherever possible so that they can be put at the service of Marxian-Leninist propaganda.

IV. The Methods of Marxist-Leninist Propaganda Institutions.

15. The methods of propaganda must be adapted to the conditions and stage of development of the various sections. The following suggestions, may serve as a common principle for all countries and parties:

a) Party education must be so organized as to absorb, in some form or other, all the members of the party. The parties must see to it that each one of their members obtains at least a thoro knowledge of elementary Marxist-Leninist propaganda. But even the higher party officials must continually refresh their political education to add to their knowledge and intensify their organizational and agitational activities.

b) Every department of the Communist educational institutions and propaganda organs must be directed towards practical and definite aims, and must be composed of students of a similar level of education. When forming classes, drawing up programs, and selecting methods, the guiding principle for all propaganda institutions must be to train the students for a definite form of party work and for the solution of definite and practical questions.

c) Each department of the educational propaganda institutions must represent an independent whole, having definite tasks to fulfill. It must not be regarded merely as a stepping stone to higher education.

16. In order to benefit as many party members as possible (in spite of the paucity of intellectual and material means), the two forms of education should be adopted in the Marxist-Leninist propaganda institutions, viz, party schools and self-education.

17. In connection with the former, the two poles of the party school system should be:

a) Central party schools.

b) A network of elementary evening classes or Sunday schools.

18. The central party schools must bring together for shorter or longer periods (according to the financial resources of the party) advanced party workers (and eventually members of parties of the same language groups) well versed in the principles of Marxism and Leninism. The aim of these central schools must be—to systematize, extend and render more profound the student's knowledge of Marxism and Leninism, and thus train fully qualified party workers and new and strong bodies of propagandists for the development of our propagandist activities.

19. The principle aim of the elementary evening classes (Sunday schools) must be to impart elementary political knowledge to our party members by teaching the first principles of Marxist-Leninist theory and method. The curriculum of these classes must be based on the program of the Communist International. These classes must aim at making party members fit to take up active party work and to carry on individual propaganda among the masses inside and especially outside the party.

20. Between these two poles of the party school system various other forms of party education may be organized and adapted to the conditions prevailing in the respective countries and parties. These forms of education can range from Sunday schools and short local study courses to district party schools, able to cater to more advanced students and calculated to turn out local organizers and officials. Special efforts should be made to institute continual courses for propagandists in order to add to their knowledge and to keep them in practice.

21. Communist Parties must not neglect to make their influence felt in labor colleges, factory council school, trade union educational institutions, etc. They must endeavor to get these institutions under their control with the object of using them as Communist education centers.

22. Neither the funds nor the intellectual material of the parties are sufficient to carry out the ambitious scheme of establishing a network of Marxist-Leninist schools wide enough to cover the overwhelming majority of our membership in the near future. For this reason, and also because the school system alone cannot give to students a thoro and complete knowledge of Marxism-Leninism we must rouse the interest of our members in self-education which must be organized on a large scale. In this connection special attention should be paid to the group system of self education (workers' study circles). Every party must endeavor to set up a network of Marxist-Leninist study circles. The central agitation propaganda committee of the party must appoint a committee organized of comrades well trained in propaganda work and having pedagogical abilities. This committee must promote self education in Marxism and Leninism by giving advice to individual members and self-education groups by correspondence and thru our various organs of the press.

23. Organization of propaganda must not be limited to the higher party organs, but must be also extended to the larger factory nuclei of the party as well as to the smaller territorial party organizations. In all these organizations propaganda organizers must be selected whose business it must be to develop propaganda activities and to arouse the interests of the workers for party education, in accordance with the instructions of the propaganda organs of the party.

24. The executive of the Communist International must see to it that in the course of the next twelve months a model school and several model evening classes (Sunday schools) be established at least in the most important parties for the dissemination of Marxism and Leninism. If desired by the central committee of any party, the executive must establish direct connection with these model institutions in order to give them ideological and material support by providing them with books, appliances, etc. The central committees of the parties must also maintain direct contact with the propaganda institutions and Marxist-Leninist study circles in the most important working class districts in their respective countries. The Communist International must also be the medium for establishing connection between the Communist universities, party schools, Marxist-Leninist study circles of the Russian Communist Party, and the corresponding institutions abroad.

25. Party organs must take an active part in the establishment of similar educational institutions for the youth, in providing them with propagandists and by drawing the youth into the educational institutions of the party.

26. Communist Parties must also concern themselves with the higher education of Communist students and other intellectuals. Students' organizations must not be allowed to remain in a state of splendid isolation. The existing Communist student groups or fractions, which hitherto have been select self-education circles without any particular system, must be transformed, under the direct guidance of experienced party workers well versed in Marxism and Leninism and familiar with the labor movement, into educational bodies capable of turning out fully qualified propagandists. Moreover, members of these student groups must be induced to take part in the propagation of Marxist-Leninist ideas among the workers.

27. All Communist Parties must place the question of the development of Marxist-Leninist propaganda and of the party institutions engaged in it on the agenda of their next party convention.

Answering Call of the Russian Revolution

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN

IT was late in reaching our shores, but when the call of the Russian Revolution finally came into our midst it found the soil ready for a new beginning in the history of the American labor movement. That beginning was made and it found its immediate expression in the revolutionary left wing inside and outside of the socialist party of America. A little while later, after an intensive process of internal clarification and cementation, this left wing definitely crystallized into the Communist movement of America. Thus did the militant workers of the United States answer the clarion call of the Russian Revolution.

From Opportunist Socialism to the Revolutionary Class Struggle.

We have been moving for quite a while from opportunism to revolutionism, from class-collaboration and reformism to class struggle and Communism. As far back as 1911 and 1912 there was already in existence in the American labor movement a widespread feeling of discontent with the opportunist and reactionary policies of Gompers, Berger, Hillquit, etc. Even in those pre-war days, when the Russian Revolution was yet to come, when the world looked so deceivingly peaceful, and capitalism quite secure, even then there was already in the making the elements of militancy from which we were to form later on the Communist Party of America. These working class elements in the trade unions and in the socialist party were painfully struggling for a clear revolutionary ideology and a consistent revolutionary leadership. Bolshevism and Communism were as yet very little known in the United States. Still the process of differentiation and crystallization was slowly going on thereby preparing the ground for the stormy and creative days of 1918-1919 when the Communist movement of America had finally come into existence.

Two Tendencies in the Left Wing.

Prior to the November revolution in Russia the left wing could hardly be spoken of as something definite and homogeneous. The lefts, the militants, and the rebels were united only on what they opposed, namely, opportunism, reformism and class-collaboration. They were united on the things that they didn't want but there was not a single common conception among them of the things that they wanted to be done.

There were really two basic tendencies in the left wing of the American labor movement in the days before the Russian Revolution. One was the anti-political and syndicalist tendency which tho it served as the basis of the I. W. W. was in fact much wider than the I. W. W. in scope and in volume. The second tendency was the left wing socialist tendency which operated mainly within the confines of the socialist party of America.

The tendency which produced the I. W. W. was a healthy proletarian revolt against the deadening and stultifying influences of Gomperism on the one hand and against the futile, petty-bourgeois parliamentarism of Berger and Hillquit on the other hand. It was quite natural, in view of the conditions that prevailed in America in those years, that the rank and file revolt which crystallized in the I. W. W. should assume the objectionable features of anti-politics and syndicalism generally. It was also natural and unavoidable that the "working class" politics practiced by Berger and Hillquit should produce among real proletarian militants a feeling of revulsion against all kinds of political action. And only later, when the thundering voice of the Russian Revolution began to reverberate thru the immense spaces of our own continent, these anti-political proletarians got their first inkling of what real proletarian politics mean. It then became clear to many of these rebels that there is a sort of working class political action which is the very essence of class struggle and without which no effective struggle against capitalism is possible, the sort of political action that has been practiced by the Bolsheviks in Russia.

Revolutionary working class political action, led by a revolutionary working class political party, these were the two fundamental conceptions that were brot home to large numbers of anti-political labor militants by the November revolution of the Russian masses. Since the memorable days of 1917-1918 these two ideas have been making their way into the minds of ever larger numbers of workers in the United States. And it was these two conceptions that have mainly contributed towards clarifying the anti-political tendency in the left wing and finally crystallizing a good portion of it into an organic part of what later became the Workers Party of America.

A similar process of differentiation and clarification was taking place in the ranks of the political tendency of the left wing. This latter group, which had been growing mainly within the socialist party, had been moving for a number of years in the right direction, namely, away from parliamentary opportunism and toward a revolutionary conception of the class struggle, but it lacked clarity, consistency and determination. Besides it manifested the same indifference toward the economic struggles and mass organizations of the workers as did the right wing of Hillquit and Berger. This left wing in the socialist party was hardly aware of the truth, which later became part and parcel of Communist tactics in the United States, that it is the duty of Communists (revolutionary socialists) to engage and lead the everyday struggles of the workers and to win their economic mass organizations for the social revolution.

Only later, when the great tidal wave of the Russian Revolution reached our shores, has the political tendency in the left wing come to appreciate the vital importance for the social revolution of a revolutionary proletarian mass party, rooted in and supported by the economic mass organizations of labor.

Both Tendencies Merged Into One Party

Then came the merger of the two tendencies into a Communist Party. This merger would have been forced upon us by the logic of the class struggle in the United States, but instead of three years it might have taken three decades. The Russian Revolution accelerated the process.

It is true that both tendencies were substantially the same. They were moved by the same basic forces in the American class struggle. But they had different origins, and different experiences, which made all the difference in the world between a rebel in a trade union and a left wing socialist. The former was concerned exclusively with the building up of militant revolutionary unions, while the latter had nothing else in mind but the revolutionizing of the political parliamentary tactics of the socialist party. Both these tendencies had been developing for years along side of each other without ever realizing that there is a common basis for the two upon which to unite into one harmonious whole.

The Russian Revolution, which, in the words of John Reed, shook the world to its foundations, has also shaken the left wing of the American labor movement, purifying its ideology, strengthening its will, and cementing its various elements into one homogeneous body of revolutionary workers. Under the stress of the Russian upheaval, the shapeless discontent of the labor militants in America has taken on definite revolutionary form. Anti-political rebels became convinced adherents of class political action and of a revolutionary political party of the working masses. Socialist left-wingers came to realize more fully the basic and organic connection between the economic struggles of the unions and the political struggles of a working class party. As a result of these changes in the ideology of both tendencies in the left wing, changes which were produced mainly by the powerful hammering of the Russian Revolution, these tendencies moved closer to each other until they met on the common basis of international Communism. It was the merger of these two tendencies that produced the Communist movement in the United States and later on the Workers Party of America.

THE FIRST DAYS OF THE REVOLUTION

Attacking the Police

Soviet Russia and Oppressed Nationalities

By HARRISON GEORGE

Out of the peculiarly complex struggles going on all over the world three major conflicts stand out, according to G. Chicherin, commissar for foreign affairs in the Soviet Union. These are—first, the world-wide struggle between capital and labor; second, the antagonisms between the great powers, and, third, the increasing struggle between the mother "robber" countries and their colonies.

These are often intertwined. It may be said that the greatest conflicts between capitalist powers arise, during this period of historical decline of capitalism, over the struggle for colonies. The great powers seek not only to snatch from each other the prize of colonial plunder, but to crush and subjugate each other. Germany, we see, has become a colony of, first, the entente, which, in turn, has been subjugated to the suave but arrogant imperialism of America (hru the Dawes' plan. Germany definitely enters the list of oppressed nationalities.

But, laying aside the enslavement of Germany and its political consequences, we see that the position of the colonial oppressed peoples are of tremendous importance, particularly as a strategic position in the class struggle of the proletariat against the forces of imperialist capitalism.

The Great Slave Empires.

The nine colony-holding countries, England, France, the United States, Spain, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Portugal and Holland, hold in colonial lands five times their own area, and, with their own total population of 320,657,000, hold as colonial slaves no less than 560,200,000 people. Britain has a colonial population eight and a half times her home population, while France exploits a colonial population of 16,600,000 more than the population of France itself.

The Balkans and the Near East are imperialist satrapies. The continent of Asia (leaving out Soviet territory) has been a bound and blind victim of the vultures of the Occident. Africa from end to end, from "Cape to Cairo" is a vast slave pen. With whiskey and opium, the bible and the repeating rifle, the black and brown and yellow millions carry the burden of imperialist exploitation, of industry seeking raw material and cheap labor, of traders seeking markets, of diplomats looking for oil and man power, of bankers seeking export of capital, of all of these seeking super-profits from subject nationalities in excess of the profit rate in domestic production.

The program of the Communists is comparatively simple. The solution of exploitation, of misery and oppression can be shortly stated, even if the accomplishment is long in reaching. It is, in one word—"revolution." But before elaborating upon it, a view, or a review, is necessary of the methods of imperialist capitalism in the oppression of what are called "backward peoples."

The favorite weapon of imperialism is plain brute force. It does, of course, moralize in the home country and before the world. It is always "advancing civilization, developing the country," building good roads (a favorite pursuit of General Wood), stopping the slave traffic, (in the name of wage slavery), forwarding Christianity (and the opium trade) and liberating oppressed races (from other "liberators")."

The Missionaries of Imperialism.

The American imperialists have their peculiar method. Kalinin, president of the Soviet Union, speaking last year in Eastern Siberia, upon the expulsion by the red army from that region of all invading armies, including the American, mentioned the saintly imperialism of American interventionists. "Not without reason," he said, "did American capitalism appear as in the highest degree religious, bringing into the occupied territory the bible, with America's own preachers, including Baptists and Methodists."

"What led Americans to do all this? The only reason is the following: Thru these preachers America established her first advance posts, thru which she will in the future exert influence and develop her commercial business. America takes this line not only with us, but in China. American capital in China has developed a whole series of institutions making easier the obtaining of profit by American capital, chambers of commerce, missionaries' organizations and so on. To outside appearances these serve the Chinese populace, but at bottom they follow economic interests."

Marx Versus the Gospel.

The chief counter-action against this sanctified imperialism, has been

The Growth of International Popularity of the Soviet Union

By I. STALIN
Secretary of Russian Communst Party

ONE of the surest signs of the instability of the "pacifist democratic regime," one of the most undeniable symptoms of the fact that this regime represents the froth on the surface of the deepest revolutionary processes taking place within the working class, is the decisive victory of the revolutionary wing in the Communist parties of Germany, France and Russia, the growth of the left wing activity in the British labor movement, and finally, the growth of the popularity of the Soviet Union among the toiling masses of the West and of the East.

The Communist parties of the West developed under peculiar conditions. First they are not homogenous in their makeup, for they comprise former social democrats who had gone thru the old school, and of new members who have not sufficiently been hardened in the revolutionary fire. Second, their ranks are not purely Bolshevist, as the leading positions are held by former members of other parties, who have not yet completely broken with the social democratic traditions. Third, they are confronted with such an experienced enemy as the social democrats, who have gone thru fire and water, who still represent a tremendous political force among labor. And finally, they are confronted also with such a powerful enemy as the European bourgeoisie, with its tried state machinery and its omnipotent press. To think that such Communist parties can overthrow in a day the European capitalist system is to be thoroly mistaken. Therefore our immediate task is to make the Communist parties of the West truly Bolshevist bodies, to weld them into genuine revolutionary battalions, capable of rebuilding the entire party in the spirit of the revolutionary education of the masses, in the spirit of revolutionary preparation.

This was the situation within the Communist Parties of the West only a short while ago. But during the last half year things have been changing definitely for the better. The last half year is remarkable in the respect that it has produced a radical change in the Communist parties of the West in the sense of their breaking completely with the social democratic traditions, in the sense of the Bolshevization of the party ranks, in the sense of the isolation of the opportunist elements. What a great danger to the revolution the social democratic traditions in the Communist parties may represent has been clearly demonstrated by the sad experience of the labor government of Saxony, when the opportunist leaders attempted to change the meaning of the united front idea from revolutionary mobilization and organization of the masses into social democratic parliamentary combinations. This was the turning point which opened the eyes of the Party masses and aroused them against the opportunist leaders. The second question which undermined the authority of the right wing leaders and brot on the scene new revolutionary leaders was the so-called "Russian" question, i.e. the discussion in the Russian Communist Party. As is known, the Brandler group in Germany and the Souvarine group in France, rebelutely supported the opportunist opposition in the Russian Communist Party against the basic ranks of the R. C. P., against its revolutionary majority. This was a challenge to the revolutionary working masses of the West, who were clearly sympathetic to the Soviet power and to its leader, the Russian Communist Party. This was a challenge to the party masses and to the revolutionary wing of the Western Communist Parties. It is no wonder that this challenge ended in complete defeat of the Brandler and Souvarine groups. It is no wonder that this movement found a response in all the other Communist Parties of the West. If we add to this the complete isolation of the opportunist tendency in the Russian Communist Party, then the picture becomes complete. The Fifth Congress of the Comintern only consolidated the victory of the revolutionary wing in the main section of the Comintern.

No doubt the mistakes of the opportunist leaders have played a very important role in the acceleration of the Bolshevization of the Western Communist parties. But it is just as doubtless that other deeper reasons also operated here: the successful capitalist offensive of the last few years, the lowering of the workers' standard of living, the presence of a huge army of unemployed, the general economic instability of capitalism, the growth of revolutionary unrest among the great working masses. The workers are moving towards the revolution and they want revolutionary leaders.

Conclusion. The process of the final formation of genuinely Bolshevist parties in the West, to serve as a basis for the coming Revolution in Europe has begun. This is the summary of the developments during the last half year.

Even more difficult and peculiar are the conditions of the development of the western trade unions. Firstly, they are narrow in their "tried" craft practices and are hostile to socialism, for having arisen before the socialist parties and developed without their aid, they have become used to flaunting their "independence" to put their craft interests above class interests, and to recognize nothing but penny-raises. Secondly, they are conservative in spirit and hostile to all revolutionary beginnings, for they are headed by an old, mercenary, bourgeois-fed trade union bureaucracy, always ready to put the trade unions at the service of imperialism. And finally, they, the trade unions, being united around the Amsterday reformists, represent the very same million strong army of reformism upon which the present capitalist system leans. Of course besides the reactionary Amsterdam unions, there are also revolutionary unions affiliated to the R. I. L. U. But firstly a considerable part of the revolutionary unions, anxious to avoid splits in the labor movement, remains within the Amsterdam Federation and submits to its discipline; secondly, in the most imprtant European countries (England, Germany, France), the Amsterdamers still represent a majority of the workers. It should not be forgotten that Amsterdam has no less than 14 million organized workers. To think that the proletarian dictatorship could be established in Europe against the will of these millions of workers is to be sadly mistaken, to move away from the ground of Leninism, to doom oneself to inevitable defeat. Therefore what we must do now is to win these millions over to the revolution and Communism, to free them from the influence of the reactionary trade union bureaucracy, or to get them at least to assume a position of benevolent neutrality towards Communism.

This was the situation until very lately. However, the last years have seen a gradual change for the better. The home of isolated reactionary trade unionism is England, which had once been the industrial Colossus of the world. The collapse of British monopoly was connected with the development of financial capitalism, which has been marked by a struggle of the biggest countries for colonial monopoly. The imperialist phase of capitalism has brot with it an extension of the territory for the narrow reactionary unions but also a contraction of their material base for the imperialist super-profits are the bone of contention of a number of countries while the colonies become less and less inclined to remain in the position of colonies. It should also be remembered that the war has greatly undermined European industry. As is known the present total of European production does not exceed 70 per cent of the pre-war level. Hence the limitation of production and the successful capitalist offensive against the working class. Hence the reduction of wages, the actual abolition of the eight-hour day, and numerous unsuccessful defensive strikes, which again demonstrated the treachery of the labor bureaucracy to the working class. Hence the colossal unemployment and the growth of discontent of the workers with the reactionary trade unions. Hence the idea of the united front in the economic struggle of the working class and the project for the unification of the two labor internationals into a single international, capable of resisting capital. The reformist speeches at the Vienna congress of the Amsterdam International (June, 1924) about negotiations with the Russian unions and the appeal for unity of the British Trade Union Congress (September, 1924) are only a reflection of the growing pressure of the masses upon the reactionary trade union bureaucracy. The most remarkable thing about it was the fact that it is precisely the British unions which have been the nest of conservatism, and the basic nucleus of Amsterdam, that have taken the initiative for the unification of the reactionary and revolutionary unions. The appearance of left elements in the British labor movement is the best proof of the fact that there, at Amsterdam, "something is rotten."

Some think that the unity campaign is wanted precisely now, because a left wing has developed in Amsterdam, and it must be supported by all means and efforts. This is untrue, or to be more precise, it is only partly true. The Communist parties of the West are becoming mass organizations. They are becoming truly Bolshevist parties. They are growing and moving to power apace with the growth of the discontent of the great working masses; hence we are moving towards the proletarian revolution. But it is impossible to overthrow the bourgeoisie without first depriving it of its buttress in the face of reactionary Amsterdam; it is impossible to establish the dictatorship without winning over this capitalist stronghold. However, this cannot be done by one-sided work from without. This object can be achieved at present only by combinined activities within and without, along the line of establishing unity in the trade union movement. That is why the question of unity and of affiliation to the industrial internationals has become a vital issue. Of course the lefts should be supported and pushed on. But, real support of the lefts will be obtained only if the banners of the revolutionary unions continue to fly, of the reactionary Amsterdam leaders continue to be scorned and denounced for their treachery and splitting activities, if the left leaders are criticized for their half heartedness and indecisiveness in the struggle against the reactionaries. Only by such a policy can real trade union unity be brot about. Otherwise we may get a picture similar to that in Germany last October, when Levi's left group was successfully used by the reactionary right wing of the social democrats to envelop the German revolutionists.

Finally, as regards the growth of the popularity of the Soviet Union among the masses of the capitalist countries. Perhaps the best indicator of the instability of the "pacifist democratic regime" is the undeniable fact that the influence and prestige of the Soviet Union among the toiling masses of the West and East, far from weakening, continues to grow from year to year and from month to month. It is not the "recognitions" given to the Soviet Union by the different bourgeois states that we refer to. Of course these "recognitions" represent nothing special in themselves, for they are dictated firstly by the competition of the capitalist states, anxious to find a place on the Soviet market and secondly by the program of pacifism which demands the establishment of "normal relations" with the Soviet Republics the signing at least of some agreement with the Soviet Union. The point is that the present "democrats" and "pacifists" defeated their bourgeois competitors in the parliamentary elections, thanks to the Soviet recognition plank, that the MacDonalds and Herriots came to power and can remain in power, thanks to their lip service and "friendship" to Russia, that the prestige of these democrats and pacifists is a reflection of the prestige of the Soviet power among the great masses. It is characteristic that even such a well known "democrat" as Mussolini considers it necessary to display at times, before the workers, his "friendship" for the Soviets. It is no less characteristic that such well known grabbers of other people's property as the present rulers of Japan cannot get along without "friendship" for the Soviet Union. We do not speak of the immense popularity of the Soviet power among the masses of Turkey, Persia, China and India.

How are we to explain this unusual prestige and this unusual popularity among the masses of other states of such a dictatorial and revolutionary power as is the Soviet power?

Firstly, by the hatred of the working class for capitalism and by its anxiety to free itself from it. The workers of the capitalist countries sympathize with the Soviet power primarily because it is a power that has overthrown capitalism. The president of the British railway men, the not unknown Bromley, recently said at the Trade Union Congress: "The capitalists know that the eyes of the workers of the entire world are turned upon Russia, and that if the Russian revolution wins, then the conscious workers of the other countries will ask themselves 'why cannot we too also destroy capitalism?'" Bromley, of course is not a Bolshevik. But what he said was an expression of the thots and longings of the European workers. For, why indeed, not overthrow European capitalism if the Russians have now been getting along for seven years without capitalists? Herein lies the source of the vast popularity of the Soviet power among the broad working masses. Therefore the growth of the international popularity of the Soviet Union signifies the growth of the hatred for capitalism on the part of the workers of all countries.

Secondly, by the hatred of the masses for war and by their anxiety to thwart the military schemes of the bourgeoisie. The masses know that the Soviet power was the first to open an attack against imperialist war, and by opening the attack has undermined war. The masses see in the Soviet Union the only country struggling against the recurrence of wars. They sympathize with the Soviet power because it is the standard bearer of peace among nations and a true bulwark against war. Therefore the growth of the international popularity of the Soviet power testifies to the growth of the hatred of the masses of the entire world for imperialist war and its sponsors.

Thirdly, by the hatred of the oppressed masses of the dependent countries and colonies for the yoke of imperialism, by their anxiety to break that yoke the Soviet power is the only power which has broken the chains of "native" imperialism. The Soviet Union is the only country building its life upon the principles of equality and cooperation of the nations. The Soviet government is the only government in the world championing the complete unity and independence, freedom and sovereignty of

GOMPERS AND RUSSIA -:-

By Earl R. Browder
Editor, "Workers' Monthly."

Enemies of Soviet Russia always delight in pointing out that it is Samuel Gompers, titular head of the American labor movement, who fights against Russia most bitterly. Not even those bourgeois Russians who lost their means of exploiting Russian labor because of the revolution, are able to spit more venomously at the Workers' Republic than Gompers. What is the explanation of this fact, that Gompers, "labor leader," hates the Soviets at least equally as much as does Judge Gary or the Grand Duke Michael?

Can it be that Soviet Russia menaces any interest of the working class? Is that why Gompers hates Russia?

No, that is not the reason. To prove that Soviet Russia is a tower of strength for the labor movement in every country, it is not necessary to believe what the Communists say. Bitter anti-Communists, "labor leaders" of the reformist stripe thruout the world, have acknowledged and publicly stated, that Russia is the one strong bulwark against capitalist reaction and the destruction of the labor movement.

The first desire of all enemies of the struggling proletariat is, to overthrow the present form of government in Russia, i. e., the rule of the Workers and Peasants . . . The overthrow of the Workers' and Peasants' Republic would be the severest blow which the international working class could sustain. For no matter what the differences dividing the working class internationally, theoretically and organizationally, one thing is certain: Soviet Russia is the last stronghold against the growing international reaction which threatens to submerge the working class.

The above is not a Communist proclamation. It is a document signed in Berlin, in May, 1923, by Edo Fimmen, then secretary of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions (bitterly anti-Communist), and also secretary of the Transport Workers' Federation of the Amsterdam International. It was also signed by Robert Williams, chairman of the Transport Workers' Federation, and leader of the British Transport Workers' Union.

The entire British labor movement is unanimously (and enthusiastically) in favor of recognition of and a treaty with Soviet Russia by Great Britain. The British labor movement is ready (no matter how reluctant its leaders) to fight out a general election on this issue. This should be convincing proof that the British working class feels sympathy and even love for the Russian working class and its government.

When Churchill, in 1920, threatened war against Russia, the British working class organized a tremendous "Hands off Russia" movement, set up councils of action, and threatened a revolution if the war movement was not stopped. That was a convincing demonstration that the Russian Soviet government is known to the British working class as its friend.

But it is not necessary to go to Great Britain to find that the workers feel confidence in Russia, and repudiate entirely the Gompers' hatred of the Workers' Republic. Thousands of local unions and city central bodies in the American Federation of Labor have demanded the recognition of Soviet Russia, in spite of all Gompers' snarls and lies. Such a conservative organization as the American Federation of Teachers has repeatedly adopted such resolutions. The conservative International Association of Machinists, both at its convention in Rochester four years ago and again in Detroit this year, unanimously demanded the recognition of Russia.

Why then does Gompers fight so bitterly against Russia? Why does he repeat every white guard lie against the Soviets and even improve upon them? Why is Gompers a more vocal enemy of Soviet Russia than even Secretary of State Hughes?

Gompers is Enemy of Workers.

The answer to this question is that Gompers has interests, separate from and opposed to the interests of the working class, which are threatened by the rise of revolutionary sentiment among the workers. Soviet Russia is the great center of revolutionary thot and feeling in the world's working class. Therefore Gompers hates and fights against Soviet Russia.

What are these special interests that Gompers represents? They are manifold, but all come under the general heading of "Gompers' policy of co-operation with the ruling class." Gompers' settled policy, in all fields, is to support the capitalist system and American imperialism in its merciless exploitation of the masses of unorganized workers at home and the masses of the population in the colonial and semi-colonial lands abroad, in return for a few crumbs of concessions to small sections of the organized workers and in return for social and political recognition for himself.

What Gompers' policy means, for the workers in the United States, is weakness, demoralization, and a helpless submission to the capitalist class. His opposition to amalgamation, to class political action, the militant policies of every kind, bring about such a condition that The Magazine of Wall Street could say, (August 30, 1924).

"It is evident that this country (read Wall Street) has in no way to fear from such institutions as the American Federation of Labor. On the whole, American business can congratulate itself on the inherent good sense of the average American laboring man."

Domestic policy is but one side of Gompersism. Of perhaps even greater importance in the long run is the support that Gompers gives to American imperialism. And here we can readily understand why Gompers hates Russia.

Soviet Russia has established itself in the hearts of all oppressed peoples as their friend and champion. The example of Russia granting self-determination to all national minorities within the old czarist empire is but one example. The contrast that this policy of the revolutionary workers of Russia makes as against Gompers policy of echoing the words of Secretary of State Hughes, agent of Wall Street, must make Gompers grind his teeth in rage.

Gompers' role as a servile tool of American imperialism is nowhere more strikingly illustrated than in the functioning of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, a creation of the partnership of Gompers and Morones, chief labor faker of Mexico. This so-called Pan-American Federation is made up of delegates from countries controlled by the agents of the United States department of state, thru intrigue, money, or the rifles of U. S. marines. Its policy is to sabotage, beat down labor and nationalist resistance to the orders of Hughes, or whoever happens to be the mouthpiece of Wall Street at Washington. Its only activities are in the direction of enforcing Wall Street orders upon South and Central America.

A recent example of this servility is given in the "mission" that Gompers sent to Nicaragua in July of this year. The official report, published in the American Federationist for October, discloses that the whole "mission" had but one object—to force the adoption of an election law "drafted," says the report quite frankly, "by a representative sent down there by the United States department of state." "The U. S. state department is in accord with the legislation proposed and Charge de Affaires, Mr. Thurston, so advised the Nicaraguan government when the bill was under consideration. Notwithstanding the congress refused to enact the bill." That was the reason the mission was sent—to try to force the Nicaraguan congress to pass the bill sent down for them by Mr. Hughes. The report threatens "violent resentment" because this was not done. The whole affair is palpably another glaring instance of Gompers filling his classic role of agent of American imperialism.

Gompers hates Soviet Russia, because Soviet Russia is the bitterest enemy in the world of just such imperialist intrigue, such slavish submission to the rule of capitalist imperialism, such arrogant carrying out of the policies of imperialism under the cloak of "labor."

And in the same issue of the American Federationist which reports, thru Gompers, this black piece of treachery to the working class, the old hypocrite howls against the "machination of Wall Street." And his man Friday, Chester Wright, prints an eulogy of "American diplomacy" as "the best brand of diplomacy in the world," remarking that "it is possible for an American to be proud of many American institutions."

Because Soviet Russia is the flaming embodiment of working class revolt against the treacherous policies of all agents of capitalist imperialism such as Gompers, and because Gompers feels the volcano of a similar revolt gathering force beneath the surface of American society also, the head of the American Federation of Labor hates Soviet Russia with a deep and abiding hatred.

But all of Gompers' wild abuse of Soviet Russia has been as futile as the armies of allied capitalism which were thrown against the Workers' Republic. The Seventh Year of Workers' rule is now being celebrated, and to the extent that Gompers curses this glorious day, the workers of America and of the world should rejoice. And for the same reasons Gompers hates Russia because it stands as the guarantee of the complete downfall of the capitalist system. The workers love Soviet Russia for that very fact.

Draft Adopted by the Fifth Congress

III. THE FALL OF THE BOURGEOISIE AND THE FIGHT FOR COMMUNISM.

1. General Characteristics of the Transition Period.

Between the Capitalist and Communist systems there lies a long period of proletarian struggle, of its victories and defeats, a period of continuous decay of capitalist relations with intermittent periods of revival. A period of national wars, of colonial uprising which, although not revolutionary movements of the proletariat as such, are objectively becoming a component part of the proletarian world revolution, inasmuch as they undermine imperialist domination, of armed and "peaceful" warfare of capitalist states against the budding socialist states—a period which comprises temporary agreements between social-economic systems contrary to one another, and life and death struggles. Finally, the complete victory of the proletariat, and the firm establishments of the power which it has gained through so much suffering and privation will be followed by an epoch of accelerated development of various types of socialist construction in the different countries. The multiplicity of the types of capitalism and of the conditions of the revolutionary process renders inevitable also the formation of a variety of types of new relations—this will be the main feature of the tedious transition period of development. Here the capture of power by the proletariat constitutes the essential preliminary for the peaceful growth of socialistic forms of economy, as well as the cultural development of the proletariat, which becomes transformed, and grows in maturity while in charge of all the spheres of public life, drawing the other classes into this process of regeneration and thereby laying the foundation for the total abolition of class-distinction. In the fight for the proletarian dictatorship, and for the subsequent transformation of the social order, the workers' and peasants' alliance is formed, under the ideological and political hegemony of the former against the alliance of landowners and capitalists. The transition period on the whole is characterized by the cultural growth of the proletariat and of the entire toiling masses. Not until this epoch has fulfilled this historical task will society begin to become a Communist society.

2. The Dictatorship of the Proletariat as the Unavoidable Pre-Requisite of the Struggle for Communism.

An unavoidable premise for the transition from capitalism to Communism—the starting point without which the further evolution of mankind is entirely impossible, is thus the revolutionary overthrow of the bourgeois state, and the seizure of power by the working class, which has to set itself the first and most important task of suppressing the enemy and firmly establishing the new regime. Dictatorship of the proletariat—that is the most elementary pre-requisite for social evolution.

The seizure of power by the proletariat is nothing else than the destruction of the bourgeois state apparatus by the fighting organs of the proletarian class struggle, and the organization of a new proletarian class power by those organs.

The form of proletarian state power generally best adapted to its purpose is that of the type of the Soviet State. This has been demonstrated by the experiences of the Russian and Hungarian Revolutions, which greatly extended the experience gained by the Paris Commune in 1871. It is precisely this type, arising immediately out of the broadest mass movement, which assures the greatest activity of the masses, and consequently the best guarantee of ultimate victory.

The Soviet type of state is flatly opposed to bourgeois democracy, which is invariably a veiled form of bourgeois dictatorship. The mass organizations of the workers, which are at best merely tolerated under bourgeois dictatorship, form in the proletarian democracy the main supports and organs of the proletarian state everywhere.

The Soviet State differs from bourgeois democracy in that it openly reveals its class character, and openly sets itself the task of suppressing the exploiters in the interests of the overwhelming majority of the population.

While bourgeois democracy leaves quite untouched the monopoly of the capitalist class with respect to the means of production, and all material values of decisive importance, and thus reduces the formal rights of the workers to blatant hypocrisy; the Soviet State first creates the premises for these rights by actually securing the liberty of the working class, by rendering of the workers' organizations possible, etc.

For the first time in history proletarian democracy removes the inequality of all exploited citizens regardless of sex, race, religion, and nationality—it establishes an equality which has never been realized in any capitalist state.

Proletarian democracy and its organs, which realize the broadest democracy amongst the workers, are in incomparably closer relation with the masses, and enable them to take part in the administrative machine. The right to elect new delegates, the right to recall them at any time, the combination of executive and legislative power, the arrangement of electoral districts not according to territorial, but according to economic units (according to factories, undertakings, etc.)—all this draws a sharp dividing line between the bourgeois parliamentary republic and the Soviet dictatorship of the proletariat.

The proletariat, as leader and vanguard of all other workers, and above all of the peasant masses, strengthens its leading role by legal privileges, which are unavoidable in the first stages of development. These privileges must gradually die out in proportion to the progress of the education received by the rest of the working masses, and later by the other citizens of the state, and on the basis of the new relations.

An essential part of the seizure of power by the working class is the destruction of the bourgeois monopoly of arms, and the concentration of arms in the hands of the proletariat. During the course of the struggle the main object in view must be the disarmament of the bourgeoisie and the arming of the proletariat.

The further organization of armed forces, based on strict revolutionary discipline, must be carried out on precisely the same fundamental class principle; it must correspond with the structure of the proletarian dictatorship, and the principles assuring leadership to the proletariat.

The victorious proletariat utilizes the power which it has seized, first, to break the resistance of the enemy and to guarantee the further rule of the working class against the attacks of the bourgeoisie. Secondly, it utilizes this concentrated power for the expropriation of the expropriators, that is, for the revolutionary transformation of economic, and consequently of all other social relations. As a rule, this expropriation will assume the form of confiscation, that is, by the expropriation of the means of production without compensation and the delivery of these means into the hands of the proletarian state. In this connection the Communist International proposes the following fundamental measures:

1. The expropriation of the large industrial undertakings, of the means of transport and traffic (telegraph, telephone), electric works, etc.

2. The proletarian nationalization of large landed estates, which are to be handed over to the administration of the organs of proletarian dictatorship; their collective cultivation by means of the agricultural proletariat, who are drawn into the work of the administration of the state-owned agricultural estates; one part of the landed estates, especially that part being worked under lease, to be handed over to the poor and partly to the middle peasantry. (The extent of the ground area to be delivered up to the peasantry is determined by economic expediency, and by the necessity of neutralizing the peasantry, and by the social-political importance of the peasantry); the organization of credits for agricultural improvements, combating usury and land speculation; the organization of agronomic aid to the peasantry by means of suitable schools, etc.

3. Proletarian nationalization of the banks. Delivery of all gold reserves, etc., into the hands of the proletarian state. Security of the interests of small depositors; centralization of the banks, subordination of all large banking concerns to the Central State Bank of the republic.

4. Nationalization and municipalization of wholesale trade.

5. Annulment of national debts.

6. Monopoly of foreign trade.

7. Monopoly of the most important printing establishments and newspapers.

In the execution of these measures, the following principles must be observed:

Nationalization should as a rule not include small and medium enterprises. The chief reason for this is that the proletariat which has just seized power has not the required number of organizing forces at its disposal, especially during the first days of the dictatorship, to enable it not only to destroy the old order, but to bring about a union of the small and medium units of production.

The second reason is that the proletariat should not provoke antagonism in the intermediate groups. The victorious proletariat must find the right course of action to be adopted towards these spheres of production which can be subjected to centralized and systematic management, and those which would only be cumbersome ballast. The latter must be left to private initiative.

The victorious proletariat ensures to itself the important pre-requisites for the solution of the economic political basic tasks by the accomplishment of these fundamental measures, which have to be fulfilled in the early stages of the transition from capitalism to socialism. The manner and method for carrying out these basic tasks will be determined on the one hand by the economic measures necessary for the attainment of this goal; on the other hand by the long continued or repeated political necessity of civil war or foreign war. According to the concrete demands of the economic and political position of every country and its international relations an economic political system can be proved necessary for a longer or shorter period, which undermines the material basis of the hostile strata, and ensures a rational consumption of existing provisions but ruins productive endeavor of private enterprises (by a system of requisition, etc.). This is linked up on the one hand with proletarian forms of economy and stems thereby the growth of productive forces in a high degree, and occasionally renders them impossible (war communism).

At the close of the open civil war, that is, after the installation of the political rule of the working class, the interests and necessities of the rational economic policy will be determined, whereas the methods of war Communism are pushed aside and finally absolutely discontinued.

Thus the economic system in the initial stage of the transition period will be as follows:

There is a large variety of economic forms, extending from socialized big industry and agricultural estates to small artisans and peasants. The more backward the country under the capitalist regime, the more numerous and varied are its economic forms.

In conformity with these various economic forms, we find on the one hand, various classes, and on the other hand various forms of economic stimuli, the operations of which determine the actual progress of production, and consequently, the development of the productive forces.

The varying forms of economy and industry, in their turn, inevitably also determine the form of their interrelations. The greater the influence of small private enterprise the more inevitable is the growth of the importance of simple market relations, with all the logical consequences thereof.

This determines the fundamental tasks of the economic policy of the proletariat, which holds in its hands the large and economically decisive branches of industry. While taking advantage of the economic power of big industry and transport, as well as of the power of the state machinery, it is necessary to regulate private economy and the stimuli of private economic activity in such a manner as to ensure in the long run, the least painful method of removal of these forms. The adaptation to market conditions and the regulation of market conditions are most important in this respect. The proletariat, thru the market relations and thru competition with the backward types of economy, as well as with the constantly emerging elements of the new bourgeoisie, such as tradesmen, capitalists, etc., must abolish these economic forms. Adaptation to the market inevitably entails the adoption of capitalist forms and methods of economic activity (calculation of costs, money payments, organization of commerce, even to the extent of orgnaising stock exchanges, and banks, etc.). Nevertheless, these capitalist forms as applied in the enterprises of the proletarian state are essentially of an anti-capitalist character in the same way as the formation of the proletarian standing army ensures the strength and growth of its anti-capitalist character. On the other hand, the application of these forms and methods harbors the seeds of their own suppression; the more rapid the victorious progress of large scale proletarian production, the less the importance of the market relations; the larger the growth of systematized economy, the less necessary become the capitalist forms of economic activity.

In view of the survivals of capitalist influences and of the heterogeneity of the working class itself, it becomes necessary for a time to adopt capitalist methods in the socialized enterprises in one form or another (the bonus system, piece work rates, etc., etc.).

On the other hand the proletarian state must do its utmost to support and encourage all and every form of transition to social economy on the part of small producers. The question of the promotion of co-operation among the peasantry is of great importance, and particularly in agrarian countries. If under capitalist conditions and bourgeois dictatorship peasants' co-operatives inevitably become transformed into collective-capitalist organizations, and the so-called "agrarian socialism" is but a miserable reformist utopia, because co-operation becomes merged into the general system of capitalist economy—then under the proletarian dictatorship, under a wise economic policy, under the growth of large socialized production, peasants' co-operation will inevitably merge into the economic system of the proletarian dictatorship.

The class struggle, in the period of the proletarian dictatorship, to a considerable extent assumes the character of an economic fight between the rival economic forms, which may for a certain period grow side by side. The chief task is to ensure the steady removal of the backward economic units which are hostile to the proletariat. In this connection the fundamental policy should be a wise combination of state industry and peasant co-operation against merchant capital and the first seedlings of industrial capital.

It is also necessary to make such use of state finances and taxation as to regulate the distribution of productive forces even in those branches of industry which are not in the hands of the proletarian state.

The proletariat must devote particularly careful attention to and the utmost precaution concerning reciprocal relations between city and country, and set up no barriers to the individualistic working motives of the peasantry.

It is natural that the extent of market relations and together with that the application of the methods of the new economic policy depend on the relative extent of capitalist large scale enterprise in comparison with small enterprise, that is, on the degree of national economy under consideration.

THE GROWTH OF THE INTERNATIONAL POPULARITY

Turkey and Persia, of Afghanistan and China, of the colonies and dependencies thruout the world. The oppressed masses sympathize with the Soviet Union because they see in it an ally in the cause of emancipation from imperialism. Therefore the growth of the international popularity of the Soviet power signifies the growth of the hatred of the opressed masses of the world for imperialism. Such are the facts.

It can hardly be doubted that these hatreds will not serve to strengthen the "pacifist-democratic" regime of present day capitalism.

The other day the American Secretary of State, the pacifist and Kolchakist, Hughes, issued a most reactionary declaration gainst the Soviet Union. No doubt Poincare's laurels do not give Hughes any sleep. But it can hardly be doubted that the reactionary pacifist declaration made by Hughes will only serve to further the influence and prestige of the Soviet Union among the toilers of the entire world.

and is the program of proletarian revolution. I recall that one of the best laughs I got while in Leavenworth, was upon reading the accounts, told in the manner of horrified bourgeois, of how the American missionary force in China, had raised a huge fund in America to finance free, wide-spread distribution of the bible printed in Chinese. After millions had been printed and hundreds of thousands distributed, it was discovered that the "heathen Chinee" printers had surreligiously inserted in the middle of the holy book, the entire Communist Manifesto, bound in and printed in the same type as the gospel!

Again, in the last few days, American imperialism with its Nazarene face, has received a slap by the Shinto-Budhist Japan, who, in the contest between its own satrap, Chang Tso-Lin and the American-British hireling Wu Pei Fu, checkmated western imperialists by calmly bribing a "Christian general" to mutiny against Wu and seize the central Peking government.

The policy of the Soviet Union toward the oppressed nations is well-illustrated in this same country of China. Since the 1911 revolution when the nation was dismembered by the imperialists, China as a unified nation has not existed. She has been the sport and victim of quarrelling imperialists. The Russian revolution removed the ominous czarist threat, but so firmly had the western imperialists gotten the various Chinese rulers in their clutches, that none would recognize China's only friend—Soviet Russia. Some even did the bidding of the imperialists and sent Chinese troops into Siberia and gave the Chinese Eastern railway over to the white guard Russians.

China and the Soviets.

But the power of the red army soon swept all interventionists into the sea. The magnanimous treatment of Mongolia and the Soviets' offer to renounce all the czarist concessions and extra-territorial rights, so hated by the Chinese, as well as foregoing the Boxer indemnity, was a tremendous pressure. China, even the servile Tsao Kun, established in Peking by the power of Standard Oil, finally recognized the Soviet Union.

Particularly in South China, where the revolutionary workers and the native intelligentsia have organized with the peasants into the powerful nationalist revolutionary party, the Kuomintang, controlling the Canton government of Sun Yat Sen, is the Soviet Union looked upon with fervid hope as the Great Deliverer.

The anniversary of the bolshevik revolution is a public holiday in South China, and upon the death of Lenin great ceremonials in which the whole populace, with the exception of the Chinese merchant fascisti organized by Britain, took part.

Trotsky's Lesson for the Orient.

The policy of the Soviet Union is well expressed in the answer of Trotsky to the message sent him by the Oriental Society for Struggle Against Imperialism, which said in part:

"True to the will of the founder, the Union of Soviet Republics will altogether and entirely remain on the side of the oppressed against the oppressors. By their opprobrious work of violence the imperialists are driving the Chinese people to hate every foreigner and everything foreign.

"It is, however, the task of Chinese revolutionists, in order to guard the Chinese people from chauvinism, to teach it to distinguish in every capitalistic nation between two fundamental classes—the imperialistic bourgeoisie and the revolutionary proletariat. It is only in union with the workers of the world that the Chinese democracy will repel the new imperialist onslaught on the national independence of the Chinese people."

Leaving China, let us see how the peoples of the Near East are treated. Let us take their own versions of how they "civilize backward nations," and analyze them.

Palestine Grabbed for "Sentiment."

Albert Montefiore Hyamson, controller of labor in the government of Palestine says that, while the issue between British and Turkish arms was still uncertain in that land, the Zionist leaders "especially those who happened to be in England" and who were "not slow in seeing possibilities" opened negotiations with the British government, with the result that by a declaration of Lord Balfour in November, 1917, a practical protectorate was established by Great Britain over Palestine. The motives, says Hyamson coyly, "Were complex. Prominent among them were the sentimental and religious interests in the return of the Jews to Palestine. Another motive doubtless (very probable, indeed—H. G.) was the desire for the security of the imperial communications with India and Australia."

His excellency, the controller of labor, goes on to say how native Arab agitation against this state of affairs grew, and he observes this was increased by, of course, "a wrong interpretation" of the "promise of Arab independence made by the British government in 1915. Affairs became worse until anti-Jewish outbreaks occurred in which many Jews were killed at Jerusalem on Easter, 1920." The British, doubtless out of pure sympathy with the Jews and not at all influenced by solicitude for "imperial communications" hastened to declare a military rule under Sir Herbert Samuel, and "the riot was suppressed and punishment meted out."

The Arabs began a non-co-operation movement somewhat flavored with riots. But the league of nations in September, 1923, formally allotted Palestine as a "mandate" to the British crown and covered the whole mass of duplicity and imperialism with an odor of international sanctity. The armed forces of Britain still rule by force over the preponderant Arab population. The bible and the Talmud are in alliance protecting "imperial communications with India," and doubtlessly, some undeveloped oil fields.

British Bandits in Persia.

In Persia, says Brigadier General Sir Percy Sykes, who was (some of the time) a peace-loving consul general, and sometimes a leader of marauding bands of British mercenaries euphemistically called the "South Persian Rifles," "The policy of Great Britain was and is to maintain the independence of Persia, which has served so long as a valuable buffer between the Indian empire and Russia." He adds as a mere afterthought that the merchants of London and Bombay were deeply interested in Persian trade, and that "the oil resources of Persia are her greatest assets."

Sir Percy did his best to grab these things for England, and even to lay hands upon the Soviet oil fields of Baku. Of course, he found good moral grounds for this. He says that "The collapse of Russia constituted a serious blow to the Indian empire." Besides, the infernal Germans were trying to get Baku first. A brigand crew of mercenaries politely termed a "British Military Mission" dashed across 700 miles of supposedly neutral Persian ground, united with the counter-revolutionary white guard cossacks and seized Baku.

The Red Army Smokes Them Out.

These bands were, of course, later put out, together with both Germans and Turks, by the red army of real liberation. But imperialist Germany and Britain continued to use Persia as a bone to quarrel over. The native Persians rose against both and drove back Sir Percy and his "South Persian Rifles." The interest of England in these looting bands of white guards, may well be seen by Sir Percy's own admission that if his forces had been completely routed, "There would have been a rising in the Punjab, which was seething with sedition. As it was, this did not take place until the following year when the war had been won." And, then, we may add, with no democratic pretenses to sustain, the machine guns of the British military suppressed the Indians with barbarous massacres at Amristar, and other points.

At the end of the war, England attempted to use her victory by reducing Persia to a vassal state. She attempted to subsidize Persia to form a white guard base against Soviet Russia, offering to finance a "Persian" army of counter-revolutionary cossacks. But the Soviet policy of real friendship, the surrender of various concessions forced on Persia by the czar, caused a popular uprising against England and the Persian parliament was forced to denounce this scheme.

The treatment of the people of Irak, an artificially created nation at the door of Persia, with a "king" who is as servile to British imperialism as Ramsay MacDonald, is well known. Even under the alleged "labor government" the natives who rebel against the satrapy, are massacred—men, women and children indiscriminately, by airplane bombs of the British army. So sickening has been these massacres that the soldiers of the air force protested to the "labor" government at the butchery, but were ordered by these "pacifist" members of the Second International to proceed.

The Ruthless Treatment of India.

The fight of the Communists to bring a real liberation to the oppressed nationalities may be seen clearly in the case of India. We see first the steel-shod feet of England crushing the lives of teeming millions. Without India the British empire would not last a day. For good reason does England send her best bloodhounds and "firmest" statesman to service in India.

One of these, Sir Thomas W. Holderness, tells us in his smug imperialist way of the recent years' relations between India and what he calmly assumes is "the paramount power." He speaks of the "gracious proclamation" of King Edward, of the "notable vice-royalty" of Lord Curzon, of the "courage and tenacity" of Lord Morley and Lord Minto against the "misguided zealots" who answered oppression with tyrannicide, of the "demonstrations of loyalty" upon the visits of the royal family in 1911, strangely followed by "deep-seated anarchy" and attempts to assassinate Lord Hardinge.

"Educated" and the "Malcontents"

A new tone comes into Sir Thomas' voice when he discusses the relations of the Indian people and the "paramount power" during and after the war. Subtly, he praises the "military races," the "territorial aristocracy" and the "educated classes" who "in many touching ways" demonstrated their loyalty to "the throne." He adds in the way of ecstatic philosophy, "the personal relation which kingship embodies is of magic power still in the East." True, he asserts, that some Sikhs, "indoctrinated with revolutionary principles," some "malcontents in the Indian army" and so on, did not fully appreciate the blessings of the "paramount power." "But," he added, "a vigilant government, armed with sharpened powers" successfully dealt with them.

The war began a great upheaval, in spite of the "touching" demonstrations of loyalty by the "educated classes." India sent—sometimes by plain conscription, and usually with virtual compulsion or purchase, 800,000 combatants and 400,000 non-combatant army laborers to France. India, always with her millions on the edge of famine, was drained of food. Prices rose for the masses while the "ruling princes and territorial magnates" lashed them off to fight for the white overlord and the manufacturers and trade "reaped substantial fortunes." It was necessary that "British freedom" should protect itself with repressive laws, and the Rowlatt bill passed by Lord Chelmsford was meant "for dealing with revolutionary crime."

The native capitalists were quick to turn the rage of the masses against the English rule in order to force from Britain their own swaraj or self-government, meaning their right to oppress the Indian masses without sharing the loot with English imperialism. Mahatma Ghandi appeared as the bourgeois-pacifist type, seeking to oppose to British arms the "soul force" of the Indian masses, preaching non-resistance, the boycott and historical reversion to the spinning wheel against the "satanic government" of England.

The Slave Pen Called Africa.

There remains the great slave-pen, Africa. In Tunis, Algiers and Morocco, the natives are made into serfs after their lands are seized by the French. In the towns the natives fight with the dogs for garbage cans, in famine years they die by the roadsides. In west and equatorial Africa a system of "hostages" prevails, old people, women and children are imprisoned in vile barracks to insure the enslaved male workers from running away. If one escapes, the dependents are put to death, and continually they are starved, beaten and treated worse than animals. The unspeakable "civilization" France has given to Africa is vividly pictured in that wonderful book by the French colonial, Rene Maran, entitled, "Batouala." It may be noted that France plans for an army of 660,000 black soldiers to enforce "law and order" at home and in the colonies.

Does the Civil Liberties Union know that no Negro can leave South Africa legally? He must smuggle himself out as a stowaway to escape from the slave pens run by MacDonald's "socialist" government. There, 6,000,000 blacks are bossed by 1,500,000 of whites. In the gold mines of the Rand 230,000 black miners toil under 27,000 white overseers.

Oppressed Racial Minorities.

There are, of course, the problems of the oppressed races within nations, such as the Negroes of America, and the various peoples annexed by grace of the Versailles Treaty. But there is not space here to treat of them, tho they are highly important and tho they, too, turn toward Moscow as to the dawn. The story has been told them of the real freedom brought the obscurest and most backward races under the Soviet Union. How unheard of races under the Arctic circle have now schools and their language taught from printed letters for the first time and that, "in the forming of the central organs of the Soviet Union, all national republics, without exception, be guaranteed equal rights and positions, and that all the needs of the nationalities be satisfied." Such was the motion passed by the Twelfth Congress of the Russian Communist Party, which administers the Soviet Union.

THOUSANDS HEAR FOSTER IN GARY

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

It may be a waste of time to devote valuable space to the rantings of the muddle-headed editor of the Milwaukee Leader, who competes with the highly paid capitalist toady of the Hearst press, in running a "column," tho, without the literary fluency of Brisbane. What is worrying Victor Berger, just now, more than his excess avoirdupois, or even his real estate, is the charge made against LaFollette, to the effect that he is a revolutionist. Berger takes up the cudgels for his friend "Bob." A few quotations will prove enlightening.

The attacks of our American capitalist papers and, politicians on LaFollette, however, go to the limit of ignorant ill-will and criminal ignorance. Far from being revolutionary, LaFollette is the man who stands between capitalism and chaos." What does Berger mean by chaos? Read on: "It is extremely foolish to depend on men of the makeup of Coolidge or Davis, who by their stupid capitalist 'conservatism' are bound to bring on a bloody catastrophy of the type of the French revolution or of the Bolsheviki upheaval in Russia." So, Berger joins the multi-millionaire, Spreckles, in putting up "Bob" as a dam against the social revolution which Berger once gave lip service to. In Berger's vocabulary the rule of the workers is synonymous with chaos.

In order to quiet the nerves of those who may believe that LaFollette and the socialists are revolutionary, the Milwaukee Leader publishes on the front page of its Nov. 1 issue, the planks of the C. P. P. A. platform adopted at Cleveland and written by LaFollette. The Leader commonts: "Where is there a single demand or a single proposition in this program that is revolutionary? Or a single plank that is not in strict compliance with the common sense and the common needs of the common people?" Berger has even stopped talking about the workers and now turns his sewer-pipe on the poor "common people," a social class as vague as Berger's socialism.

LaFOLLETTE did a neat bit of double crossing on the farmer-labor party movement when he delivered a broadside attack on the June 17 convention in St. Paul. Since then, however, "Bob" has been getting some of his own medicine. The C. O. P. has plenty of money and can "g up as many red plots against LaFollette as the latter could charge the Communists with. The biter is getting bitten with a vengeance.

LaFOLLETTE staged a performance in New York recently. Prominent actors and actresses were scheduled to appear. But their managers happened to be for Coolidge and warned them that if they appeared at the LaFollette show, they might cool their shins in the employment offices around 46th St. and Broadway, for the winter as far as the theatrical managers were concerned. What happened when the audience, who paid big money to see first rate vaudeville performers were presented with mediocre talent, is told in the news columns.

THE Prince of Wales is back in England again. It is reported that his father is not at all pleased with the kind of publicity his son received in America. Edward P. is solely to blame. He made that kind of publicity. The king did not mention the DAILY WORKER reporting on the prince's visit, but we had some good

WORKERS' LIVES SACRIFICED TO COMPANY GREED

13 Killed As Freight Car Hits Trolley

Another example of the indifference corporate greed has for the lives of the poor, was given Sunday morning at two o'clock when the outrageous practice the capitalist politicians allow of permitting the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad to use their tracks thru the working class district on the northwest side for a switching yard, took toll of at least thirteen lives, mostly if not all working people, and seriously injured twice as many more.

Conductor Shows Company to Blame.

An east bound North avenue car approached the railroad tracks which run north and south near Halsted street. "The gates were down," said conductor Olson, "and the flagman was out with his lantern. We waited while a switch engine and a string of cars passed over the crossing.

"Then the gates were raised and I gave the motorman the signal. We started across the tracks, but when our car was half way across a freight car shot out of the darkness. Our car was struck in the middle and overturned. There were forty or fifty people on it. When I regained consciousness men and women were strewn all over the street and screams of the dying filled the darkness."

Rich Protected While Poor Killed.

For years and years the working class of the northwest side have protested vainly at the city government permitting the Milwaukee railroad, one of the richest in the country, to imperil their lives continuously by using the tracks laid thru their busiest streets as a switching yard.

They have also pointed out that where railroad tracks pass through a wealthy district farther north, the rich people are carefully protected by elevation or depression of the street or of the railroad itself at the expense of the railroad. But in the district where workers live, where the catastrophe in which the Milwaukee railroad was allowed to murder a score of workers who slave at night, the dangerous open crossings are allowed to stay as it would cost something for the railroad to make them safe.

Employing Victims to Make More.

Another angle on the slaughter Sunday morning is the practice of this and other railroads, giving such jobs as crossing guard to old employes, often half blind and crippled up in many cases by previous accidents in which the company buys off the victimized worker by promising that if he doesn't sue them for the injury they are responsible for, they will "give him a job for life."

Corporation Lawyers Hotfoot.

No sooner had the massacre occured than the railroad claim agent lawyers and doctors were rushed to the scene. These vampires, trained in tricking unwary victims, knowing that the company is at fault and may be sued, try to get the injured and dying workers to sign some paper or make some statement waiving claims against the company or to agree to a settlement for ridiculously small sums, and, if the victims refuse, to make some statement that they "are not hurt much"—to use against them later.

THE WALL STREET TRIPLETS

FAKERS PLAY HIDE AND SEEK WITH POLITICIANS

Katholics and Kluxers for Small and "Bob"

Leaders of the organized labor movement of Illinois are disclosed to be connected in a united front with the Ku Klux Klan, "Bob" LaFollette, the Coolidge administration, and the crooked Len Small, as the election campaign draws to a close.

It has been disclosed that Frank Farrington paid a secret visit to the Coolidge campaign headquarters here and altho he makes denial, persons on the inside disclose that Frank Farrington is silently supporting Calvin Coolidge for the presidency.

Len Small, who has gained the support of all the officials of the Illinois and Chicago Federations of Labor, is backed by the Klan and has given them all possible support, it has long been known. The Klan, in its turn is throwing its support to Robert LaFollette for president.

Fred Sterling, lieutenant governor and Small's running mate for re-election, who is also supported by Victor Olander, Frank Farrington, John H. Walker, John Fitzpatrick, Ed Nockels and the other Illinois labor fakers, is vice-president of the Illinois department of constabulary, which encourages lawlessness and crime by peddling gun permits. The department of constabulary, which is entirely a Klan organization, arms the klansmen. This corporation is also supported by Charles Diseen, republican candidate for United States senator.

It's a Queer Tangle.

LaFollette, whom the Illinois labor leaders have been ardently supporting, is right in the thick of this confused and rotten political mess. LaFollette is named along with Len Small as the official choice of the Ku Klux Klan as well as of the labor leaders. The sample ballot issued by the Ku Klux

FIFTH VICTIM OF JOHN D. OIL DIES, INSANE

Officials Blame Workers for the Tragedy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—The fifth employe of the Standard Oil company, victim of the adulteration of gasoline with tetraethyl lead, has died in a straight jacket, raving and violently insane.

The death of five employes in the Standard Oil company at the Bayway plant, and the confinement of 36 more in the Reconstruction Hospital here, most of whom are insane, has exposed the deadly toll taken by the Standard Oil in making millions of dollars for Rockefeller.

The Standard Oil company admitted that they knew of the danger to the men in working with the lead, but the employes were not fully informed that they were in danger of insanity and death. In spite of the toll of death, the Standard Oil, true to their disregard for human life where profits are concerned, has hinted that they will refuse to pay a cent to the raving victims of their greed, and the families of those they have killed. An official of the Standard Oil has given out a statement that because the employes were cautioned to wear rubber gloves they should have known of the great danger.

"More Poison," Says John D.

At the same time that the death of the five employes and the insanity of half a dozen more was exposed, the Standard Oil put in the mails a magazine called "The Lamp," announcing "More Ethyl Soon," and making known the formation of the Ethyl Gas corporation, jointly with the General Motors corporation. Altho the Standard Oil's ethyl plant in Bayway, New Jersey, has been order closed and altho officials of Rockefeller's company admit that "the gas collected a toll of death and insanity before the 49 employes were exposed in the plant near

UNITED STATES TEACHERS HAVE NOTHING TO SAY ON "EDUCATION WEEK"; LEGION TO RUN FARCE

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Alliance between the U. S. bureau of education and the American Legion in the promotion of Education Week, in which the American Education Asso. will play only a very minor role, has brought upon Commissioner J. J. Tigert a forceful protest from the American Civil Liberties Union. The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, chairman of the union, in a letter to Tigert, calls the Legion a "military propaganda agency," and points out that the program announced for Education Week is "marked by intolerant propaganda against progressive political and industrial thought under the guise of combating radicalism."

According to the Civil Liberties Union, its protest has been duplicated by educators, publicists and peace and civil organizations, to the extent of expressing the opposition of these persons and organizations to any participation of the Legion in the celebration of Education Week.

DUNNE HOLDS BIG MEETING IN BUTTE, MONT.

Flays Walsh As Tool of Anaconda

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 2.—A crowd that jammed the auditorium, stage and stairways of Moose Temple turned out to hear William F. Dunne speak on the Communist program and candidates.

The meeting was one of the largest and most attractive staged here during the campaign and the speaker, well-known in Butte, drove home his points with examples from the struggles of the Butte workers.

He told of the deliberate disruption of the farmer-labor movement by the LaFollette-Wheeler middle class forces and characterized the support by them of Senator Walsh, the framer of the espionage act, as "the worst betrayal of the Montana labor movement ever perpetrated."

Walker Agent of Anaconda.

"The support of Walsh," said Dunne, "who runs side by side with Erickson, openly the choice of the Anaconda Mining company, is the last chapter in the conspiracy which resulted in putting the Butte Bulletin out of business and which has as its object the return of all power in this state to the copper trust."

Dunne said of the endorsement of Gov. Small by the Illinois LaFollette forces, Small's subsequent endorsement of Coolidge, and evoked an outburst of laughter when he described this maneuver as the "liberal conception of practical politics."

At the conclusion of his talk the speaker asked for questions, and for 45 minutes answered queries concerning the Dawes' plan, the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, the situation in China and the British elections.

Weather Cold.

Arrangements had been made to have Dunne speak from the court-house steps, but the severity of the weather made it necessary to secure a hall. This reduced the size of the crowd but at least 500 people heard the Communist message.

Ninety per cent of the audience were workers.

Great Falls Meeting.

GREAT FALLS, Mont. — An audience of 200 workers in Carpenter's Hall heard William F. Dunne analyze the forces in the election campaign from the Communist standpoint and explain the Communist program. Every reference to the Communist candidates brought applause.

PHILA LOCAL OF WORKERS PARTY AIDS STRIKERS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 2.—Hundreds of dollars have been raised by the Philadelphia local of the Workers Party and sent to the relief of the Paterson silk strikers, and turned over to the Paterson relief fund. At a showing of The Beauty and the Bolshevik, International Workers' Aid moving picture, $345 was collected for the Paterson strikers. In addition over $300 was collected directly by the party to date.

In Walters Union No. 605, the Workers Party appeal for funds to aid the Paterson strikers was given preference over an appeal of the LaFollette men. LaFollette being turned down on the ground that the Workers Party aided the strike of waiters in the New Traymore Hall, while LaFollette men were not in evidence during their time of trouble. $27 was collected by the Workers Party for the Patterson strikers, and the LaFollette fakers got nothing.

The Workers' Party has sent letters to each party member urging their direct aid, and co-operation thru the unions for relief for the Paterson strikers, R. Baker, secretary, announces. The party also co-operated with the Workmen's Circle in staging a concert for the benefit of the silk strikers.

COMMUNIST CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT SPEAKS TO WORKERS IN THE HEART OF STEEL TRUST

GARY, Ind., Nov. 2.—Thousands of workers in the heart of the steel barony gathered here this afternoon to hear William Z. Foster, Workers Party candidate for president, put the issues of the campaign before the workers in the straight-from-the-shoulder fashion in which he rallied hundreds of thousands of steel workers in the great steel strike of 1919.

The meeting was held despite numerous persistent attempts on the part of the steel trust to prevent Foster from speaking, by denying him one hall after another. An empty lot was finally secured and workers assembled there at last minute's notice to hear the Communist candidate.

Foster Hits Gary.

Cheering and applause greeted Foster when he was introduced by Paul Glaser, famous labor attorney who defended the framed-up workers in the Gary-Michigan Central case. Foster roundly excoriated Coolidge and Gary, his supporter, for the consistenly anti-working class administration he had headed. Davis and LaFollette received their due share.

LaFollette was exposed for his declination to come to the aid of the desperately fighting steel workers in their moment of greatest need. The entire "progressive" veil was torn from the face of the LaFollette movement, and Foster showed that the program of LaFolletteism was a reactionary one that could not be supported by class conscious workers.

"The issue is whether we shall have dictatorship of the capitalist class and its henchmen, or rule by the workers and poor farmers," said Foster. "The Workers Party stands for the rule of the working class!"

The meeting had been advertised by the local comrades in a very effective manner. They were out all day yesterday distributing leaflets announcing the rally, and an automobile toured the city with a sign urging all to attend.

Good Collection Taken.

A collection of $67 was taken up, which is considered to be an excellent sum in view of the poverty of the workers in the steel town.

Oliver Carlson, of the Young Workers League's National Executive Committee, just returned from Soviet Russia, also spoke, touching on the difference between the situation of the workers in a capitalist country and of those under the rule of the workers.

EDWARD NOCKELS STARTS ON RED BAITING SPREE

The Chicago Federation of Labor, if the words of Edward Nockels mean anything, has taken up the job of red baiting where Jake Spolansky left off. At yesterday's meeting, the federation secretary declared that "this federation did not intend to be continually harrassed by Communists looking for an audience."

This outburst came after the resolutions committee voted to non-concur in three resolutions

NEW KLAN RIOTS IN NILES CAUSE DEATH OF FOUR

Many Others Wounded and Beaten Up

NILES, Ohio, Nov. 2.—Abou 1,000 state militiamen took over control of this city yesterday after the Ku Klux Klan had caused a general uprising by shooting down four men, at least three of whom were Knights of the Flaming Circle. These were murdered while standing on the sidewalk by Klansmen firing from passing automobiles. More than a dozen others were wounded and many beaten.

Gun battles near meeting places of the hostile organizations and running fire between speeding automobiles were of frequent occurrence all day.

Klan Didn't Parade.

The Kluxers who control the city administration, had gotten a permit to parade several thousand strong thru the city streets, and the anti-klan circle had been refused a similar permit. The circle then announced that it would not permit the Klan to parade if it couldn't. They seem to have made good, even tho it cost a few lives. But the Kluxers have received a wallop that cost them great loss of influence and all their faint hearted members who want to quit when rifles begin to crackle.

Bring Them From Other Cities.

Klansmen by the hundreds, from many cities arrived over the Erie to take part in the parade. One trainload was not permitted to detrain by the troops. Klansmen who had been posted as "police" to guard the parade were rounded up by the sheriff and disarmed.

The police, known to be friendly to the Klan, were called out repeatedly. In each case the anti-klan forces, not trusting the "impartiality of the law," would instantly fill automobiles and race away in hot pursuit. Some apprehension is felt that the state militia is also in cahoots with the Klan, as in Illinois under Governor Small. The sheriff, however, expects no further trouble.

Moscow Confident.

MOSCOW.—Soviet newspapers confidently predict the overthrow of all barriers raised against recognition of the reds, now that France has given the Soviet recognition.

L. A FOLLETTE'S VAUDEVILLE SHOW WAS AS BIG A FARCE AS HIS JUGGLING ACT WITH WALL STREET

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—A benefit performance to bolster up the waning LaFollette campaign here proved a "flop," when the vaudeville artists hired to amuse the followers of the aged senator from Wisconsin, failed to appear. The benefit, which would have served to keep LaFollette's supporters in a good natured frame of mind, and keep them from analyzing his crazy quilt program, proved a complete fiasco.

Those who attended demanded their money back, causing a near riot. The LaFollette campaign committee here has hired an extra clerk to refund the admission, and statements are being issued by the wholesale attempting to explain the vaudeville show which turned out to be the greatest political farce of the campaign.

The acts that did appear were hooted and heckled by the audience. Victor Berger, one of LaFollette's most ardent supporters, became incensed at this, and is charging that the audience was in a well laid plot emanating from Calvin Coolidge himself. Berger's paper, the "Milwaukee (mis)Leader," is writing stories attempting to blame the "theatrical trust."

Patrons who went to LaFollette's vaudeville show paid from $1 to $3 to get in. Their boos and calls for their money back broke up the show.

"WAGE EARNERS' LEAGUE" COVERS MUCH TERRITORY

But It Has the Help of Boyle's Umbrella

None other than the famous crook and infamous labor faker, Mike Boyle, is furnishing his well-known umbrella for the most variegated bunch of political specimens to stand under.

From a specimen ballot put out by Boyle's gang, going under the alias of the "Cook County Wage Earners' League" the amazing connections of what Sam Gompers calls "non-partisan politics" may be illustrated.

Not "Dual Unions."

For the benefit of "those who came in late," we explain that Mike Boyle required that cold cash be dumped in his umbrella when he was bribed to call off strikes.

It must beborne in mind that this "Wage Earners League"—of course it isn't a "dual union"—has been endorsed by both the Chicago Federation of Labor and the Illinois State Federation of Labor. And the united front of labor fakers, liberal college professors, social welfare uplifters and underworld characters is wonderful to behold.

The Len Small crew played their hands wisely. They waited until after LaFollette and his socialist camp-followers had endorsed Small, then at Harrisburg, the Ku Klux Klan center, Small declared, "I have always been a republican and will be a republican the rest of my life."

"Safe and Sane" Labor Leaders.

The connection of Len Small with the labor fakers, Wm. Quesse and "Umbrella Mike" Boyle is a matter of common scandal. Now we begin to see where the "safe and sane" leadership is heading labor for.

Boyle's "Wage Earner League"-is a sort of an "alias" for the labor fakers controlling the State Federation and the Chicago Federation. And the ballot it recommends is amazing, amusing, and anything but a labor ticket. We see on it as "presidential electors" the expected names of slick Johnny Walker, and facinorous Frank Farrington, the liberals, R. M. Lovett and Jane Addams, and, who do you think —Sam Levin of the Asmalgamated Clothing Workers!

Levin Under Boyle's "Banner."

The A. C. W., which has a "preamble," almost, if not quite as revolutionary as that of the I. W. W., is apparently gone a long way to the right when its leading Chicago official starts out to "overthrow capitalism," and to "take over the means of production and distribution" under the "revolutionary banner" of Mike Boyle's umbrella.

It was expected that the labor fakers, including Levin, should favor the republican, Caristrom, for attorney-general of the state. Caristrom has promised to withdraw all graft charges pending against Len Small. Naturally, too, the republican who is Sterling in name, if not in honesty, should grace the LaFollette, Mike Boyle, Jane Addams, Sam Levin united front. But why should these and all the labor bodies in the state of Illinois and the city of Chicago also be tied up to the democrat, Albert A. Sprague?

Sprague is a millionaire, a colonel in the world war who didn't get more than half-shot, a leading member of the strikebreaking American Legion, a resident of the silk-stocking district at 1120 Lake Shore Drive, and a members of the scabby Sprague-Warner company. Yet he has the endorsement of "labor" thru the sanctified pronouncements of Mike Boyle and both of the labor federations!

"Labor" Loves the Bankers.

There are other queer endorsements for a "wage earners" league. Here is "labor" endorsing Sterling who, as noted, made some money himself, along with Small. Sterling is a banker of Rockford. Labor seems to be voting for bankers when it cannot go into financial class collaboration by starting "labor banks."

Then there is the spectacle of the Chicago Federation of Labor backing, thru the "wage earner" Mikey Boyle the republican, George A. Curran, for municipal judge. Curran the other day, when a Workers Party speaker was before him, offered the "judicial opinion" that "we should buy a ticket for these fellows."

The "Reward and Punish" Policy.

But even worse is the "labor endorsement" of Edgar Jonas for municipal judge. This fine bird was so "friendly to labor" that when the Pullman strikers of the Railway Carmen's Union at Pullman came before him for trial he did his dirty damnedest to have them convicted. A jury acquittal or two discouraged him, but his "intentions were good."

Such is the fine lot of political monstrosities gathered together under Mike Boyle's umbrella! Workers will vote for the Communists!

BIG CROWD TO HEAR ENGDAHL TONIGHT AT CLEVELAND MEETING

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 2.—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, will be the principal speaker at the closing campaign rally here on Monday, Nov. 3, at 8 p. m. This is the last of a series of successful campaign meetings addressed by Engdahl on his eastern speaking tour and a large crowd is expected to turn out to hear him.

"JOB SELLING" PLOT UNEARTHED IN SOUTH ILLINOIS

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Nov. 2.—The arrest here of Joe Klynas has uncovered a "job selling" ring in the southern Illinois coal fields that had its inception at Orient mine No. 2 of the Chicago, Wilmington and Franklin Coal company, the largest coal mine in the world, and has spread to other mines, involving many "higher ups."

Klynas was arrested and placed in jail at Benton after affidavits were obtained from seven coal miners that they had each paid $100 for a job at the Orient mine.

The money, according to the affidavits, was paid to Klynas who then gave each man a note to George Pollock, mine manager at the Orient mine. Pollock is alleged to have put the men to work then.

The "ring" has been operating in Franklid county for at least five months. The probe will be extended to other points in Illinois.

The Orient mine No. 2 now employs 500 men. The southern Illinois coal fields have recently gone through an unusual period of depression causing great unemployment.

LABOR FAKERS IN CRAZY QUILT

Klan contained a statement signed by Charles McGowan, LaFollette state chairman, urging third party voters to support Len Small, who has indorsed Coolidge and Dawes.

Small, who is the Coolidge and Dawes leader in Illinois, is practically indorsed by the LaFollette leader in Illinois. McGowan says, "The republican candidate for governor is running on a platform identical in the main details with the progressive platform. We advise as far as practical, that the progressive forces cooperate," the Klan statement of McGowan ends. Even the kluxers, however, dare not indorse Small's record outright. Only the Illinois labor fakers do that. The Klan apologizes for supporting this crook by saying, "So far as the republican candidate, Len Small, is concerned perhaps he doesn't measure up to all the standards and requirements of Illinois."

Devoid of Scruples.

Three of the outstanding labor fakers in the city, Mike Boyle, William Quesse, John Kelly, however, had no scruples about indorsing Small unqualifiedly. They formed the "Wage Earners League," which is whooping it up for Small among the trade unions. Charles Wills, business manager of the Federation News is one of the most blatant howlers for the virtues of Small in this fake organization. The Federation News, run by the Chicago Federation of Labor, which is run by Kelly, Quesse and Boyle, is identically with the Klan, also supporting LaFollette, and Len Small, who in turn indorses both the Klan and Calvin Coolige.

Len Small has made the same speech in all his campaign meetings. This speech was written by Percy B. Coffin, upon outlines dictated by Fred Lundin. Coffin is the boss of Quesse, Kelly, Boyle combination which controls John Fitzpatrick and the Chicago Federation of Labor. The whole tribe of labor leader politicians is under the wing of Fred Lundin, who is supporting Len Small, who in his turn is supporting the Ku Klux Klan and Coolidge and Dawes.

Thus a united front prevails in this election campaign among the Federation of Labor leaders, the Ku Klux Klan, Bob LaFollette, Len Small and Calvin Coolidge. There are many variations to this corrupt political mess in which the labor fakers of Illinois are wallowing. John Walker is indorsing Deneen for senator and John Fitzpatrick has indorsed the democrat, Sprague, altho both are united on Small and LaFollette. The Chicago Federation of Labor has indorsed Igoe for state's attorney, altho the Klan, which is co-operating with the Federation in backing LaFollette and the Coolidge candidate, Small, has come out for the re-election of State's Attorney Crowe, a Catholic.

The socialist party is also wallowing in the mire of capitalist politics. Percy Coffin was appropriately called in by the labor fakers to bury the farmer-labor party by means of the wage earners' league. McGowan, who smiles upon all this has indorsed Sprague for senator. The socialist party, shrunk in size and morale so that it could no longer retain its own identity, joined with the bankers and the federation of labor in indorsing LaFollette. McGowan, glad to get a few votes for LaFollette wherever he could, treats the socialist party like a poor relation, however.

The socialists have been grovelling at McGowan's feet, trying to shine in the reflected light of the LaFollette candidacy. But they have plastered themselves with the mud of the capitalistic political gutter. Meanwhile, their own candidates, whom they expected to help by donating money to LaFollette, have been completely ignored by the trade union leaders and LaFollette men. The labor leaders, more wily politicians, have given the socialist state candidates the complete go-by, thinking it more profitable to their personal ambitions to indorse corrupt capitalist politicians.

The Workers Party is the only political party which has stood on a constructive platform with the single aim of building the power of the working class.

Their program aims to build a militant body of farmers and workers to gain control of industry for the workers and establish in this country a workers' and farmers' government.

JOHN D.'S SLAVES DYING OF POISON

Elizabeth," manufacture of the diluted gasoline will not be stopped.

While the 36 men are still in the hospital, most of them in delirium, the Standard Oil announces it will continue the manufacture of its ethyl at the Du Pont plant. Employes of the Dayton research laboratory have met a similar horrible fate, it now transpires, and in the Du Pont plant, which will be used by the Standard Oil, many have been driven insane and two men have recently been killed by the tetraethyl lead after a terrible period of insanity.

Chemist Committed Suicide.

Claude Becker, cousin of a chemist employed in the summer at Bayway has now revealed that the chemist, Henry C. Becker, committed suicide as a result of mania from lead poisoning. All over the country, the exposures of death caused by the Standard Oil's newest profit grabbing scheme are coming to light, altho the Standard Oil refuses to stop killing its employes.

Immediate Murder.

The E. I. Du Pont de Nemours company, the General Motors company and other concerns controlled by the Standard Oil are equally involved in the secret exposure of capitalistic murder of workers in recent years.

Following the death of the latest victim, Herbert Fuson of Elizabeth, N. J., who died in a straight jacket, the New York board of health has been forced to issue a statement, barring the tetraethyl lead gasoline from New York City as a public menace. The Standard Oil has admitted that its poisonous gasoline is in use in its 10,000 filling stations thruout the country. It is doubtful whether it will be possible to force the powerful oil trust to take its poisoned gasoline off the market.

Killed Professor's Opinion.

Dr. Yandell Harrison of Yale, it has been learned, was asked by the Standard Oil for his opinion of the effect of the poison Standard Oil gas on human beings, but because his opinion was detrimental to their business, his report was suppressed and rejected by the Standard Oil company.

Dr. C. K. Flint, head of the Reconstruction Hospital, admitted that many of his 36 patients are "suffering from mental disturbances." Patients who died in this hospital were not given effective treatment, it has been disclosed. They were treated with intravenous injections of hyposulphite of soda, pital on five successive days, and the prestige of this so-called remedy has disappeared. Meanwhile the patients still alive are suffering untold torments.

Thomas Midgley, Jr., who invented the poisoned gasoline for the Standard Oil company, tried to lay the blame of the deaths on the workers themselves. "The men failed to appreciate the danger of constant absorbtion of the fluid by their hands and arms," said the Standard Oil employe.

34 COMMUNISTS IN GERMANY MAY BE IMPRISONED

BERLIN, Nov. 2.—If the designs of the socialist leaders of Germany and their police agents succeed, thirty-four Communist deputies to the Reichstag will soon find themselves facing long sentences of imprisonment under the most inhuman prison conditions known anywhere in the world.

The adjournment of the reichstag, which automatically closes the term of parliamentary immunity which all deputies enjoy, was the signal for President Ebert and Chancellor Marx to unleash their socialist bloodhounds, who have been straining for months to get on the trail of the workers' representatives in the reichstag.

Communists Fight Dawes' Plan.

The bitter and single-handed fight of the Communist deputies against the acceptance of the imperialist Dawes' plan, which would deliver the German workers over to bondage under the lash of international capitalism, has infuriated the socialists, who for almost seven years have been playing the game of the world rulers. And the socialist anger has been an anger based on fear—fear of the power of the workers, who have again and again shouted their approval of the acts of the Communist deputies.

Communists Gain in Election.

With the election of seven more Communist deputies to the Hamburg senate, and the loss in the same elections of sixteen socialist seats, German "socialism" is in terror, and is hunting down with the utmost brutality every Communist representative that can be found.

The charge against the Communists is that of "high treason" to the fatherland.

Among those sought most eagerly are Ruth Fischer, prominent in the international Communist movement, Deputies Scholem and Katz, who acted as the Communist floor leaders in the reichstag.

Three Coal Miners Died Today Where 3 Were Injured Only Yesterday

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the working class in Indiana is burying its dead and healing its injured. This is not an unusual proceedure. In fact, it is the common lot of workers.

But there is bitter irony in the reports that come simultaneously from Terre Haute and Logansport.

* * * *

Three coal diggers died in a blast in the Blackhawk Coal Mine, 12 miles southeast of Terre Haute.

It is not new that coal miners should die at their work places. Thousands die that way every year.

BUT THESE THREE WORKERS, GEORGE ETTLE, JOHN McKEE AND FRANK HAWKINS, HAD SUBSTITUTED FOR THREE MINERS INJURED AT THE SAME WORK PLACE LAST FRIDAY, AND THEY HAD BEEN AT WORK ONLY ONE HOUR WHEN THE DEATH BLAST SNUFFED OUT THEIR LIVES.

These three men had waited for the jobs of the other three. There are hundreds of thousands of idle miners, and risking death in the coal pits is preferable to starving, especially when there is a wife and children at home also demanding food.

Last week there was a gas explosion. But miners' lives are cheaper than safety measures. The pockets of gas in the mine remained unmolested. The second three went into the death pit. They were young men: Hawkins was only 27. Their first shot, to break away new masses of coal, sent a spark into a gas pocket. Then the blast, flames, death. It was 14 hours later that their charred remains were found.

All that is left of the bodies of these young, healthy workers goes into another hole in the ground, in the cemetery, while three more are selected from the living, from among the jobless thousands, to face death in the mine tomb that never closes its gates, either upon the entrance of the living, or the carrying away of the dead.

* * * *

Not far away is Logansport. Lester Kimball is only 17 years of age; but his right arm is already gone at the elbow, and he will never again be able to use his left hand.

It all happened when young Lester became the victim of the hungry teeth of an unprotected saw in a portable sawmill near Grass Creek, not far from Logansport.

It is also not unusual for workers to meet death and injury in saw mills. In fact, next to mining, the lumbering industry is the most hazardous.

BUT THE SAW THAT TORE AWAY THE LEFT HAND AND THE RIGHT ARM TO THE ELBOW OF YOUNG LESTER, WAS THE SAME SAW THAT TOOK THE LIFE OF THE BOY'S FATHER, EDWARD KIMBALL, THREE YEARS AGO.

Life is cheaper than safety devices to protect the lives and the limbs of the workers. The boy will go thru life crippled, unable to make a decent living under capitalism, while another jobless worker, perhaps a brother, will take his place at the sawmill.

* * * *

This is in Indiana, the state of U. S. Senator Watson, supporter of Coolidge for re-election, baiter of Communists. This is the state of ex-Vice President Marshall, who attacks every effort to improve the condition of the workers as "pure Bolshevism." This is the state of Judge Anderson, the judicial assassin of workers and workers' organizations. This is the state of Gary's self-named steel trust town of Gary, of the Standard Oil Trust's town of Whiting, the state where every great industry has its own little czardom populated by the wage slaves of the year 1924, under the rule of capitalism.

* * * *

All those who believe that the profits of the mine owners and the lumber barons are more sacred than the lives of workers, will take their places with Watson, Anderson, Gary, Marshall and Rockefeller. They will support the capitalist system of Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette.

But those who place the rights of the workers first, will take their places with the Communists, in the struggle for the ending of the capitalist system; for the abolition of the rule of Gary and Rockefeller.

The lives of the workers must not always be fed to the saws of the lumber mills; to the gas explosions in the coal mines; to the hungry Moloch of industry. Yet only the workers themselves can end this barbarous condition thru ending the social system responsible for it. Instead of capitalism—Forward to Communism.

Missouri-ites to Be Shown How to Vote Communist

Communist voters residing in Missouri must observe the following rules if they want to make their vote valid this election day.

There will be no column for the Workers Party candidates, therefore use blank space at bottom of column. Fill in name "Workers Party," then write "for president William Z. Foster" and make your cross (x), under that write "for vice-president Benjamin Gitlow (x) and president elector Carl Miller."

$10,000 BRIBE TO NEGRO PAPER FOR AIDING CAL

Negro Editors Bought to Betray Own Race

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 2.—The colored prostitutes are not all poor Negro girls forced by low wages to sell themselves. Coolidge's agents in the Negro branch of the republican national headquarters in New York, are revealed by testimony given Friday before the Borah committee, as having sent out a circular letter to colored newspaper editors and publishers, inviting them to a banquet at the Hotel Dumas in New York.

At the banquet Editor Vann of the Pittsburgh Courier presided. He told them that they would be expected to peddle their support to Coolidge and Davis before there would be any discussion of paid political advertising.

Carl Murphy, editor of the Afro-American of Baltimore, testified before the committee. Murphy and his advertising manager, Henry T. Allen told how the scheme worked and how when they refused to pledge support to Coolidge, and left the banquet they got no advertising.

Chicago Defender Sells Out.

They were told by Vann, the previous day, that the Chicago Defender, the chief Negro paper in the United States, had received $10,000. It has been printing four or five pages of Coolidge propaganda each week, said Murphy.

Allen, in a spicy letter to the Baltimore Sun, which was read into the record, told of the baseness and cold it was designed to pledge the Negro press to Coolidge and the Ku Klux Klan.

EDWARD NOCKELS HUNTING REDS IN CENTRAL BODY

introduced by Painters' Local 275 at the previous meeting and were laid over. The resolutions already published in the DAILY WORKER, called for a fight against imperialism, on the Ku Klux Klan and in aid of the unemployed workers.

The resolutions committee voted non-concurrence on the ground that the resolutions bore all the earmarks of Communist origin. The committee did not say that it handled the resolutions with asbestos gloves, tho it must be hot stuff. The committee also made the startling announcement that the Communists had the propaganda possibilities of the resolutions in mind when they hatched them.

Nockels Excited.

Nockels announced, as part of the red-baiting plan of the federation, that Jack Johnstone of the painters and Nels Bjar of the carpenters were unseated as delegates to the central body, Johnstone because of his Communist activities.

E. Arnold fo the Painters' Local 275 spoke against the report of the resolutions committee, pointing out that his local had 2,000 members and that the same kind of tactics now used against the Communists was once used against the socialists. When another delegate from the painters tried to get the floor, a reactionary called for the previous question and it was carried.

About one-quarter of the delegates voted against the previous question and the motion to non-concur. A delegate protesting against closing discussion declared that there was something rotten that was being hidden. This annoyed Nockels, but Fitzpatrick's gavel restored order.

WE ANNOUNCE CONSIDERABLE GROWTH!

THANKS TO THE BRICKLAYERS

In the last 28 days we have received 2,075 NEW subscriptions—sent in by members of the DAILY WORKER Bricklayers' Union. All this in 28 days!

This is slightly over 74 NEW subscribers everyday.

And this does not include renewals—very heavy at this time when live members of the Labor movement are building up THEIR paper.

In this same period the DAILY WORKER has lost only 147 subscriptions thru expirations—and will get most of them back.

What the future of the DAILY WORKER will be if we put our shoulder to the job of building it up—you can judge for yourself.

YOUR PAPER is feared by Labor's enemies now. It will become a real Power—the instrument in building the Labor movement—if you put yourself on the job of getting subscriptions. In this issue you will find a brick. "Heave It Back."

ROWAN WANTS TO USE I. W. W. FUNDS TO FIGHT I. W. W.

By KARL REEVE.

While James Rowan was petitioning the labor-hating Judge Dennis Sullivan to allow him to use the I. W. W. funds, badly needed for the defense of class war prisoners, to fight the Doyle-Fisher faction before Master-in-Chancery Bernstein, Rowan's followers in the I. W. W. convention were defending the injunctionites.

Rowan's one-time liberal lawyer, William Bigelow, petitioned Sullivan to allow the expenditure of $300.00 of the I. W. W. funds to pay his expenses in pushing the injunction. Sullivan will give his answer in five days.

Now All Boost Rowan.

When Morris, secretary-treasurer of the general defense committee of the I. W. W., was being questioned by the delegates yesterday, Leonard and Swanson shielded Rowan as much as possible, trying to prove that the expulsion of his faction from the general headquarters was a dangerous and illegal act. Swanson tried to prove that Trotter, Ryan and Bowerman, the injunctionites, were performing their legal duties in the headquarters and should not have been expelled. Morris replied that as soon as they tied up defense funds and entered the capitalist courts they deserved no further consideration.

Members of the audience at the I. W. W. convention were incensed at Swanson and Leonard. "William Buckwald, secretary of Industrial Union 310, and P. D. Ryan, representing 310 on the rump G. E. B., have been reported by Swanson and Leonard as having refused to pay them their wages as I. U. 310 delegates, but this looks fishy, like a trick to fool the rebels, as they battle for the injunctionites on the floor of the convention while Rowan and his crowd do not recognize," said one rank and file wobbly.

Kapon Takes a Hop.

Sam Kapon of Butte, who took the place of Charles Anderson, supposedly representing Industrial Unions 210 and 220, miners' unions, on the general executive board, was cross questioned about his activities on the Rowan-Bowerman general executive board. The convention paid $75.00 for Kapon's transportation to Chicago, and after hearing his testimony, it was apparently their unanimous decision that the money had been thrown away. Kapon refused to answer most questions, evading those he did not answer.

Kapon's testimony revealed that he had spent $50.00 of a fund raised for the Idaho defense committee as part of a self-appointed "investigating committee" to probe the controversy this summer. After the investigation, Kapon signed a statement condemning the injunctionites. But after Kapon was elected chairman of the general organization committee of I. U.'s 210 and 220, and was sent to Chicago to fill the position of G. E. B. member, he flocked into the injunctionist camp after Rowan gave him $100, he admitted to the convention.

Won't Talk About Money.

Kapon admitted that the injunctionites had violated the preamble of the I. W. W., but stated that at all of the Rowan G. E. B. meetings he did not once oppose the continuation of the injunction. He refused to state where the money came from to issue the injunction. Kapon was forced to admit that the "rump" Rowan G. E. B. met illegally. He admitted that there are only two constitutional ways a G. E. B. meeting can be called, either at the demand of the Industrial Unions or of the general organizer, and admitted that the Rowan G. E. B. was not called by either of these two methods.

Unions Not for Injunctions.

Kapon reluctantly agreed to help the temporary administration committee fight the injunction in the court and agreed to declare that Industrial Unions 210 and 220 are not represented in the request for the injunction. Kapon revealed that Justus Ebert had been paid by the Rowan G. E. B. to write leaflets against the Doyle-Fisher faction, and that Ebert had also written for the Lumber Workers' Bulletin. He said that he had often seen John Grady in the headquarters of the Rowan-Bowerman G. E. B.

stories about him. It is also whispered that young Edward wishes to renounce the throne and become an American citizen. He might run for president on the democratic ticket and save it from extinction. John W., despite his knee breeches, is a failure.

WHILE returning to England on the Olympic, the prince, as usual, was pestered by reporters. He was not as silent as Calvin Coolidge, but whatever he said, did not get beyond the blue pencil of his equerry, Lasalles, and the ship's purser. It sems that a mysterious woman got on board the ship. Her name was kept secret, but shortly after the ship passed the three mile limit and the bars were open, the bars went down on the prince's conduct. From then, until the mysterious woman disembarked at Cherbourg, herself and the prince were inseparable. Perhaps the "mysterious lady" may have something to do with Edward P.'s alleged desire to let somebody else risk his neck over the throne of the Wettins.

A prominent Spanish general presided at a meeting where Dictator Rivera was roundly denounced and the people of Spain urged to put an end to his rule. The police broke into the hall, arrested the audience, including the general. The general was given a six months' sentence, while the less fortunate audience were imprisoned for indefinite periods. The self-styled leader of the Spanish republicans, Ibanes, is safe in Paris, and had no intention of sharing dungeons with the 27,000 more or less Spaniards who are rotting in Rivera's dungeons. But the 27,000 are workers, which makes all the difference in the world to the bourgeois.

Industrial Class of Young Workers Will Be Held Tonight

The industrial class conducted by Comrade John Williamson will be held tonight at 2613 Hirsch Blvd., at 8:15 sharp. The city executive committee must attend this class regularly.

Tonight is the sixth meeting of the class and the outline of study calls for an interesting evening. This class has taken up in detail the various activities connected with the functioning of shop nuclei. Tonight's class will deal with:

External work of shop nuclei (continued),

a. Distribution of literature.
b. Shop bulletins and press.
c. Shop meetings.
d. Illegal activity and advantage of nucleus form of organization.

In addition to the regular curriculum ways and means of conducting the mail order campaigns will be discussed. Every member interested in nuclei should attend the class tonight.

RUSSIAN REVOLUTION ANNIVERSARY

You WILL join. You will ADD your every effort to awaken the masses of workers and poor farmers to the significance of the Russian Revolution.

In this world of gold-soaked, murderous imperialism, the Russian Proletariat stands as a flaming red beacon in the night, inspiring hope, commanding perseverance.

The Russian Proletariat battles not only to maintain its victory but to assist the workers of every land to win.

And we must battle to win as well as uphold the victory in Russia

The Russian Proletariat for itself and us. We for ourselves and the Russian Proletariat.

It is between this giant pincers that the imperialists of the world will be squeezed out of power and into the dark history of the past.

TO DO THIS YOU MUST LEND A HAND. Every militant, every sympthizer must help. The biggest blow you can strike right now is to assist in building your meeting in celebration of the SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION.

Look to right. Look to left. Look below. Find your city. That's YOUR meeting. And don't go to it alone! Take a crowd of fellow workers with you.

JAILED MINERS IN APPEAL TO SAVE THE UNION

Officials Aided the Prosecution

By GEORGE PAPCUN.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 2.—From behind prison walls comes the voice of imprisoned left wing coal miners advising and counseling their brothers what must be done in order to save the union that they went to prison to save.

Of all the crimes and betrayals attributed to the crooked and reactionary officialdom of District 5, there is none more hideous and damnable than the desertion and betrayal of the men arrested and convicted on account of the now famous Cliftonville mine riot, which occurred early in the strike days of 1922.

When scabs attempted to work the mine the miners of the Pan Handle region marched to the mine in an effort to convince the strike breakers to join their ranks. They were met by a fusillade of shots from the thugs and guards employed by the coal company and in the riot the sheriff of the county was killed along with many union and non-union men. Today there are 38 men in Moundsville prison, 38 union men, serving indefinite sentences for their alleged part in the affair.

Last Moment Ruse

When their trials came up, the officials as usual betrayed them. During the closing minutes of the last International convention of the U. M. W. A., with over a thousand delegates on the floor, and the convention in an uproar over the steamrollering of the Howat issue the following resolution was supposed to have been adopted, but the delegates did not know anything about it until they received the final days proceedings after they returned home:

"Whereas, there are forty-two men incarcerated in the Moundsville, W. Va. penitentiary charged with complicity in the march of the miners in Brooke county, West Virginia; and

"Whereas, these men have now been in prison for many months leaving their families and dependents in want and destitution; therefore, be it resolved that we petition the Honorable E. F. Morgan, governor of West. Va., to pardon these men so that they may take care of their families, and again mingle with their fellow men, as we believe they have been sufficiently punished, as they were victims of Communistic and anarchistic propaganda Hence, we appeal to you to temper justice with mercy, and liberate these brothers now in the penitentiary at Mounsville, in your state."

Aiding The Enemy

The resolution is signed by Fagan, Patton, Hargest and Wolcutt, president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer and organizer of District 5.

These men who are supposed to lead the miners have the gall to write that "we appeal to you to temper justice with mercy, as we believe they have been sufficiently punished" which is an open and frank confession that in their opinion the men in Moundsville are guilty, are responsible that these brothers are in prison at the present time. The bitterness of those imprisoned can be described only by the men themselves. The Progressive Miners' Committee is in receipt of the following letter from one of the imprisoned men. Until a later date the name and number of the writer will not be made public. The writer is a foreigner.

Pat H. Toohey, Secretary, Progressive Miners Committee, 805 James St. N. S. Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Dear Brother: We see by the papers that you have a ticket in the field against Fagan. We hope you defeat him. If the membership understood the full import of what he has done and it doing with us thirty odd men behind the prison walls for the Cliftonville trouble, they would put him out now in a hurry. He procured the release of five of the boys for the purpose of making propaganda for himself. The district officers insisted that we plead guilty, promising to get us pardoned within a short time, and knowing too that if we had not pleaded guilty we might have been released as the third term of court was approaching and only a few could have been tried at that time. The machine desires and conspires to keep us in prison for very much the same reasons that they keep McLachlan and Myerscough out of the union.

"Fagan is doing in District 5 the same that Farrington is doing in Illinois, bankrupting the district. Do not loan them any money, for if you do the time will come when you will have to meet the operators with a depleted treasury.

To Stand Firm

"We must grasp this situation and rise to meet it. Our action in this respect during the coming year will determine to a great extent the life and character of our union. We must build our treasury so we can stand firm. The non-union fields proved that they will stand with us, but there is no one trying to organize them, we must organize them and have our expelled brothers reinstated and go forward. But if we keep Fagan and his gang they will glean all they can get and provide themselves with political jobs and the poor miner will be pelled to accept adverse terms of employment. They were directly the cause of us being in prison and largely responsible for us having to remain here.

"Fraternally,
"(Signed)

Will the miners of District 5 have to contend with this any longer? Men behind prison walls are hoping that the Fagan gang are ousted, for as long as this crew of worthies are in control of the organization then that long will the United Mine Workers continue to be a meal ticket for a bunch of rascals, and that long will the miners be constantly betrayed. The progressive miners will make this one of the campaign issues, and ask the support of all honest and sincere miners of this district in their effort to make the organization what it should be, a powerful, fearless and militant weapon of the working class.

SMALL AUDIENCE IS SMALL BUT TOUGH; REPORTER KEEPS MITTS ON HIS WATCH AND SMALL CHANGE

"The wiser they are the harder they fall," is an old saw. But it still holds good in Chicago. Yesterday at noon Chicagoans were treated to the spectacle of cries with megaphones calling out, "Overflow meeting at the Harris Theatre" and "Hear your governor speak," on all the corners for blocks around the Harris Theatre where the governor was holding forth.

Our inquiring reporter directed to the spot by cries at every few steps (who must have cost the governor a pretty penny!), went in to see a handful of paid "pluggers" applauding "the friend of the workingmen" whom the Chicago and the State Federation of Labor are supporting. Our reporter did not stay long. It was a tough looking crowd and you can't sit comfortably with one hand on your small change and another on your Ingersol watch for any length of time.

A block away in front of the Cort Theatre was a giant float in behalf of the labor hating State Attorney Crowe cashing in on the Franks case, representing "justice" blind-folded (and heavily rouged) at whose feet sat a few chorus girls out on a job representing something or other, very likely a lavish expenditure of the taxpayer's funds for which the workers will get the bill when Crowe "gets in."

Adjoining was another float with radio appartus broadcasting "the benefits" to be acquired by the working man when "our candidate is elected."

Chicago is a big city "a wise town." Verily, "The wiser they are the harder they fall."

Amoskeag Workers Stop at 10 Per Cent Reduction in Wages

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 2.—In spite of plentiful company hints on the part of Agent Parker Straw that Amoskeag "needed to cut wages 20 per cent the convention of employes of the big cotton and worsted mills voted only to accept the 10 per cent cut previously voted on but not put into effect.

The company officials made much of "southern competition" in their arguments and said that a 10 per cent or 12½ per cent wage cut would not be sufficient to enable their reducing prices on ginghams and other goods to get trade.

Nothing was said of reducing the profits rate instead of wages. Nearly 270 delegates represented the 14,000 Amoskeag workers employed in normal times. Less than one-third of the workers have been working in the mills recently because of "lack of orders," according to the Amoskeag officials.

Amoskeag Manufacturing company, which practically owns Manchester, is continuing its fight for tax reduction of half a million at the same time that it is attempting to force heavy wage cuts in the workers who are poor from long periods of idleness and part-time work. The Manchester Textile Council, representing the United Textile Workers' Union locals, still protests against any wage cut, but is not in a position to lead a strike for maintenance of the wage scale. The 1922 strike which lasted nine months in Amoskeag mills, impoverished the workers and the union because of conditions beyond their control.

CHARGE LAFOLLETTE'S CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR IS HELPING TO SHIELD STANDARD OIL TRUST FROM EXPOSURE

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 2.—Charges that Senator Thomas J. Walsh, endorsed for re-election by LaFollette and Wheeler, the so-called "progressives," has been, in company with Senator Adams of Colorado, Walsh's assistant on the senate committee supposed to investigate Teapot Dome, sheltering the Standard Oil company from exposure, are flying about in high oil circles.

John D. Shielded by Walsh.

The facts cited show strong reasons why it happened that thruout the whole Teapot Dome scandal, the saintled name of Rockefeller was conspicuously absent by its absence. The whole world of oil men are dismissing how it happens that Walsh and Adams can get away with such bare-faced blocking of the investigation whenever it led up to 26 Broadway.

From what is now disclosed, the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Midwest Refining company, the Midwest Oil company and the Prairie Oil and Gas company were deeply involved in the Teapot steal. The Standard Oil of Indiana and the Midwest interests were involved up to its neck by half ownership of the Sinclair pipeline built in pursuance of the lease to take oil from Teapot Dome, around which lease the whole scandal arose.

Standard in on Steal.

Incidently, this pipeline is likewise to take oil from the Salt Creek field controlled by the Standard, the royalty oil of which was sold by Secretary Fall, now indicted for conspiracy after being forced to resign from Coolidge's cabinet over the Teapot affair, to the Sinclair gang. But in that sale, along with Fall, was the Standard Oil, as half owner of the capital stock of the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company.

The oil investigation committee run by the democratic friend of LaFollette, Walsh, labored very hard to convince the public that it was following out every shred of testimony that promised to yield the truth. But the ugly fact now appearing is that wherever a trail of suspicion led up to the door of Standard Oil, Senator Walsh immediately drew a red herring across it and sent the inquiry off on another scent. Senator Adams of Colorado, was Walsh's assistant in this business.

Walsh Sidetracks Investigation.

This is clear from the fact that as early as February, 1924, the attention of the Walsh committee was called to a suit begun which alleged that not only Sinclair, but the Standard Oil of Indiana and its subsidiaries, the Midwest Refining and the Midwest Oil companies, had conspired to defraud John Leo Stack of Denver over this very Teapot Dome lease.

Further, in the course of the testimony before the Walsh committee, the charge was made that the real conspiracy, out of which the lease came like manna from heaven from Albert Fall to Sinclair, was a secret meeting at Mexia, Texas, followed by others in New York.

These conspiratorial meetings were participated in by representatives of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Prairie Oil and Gas company, and Sinclair. The financial transactions were later arranged between Secretary Fall and the oil ring, including the Standard.

LaFollette's Darling Covers Crime.

Strangely, Walsh, who has elevated himself to national and even international fame by passing himself off as a great and thrice-righteous crusader against oil steals, ignored this information and covered his failure to investigate the Standard Oil with lame excuses about these charges being made by blackmailers.

All mention of the Rockefeller interests in the Teapot steal was assiduously kept out of the press by Walsh, the Montana darling of LaFollette. Many people who at the time wondered at the exposure how Rockefeller was dodging investigation, will now look to Walsh to tell them.

It even appears that Walsh had the investigation hastily ended to avoid developing too much evidence against Standard Oil. And when the two attorneys who were assigned to prosecute the conspiracy, so the story goes, were looking thru the record, they discovered that Walsh's committee, which made both himself and Senator Wheeler, now running with LaFollette, famous, had covered up the existence of important evidence.

Crooks Flee Country.

Upon trying to get in touch with those charged to be at the Mexia, Texas, conspiracy, it was found that every one of those shielded by Walsh was out of the country, having removed themselves beyond the jurisdiction of the government.

Walsh Asked to Explain.

Ever since the government counsel has at least pretended to be trying to secure the deposition of H. S. Osler, counsel of the Imperial Oil company, Limited, the alias for the Standard Oil company of Canada, in connection with the Mexia, Texas, conspiracy, the suspicion in the minds of oil men who know, has become certain that Senator Walsh's fame as an investigator should be better that of a whitewash artist for John D. Rockefeller of the good old thieving Standard Oil.

Fire Destroys Labor Temple.

OAKLAND, Cal.—The Oakland Labor Temple has been completely destroyed by fire, and all its records lost. A new labor temple has been in course of construction, but meanwhile all papers were stored in the old building. The cause of the fire is unknown, but because of an explosion preceding it, the police suspect arson.

MODERN FARMING GIVES BIG BOOST TO RUSSIAN CROPS

Society for Technical Aid Reports Progress

(By the Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Modern farming methods used by American agriculture communes in Russia are producing remarkable results, according to the reports of the Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia, which has sent 18 agricultural units to the grain fields of the labor republic.

Deep plowing is one of the secrets of the Americans' success and this is accomplished with tractors. The deep plowing is patterned after the methods used in America's "dry farming" and has produced good crops where the drought proved fatal to the hopes of peasants using the old fashioned Russian plows which did little more than skim the surface.

Some of the comparative crop production figures furnished by the Technical Aid society, speak for themselves. In one Don Region commune, where the drought ruined other farms the number of poods per dessiatin for the commune and the average Mujik farm compares as follows (A pood equals 36 pounds, a dessiatin 2½ acres): Rye, 53 poods for the American commune, 4.1 for the average mujik; winter wheat, 92.5 poods as compared to 4.7; spring wheat, 40 as compared to 6; barley, 15 to 7.7. Other Don communes give results that are not quite so surprising but still averaging more than twice those achieved by the average peasant. Similar conditions prevail in the Tambov gubernia.

The satisfactory crops of the commune farms, organized by the technical aid society have taught the peasants the advantage of large machinery-working, collective agricultural units, says the society. The lesson is driven home to the surrounding peasants by evening schools and lectures by the commune workers, but the argument which sells the big idea is the success of the communes' own operations.

A total of $3,000,000 has been put into the agricultural communes from America.

CZAR'S MEDALS FAIL TO FILL ICE BOX OF AN ANTI-SOVIET GENERAL

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 2.—Col. Vladimir Dmhovsky, former officer in the czarist forces in Russia and adjutant-general of the anti-Bolshevik army under Semenov, has been sued for non-support by his wife, who claims that since Vladimir arrived in Vancouver with her from Russia, she has had to provide the fodder for the ice chest.

She has grown weary of this foraging since the pickings are none too good and now is petitioning the Canadian courts to compel her much-decorated hubby to do a little practical kitchen police in their domestic war.

Dmhovsky is the holder of five decorations for war service under the czar. When he arrived in Canada the newspapers made much of him stating that men of Dmhovsky's type were Russians that really were an asset to the country, etc. Since coming here the czarist officer has lost no opportunity to advertise himself as a military hero, but when Mrs. Dmhovsky announced the prosaic fact that she was working in a beauty shop in Vancouver for a small pittance, the glamor surrounding her swashbuckling husband was dimmed. The general seems to be in line for another decoration, usually bestowed by the courts in Canada on wife deserters.

COMMUNIST UNCLE SAM WILL DANCE WITH MISS BOLSHEVIK AMERICA AT NOVEMBER 4 BALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The New York Communists have put up a splendid campaign for Communism thru hundreds of open air meetings, indoor meetings, debates and red nights we carried the message of Communism to the workers of Greater New York.

The culmination of this successful campaign will be a celebration by the New York Communists with a Election Returns Ball on election night, November 4, to be held at Park Place 110th Street and Fifth Avenue. Admission 50c.

Election returns from all over the country will be reported from the stage by Comrade Sam Lipzin who is a very well liked militant in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers union and who is known as Uncle Sam by his humorous articles in the Jewish Daily Freiheit.

This affair by the Trade Union Educational League is more than a simple dance for in addition to the election returns we will have all the Communist candidates attending and the experiences during this campaign will be told to those that are interested and in general a good time is guaranteed to all present. Get your ticket now for they are selling fast and you may find yourself on the outside looking in, while others are celebrating the culmination of the most successful communist campaign in New York City.

All the militants will be there so you can't stay away on Election Night from Park Palace, 110th Street and Fifth Avenue.

German Police Use Third Degree Methods On Arrested Workers

BERLIN.— The German police are sinking to the level of American third degree experts in the treatment of workers arrested on suspicion. Evidence given before the Prussian legislature showed that German police dogs are ordered by the police to attack workers held in police stations. One man testified that he had been savagely bitten in the side by such a dog after the officers had knocked out several of his teeth with blows from their fists. Another worker from Halle testified that he was forced to run a gauntlet of policemen who kicked him with their hobnailed boots, pounded and finally laid him out with a club.

These and other instances were recited, in reply to the claim of a member of the legislature that the result of the Dawes' plan makes a strong police force in Prussia necessary.

12,000 Jute Workers Strike.

CALCUTTA, India, Nov. 2. — Over 12,000 jute workers in Howrah, India, are on strike to force the discharge of a doorkeeper who had insulted a woman worker. The company refuses to fire the offender.

N. S. MINERS CLEAN UP MESS LEFT BY LEWIS

Officials Tour the Nova Scotia District

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, Nov. 2.—Hardly had the temporary officers of District 26 been elected by the rank and file convention of the miners when they immediately set out on a tour to the most backward parts of the district.

While the results of their labors have been profitable, yet the district is not too well organized, due to the success of the combined forces of the Lewis appointees and the steel corporation in their union splitting activities.

Ready To Fight Wage Cut

These with other sinister forces have made slight inroads into the miners' ranks. However the temporary officers are confident that before the new year dawns the miners will be fully organized to combat the wage cut that may be proposed by the British Empire Steel Corporation.

It will be remembered that Lewis restored the autonomy of District 26 on September 20, and on the 29th a rank and file convention was held. At this convention temporary officers were appointed to take charge of affairs and prepare for a district election.

The officers elected were J. W. McLeod, President; Joseph Nearing, Vice-President; and Alex A. McKay, Secretary-Treasurer.

Joseph Nearing has also been nominated for the Secretary-Treasurership of the International Union of the United Mine Workers of America.

Present Formidable Front

While the miners have been driven before the onslaught of John L. Lewis for over a year—by such tactics as expelling individuals and cancelling local union charters, forceful collection by collaboration with company of $117,000, attempt to kill labor newspaper, and indifference to to disruptive tactics of the One Big Union—they are now reorganizing their forces and by January 1 will be able to present that formidable front for which they have been noted.

ATTACK MADE ON CANADIAN RAIL WORKERS' WAGES

United Railway Unions Plan to Fight Back

By JOHN ROBUR.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

OTTAWA, Can., Nov. 2.—A direct attack upon the wages of railway workers in Canada is made in an application now before the Canadian railway commission.

The application, made by the Tudhope Anderson Co., Ltd., of Winnipeg and Orillia, Ont., is founded upon a claim that "the wages paid to railway employes are unreasonably high, unfair, extravagant and discriminatory in comparison with wages of other industrial workers thruout Canada."

Wages Not Much Advanced

An answer to this statement, filed with the railway commission by the united railway unions of the dominion, calls attention to "the cold historical facts" that the wages of railwaymen have not advanced as much as those of some other classes of labor since the outbreak of the great war.

"Were the 1920 rates of pay and working rules still in force," the railway unions point out, "the payrolls of Canadian railways for 1924 would be increased between forty and fifty million dollars."

The unions deny that the Canadian rates were increased by the McAdoo award and affirm that adjustments were made by that award "to the detriment of the employes who were at that time expecting better results more in keeping with the existing high living costs."

Less Than in U. S.

"Rates paid various classes of railway employes in Canada," it is stated "are less than those prevailing in the United States, while some are quite equal to the United States standard. Canadian climate conditions are much more severe than generally prevail to the south, the cost both to the employes and the employes is greater by comparison and would justify higher levels of both railway rates and wages in this country."

The protest of the railway unions closes with a table of comparative increases in wages since 1913 among various trades. These indicate that while wages in building trades have risen by two-thirds, in the metal trades still more, yet in the steam railway trades they have risen by less than 60 per cent.

CZECHO-SLOVAK BRANCH, WORKERS PARTY, IN NEW YORK CAMPAIGN

By JULIUS CODKIND.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—The New York Czecho-Slovak branch of the Workers Party is numerically small. Their membership is about 40, of which 25 are considered active. The bulk of these comrades live in the Southeastern portion of the Yorkville district of New York.

This has always been a politically backward section, and when the campaign plans were made no consideration was given to the district.

Late in the campaign the comrades in this branch realized that no plans for conducting a campaign had been made for their district. They came down to protest and were told of the situation, whereupon they insisted that they could secure sufficient signatures to place at least assembly candidates on the ballot.

Petitions were ordered printed, and within a short time these comrades turned in 1,800 signatures placing a Workers Party candidate on the ballot for the assembly in the 14th district.

There is a considerable Czecho-Slovak population in the 14th assembly district and our comrades are making fine progress among these people. The Czecho-Slovak Central Federated Union is heavily influenced by our comrades, and it has been enlisted in our cause. It has endorsed our party and candidates, and made a contribution of $10.00 to the campaign fund. The Czecho-Slovak Bakers' Union, Local 22, contributed $25. A number of fraternal organizations have also made contributions, and because of the fact that the campaign was started very late many Czecho-Slovak organizations are still to be heard from.

The field covered by the 14th assembly district is a theroguing working class section, and the experience of this campaign shows that with a little work future years will show this to be a Communist stronghold. The work of this small Czecho-Slovak branch has resulted in showing the party in New York that we can go into districts formerly untouched by radical influence, and bring out a huge revolutionary working class sentiment.

ELEPHANT HAS NIGHTMARE IN KANSAS CITY

Rushed in Bewhiskered Freak to Stop Red

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 2. — Frantic with fear of the persuasive power of Bolshevik Browder, the G. O. P. national committee rushed Hughes, the hairy hyena, to this town and blazoned across every sewer sheet the news that this missing link would erupt on the day and hour of the Browder meeting.

The local G. O. P. committee would not hear of a debate between the present secretary of state and the future commissar of foreign affairs. They expressed a rather shaky hope that their gladiator would carry Kansas City for Coolness and Kanniness.

Good Meeting.

Comrade Browder had a good turnout and splendidly discussed the role of almost-reds—Ebert in Germany, MacDonald in England and LaFollette in the United States. It is their job to fool the restive workers and be the catspaw to pull the hot chestnuts out for their owner. Their reward? Why, the publicity, a burnt paw—and a kicked seat when their usefulness is over.

GITLOW SPEAKS IN CHARLEY SCHWAB'S STEEL MILL TOWN AFTER TUSSLE WITH POLICE

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 2.—Bethlehem is the home of Charles Schwab's gigantic mills. The highest wages paid the workers in this feudal industrial hell hole is 35 cents per hour. It is no wonder that the chief of police prevented the Workers Party from holding its meeting in Quinn School Auditorium after a permit had been given.

Police were stationed all around the entrance of the Quinn School Auditorium.

Plan Strike to Organize.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. — Grocery and Dairy Clerks' Union, Local 1232 of the Retail Clerks' International Protective Association, have given executive board authority to call strikes whenever the employers refuse to grant shorter hours and a minimum living wage. Conditions in the shops are not good now and a general strike to organize completely is expected soon.

Another hall was hired but as soon as the police found that out they forced the hall keeper to close the Workers Party meeting out. With the 125 workers who struck to the end we succeeded to finally hold a meeting at the Hungarian Workers' Hall about two miles from the place in an isolated part of the town. Tom Myerscough, the militant miner who was expelled from the Mine Workers' Union by the reactionary Lewis machine, was chairman.

Gitlow in his speech rapped hell out of Charles Schwab and the democracy that prevails in Bethlehem. He told the workers that some day in the near future the Workers Party would reorganize the Bethlehem steel mills of Charley Schwab along entirely different lines. When that times comes the workers will be in a position to take any hall and if the chief of police intervened, the workers, thru a shutdown in the mills, would teach him how the workers, thru organized power can gain democracy for themselves whether Schwab and the steel barons like it or not.

Still Gets the Crowds

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—What Price Glory continues to question the wherefor and cost of war to packed houses at the Plymouth Theatre, New York. Arthur Hopkins' presentation of the play by Maxwell Anderson and Lawrence Stalling is a challenge to the propaganda which swept the United States from 1916 to 1918 in an effort to disguise the price of glory.

NEW YORK TAG DAY NETS MORE THAN $2,000.00

Campaign Fund Will Exceed $10,000 Mark

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 2.—Tag day in New York was a success, and the fine response made by a large number of devoted comrades has resulted in a total income which will amount to about two thousand dollars. Twelve stations already reported have brought in $1,728.39 for the Tag Day work, and there are still eight of the smaller stations to be heard from.

These eight stations are conservatively estimated to average $40 each, which would make the grand total $2,050.00.

The largest sums came from the four Harlem stations comprising Section 2, which brought in $618.73. Bronx accounted for $476.19, and the Campaign Headquarters reported $378.98.

The campaign fund of New York and New Jersey is now well past the $10,000 mark that has been set. The following detailed amount of income brings the report up to Oct. 22. At the present writing there is another week of income, including TAG DAY, to be reported. The report to date will follow within a couple of days.

RANK AND FILE WORKERS QUESTION SOCIALIST ORATOR AND TURN MEET INTO COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN RALLY

BROWNSVILLE, Brooklyn, Nov. 2.—A delegation representing the dwindled remnants of the once mighty army of socialistic Brownsville descended upon the Communist corner at Stone and Pitkin avenues at 4:30 p. m. last Saturday with platform, flag, and effigies of their bourgeois candidates, the republican LaFollette and democratic Wheeler.

Knowing that hundreds of workers flock to this corner to hear the meeship devised this hysterical piece of strategy of occupying this Communist sage of Communism from a Communist platform, the yellow socialist leadercorner for four hours before the opening of their meeting.

The fear on the part of the socialists in bringing out their platform so early as to to occupy the most favorable corner was very amusing. The comrades know by past experience that if we can put up an opposition platform on the least favorable corner at the intersection of Stone and Pitkin avenues, it would soon cease to be an opposition meeting, for the socialist audience would dwindle very quickly to insignificance. The events of the meeting proved this.

Stop to Listen to Socialist.

About nine o'clock a certain renegade socialist in knickers, Jean Cornell by name, ascended the yellow platform. There was no Workers Party meeting scheduled for the evening due to a Communist meeting. It was on the way to the affair that a group of our comrades stopped to listen just as this experienced socialist orator was dishing out to a large working class audience a most stupid tirade on the Communists in a most clever fashion (for, after all, only a social renegade is capable of cleverly saying stupid things). One of our comrades shot a question at him regarding the refusal of the socialist candidate, Rev. Norman Thomas, to debate the Communist candidate for governor, James P. Cannon. Our perfect socialist orator informed the audience that the Communists were too insignificant to bother with—yet this bombast specialist devoted most of his worthless time in exclusively attacking the Communist movement. Immediately he launched into a fresh tirade against Soviet Russia and force and violence.

Demand Platform to Reply.

Our comrades demanded the platform to answer the speaker's charges put up to us in a fashion of a department of justice agent. He refused. This aroused the ire of our comrades and within five minutes in a three Communist fashion we had a platform and a Communist banner on the opposite corner. It was a spontaneous rank and file action. We had no regular speakers; it was preposterous to oppose this "perfect" socialist orator with our rank and file comrades. Yet our small group did this with perfect self-confidence. The spirit of it caught the mass of workers. They immediately sensed where the force and the tremendous will to action in the Communist comes from. Here were rank and file workers—Communists with no political schooling except that of the daily class struggle, going so fearlessly into action to oppose this "educated socialist intellectual."

Cross Street and Crowd Follows.

One of our comrades opened the meeting at the top of his voice so as to be heard across the street, announcing the purpose of the meeting and calling upon the workers to join the rank and file of the Brownsville Communists as a protest against the lying flood of debauched socialist oratory. The workers responded with enthusiasm. A great landslide of workers from yellow socialism to militant Communism took place. In a very short time the socialist meeting was bereft of its audience, all the workers joining en masse. One need but to get a block's distance away to compare the two meetings. There was a great dark mass about the Communist platform, and as for the socialist meeting —well, one had to come much closer to even notice there was one.

His honor, the golf stocking socialist attacker of Communism, Mr. Cornell, soon deserted his own yellow platform and joined our meeting. To all the questions of this socialist, and a few of his ilk, our rank and fliers who took the platform one after the other, answered in such a fashion as to draw the hearty and enthusiastic applause of the large crowd of workers. The meeting was a great success and an inspiration for further activity.

MANY LISTEN EAGERLY TO HOW WORKERS MANAGE

Carlson Gives Picture of Workers' Rule in Russia

MUSKEGON, Mich., Nov. 2.—That the Muskegon local Workers Party is livening up at great speed was clearly demonstrated at an enthusiastic meeting held under its auspices here, and addressed by Oliver Carlson, whom over two hundred working men and women came to hear, many of them remembering him by his youthful and very effective activities in connection with the former movement of this town.

What is a "Workers'" Government?

This meeting, coming close upon the meeting of vice-presidential candidate, Comrade Gitlow, has a great significance inasmuch as the clearly depicted analysis of "Labor Government vs. Workers' Government," that being the particular theme of the speaker, is being brought home more convincingly and more forcibly to the workers and farmers who were well represented at this gathering, many attending having come from as far south as Spring Lake.

The meeting was presided over by Comrade Eugene Bechtold, who also briefly outlined the policies of the Workers Party as portrayed daily in its official organ, the DAILY WORKER.

Eager to Hear About Russia.

Comrade Carlson, in a concise, even blunt manner, asked the audience of their choice: "Do you want a labor government as is the administration of MacDonald of Great Britain, now being aspired to by LaFollette, the new Moses of this country, representing the hopeless middle class? Do you want in power such a government whose sole achievment is the appointment of a commission to investigate the housing problem, which is an acute and vital question in England today, or do you want a government of the workers—one functioning exclusively in the interests of the working masses?"

The toilers of this town being confronted with ever-increasing difficulties in their endeavors to obtain a livelihood however meager, due to the acute unemployment situation here, eagerly listened to Comrade Carlson's depiction of the great contrast between their own precarious exstence, and the standard of living enjoyed by the working class of Soviet Russia.

Winitzky Repudiates Insinuation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The attempt of Martin W. Littleton, former congressman, to link LaFollette and Wheeler with the Communists in his speech at the American Defense Society dinner at the Hotel Commodore is characterized as "preposterous, absurd, wholly illogical, and showing the man's own ignorance and wish to pervert the truth "by Harry Winitzky, Workers Party campaign manager for the New York district and congressional candidate from the 12th district.

A Labor Victory in Spite of MacDonald

In spite of MacDonald's treachery and opportunism, in spite of the weak-kneed and cowardly policies of the late "labor" government, British labor scored an important victory in the parliamentary elections. Out of a total of about 20 million votes cast, the labor party candidates received 5,536,000, that is, a gain of one million votes. Large sections of the working masses of Britain have thereby shown clearly and unmistakably, that they do not trust the parties of capital, and that they want a government of their own.

British labor has been badly deceived and mistreated by its own official leaders and worst of all by its late "labor" government. The attacks of Baldwin and Lloyd George against MacDonald's government were certainly not dictated by love for the working masses, nevertheless the charge of these gentlemen remains true that MacDonald's government was in no way better for the workers than a government of conservatives or liberals, and no amount of apology and explanation will change the fact that MacDonald's government was nothing more than a servile tool in the hands of British imperialism.

MacDonald came into office by grace of the liberals and conservatives. Balwin and Lloyd George both agreed to permit the labor party to form a government. Why? Because at the beginning of this year, when MacDonald assumed "power," British imperialism was on the verge of a serious breakdown. It was confronted with mass unemployment at home, troubles of great magnitude in its colonies, critical relations bordering on war with France and with a state of general insecurity all around. British capitalism in the beginning of this year was in a very bad way. The liberals and conservatives, the parties of British capitalism, could no longer rule successfully.

This alone explains the "astounding" fact why British capital acquiesced in labor becoming the government of Britain. Baldwin and Lloyd George knew quite well the stuff that MacDonald and his friends were made of. They knew just as well as we did that in time of crisis, of mass dissatisfaction and restlessness, the interests of British imperialism might be more secure in the hands of MacDonald than Baldwin, Curzon, Churchill or Asquith.

MacDonald and his crew of opportunists and social imperialists were permitted to become the government of England in order to keep the masses in check and to save capitalism from destruction. MacDonald and his friends accepted the job and fulfilled their mission to the best of their abilities. And now, having stabilized somewhat the rule of British capital abroad and to a lesser degree at home, MacDonald's government may go. British imperialism no longer needs, for the present at least, the "labor" services of MacDonald's government.

Now British capital, big industrial and financial capital, is itself assuming leadership. This is the meaning and significance of the conservative victory in the recent elections. Heavy, monopolized industry and big finance capital which are represented by the conservatives have succeeded in winning the support of the independent businessmen and petty bourgeoisie. These latter groups have formerly followed the lead of the liberals, but the bankruptcy of liberalism has been apparent for a long time and now the middle classes are definitely breaking up. The wealthier sections are going to the conservatives while the poorer sections are moving towards the labor party.

The present standing of the parties is: Conservatives 403, labor 150, liberals 36, others 11. This gives the conservatives a majority of above 200 seats over all other parties in the new parliament which undoubtedly secures their parliamentary power for some time to come. However, their total vote of 7,624,000 is only two million more than the vote cast for the labor party, which is of immense significance for the future development of the class struggle in Britain.

British labor must now learn its lessons. British labor is on the right track as long as it continues (which it does) to hold fast to the idea of independent political action. The working class must have its own party and its own government. But the lesson yet to be learned by the British workers is that not every labor party is a party serving the interests of labor and that not every labor government is a government of the working class. The truth of this latter contention can be best seen from the doings of the MacDonald government.

For a party to be a real working class party it must believe in the class struggle against capitalism and in the substitution of capitalist rule by the rule of the workers, that is, the proletarian dictatorship. For a labor government to be a real working class government it must immediately upon coming into office actually assume power. It must disarm the capitalists and arm the working class. It must seize control of the basic industries. And, above all, it must begin building up direct organs of proletarian mass struggle which alone can give power to a labor government in office.

MacDonald's government is defeated, but not the British working class. It is continually moving ahead, learning its lesson and strengthening its power. The future belongs to British labor if it follows the path:

From MacDonaldism to class struggle, to the social revolution and thence to a real labor government.

LaFollette and Chaos

This year's presidential election campaign has been characterized by an abnormal flow of loose talk. The explanation of this high tide of political buncombe is to be found in the rise of an additional employing class party fighting for the boss' victory in the campaign. We have in mind the extra noise made in the past few months by the LaFollette drummers.

There has been invented the slogan of "Coolidge or Chaos." Insofar as the working and farming masses of this country are concerned, Coolidge has proved a most deadly efficient vehicle for bringing them chaos. The biggest employers are fully aware of this situation. What is chaos to the workers means swollen profits and fabulous dividends to the exploiters. Hence the fear on the part of our leading bankers about the chaos that a Coolidge defeat might bring—to their bank accounts.

The LaFollette champions have picked up this reactionary slogan. They have made every effort to reassure the financiers and manufacturers that the Wisconsin senator will not be the harbinger of chaos if placed in the White House. We have in mind the defense made by Mr. Victor Berger in the Milwaukee Leader of November 1, in which he said: "Far from being revolutionary, LaFollette is the man who stands between capitalism and chaos." Here we have it. The employers are told by the pinkest LaFollette defender that the over estimated progressive senator is no danger to them.

We recall the days when Mr. Berger did not object to being called a socialist. We even recall the days when Mr. Berger made a pretense at fighting LaFollette in Wisconsin. At any rate, it has always been an axiom among those calling themselves socialists that for the working class capitalism and chaos are synonymous. If ever this was true, it is infinitely truer today. Mr. Berger knows this. When Mr. Berger tells the workers and the bosses whose votes he is seeking for LaFollette that his candidate stands as the sole barrier to chaos, he is simply telling the exploiters that LaFollette is the most effective agent to perpetuate capitalism and save it from being overwhelmed by the waves of revolution.

Stone Goes to Court

The self-styled liberal and widely reputed lawloving Attorney General Stone will soon enter the courts in a suit which promises to develop into an event of major political significance. Mr. Stone proposes to test the legality of the newspaper publication of the income tax lists.

There has been much speculation as to the reasons animating the Mellon bureau of internal revenue in its publication of the income tax lists on the eve of a national election. Some have declared that our secretary of the treasury wanted to shed light on the obvious fact that the democratic party is as much tied up with the biggest business interests as the Coolidge coterie is. Others have declared that the plan was aimed to strike particularly at Mr. Davis, who is a heavy income tax payer himself. Still others contend that this was one instance where Mr. Mellon did not use his billionaire brains.

When the leading metropolitan papers and the big dailies thruout the country made public some of the names of the biggest income tax payers there was a fierce howl in the alleys of finance and industry. Now Mr. Stone proposes to settle the argument and to have the courts declare that it was illegal for the newspapers to print these lists. The case involves one of the fundamental practices of the United States government and the role of the press in American political life. It is clear that Mr. Stone and the banking and manufacturing interests which he is defending never conceived that the provision to make the lists public meant anything more than to bury the records in some unread and unreadable government publication. Their concept of the public was limited to the highly priced few, the hired experts of the huge financial corporations. Mr. Stone would have the law apply only to those who are in the pay of the class he serves.

We have little doubt that the courts will define the public in this instance as the small group of investigators engaged in preparing the official truth for the ruling class. We have still less doubt about the likelihood of congress repealing even this limited income tax publicity law. The significant point at this moment is the fact that Mr. Stone shows himself in his true role. Mr. Stone, as we pointed out some time ago, believes that the law as it is today is sufficient and adequate for maintaining the rule of the bosses. He is an ardent defender of capitalism by the legal methods chosen by the capitalists. Let our liberals rejoice.

James A. Patten gives $1,500,000 worth of land to the Chicago Community Trust. There is enough working class blood congealed in that gift to irrigate a small desert. Wealthy robbers can afford to be charitable.

On the Path to a Mass Party

By TOM BELL.

"The conquering of the trade unions for Communism was and remains the main slogan of the Profintern," declared Lozovsky at the recent congress of the R. I. L. U. This emphatic statement was an effective answer to the tendency which had shown itself on the part of various groups in the various countries to abandon the existing unions for dual ("more perfect") unions.

"Until the Communists win over the unions in America dominated by Gompers there will be no mass party in that country," declared Comrade Bill Dunne, in a speech at the conference of the Communists on the American situation. This constitutes an effective answer to those who imagine that there is some magic short cut to the establishment of a Communist mass party in this country.

The above statements are worth pondering over by every Communist who is sincerely bent on winning the masses for the revolutionary struggle for the overthrow of capitalism in America. "On principle" no one in our party would dare openly to disagree with the viewpoint of the Comintern and Profintern on the trade union question. But between "principle" and practice there is too often a great gap. It is much more comfortable to "agree on principle" than it is to beard Gompers' labor lieutenants in their dens. There is too much laxity and indifference on the part of Communists to the work in the trade unions.

This can, of course, be explained. Three factors face us at the present time: 1. The political isolation of our party owing to the adhesion of the labor bureaucracy and especially the rank and file to the LaFollette presidential campaign. 2. The labor bureaucracy now recognizes that the T. U. E. L. is not a sporadic movement organized for the purpose of putting some rival labor fakers into office, but that it aims at the reorganization of the entire labor union movement on the basis of adherance to revolutionary principles. Therefore, the bureaucracy is now fighting us tooth and nail. 3. Many comrades are somewhat disappointed at the slowness of our work in the trade union movement. They look back at the first year of our work in the trade unions and remember the sweep of sentiment against the wornout policies of Gompers and the endorsement of our policies by thousands of local unions, hundreds of central labor bodies, more than a dozen state federations, five or six international unions, and compare that record with the defeats and mere partial victories of the past eighteen months.

LaFollette and the Unions.

The organized workers of this country are so backward that they actually believe that LaFollette represents their interests and that if he is elected he will be "their" president. Because we oppose this middle class liberal back of the independent industrial and banking interests the workers think that we are opposing progress, and are insisting upon the formation of an independent labor party only out of "red" maliciousness. They look upon our nomination of Communist candidates as merely a move of our part to get our men elected at the expense of the "legitimate" labor movement.

We know that the LaFollette-Wheeler movement is simply an attempt on the part of middle class professional politicians to crawl into office by utilizing the cleavage which exists in the ranks of the capitalist class, and the discontent among the workers and small farmers. But the workers look upon LaFollette and their candidates who will serve their interests if he is elected.

The triumph of LaFollette among the rank and file of the organized workers is an indication of the weakness of the Communist influence among them. It is quite apparent that the bureaucracy is not entirely with LaFollette. The support of the A. F. of L. council was only thrown to him by the vote of Gompers. Lewis of the miners has a position on the republican committee. Duffy and Hutchenson of the carpenters are opposed to LaFollette, while Berry of the pressmen's union is stumping for Davis. Only the bureaucracies of the railroad men, the machinists, and the clothing workers have come out openly for him. All over the country there has been all kinds of stunts pulled off by the local labor fakers. Some support the democrats, some the republicans, some LaFollette — all depending as to how it suits their pocketts. But the rank and file of the organized workers are for LaFollette with the exception of minority sections of the clothing workers, food workers and coal miners.

Therefore, beside having to fight for our general trade union program as expressed by the T. U. E. L., we have added burden of fighting the backward political prejudices of the organized workers. Workers who were willing some time ago to support us on the basis of our fight for amalgamation, against the reactionaries who sold them out, and for the labor party, are today indifferent or hostile to us because they think they have now discovered an easier way to better their conditions than we offer—by voting for LaFollette.

The first year of the work of the T. U. E. L. was marked by many victories. The "Chicago" resolution on amalgamation swept thru the locals in this country and Canada. The railroad amalgamation plan secured the endorsement of thousands of railroad workers' locals. Fourteen state federations of labor endorsed the "Chicago" resolution. Six international unions endorsed it also. The rank and file of the organized workers were for our trade union program.

The Fakers Rally.

But the last eighteen months have shown a different aspect to our development. An industrial "boom" came, and formed a basis upon which the labor fakers rallied their forces and fought us. For some time the bureaucracy was of the opinion that our movement was of the usual character of a revolt of the "outs" against the "ins"—and they did not worry much as they had always been able to buy up the leaders of such revolts in the past. The present machines of the labor fakers contain many who gained position thru staging such fake "progressive" movements.

But soon they recognized that this was no mere movement of rival fakers. We went to the masses and stirred them up. We insisted upon awakening the organized workers to the necessity of them taking over control of their unions and throwing out the labor fakers. And the slaughter of fakers that took place in the Mainten-ance of Way Men's Union at the convention in 1922 when 19 out of 22 bureaucrats were fired (in spite of the fact that Flosdal, who was elected president, was merely a fake progressive) woke the bureaucracy up to a realization of the awful fate that awaited them if this movement made any more headway among the rank and file.

First of all the bureaucrats put their own camp in order. Those who had been flirting with the Communists were told to line up with Gompers or get out. Fitzpatrick and Knockles are a fine example of this. Then the drive against us began. The railroad shopmen's strike, and the miners' strike of 1922 found the fakers to smash us because these strikes were throwing the workers towards us. Pressure was brought to bear on all dissident central labor bodies such as Seattle. The propaganda was intensified. And the yellow socialists in some of the needle trades unions showed Gompers how to deal with the Communists by expelling and slugging the leaders of the left wing movements in the unions. At the last A. F. of L. convention Gompers showed that he had started a fight to a finish by expelling Bill Dunne from the convention, even tho Dunne was all alone.

These things have had a certain effect on many of our party members and adherents. Our political isolation, the bitter and often murderous opposition of the labor fakers, the betterment of the workers' position because of the "boom" and the whipping into line of those who were only flirting with the left movement, and the desertion of many "fair weather" radicals who when defeated for office left us—all these things have made our work more difficult in the trade unions.

Communist Opposition in Unions

But in spite of the reverses that we have suffered in the past months we have at least established ourselves as a definite factor in the trade union movement. In all of the battles that have been waged against the reactionary bureaucracies the Communists have been the leaders. We have added to the trade union movement of this continent a factor that was lacking in the past and which accounts for the backwardness of the movement as a whole: A definite Communist movement inside the trade unions for the purpose of winning the organized workers for revolutionary struggle against capitalism.

In the struggle against the Lewis machine at Indianapolis last January it was our party that led the opposition fight. And despite the fact that Lewis forced his policy thru the bitter struggle against him effectually stopped him from carrying out his threat to expell every progressive miner from the union as he intended doing prior to the convention. The same thing applies to the other unions, the clothing workers, machinists and carpenters. At the carpenters' convention Hutchenson, the reactionary president, denounced the Communists and "Fosterism" in a long speech in spite of the fact that he was not opposed by a definitely organized Communist opposition at the convention.

The struggle today in the trade unions is between the left wing led by Communists and the labor bureaucrats, the hangers-on of the bosses. We have established ourselves as the only forces able to fight against the reactionary and treacherous labor leaders who have handed over the trade unions to the bosses to be used as instruments of oppression of the workers in their struggle for better conditions.

But the unions while they are under the dominance of Gompers and his gang are a barrier on our way to a Communist mass party. The organized workers are an immense reservoir upon which we must draw. These workers have displayed sufficient class consciousness to join labor unions. They have been thru strikes which have shown them the government forces lined up against them in defense of the interests of the capitalists. They are approachable with Communist propaganda, but we must get into the unions in order to reach them.

It is impossible to imagine the working class of America fighting the capitalists serfdom in its present unorganized condition. The vast numbers who have never been organized in the unions must be organized, and again we face the fact that while Gompers and his gang holds sway they will block every step towards really organizing them. And it must be apparent to all that it is hopeless to attempt to organize the unorganized with the present craft from of organization. The labor unions can only be reorganized by the Communists working inside them for the purpose of gaining the adherence of the mass of the organized workers.

The organized workers constitute a weapon which if under Communist leadership will clear the way for the organization of the unorganized, and will enable the workers of this country to fight the capitalists for better living conditions. Persistent work in the trade unions is the most fertile field for Communist activity.

Win Organized Workers for Communism

Therefore we must increase our trade union work, instead of being lax in it. Therefore we must tighten our organization for this work instead of giving away to despair and petulence and loosening the bonds which alone enable us to work efficiently. The rapidly increasing unemployment, the growth of the open shop drives, (in the printing industry for instance the open shop has gained rapidly in the past year or so; open shop newspapers have increased from a few to over four hundred at the present time) all of these things aid us in our work of winning the organized workers for the fight against the bureaucracy, the reorganization of the trade unions, the organization of the unorganized and the Communist Party, as the leader in the struggle for the destruction of capitalism.

The road to a mass party of Communism on this continent lies before us and we can only travel toward that goal when we have based our party on shop nuclei, when we seriously build shop committees in the shops and factory embracing every worker for the purpose of fighting against the bosses, and when our party members are not only members of trade unions but also members of definite trade union fractions. In this way alone we can conquer the masses for Communism.

Mark Hanna Was Right

By JOSEPH M. COLDWELL.

SOME twenty odd years ago, Mark Hanna, who was then a power in the republican party, made a statement that the time was coming in this country when the political battles of the future would be fought along the lines of capital vs. labor. "When that time comes," he said, "the bulwarks of capitalism will be the bourbons of the south and the Roman Catholic church of the north."

Mark Hanna was a far-seeing man. He could see into the future better than many of us who called ourselves socialists. We could not imagine how these two opposing elements of society would ever have anything in common. But today, with the south organized into the Ku Klux Klan and the north with a strongly organized Roman Catholic church, we find both of them drawn together on one issue. And that issue is one that the working class is vitally interested in. It is an issue that organized labor of this country has fought for four years. Campaigns have been fought and men have been elected to office on that issue. Public sentiment had been created in favor of that issue. State laws had been passed as a result of that awakened public sentiment and finally a national law was passed and signed. Apparently a victory had been won, but the supreme court of the United States declared that law unconstitutional. The law I refer to is the Child Labor Law.

North and South Combine.

The labor movement of this country, led by many liberal minded persons, mustered up strength enough in congress, to have an amendment to the constitution passed prohibiting the employment of children under 18 years of age in the industries of this country. The amendment to the constitution must be passed by two-thirds of the states before it becomes a part of the United States constitution. One of the first states to reject this proposed amendment was the Ku Klux Klan dominated state of Georgia. This was to be expected.

Under the constitution of the state of Massachusetts all such matters are referred to the voters, for their acceptance or rejection, and the result of the vote is a mandate which the state legislature must obey. In accordance with the state law the question of this proposed amendment to the national constitution will be on the ballot at the coming election.

Everything seemed to favor the acceptance of this proposed amendment by the voters. The democratic party at its state convention at Worcester in September had a plank in its platform advocating the adoption of the amendment. The democratic candidate for governor, James F. Curley, was outspoken in favor of it. State labor organizations had urged its adoption by its members. As far as Massachusetts was concerned everything seemed to be favorable and it was only a question of the majority it would receive.

Then a bombshell was thrown, not by a "red" or by a "bolshevik," but by the Rev. Cardinal O'Donnell of the Roman Catholic church. In a circular letter over his signature, distributed to every parish priest under his charge, the cardinal recommends to every pastor to bring before his parishioners "the danger hidden in the proposed amendment," and to impress upon their congregations the necessity of voting against it.

Issue Child Labor.

The power of the cardinal may be judged by the act of Mr. Curley, the candidate of the democratic party for governor. Mr. Curley at once renounced his approval of the amendment, notwithstanding his former statements and notwithstanding the plank in the platform of the democratic party. So we now have the Ku Klux Klan of Georgia, in the south, and the Roman Catholic church of Massachusetts, of the north, working together on the same issue against labor. Both are opposed to a national child labor law. Both are in favor of letting each state deal with this question as it pleases. Both are working together in the interests of the employers of child labor and both are hollering about the sanctity of the home, the flag and the constitution. Mark Hanna was right when he said that the bulwarks of capitalism were the bourbons of the south and the Roman Catholic church of the north.

Politicians Will Put It Over.

Under the present laws thirteen states can prevent the adoption of any changes in the constitution. So the sooner those thirteen states have been placed in opposition to the child labor amendment the better the capitalists will be pleased, and then the politicians of the other states can, and probably will, vote in favor of it; when it has already been killed.

The attitude of the cardinal is not surprising. He is on to his job. It is the mission of established religions, all the world over, to protest against any changes in the existing order of things, when the proposed change would interfere with the interests of the ruling class. And it matters not what that form of religion is, whether it is Protestant or Catholic, Jewish or Mohammedan. Agnostics and so-called "free thinkers" will also be found on the side of the ruling classes in all questions where the laboring class are striving to better their conditions. There is only one clear line of demarkation and that is the class line. Your religious preference or your racial origin should have no place in your mind when you take part in political or economic issues. We must take our stand squarely with our class, the working class, or with our enemies, the capitalist class.

Must Free World of Capitalists.

Let the cardinals, the bishops, the rabbis and the ministers attend to their work of saving souls, our work is to save the bodies of the workers. Their ideals are spiritual, so they say, alright let them stick to their ideals and keep their hands out of our affairs that are materialistic. All we are looking for is a world freed from capitalists. That is our ideal, that is what we are working for. So vote for the child labor amendment wherever you have the opportunity. It is only one of the many things we want and which we will not get until we have Communism. Vote for Foster and Gitlow and all the candidates of the Workers Party on the ballot and you will be voting for Communism.

Chicago Party and League Members!

Poll Watchers Needed for Election Day.

PARTY and League members are asked to help the Party on election day, Nov. 4, by acting as poll watchers. This is to ensure an accurate count of all votes cast for the Workers (Communist) Party candidates. It is easy to be released from work on election day. The Party will need about 300 watchers. Are you ready to help? If you are, sign below and send it in to the Local Office, 166 W. Washington St., Room 303.

CUT OUT HERE

I will be a poll watcher on November 4th.

COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN SUCCESS

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

ARTHUR BRISBANE makes a novel defense of Coolidge's silence on the Ku Klux Klan. It would be illegal for the president to denounce any body of citizens, declares Arthur. That would not stop the president from denouncing the Klan if they were radicals aiming at the overthrow of the capitalist system. In that case the president would find himself impeached if he did not perform his duty to the capitalist system. Says Brisbane: "The duty of the president of the United States is to keep out of discussion and denunciations and not to use his official position for propaganda along the line of his own personal views, whatever they may be." That is the question "whatever they may be."

IT would be unfair to our readers or to Brisbane, who is a man of intelligence, to attempt a refutation of this balderdash. It is reported that before Arthur starts on his column he takes a little drink of prevolstead nia refreshment, and it m y be noticed that his writings vary from radical to conservative. Some people attribute this fluctuation to the origin of the inspiration. When he praises the Scotchmen who usually run England, it is presumed that the noted columnist has embraced the virtues of Haig and Haig. When he writes a jingoistic paragraph and calls for thousands of war airplanes, he may be so full of Old Crow that he cannot helping screaming after the fashion of the American eagle, and when he attacks the British government his spiritual pabulum may be Green River. Of course, this may not explain Brisbane's political gyrations, but why bother? He does not.

HEARST had a leaning toward LaFollette after the democratic convention committed suicide. It is rumored that he tried to land a position in the LaFollette camp, but was not satisfied with the prominence offered. He wanted to be the journalistic father of the freak of nature, but "Bob" was a jealous parent, so William Randolph sulked in his tent, damned LaFollette with faint praise and allowed his chief editorial writer to boost Coolidge, in about the only part of his press, except the scandal section, that is given much attention. It is also whispered that there are financial reasons for Hearst's favorism to Silent Cal.

PEOPLE with kind hearts, while they believe it serves the socialists right to be treated with contempt by their associates in the LaFollette united front, at the same time, almost shed tears of pity at the cold blooded manner in which their candidates have been ignored in this election, by those for whom they have completely defaced themselves. There are none in the LaFollette camp so humble, outside of a few pulpitless preachers, who are willing to associate politically in the company of the socialists. In New York, Illinois and even in Wisconsin, it is the same story.

"THIS is awful" said an old but now ex-member of the socialist party to me a few days ago. "In this state the socialists have been refraining from making socialist speeches in order to obey the ruling of Charles MacGowan of the C. P. P. A., hoping that he would endorse at least one of their candidates. Now, he turns around and endorses the Democrat Sprague. John H. Walker, endorses Deneen, while Fitzpatrick and the rest of them who were supported by the socialists in their attacks on the Communists scurried around until

CORONER CALLS JURY OF RICH FOR WHITEWASH

Tries to Shift Blame Off Railroad Co.

Workers of the northwest side are indignant at the action of Coroner Oscar Wolff in carefully handpicking a fine assortment of prominent capitalists to "investigate" the murder of ten people by the law-breaking Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad at the company's North avenue crossing Sunday morning when a switch engine shoved a freight car into a crowded street car.

Coroner Wants Whitewash.

The effort of the coroner to get a whitewash for the railroad company by pretending that "prominent Chicagoans" of whom he has prepared a list of thirty from which to select a jury of six to conduct an "investigation," is pointed out as proof that Coroner Wolff is intending to get a select jury of "prominent capitalists," who can be relied on to lay the blame on some poor railway employe or the street car conductor, instead of upon the Milwaukee railroad.

To Make Towerman the Goat.

This opinion is corroborated by the coroner giving out his "belief" in advance of any investigation to the effect that "liquor was the cause of the fatal crash." By this, Wolff tries to direct attention from the criminal action of the Milwaukee railroad, to a poor employe, Joseph Brahe, the one-armed towerman, whom he and the railroad company are now quite ready to make the goat.

"Life Job" in Prison—Maybe.

This poor devil is likely to pay heavily for his acceptance of the offer as the DAILY WORKER mentioned yesterday, was the custom of railway companies, of a "life job" in place of heavy damages for injury in previous accidents. In Brahe's case, he got the miserable wage of $60 a month to guard the lives of thousands at the crossing since he lost his arm working for the company.

The coroner is now trying to turn the whole blame on this crippled worker because he bought a couple of drinks to cash his pay check several hours before the crash. Other outfits interested in keeping the railway company out of trouble, such as the Illinois Commerce Commission are also "investigating." Workers' organizations are not invited.

Meanwhile it develops that the DAILY WORKER'S story of the workers whose lives have been continually endangered by these open crossings, having vainly protested at the company's failure to elevate its tracks in working class districts as well as in the wealthy residential section, has evoked aldermanic interest.

Alderman Arthur Albert, in whose district the disaster occurred, declares that the city passed an ordinance a long time ago, ordering all railroads to elevate their tracks inside the city limits. The ridiculous excuse of the Milwaukee railroad, for continued and open defiance of this law, is that it "did not have money enough."

Lives Cheaper Than Elevation.

This clear and flagrant violation of law has not been even whispered about by the grafters in the city council, and if the workers of the northwest district do not put some pressure on the supposed representatives.

NEW YORK WORKERS TO CELEBRATE RUSSIAN REVOLUTION ON NOV. 7

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 3.—On Friday evening, Nov. 7, the workers of Greater New York will celebrate the seventh anniversary of the Russian Revolution with two great mass meeting—at Central Opera House, 67th street and Third avenue, New York, and at Amalgamated Temple, Arlon Place, Brooklyn.

Every worker who rejoices at the growing power of the Soviets, every worker who thrills to the slogan "All Power to the Workers," will attend one of these meetings to express his solidarity with the workers of Russia on this anniversary of the hour of their success.

CIRCLE KNIGHTS WALLOP KLAN IN BIG BATTLE

Governor Alleged to Be Member of Klan

NILES, Ohio, Nov. 3.—The Ku Klux Mayor Harvey C. Kistler, finally showed up Monday morning after hiding out since rioting began over his refusal to permit anti-Klan forces to parade while giving a permit to the klukers. It is thought that he was heavily guarded in hiding by klansmen.

Klan Mayor Welcomes Whitewash.

In cheerful indifference to the fact that four men were killed, dozens wounded and the city and countryside turned into a battleground, Kistler said that he had performed his "entire duty."

The fact that Kistler invites an "investigation" by Governor Donahey, and even agrees in advance to abide by Donahey's decision, indicates that the governor also is a member of the Ku Klux Klan. This is borne out by the reluctance of the governor in sending in troops, and in the action of the troops releasing klukers who were armed and who had fired at crowds.

Workers Ready to Battle.

These events are stirring up the anger of residents, particularly the great number of foreign-born steel workers who have been the object of Klan persecution. Hungarian and Italian workers especially are done sent troops in to save themselves from insult, abuse, and intimidation by Klan bullies, by being humble and turning the other cheek to have it tarred and feathered. They stopped the Klan parade and are talking among themselves that the governor with trying to save the kluxers from deserved retribution.

The troops are still in possession of the city, and will be withdrawn, it is believed, very gradually, to allow the Klan to get out from under their responsibility for the murders and their resulting rout.

GAG RULE OF MC KEESPORT, PA. BROKEN SUNDAY

Hall Closed; Meeting Is Held in Barber Shop

McKEESPORT, Pa., Nov. 3. — The record of the mayor of this city of the steel trust, that he has prevented all Communist meetings for three years, was broken yesterday when the Workers Party overcame all obstacles put in the way, including the last minute closing of the Central Labor Union Hall, and held a successful campaign meeting for Foster and Gitlow.

Earl Browder, of Chicago, John Otis of Braddock, and O. Yeager of Pittsburgh, had been advertised to speak. The mayor boasted yesterday that he would "use all the power of his office" to prevent the meeting from being held. The Central Labor Union Hall had been rented for the meeting, with the full knowledge of the officials of that body supporters of LaFollette, that it was for a Workers Party meeting. But the threats of the mayor and chief of police succeeded in intimidating the LaFollette supporters, so that they locked the hall and refused to let the meeting proceed.

The large crowd that had assembled to hear the Communist message was very angry at the inexcusable conduct of the union officials. But determined that the three-years gag law in McKeesport should finally be broken, the local committee quickly made arrangements to use the barber shop of Comrade Mikades nearby to hold the meeting. The crowd enthusiastically followed the lead, went to the barber shop, and crowding into the small room and standing up for one hour and a half, listened to the Communist election campaign message. The workers of McKeesport greeted the speeches with enthusiasm, especially the pledge that the Workers Party would find ways and means to continue to bring Communism to their town, and ended the meeting by contributing liberally to the campaign fund.

TAMMANY HALL WRECKS THE THIRD PARTY

Mirage Used to Lure Workers Fades Out

J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

BUFFALO, N. Y.—NOV. 3.—The last minute swing of the Gompers crowd in the New York labor movement to the democratic candidacy of John Wall-street Davis has torpedoed the LaFollette promise of a third party, "after the election," that was to be brought into being at the January meeting of the conference for progressive political action.

This is the only after-the-election meaning that can be attached to the action of the Building Trades Council, the Central Trades and Labor Council, and lastly the New York City and State Allied Printing Trades Councils in repudiating the LaFollette candidacy, and championing the cause of Morgan's personal attorney.

It Was "Radical Proof."

The New York central labor body is Gompers' personal pet. He reorganized it, in the days following the war, to make it "radical proof."

Gompers personally placed the Tammany Hall crowd in power that now tries to swing labor, in the city and state, in line for the democratic party, that wouldn't even entertain serious consideration of the pitiful labor program that Samuel Gompers himself brought to the Madison Square Garden convention, in New York City, last summer.

It was a 50-50 proposition as to whether Gompers himself did or did not inspire the change of front of his New York labor officialdom. Whether he did, or did not, it certainly indicates that no more for the promised "third party," that led large numbers to desert the fight for the national farmer-labor party, will be made at the El Paso, Texas, convention of the American Federation of Labor, now only a few days off.

Action Not Surprising.

The action of the labor wing of Tammany Hall is not surprising. It could easily be predicted. It is in keeping with the whole record of the Tammany Hall machine gangsters within the New York organized labor movement.

The Communists in New York have bitterly fought this crowd. But the socialists and the LaFollette elements lined up with them to fight the Communists; just as the socialist betrayal and the LaFollette wave swept large elements, in all sections of the nation, in the organized labor and farmer movements, into the most reactionary deals with the place-hunting politicians of the two old parties.

From the beginning of the campaign the LaFollette crowd has been supporting the Tammany Hall governor, Al Smith, candidate for re-election.

In Illinois, the LaFollette campaign has thrown its suport to Len Small, republican, candidate for re-election as governor, with the support of the Ku Klux Klan. Then for United States senator, it deserted its own candidate, and thru LaFollette's Illinois manager, Charles McGowan, is now supporting the democratic candidate, the American Legionnaire, Col. A. A. Sprague, for the senate.

In Minnesota the farmer-labor movement is being crucified thru the many deals being made with the politicians of the parties of the lakelords, the bankers and the grain gamblers. The notable instance is the endorsement of the republican candidate for congress, Oscar Keller, in the St. Paul district, against the Communist, J. F. Emme, regularly nom-

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR CAMPAIGN FOR LA FOLLETTE WAS FIZZLE, DECLARES WM. Z. FOSTER

By HARRISON GEORGE.

William Z. Foster, candidate for president of the United States on a program calling for the establishment of a soviet republic, gave out his "last word" in an interview last night, after returning from a campaign in which he has travelled about 18,000 miles, spoken to unreckoned tens of thousands of workers at 52 meetings during the last two months.

"The Workers Party can be proud of its accomplishments in this election," said Foster, "not because of any results in total votes shown on the returns, however. We are too well acquainted with the habits of 'democracy' in counting out the votes of Communists to expect our ballots to be counted—altho every Communist and class-conscious worker will cast his or her vote and help our party to watch the counting as closely as possible.

"But the result the Workers Party has accomplished in spite of all opposition is that we have laid a definite basis for our party in an educational and organizational way. We have become an active factor in the struggles of the American working class to overthrow capitalism.

"That our votes may not be counted, just as in Germany today, the counter-revolutionary social democrats are even imprisoning Communist candidates, former and present members of the reichstag, is to be expected. That our success in the face of these difficulties exists in the building up of our party and its position of greater influence among workers, is parallel to the certain victory of our German comrades where millions of Communist votes will be cast.

"The outstanding feature of organ-

BASCOM SLEMP'S COUSIN HOLDS THE G. O. P. BAG IN VA.

Elephantites Have Very Elastic Morals

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3. — State Chairman Crupper of the "lily white" republican organization in Virginia, admitted on the stand before the senate committee investigating campaign funds, that he had sent $5,000 into Wise county, one of the 13 counties making up the 9th congressional district of the Old Dominion. A cousin of Bascom Slemp, secretary to Coolidge, has charge of spending the money. Treasurer Hodges of the republican national committee had sent $10,000 to Crupper for use in the state.

How easy are the moral problems of republican management in Virginia was indicated by Crupper when he testified that he had drawn a check for $300, signed it, and then went out to find the name of an influential Negro to whom he should make it payable. He sent for the chairman of the "lily black" organization, which has been regularly thrown out of national conventions for the past 20 years, and asked him whose name should be written into the check. This rival chairman being a Negro, Crupper refused to permit him to come to Crupper's office in the federal building for a talk, "because I was going to talk money and I didn't want to do that inside the federal building." They met on the street outside. The check was made payable to the treasurer of the Negro organization, after Crupper had asked that they hold a series of meetings in behalf of Coolidge. The colored treasurer brought the check before the senate committee.

HOW TO VOTE

When you go the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1924, to vote for the WORKERS PARTY candidates on the presidential, state and congressional tickets, remember to place a cross at the side of each Workers Party candidate. Otherwise, your opinion will not be registered. Acording to the capitalist laws of Illinois, voters casting their preferences for candidates on an independent ticket, or those candidates who are on the ballot by petition, a cross must be placed by the side of each presidential elector and other candidates. This is not the case with the parties that are so-called lawful parties, in which case a cross placed at the top of the ballot for the particular party you vote for registers for the entire ticket. But to record yourself for the Workers (Communist) Party candidates, Foster and Gitlow, you must vote for each of the 29 Workers Party electors, and then for the other Workers Party candidates also. Remember this so that your Communist vote will count.

HUGHES' EDICT BANISHES WIFE FROM HUSBAND

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3.—Anna Lerner, the Philadelphia girl, born in Russia and hence an alien altho married to an American war veteran and native-born citizen, remains an exile in Russia altho the state department says that it sent a letter on August 30 to the American consul at Riga, authorizing her return to this country. A cable from Moscow to the American Civil Liberties Union announces that the Riga consulate was on October 14 still waiting to receive this instruction from Washington.

J. Preston Doughton, chief of the visa office in the department, says he is going to discuss with Under-secretary Grew the loss of the message. No promise is made that any haste will be made in assisting the exile to return.

Anna Lerner came to America when only six years old. When she was 19, in 1922, she went to Russia as a stenographer for the Kusbas colony in Siberia. She married Noah Lerner, an American, who returned to the United States expecting her to follow soon afterward. But she was refused a visa by American consuls, despite intervention by Sen. LaFollette and Sen. Norris, because Doughton and Secretary Hughes held that she was a dangerous radical.

MORGAN'S AXE SWINGS ON THREE PERSIANS FOR DEATH OF DICK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The remaining two of the three men convicted of the murder of Major Robert Imbrie, United States vice-consul to Persia, have been executed, according to a dispatch from Teheran. The first was executed soon after sentence was passed.

LABOR FAKERS FIGHTING LIKE KILKENNY CATS

lead labor in the campaign has been the utter ideological bankruptcy of its reactionary leadership. It is an example of the low grade unionism, the failure to educate the union membership, the results of the practice of betrayal, the unprincipled scramble for individual interests of the whole tribe of labor faker bureaucracy, that the nation-wide money for LaFollette was a fizzle.

"Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L. announces that out of the three million members of the A. F. of L., it could only raise $23,786.83. This is less than a cent a member, and illustrates the fact that the labor fakers in control of the A. F. of L. are unable to inspire the workers in any cause or upon any occasion.

"This was admitted a few years ago by Gompers, when a strike in his own union, the Cigar Makers' Union, needed assistance. Gompers said that an appeal for money sent out to the whole A. F. of L. didn't yield enough to pay the postage on it. Such is the fruits of resistance of Gompers and his kind to revolutionary education of the workers and Communist teachings of class solidarity.

Communists' Fine Campaign Record.

"Just look at the difference," said Comrade Foster, "between the workers who are controlled by Gompers, and the members of the Workers Party, in their support of candidates in this campaign. Gompers couldn't get even one cent a member out of the A. F. of L. membership for the LaFollette campaign fund. But the Workers Party, with approximately 25,000 members, raised $100,000 without any extraordinary effort. Four dollars against a penny is a record for the labor fakers to ponder over.

"The events of the election campaign have been most significant in at least two ways. First, it shows that millions of workers are breaking away from old ideas, which means they are set in motion never to stop completely until they arrive at proletarian revolution. They may be long on the road and may linger at LaFollettism, but whether they know it or not, they are on the road to revolution.

Labor Bureaucracy Split.

"The second important development of the campaign is the split in the labor bureaucracy. The chickens hatched out by Sam Gompers have come home to roost on his tombstone. The labor fakers are falling out among themselves, inevitably and unavoidably as a result of the teaching of the whole Gompers' school of "non-partisan" class collaboration with capitalist political parties.

"A few weeks ago a meeting was held in Washington at which all the labor bureaucrats opposed to the Gompers-LaFollette alliance came to an agreement and organized a method to fight Gompers' machine. This group was headed by such outstanding traitors as Major Berry of the pressmen, Hutchenson of the carpenters, and agents of John L. Lewis, who had sold out to Coolidge.

"This gang has formed a 'non-partisan' group inside the A. F. of L. to split Gompers' machine and oppose LaFollette because they feel their interests as individuals in capitalist political parties may be endangered. It is to be remembered that Berry in the Seattle convention of the A. F. of L. was the one who led the fight for a labor party. Now he leads opposition to anything that is slightly suspected of having a labor tinge.

Socialist Betrayers Betrayed.

"The nastiest bunch of political crooks in the labor movement is that represented by Sigman of the I. L. G. W., who with all his yellow socialist stripe are loudly wailing that the executive council of the Central Trades and Labor Council of New York has betrayed them by switching from LaFollette to Davis at the last minute.

"It comes with poor grace from these arch-traitors to the interests of labor, to howl about being betrayed when Sigman and his kind have done everything in their power to drive out all revolutionary workers from their organizations, have given up themselves all pretense of revolutionary principles. It is the old case of the pot calling the kettle black. Just fresh from betraying his own union, this Judge, Sigman, is a fine bird to be croaking "traitor" at Tammany Hall. Communists expect just as little from one as from the other."

Asked if he would prophesy how soon a Communist might be elected as national leader, Comrade Foster remarked that prophesy was not in his line, adding, "But just as certain as sunrise a Communist will be elected, not as president, but as chairman of the council of commissars in the Soviet Republic of the United States of America."

FEDERAL FINK NOT CITIZEN

Spolansky put over such a colossal fraud in the Daily News that William Fort, who has been writing Spolansky's articles for him, finds himself out of a job. Spolansky's services as a special agent of the bureau of investigation, United States department of justice, were also cut short—about the same time that Spolansky revealed his Americanism to be a fake, by making overtures to Federal Judge Campbell's court for his second citizenship papers.

Fred Schlotfeldt, another 100 per cent American, admitted to the DAILY WORKER that Spolansky may not get his citizenship papers as soon as he would like to have them. "It's a ticklish subject, now that Spolansky has been writing those 'red' stories," said Schlotfeldt. "Spolansky will not be able to get his papers outside the regular channels, and must post a notice of intention to file 90 days previous to court action."

Down in the Mouth.

Spolansky's wire pulling has made him very irritable, for he swore vilely at the DAILY WORKER reporter when asked how he was getting along in his so far unsuccessful attempt to become a hundred per cent American. Spolansky's Americanism means money to him, for he cannot very well continue his denunciation of class conscious foreigners and praise of one hundred per cent American scabs now that the DAILY WORKER has exposed the fact that Spolansky is still knocking to be admitted as a one hundred per cent patriotic citizen.

A member of the editorial staff of the Daily News, evidently ashamed of Spolansky's bunk in the Daily News, told the DAILY WORKER that Spolansky is trying to get the paper to print the rest of his series, which has not yet seen the light of print. He was hard put to explain why Spolansky's articles were cut short after such prodigious advertising.

News Steers Clear of Responsibility.

E. C. Dennis, managing editor of the Daily News, refused to place the responsibility for Spolansky's lies on his paper. "Spolansky must be responsible for his own statements," Dennis told the DAILY WORKER. "I will be glad if you will point out any correction in his stories."

DAILY WORKER reporter had pointed out three lies in one sentence of Spolansky's bunk, Dennis coughed and spattered and after a long pause, replied, "I thank you very much for giving me the correction."

No one interviewed by the DAILY WORKER had a good word for Spolansky. J. Hamlin, chief of the bureau of investigation of the United States department of justice, said his department had given Spolansky no aid in his articles. "I don't know much about Spolansky. I didn't know anything about his 'red' articles until I saw them advertised on the billboards." Hamlin told the DAILY WORKER. He even refused to say that Spolansky was a good stool-pigeon.

"Jake" Exaggerates Wildly.

Special investigator Jamie, another stool pigeon who worked with Spolansky, told the DAILY WORKER. "Unless they're good investigators they don't last long here. Spolansky wasn't with the bureau very long. We did not consider him an old timer. You know what kind of stuff Spolansky has been putting in the paper as well as I do." Fred Schlotfeldt also seemed very much amused at Spolansky's stories. "You know how Jake is," he told the DAILY WORKER. "He exaggerates wildly to say the least."

The general opinion of old time newspaper reporters around the Federal Building is that the Daily News was slipped a lemon. "I'm surprised that the News fell for him," said one reporter, when informed that Chicago's famous one hundred per cent American is frantically trying to become naturalized. "The stuff he printed was so ridiculous all the newspaper men got a good laugh out of it. The News probably cut the stuff short because the people got sick of Spolansky's twaddle."

Real Name Shpolinsky.

Spolansky was born in Odessa, Russia, in 1891, and came to America in 1909, the DAILY WORKER reveals. His real name is Jacob Shpolinsky, but his mania for posing as an American patriot induced him to change it to its present form. Spolansky, after working as a cook in a restaurant, and in lumber camps near Seattle, married a professional actress and settled down to running an elevator in a State St. store. Spolansky then did some dirty work in the army and since 1919 has been known as a professional stool pigeon.

Spolansky sold himself to the employers during the war, when as an employe of the treasury department, he drummed up trade for the international bankers. Spolansky came to the notice of the employers by vigorously pushing the sale of liberty bonds.

In fact since changing his name, Shpolinsky has adopted the psychology of a typical one hundred per cent American. He has stooled on his fellow countrymen, being especially active in the interests of United States steel corporation in having good union men deported to Russia. He has engaged in numerous side lines, making his colleagues at the Federal Building jealous and himself wealthier by his deals in getting Russians past the immigration officials, according to his friends at the Federal Building. Spolansky is able, they declare, to work his liquor and other grafts more successfully because he is a citizen of Russia, and it in touch with Russian monarchists who are anxious to come to this country and be just as good one hundred per cent Americans as Spolansky. They evidently consider this the land of golden opportunity for patriots of that stripe.

Leave Story, Gets Ha Ha!

Schlotfeldt, from whom Spolansky is trying to get the naturalization papers which will make him eligible for further stool pigeon jobs, had a good laugh over the picture Spolansky painted of himself stalking the "reds" in Michigan. "That's my home town, you know," said Schlotfeldt. "Poor Jake had to cover himself up with leaves."

The general reaction to Spolansky's articles in the News, coming as it did, unfortunately, at the same time as Spolansky's difficulty in becoming naturalized, has killed his chances of being promoted to even the ranks of the second rate stool pigeons. Spolansky is now a back number as a labor stool pigeon, and the Daily News will have a lot of explaining to do.

they located a capitalist candidate. It is most ungrateful on the part of the labor leaders and the progressives." These who have tears prepared to water the grave of the socialist party out with them.

THE S. L. P. is still in the field and stoutly defending "Americanism" against all comers. Their presidential candiate is named Johns. He uses the radio as frequently as President Coolidge. A reporter from New York World, interviewed Johns, recently and was quite surprised to learn that the S. L. P. candidate did not expect to be elected in the next fifty years and that it was possible an S. L. P. candidate might not be elected inside of 200 years. Johns however was a long distance optimist and was as full of hope as a dope friend.

JOHNS had a nice little blue print which showed how the S. L. P. revolution would function, from the North Pole to the South and from 45 Rose street, New York to the Island of Yap. If anybody loses a toe nail during the voting, the Communists will be to blame, as the S. L. P. has it all over Ghandi and J. Christ when it came to turning the other cheek. They only get mad when they see a Communist—an American Communist. They believe the Russian Communists can be tolerated—in Russia.

"I HOPE I need not say that we don't advocate violent measures," continued Johns as the reporter glanced at the picture of a red flag. "We, more than others, deplore and despise the I. W. W. We stand for revolution, yes, but a peaceful revolution which can be brought about in the civilized way of counting noses at the ballot box." The S. L. P. never misses an opportunity to emphasize its devotion to capitalist civilization which is anything but peaceful. The S. L. P. goes out of its way to attack other working class organizations, always being careful to suggest to the department of justice that its rivals in the radical movement are violators of the law and should be sent to jail. As long as the S. L. P. is in existence the attorney general can afford to economize on the employment of stoolpigeons.

SENATOR BORAH is expected to bring the question of Russian recognition up in the senate during the next session of congress. Perhaps when the election campaign is over, LaFollette and his alleged progressives may find courage to again associate themselves with Borah in the movement for resumption of diplomatic relations with Russia. The fact that France has recognized the Soviet Republic gives the cause a big impetus in the United States. It is also clearly established that the British foreign office was responsible for the Zinoviev forgery. This is another peg on which the anti-Soviet ranters expected to hang arguments.

BOWERMAN OF I. W. W. RUMP G. E. B. CAUSES ARREST OF WOBBLY

That Fred Bowerman of the Injunctionite wing of the I. W. W. had laid a frame-up plan with the police and caused Arthur Linn of the agriculturist workers to be arrested and railroaded to the Chicago bridewell, was charged on the the floor of the I. W. W. convention Monday afternoon. Linn is still in jail, but Wm. Hanley of his union, is trying to get him released on bond to state the facts before the delegates.

ROWAN FACTION OF I. W. W. ISSUES CALL FOR SPLIT

of the rump general executive board, and P. D. Ryan is declared to be the new chairman of the general executive board and general organizer of the new organization to take Griffith's place. A "program of action" has been issued by this group, which hopes to split the whole I. W. W. wide open, and this program is announced as an "emergency program."

The Splitters.

The new organization, according to the statement, is represented by the general construction workers, the metal machinery workers, the railroad workers and the lumber workers. All other unions are invited to join in the move to wreck the old I. W. W.

The name of James Bowerman, one of the leaders of the Rowan-Bowerman faction in the I. W. W. and champion of the injunction, was linked with stoolpigeons by J. Minnoli, secretary of Industrial Union 330, who testified before the I. W. W. convention in Emmet Memorial Hall yesterday. Minnoli told the convention he has suspected Bowerman since 1920, when Bowerman was overfriendly to Leo Reese, who was exposed as a labor spy.

"At the convention of 1919 Leo Reese who attended as an observer from Akron sang the praises of Bowerman," said Minnoli. "When we returned to Akron, it was learned that Reese acted as one of the most trusted stoolpigeons working within the I. W. W. and the Machinists' Union. I was arrested and held for deportation, and Reese, who visited me in prison and brought me food and clothing, was found to have signed my warrant under a false name. He confessed and revealed that he was receiving $250.00 a month as a stoolpigeon. Reese was always boosting Bowerman, telling what wonderful ideas he had, and how the organization should put him on the G. E. B. and allowed him to carry these ideas out.

"Now I believe Bowerman has been carrying out those ideas. The injunction in the capitalist courts which has done much to disrupt the I. W. W. is one of them. I have heard that there is a connection between Bowerman and A. Ballin, the notorious labor spy."

Tomorrow Judge Dennis E. Sullivan, who made his reputation with the employers of labor by allowing police to beat girl garment strikers and then sentencing the girls to long terms in jail, will have the pleasure of sitting in judgement on the I. W. W. Sullivan will hear a plea of the Rowan lawyers that the I. W. W. funds be released to pay expenses of Rowan's lawyers.

STRUCTURAL IRON WORKER FILES MOTION FOR A CHANGE OF VENUE

(Special to the Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 3.—John McNamara, secretary and business agent for the local Structural Iron Workers' Union, indicted on four blackmail charges in connection with alleged explosions at the new million dollar Elks club after, it is charged, contractors failed to employ men favored by McNamara, today filed a motion for a change of venue from Judge James A. Collins of the criminal court.

Patten, the Gambler, Is in the Limelight Now; But Shadow Awaits Him

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, James A. Patten, the multi-millionaire wheat gambler, pats himself on the back for another good deed he believes he has committed, in donating a parcel of land valued at $1,500,000 to various religious enterprises.

Patten isn't very different from the robbers of old, who stole much and then gave a little to the church.

* * * *

Before he retired Patten was one of the biggest plungers on the board of trade. Some of his coups netted millions.

Instead of remaining on his grandfather's farm, where he would be compelled to fight for a living from the soil, Patten left Freeland Corners, Illinois, and came to Chicago, and went into the grain business from its more profitable selling end. He got his training from those bucaneers in the buying and selling of food products—Bartlett, Frazier & Carrington.

* * * *

Patten thus became one of the big pillars in the robbery system that is driving millions of farmers into bankruptcy; that is rapidly creating in the United States a landless peasantry.

His religious bigotry no doubt allows him to feel that he is now making peace with his God; if he ever admits that he has brought misery and want to large numbers of his fellow men.

* * * *

One of Patten's first gifts was the luxurious Patten Gymnasium donated to the Northwestern University, a Methodist institution located in his own home town, in Evanston, Chicago's suburb of the intellectual bourgeoisie.

But Patten is Presbyterian and his present gifts go to the board of education of the Presbyterian Church, to the Evanston Hospital and the Presbyterian Old People's Home. There is a lucky combination. If the good Presbyterian children accept the "goose step education" that is prepared for them by Patten's disciples, thus going thru life willing servants of their capitalist masters, they may find a place in their declining years, among other outcasts, in the Presbyterian Old People's Home. Patten is at least trying to instill some order and system in his capitalist chaos.

* * * *

"He wants to see some results while he is still alive," explained Mrs. Patten to the reporters who came to get the usual interviews, Patten himself being unavailable. And it is good for Patten that he thus taken thru by the forelock.

It it will not be for long that the workers and farmers will be content to be plundered out of billions of wealth annually, receiving but a pittance in return for their arduous labors. Whether Patten knows this or not, he is wise to get a little publicity and notoriety in his own press now.

* * * *

Patten is a director in banks, railroads and public utility trusts. Look at the list: Continental & Commercial National Bank of Chicago; City National Bank of Evanston; People's Gas, Light and Coke Company; Commonwealth Edison Co.; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. That is quite different from being a clerk in a country store; an occupation followed by Patten in 1869-71; a start similar to that of John D. Rockefeller, in the days when capitalism was young in America.

* * * *

It is safe to say that Patten did no useful work after leaving the country store. Newsies may be pinched in the alleys of the big city for rolling a game of dice. That is called gambling. But Patten and his friends, on the board of trade, gambling in the prices of the nation's food, are safe from the policemen's club. That is business. There is so much money to be won in this form of gambling that it has become respectable.

* * * *

Patten's profits became so great that he was able to retire without an old age pension, and spend his time rearing monuments to himself, out of his winnings, while still alive; gymnasiums, religious schools, old people's homes and what not.

But when the workers and exploited farmers take over all power the memory of Patten and his gifts will be blotted out. If students, in their studies of the history of the capitalist era, ever come across his name, they will know him as one who fattened off the agony of his fellow man.

Patten is having the limelight turned on him now. He is wise, for he will soon be in the shadow a long, long time.

INDIANA KLAN JUDGE REFUSED TO TRY BALLOT FRAUD CASE ON GROUND HE MAY BE INVOLVED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 31.—Judge Elmer Lockyear, before whom a case was brought by eleven democrats charging five local prominent republicans with misuse of the absent voters' law, refused to hear the proceedings today on the grounds that as a candidate himself, the facts stated thus far would cover so much territory that he would be included.

According to court officials the charges brought against the republican leaders, County Clerk Frank Grange, Deputy Clerk Harry Anderson, Ben Bartlett, Otto Klein and Art Lillicap were specific.

WHILE the existing craft unions are constantly loosing ground and facing complete annihilation by the onslaughts of the bosses due to their inefficient antiquated methods and forms of organization and stupid reactionary leadership, the DAILY WORKER Bricklayers' Union is strengthening its forces. It is destined to grow and become powerful, inspired as it is by real revolutionary zeal and composed of militants who know that building of labor's press is not only the greatest necessity but also the greatest service to the cause of the working class.

inated in the primaries on the farmer-labor party ticket.

In Montana, Wheeler, the LaFollette vice-presidential candidate, openly repudiates Anderson, the farmer-labor candidate for U. S. senator, and urges the election of the democratic party's national chairman, Walsh, the corporation lawyer and sponsor of anti-labor legislation.

The Chaos Is Complete.

It needed only the action of the Gompers' crowd in New York City, in endorsing Morgan's lawyer, to make the chaos complete.

This is only another result made possible by the war of the socialists, the Hillquits and the Bergers, of the wavering labor officials who made some claims to militancy, of the stripe of Fitzpatrick, Hillman and Mahoney, upon the conscious effort of great numbers of workers and farmers, thrown in the saddle, to build this year for a real farmer-labor party. Instead of building the party of the working class, these elements turned to one of the worst enemies of the farmer-labor party, to U. S. Senator LaFollette, and at the Cleveland gathering of the conference for progressive political action, won support with the claim that they would organize a "third party" after the election.

That is one the succulent phases of "the LaFollette illusion" that has duped large numbers of workers and poor farmers into supporting the greatest treason to their own class interests.

Large numbers of workers in the nation, viewing the New York developments, must realize that it was thru the weakening of the farmer-labor party cause, thru the treason of the socialists and the so-called labor progressives, that has now made it possible for Gompers and his friends to "deliver" their support in New York to Morgan's Davis and Tammany Hall's Al Smith.

When the Mirage Fades.

The whole mirage of "the third party," that was used to lure the workers and farmers away from their own farmer-labor party, will fade out when the American Federation of Labor meets in annual convention at Los Angeles. It will be a setback to even the least effort to alienate the workers and farmers away from the two old parties of Wall Street.

The complete disillusionment will come when the conference for progressive political action, Tammany Hall-controlled in New York City and state, gathers in fix after the election meeting and does nothing.

Completely disillusioned the rank and file of the workers and farmers must then take up the struggle anew and blaze new paths of class power. Then they will be willing to listen more than ever to what the Communists have to say to them.

School Breaks Down.

GALESBURG, Ill., Nov. 3. — Mrs. Frank Shapley, 31, of Knoxville, was crushed fatally and a score of others injured when the floor of the Union school house, seven miles east of Galesburg gave way during a pot luck supper last night.

More than 150 persons were in the building when it was plunged into darkness and the floor sank beneath their feet. And screams of pain and fright, more than 100 were hurled into the basement where Mrs. Shapley and a score of others were preparing the supper.

Investigation showed the walls of the building had worked outward gradually, permitting the floor beams to fall.

NEW YORK COMRADES KEEP FEB. 1ST OPEN FOR LENIN MEETING

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Workers Party District No. 2 is making preparations for a big meeting to commemorate the death of Comrade Lenin. The meeting will be on February 1, 1925, at the Madison Square Garden. All Workers Party units are instructed not to hold any other affairs on Feb. 1, and to begin making preparations to work for the success of the Lenin Memorial meeting. Sympathic organizations are requested to refrain from holding any affairs on Feb. 1.

AMERICAN ENGINEER LEAVES UNITED STATES FOR RUSSIA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Engineer John W. Powell of Welch, W. Va., left for Moscow on the S. S. Estonia on October 22. He has been engaged by the Kuzbas Colony to take charge of the development of their mines at Kemerovo, Siberia. The chief mining engineer at Kuzbas, Alfred Pearson, Jr., is now superintending the Lenine coal mines—formerly Kolchugina—while Mr. Powell is to replace him at Kemerovo.

Powell has had 32 years experience in coal mining in all parts of the United States and Canada. His 16 years experience in the steep pitching veins in the state of Washington, Alberta and British Columbia render him a most useful person in approaching the coal mining problems of Kuznetzky Basin, where the seams pitch from 10 to 75 degrees. Mr. Powell is recognized as an authority on such mining problems and is a frequent contributor to the various mining journals.

Powell was selected by the Kuzbas management board for the post from 83 applications which were made from all parts of the United States and Canada.

WORKINGWOMAN DITCHES RED-BAITING SHEET AND SUPPORTS DAILY WORKER EXCLUSIVELY

To the DAILY WORKER: I wish to call attention of our readers to a letter I wrote to the "Daily News" about February 1924 in the hope that many will follow my example:

Circulation Department,
The Daily News,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: Please discontinue the Daily News to the above address, as we now have in our city the DAILY WORKER, which is a working class paper. As a workingwoman I consider it my duty to patronize my own class paper. Yours truly, Mrs. Lee Green.

I believe we should in every possible way refuse to pay our hard earned money for the spreading of capitalist propaganda. The recent atrocious lies panned off on the readers of the "Daily News" in the Spolansky red baiting articles is an instance that proves my contention.

Yours for Communism, MRS. LEE GREEN.

GENERAL WU'S FORCES FLYING IN DISORDER BEFORE CHANG ARMY

(Special to the Daily Worker)

TIEN TSIN, China, Nov. 3.—Following a day long battle near Yang Tsun between troops under the Christian General Eng Yuhsiang and General Wu Pei Fu, the latter's Chihli army was routed, according to fugitives arriving here today. Most of General Wu Pei Fu's forces that were operating in the sector of Yangtsun are fleeing towards this city. More than 1,000 are already within the city proper and the suburbs.

LABOR PARTY IDEA DROPPED BY HILLQUIT

Workers Party Criticism Proven Justified

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 3.—In a statement published in the New Leader on Saturday, Oct. 25, Morris Hillquit, leader of the socialist party, makes clear that he has abandoned all pretense of working for the formation of a labor party at the January convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

His statement will come as a distinct shock to those workers who have been misled into the LaFollette movement in the hope that it would ultimately lead to a labor party. Hillquit makes use of the occasion to extend a few fragrant bouquets, to his fellow "progressive" Al Smith.

Hillquit's statement reads as follows: "To my mind the overshadowing importance of this campaign is not so much the concrete contest for public office as the creation of a new political alignment which will give to American citizens something more than a choice between two evils, the democratic and republican parties.

Must Organize Party.

"In every advanced country in the world parties correspond to definite political principles and popular interests. Progressive parties, whether known as such or going by the names of labor parties or socialist parties, are organized instruments of social progress. In the United States alone, the two principal parties stand for essentially the same thing and are therefore quite meaningless. If the forces of political progress in American politics are to assert themselves effectively and lastingly, they must be organized into a party of their own.

"The LaFolette-Wheeler campaign is a definite breakup of the traditional alignment in American politics and will inevitably lead to the formation of a permanent new party. The strength and character of the new party will be very largely determined by the size of the vote cast against both old parties in the coming election and this applied in a large measure to the vote for the state and local tickets as well as that for the presidential candidates.

Only Third Party.

"In the coming election a vote for the socialist candidates will mean a definite expression in favor of a new political deal. The socialist vote will count for more in this election than it ever did before, and that is one of the reasons why socialists and other third party advocates in this state should make a special effort to bring out a vote of commanding size for Norman Thomas. . . .

"While the governor (Smith) has many admirable personal qualities, progressive voters cannot shut their eyes to the fact that a vote for the governor is a vote for the democratic party. . . . A progressive party controlled by the producers of the state will always faithfully represent the interests of the people."

Hillquit Goes Back.

The statement clearly brings out four points: Firstly, Hillquit has gone back upon the position he formerly held in the importance of "good men" in politics. In "Socialism Summed Up," in 1917, he says: "The socialists attach but slight importance to these 'good government' movements. They hold that paramount facts in politics is measures, not men—class interests, not personal qualities."

Secondly, Hillquit has descended to the level of the capitalist class politicians who measure the strength of a party in terms of the vote cast instead of in terms of its labor composition and labor program.

Another Capitalist Party.

Thirdly, it shows that the charges made by the Workers Party to the effect that there exists a secret understanding between the socialist party, Smith and LaFollette, to silently but effectively sabotage the Thomas campaign, is true. Otherwise why would Hillquit seize upon this situation to again pay Smith a fine compliment?

And lastly and most important, it brings out most clearly that the socialist party intends to make no fight for the formation of a labor party, but that it will instead urge the formation of a third, capitalist, progressive party which will fight the workers.

PARASITES HAVE HARD TIME OF IT DODGING WORK IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 3.—The rush of people to the cities may be seen by the increase of Moscow's population from 952,255 in 1920, to 1,481,117 in 1923. It is still increasing at a rapid rate.

This has brought about some peculiar problems, among them unemployment and housing. Many of the parasitic classes register as "unemployed" workers to avoid expulsion from Moscow, since the housing shortage is so acute that the Moscow soviet is deporting all useless merchants and petty-bourgeois traders.

A typical Bourgeois Trick

By getting on the list of "unemployed" unable to find congenial work, this element manages to stay in the city while engaging in furtive trading, making and selling illegal liquor, smuggled goods, and so on, and even receives the fairly adequate unemployment relief while doing so.

Naturally, when caught, they get sharp justice from the workers' courts which usually sends them to some town in the provinces or across the Urals to Siberia.

The Causes of Unemployment

Demobilization since the allied intervention was defeated, the increasing proletarization of the former parasite causes and the return to the cities of great numbers who went back to the country during the famine years, all contributes to the real problem of unemployment.

Especially as the pace of reviving industry, while very fast, cannot keep step with the tremendous increase of population as noted above.

Few Real Workers Unemployed

But that Soviet Russia takes care of her workers, and that few real workers are compelled to fall back upon the unemployed relief, may be seen by the figures showing the character of these listed as unemployed. No less than 75.6 per cent belong to the former parasite and intellectual classes, intellectuals accounting for 32.3 percent, and unskilled bourgeois and green peasant types for 29.3 per cent. Only 24.4 of the listed unemployed are actual workers, and these are given preference in everything.

While unemployment is an evil, the workers of Moscow are not particularly downcast to see their former bosses and nobility loking for a job. Indeed, many suggest that workers fu capitalist countries might well appreciate having a "problem" of this kind.

Contempt Judge is Out for the Blood of Michigan Editor

DETROIT.— Judge Arthur J. Tuttle of the United States district court in Detroit, the bitterest enemy in Michigan of organized labor, is determined to "get" Edwin R. Cornish, editor of the Workers' Voice, of Saginaw, it appears.

In the shopmen's strike in 1922 Cornish printed an editorial that was uncomplimentary to Judge Tuttle, who had said from the bench that the strikers ought to be outlawed. He did his best to outlaw them. Tuttle was formerly lobbyist and lawyer for the Pere Marquette railroad. In the strike he granted the road sweeping injunctions. Cornish in his editorial said also Tuttle was related to President Alfred of the Pere Marquette.

Tuttle himself found Cornish guilty of contempt and sentenced him to imprisonment. Tuttle was plaintiff, prosecutor, witness, jury and judge.

But the United States circuit court of appeals held the judge was in error in trying the case himself and reversed the decision.

Now Delos G. Smith, U. S. district attorney, has prepared Tuttle's contempt case against Cornish who has been cited to appear in the U. S. district court at Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3, to show cause why he should not be punished. But this time Cornish will appear before Judge Charles C. Simons. Simons was recently appointed Tuttle's sidekick on the bench in the eastern district of Michigan.

Professional Criminal Syndicalism Witness Has Case Transferred

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 3.—John H. Vail, professional criminal syndicalism witness, indicted for murder in connection with the shooting of Deputy Game Warden White, has had his case transferred to the federal court in San Francisco.

At the same time the disqualification as district attorney has been asked of Jesse W. Carter, district attorney of Shasta Co., in whose jurisdiction the murder was committed and who refused to prosecute Vail. Carter is also accused of having influenced the grand jury to refuse to indict Vail in Shasta county. Vail killed White during an unauthorized liquor raid, while the anti-labor witness was on furlough from his other job as dry agent.

Campaign Picnic In New York City Nets $106 Profit

NEW YORK, Nov 3.—The Workers Party appeal for campaign funds, which has been broadcast thruout the working class organizations of the city of New York, has found a varied response. Here and there organizations have responded in a hostile vein. The number of organizations which have sent in financial help on a mere appeal for funds is surprisingly large.

Many units replied expressing their sympathy, but they were unable to help out financially. One of these was the Yonkers branch, No. 172, of the American-Lithuanian Workers' Literary Association. They reported that their treasury was empty, but individual members contributed to a collection, which netted $66.95. Figuring that this was not sufficient, the members organized a picnic, utilizing part of the money. They raised the total to $106, which was contributed to the campaign.

The following individuals contributed to the original $66 fund:

Mr. and Mrs. J. Siurbis	$10.00
Mr. and Mrs. J. Karlonos	9.00
Mr. and Mrs. J. Sabalianskas	8.00
J. Valtalis	8.00

CLAIRE SHERIDAN SHOWS WHERE ANTI-SOVIET LIES COME FROM

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 3.—An interesting disclosure was recently made by Mrs. Claire Sheridan, the well-known English writer and journalist, regarding information from so-called "Russian sources" constantly appearing in certain English papers.

Mrs. Sheridan, who is the cousin of Winston Churchill, has been staying in Kiev recently, having come to Soviet Russia for the second time since the Communist Revolution of October-November, 1917, her first visit having been made in 1920, when Mrs. Sheridan stayed for quite a long time in Moscow.

Writing in the Proletarskaya Pravda (Proletarian Truth), a Kiev leading organ, Mrs. Sheridan states authoritatively that at least two influential English papers employ certain Russian white emigrants who supply every week several columns of news from alleged "special correspondents in Riga." This flagrant piece of deception thus is entirely the work of a few ex-czarist diplomats in the pay of English papers.

Russian Branch of Y. W. L. Shows Value of Real Discipline

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Branch 12 (Russian) of the Y. W. L. has a membership of 40. It is claimed that this branch applies strict Communist discipline, and when it is decided that a job must be done, each member must do his share.

The branch decided upon full participation for the campaign tag day, and practically the entire membership turned out for the work. Thirty-five boxes were taken out by the members of this branch, and these were returned with a total of $183.87. The branch quota was $120. This result speaks for itself in proving the claim that the branch is well disciplined, and organized.

Union on the Job

The largest total turned in on any one subscription list in the campaign was delivered by Comrade Henry F. Mins, a real old timer, who doesn't hesitate to do the work of the movement. Comrade Mins does not use the reason of long service as an excuse for taking things easy. When the subscription lists were issued he took two. One list was used for large sums and the other for small amounts. The result was $19 on the small list and $42 on the five and ten dollar list. The sum of $42 is the record-breaking total for one list in this campaign. In addition, Comrade Mins brought in a tag day box with $3.76, making a grand total of $64.76 for the campaign from this old timer.

Big Damage of Blockade.

MOSCOW, Nov. 3.—The economic bureau of the office of the foreign trade commissioner for Ukraine has computed at least 151 million gold rubles the losses incurred by Ukrainian foreign trade thru blockade of the Soviet Republics and foreign intervention. This sum includes 78 million rubles losses for the export, 28 million rubles for the import operations, and 45 million rubles lost by the various Ukrainian customs houses.

MINOR SHOWS UP LAFOLLETTE'S LABOR LEANINGS

Speech Makes Great Hit with Seattle Audience

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 3.—Robert Minor spoke here at the Painters' Hall at a well attended meeting. He brought out clearly the Communist position in the coming presidential elections, showing that we are out for a class party made up of industrial workers and dirt farmers. He defined the LaFollette movement as a middle class business men's compact "to win certain opportunities to compete with the large Wall Street business interests."

"The LaFollette 'progressive' movement, with the senile theory of 'bust the trusts,'" he said, "is essentially akin to the Roosevelt 'progressive' movement of 1912 (which, by the way, was led at first by LaFollette). It is also essentially like the Woodrow Wilson movement of 1916, when Wilson led the sentimental but unthinking masses into 'new democracy' of a kind of which we got a plenty. When we see the democratic party now evaporating, and its venal politicians flooding into the LaFollette organization, we can, indeed, see an extreme likelihood that the LaFollette movement will simply replace the dying democratic party and will be the second capitalist party in the future.

"But it is a desertion and betrayal of the dirt farmers and wage workers—and these must build their own party, freed from the capitalist interests."

He spoke for one hour and a half after which he answered many questions. The audience seemed pleased and stayed long after the meeting, discussing Minor's speech. A number of them took out cards in the Workers Party.

Y. W. L. Soccer Football Team Plays At Douglas Park

By FRANK BUCKLEY.

Over 600 people turned out to watch the soccer football game between the Y. W. L. soccer football team and the Danish A. A., at the Douglas Park football grounds. The game which gave some good fighting from start to finish resulted in a tie score, 1 to1. The first goal was made for the Y. W. L. team by Charles Sauser, I. L. The players were:

Y. W. L. Team.

G., Zeber; R. B., Woroszk; C. H. B., W. Cechovsky; L. B., Frank Cechovsky; I. L., Charles Sauser; R. H. B., Samfal; L. H. B., Muller; O. R., Silverman; I. R., Welsman; O. L., Wagner; C., Relg; Lineman, D. Sauser.

Danish A.

G., Olson; R. B., C. Peterson; L. B., Dawe; R. H. B., Meller; C. H. B., Jolson; L. H. B., Hentzman; O. R., F. Larson; I. R. Mekhelson; C., Dielson; I. L., Ramunsen; O. L., C. Jensen; Lineman, Peterson.

The Y. W. L. soccer football team which is the property of the athletic section of the Karl Liebknecht branch Y. W. L., is now affiliated to the Workers' Sport and Athletic Alliance of Chicago, all members of the team being members of this working class sport organization.

The purpose of the Workers' Sport and Athletic Alliance is to unite the now existing working class sport and athletic organizations in the city into one central body and to recruit new members among the workers in order to develop a working class physical culture in harmony with the needs of the workers and in opposition to the many existing bourgeois sport organizations which turn the attention of the workers away from the class struggle.

Buffalo Workmen's Circle Joins W. P. In Aid to Strikers

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The call for Paterson strike relief issued by the Workers Party, has borne results in three branches of the Workmen's Circle in Buffalo. Despite the fact that the general office has kept a strict silence on the question, the branches here have come to the aid of the hard-pressed silk workers.

Branch No. 378, has sent $28.55, while Branch No. 192, sent $31.00, both these donations were sent thru the "Freiheit." Branch No. 90, Independent Workmen's Circle, collected $30.00 and sent it to the strikers.

The Workmen's Circle branch at Albany, after a long and interesting discussion voted to instruct all members to vote for William Z. Foster, as the only working class candidate.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

THE MONTANA MYSTERY!

The Secret of the Travelling Bricklayer.

LAST Friday, to be exact, we received an envelope without a word in it. The post-mark was Falcon, Idaho. A plain simple envelope with a simple handwriting and nothing on the outside gave us an inkling of its contents. After all, despite its size, we have heard of Falcon, Idaho.

Inside—and here's the mystery—we found four clipped "bricks" advertised in the DAILY WORKER and a check signed by Walter Edwards. A nice check it was, paying for 3 bricks for Clinton, Montana, and 1 for Rockport, Washington—in a letter mailed in Falcon, Idaho—with a check on the Amalgamated Bank of Chicago! And not a word to explain the mystery of Walter Edwards, the mysterious travelling Bricklayer who had to buy the DAILY WORKER every day to get his bricks because we did not send him any!

Some day we are going to find out more about this Bricklayer Edwards—we are writing him to explain his mysterious procedure—while we "tell the world" of his splendid efforts and those of other members of the D. W. B. U. who have so faithfully and so often with real sacrifice made efforts to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

Every day's mail is a bundle of surprises. And some days more so. During the present campaign the surprises have been of a most pleasant nature. Everyday has brought evidence of the splendid efforts to build up OUR paper. At the bottom of this column read what the D. W. B. U. has accomplished. Read it—and get on the job by sending a sub to "Build the DAILY WORKER"

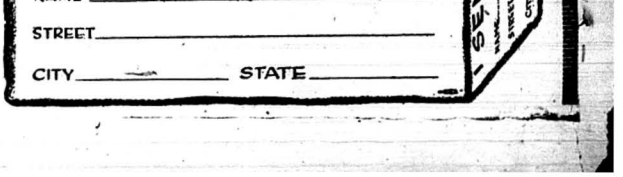
28 Days

Some of the Accomplishments of the Building Bricklayers.

In the last 28 days we have received 2,074 NEW subscribers. This makes the record for the D. W. B. U. of 74 NEW subscriptions per day. The record does not include renewals which have been splendid during this period. And we have lost at the same time only 147 subscribers.

This is proof of what can be done to build up a working class newspaper. These are facts and figures that speak louder than volumes of what can be done for the cause of Labor with only little effort. If this pace is maintained for the next few months the DAILY WORKER will become a POWER for the workers in this country—greater than any ever seen. THAT DAY DEPENDS ON YOU!

The group of workers banded in the D. W. B. U. for the welfare of the DAILY WORKER will not be lost sight of after this intensified drive. The Labor movement certainly cannot afford to be minus the valuable aid of its builders. In the meantime if you have not played a part in the building the DAILY WORKER—get a subscriber—GET IN NOW!



FORTY CITIES TO SEE 'BEAUTY AND THE BOLSHEVIK'

Red Army Comedy Toured Thruout East

"The Beauty and the Bolshevik," the Red Army comedy which has been already shown with tremendous success in New York and Philadelphia, will be seen in New Jersey, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Massachusetts in the coming weeks. William Weinstone, secretary of the eastern district of the International Workers' Aid, announces that arrangements had already been made for a touring of over 40 cities in these states up to January 1.

The Freiheit and Novy Mir will continue the large scale of advertisement and publicity that they have given this picture in the New York, showing in order to attract as wide a number of workers as possible to see this Soviet film.

In addition to "The Beauty and the Bolshevik," the three-reel film of conditions in Russia's industrial development, "Russia in Overalls," will be shown as an additional feature making a highly entertaining performance of two hours. The cities that arranged for the picture are Boston, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., many towns in New Jersey, such as Trenton, Elizabeth, Camden, and Wilmington and Chester, in Delaware, etc.

Comrades and organizations interested in having this picture shown in their cities should communicate with William W. Weinstone, 208 E. 12th St., New York City, for any cities east of Pittsburgh, or with the national office, International Workers' Aid, 19 So. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill., for cities west of Pittsburgh.

Area Branch No. 1 of Young Workers Has Good Meeting

The first business meeting of area branch No. 1 taking in the downtown district showed the possibilities of intensive work among the young proletarians in this district. The routine business of the branch was disposed of in about three-quarters of an hour (the branch executive was on the job). A meeting of all comrades working in Davis Dry Goods company was called for Monday in an endeavor to form a nuclei there. Davis employs 4,800 workers of whom 3,000 are young workers receiving from $10.00 to $16.00 per week. Young workers there complain about their paltry pay, speed-up system under guise of bonus and the fact that they are not allowed to sit down during working hours. There is a strong Legion Post in Davis'.

Distribute Literature.

A bundle order of 150 Young Workers was ordered to be sold at union meetings and on the "market" where thousands of young needle workers pass on their way home, besides 93 copies of every issue of Young Worker were pledged to be taken by members and every one of our fifty members pledged to raise at least $3.00 for the Young Worker Campaign fund. This was done in response to the campaign conducted by the national office to increase our circulation to 10,000 and raise a campaign fund of $2,000 preparatory to making our semi-monthly Young Worker into a weekly youth newspaper.

Hear Shop Talks.

After the business meeting comrades of the branch gave short talks on their shops. Reports were heard from the department stores, clothing shops, mail order houses and everywhere it seemed our comrades were carrying on agitation among the young and adult workers. All discussions during this pre-election period lead to the present election campaign and our members found good opportunity to bring forward our party's candidates and our platform.

At the next meeting Barney Mass will speak on the Voteless Young Worker. We are old enough to work—why not vote?

The World of Labor - Industry & Agriculture

JOBS GREW LESS BY 11 PER CENT UNDER THE G.O.P.

U. S. Labor Department Tells the Story

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The average employment in manufacturing since the republican gang took hold of the federal government on March 4, 1921, has been more than 11 per cent below the 10 year average.

This lack of opportunity to earn a meager living is revealed in the September employment statistics of the U. S. department of labor and stands out in sharp contrast with the huge incomes of the profiteers uncovered by the treasury department.

Employment in September, acording to the department of labor index, was 13 per cent below a year ago while total wage payments declined more than 14 per cent. Taking the average number employed in manufacturing establishments during 1923 as 100 per cent, employment in September would be represented by 86.7 per cent, compared with an average of 101.6 per cent for the 5 years ended June 30, 1924.

This slump in industrial activity has extended its blight to the workers in every major industry. The table compares employment and total wages in September of this year with those of September 1923:

Industry	Percent decrease in Employment	Total Wages
Food Industry	5.3	2.3
Textiles & Clothing	15.0	16.9
Iron, steel products	20.0	23.0
Lumber and products	5.8	6.6
Leather and Products	9.0	7.6
Paper and Printing	*1.7	*4.7
Chemicals and oils	12.1	9.7
Stamped, enameled ware	15.3	10.9
Tobacco and Products	*0.6	*5.6
Autos, wagons, cars	16.5	18.9
Other, incl. agricultural implements, electrical apparatus, rubber, etc.	9.5	8.5

*Gain, not decrease

Only printing and tobacco, starred in the table, show a gain. These gains may be due to campaign literature and republican cigars.

Such figures showing low levels of employment in spite of an autumn upturn amounting to something over 2 per cent mean that hundreds of thousands of dinner pails remain with an empty clank.

The department's report shows that even if we leave out the two years of depression, which the republican administration inherited from a previous inflation, the average of employment for which republicans are directly responsible is considerably below the 10 year average. In only 5 months were they able barely to equal the 10 year average and in those 5 best months, which represent all the prosperity they can show, employment was still 6 per cent below the average of the 5 years immediately preceding the day when Harding and Coolidge took office.

Like the figures showing business failure, however, this employment index extending from 1914 to date shows that both old political parties are responsible for the conditions which make unemployment a chronic feature of the worker's life. Because their lease on office depends largely on how they govern in the interest of the big exploiters they cannot treat the developing social crisis but tend rather to make it more acute.

Alleged Capitalist Friends of Negroes

By GORDON W. OWENS.

An old adage says, "Beware of the Greeks bearing gifts."

Victor Lawson, owner, publisher, and editor of the Chicago Daily News, a capitalist newspaper, poses as a friend of Negroes. Mr. Lawson is a leading light in the time serving, bootlicking, National Urban League, an organization which advises Negroes to be loyal, patriotic, thrifty, and to constantly attend church. It also gathers Negroes scabs for the employers during a strike, and is supported principally by capitalist philanthropy.

The Chicago Daily News stirs up prejudice and animosities against Negroes, the same as any other capitalist newspaper. In this respect Victor Lawson is loyal to his class, the capitalists and employers. Page 1, column 1, of the Daily News, Wednesday, July 30, 1924, contains a news item captioned. "Police Drive Closes Negro Gambling Dens." In its issue of Saturday, August 9, 1924, on its front page, in streaming headline, it tells how the police drive on vice in the south side, "Black Belt."

Issue of Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1924, has a headline, "Woman Saves Gems From Negro Bandit." During the Summer months it printed articles telling of white girls held in slavery by vicious Negro men who forced them to solict Negroes. The fact is that prostitutes, regardless of their race or color, are in the game for money and all money looks alike to them.

The writer, a Negro, living in the vicinity of 43rd and Grand Blvd., is often approached on the boulevard at night by the cute little bob-haired pink things, inviting me to go and enjoy myself with them. One even gave me advance notice that the price was five dollars.

The Daily News, published by the Negroes' alleged friend, Victor Lawson, in its issue of Friday, October 24, 1924, contains a so-called expose of Red propaganda among Negroes by Spolansky, the fink, stool-pigeon, agent provocateur and sewer rat. This article contains lies, filth and absurdities of such a revolting nature, that even a lunatic would disbelieve the contents of this article.

Victor Lawson, like the other capitalist editors, is solely interested in defending and trying to keep capitalism in existence. One way to do that is to create prejudice in the minds of white workers against Negro workers by constantly disseminating anti-Negro propaganda, to keep the Negro and white workers separate and divided, and to prevent them from presenting a united front to the exploiters, employers and capitalists. This Victor Lawson's paper does to perfection. Negro workers must learn that all capitalist editors and newspapers are their enemies, and are the chief instigators of prejudice, discriminations and riots against them.

Working-Class Sport Vs. Bourgeois Sport, Issue Before Labor

Working men and women, fellow athletes and sport lovers, while you have been a member of one of those sport organizations that are supposed to be neutral as far as class interests or politics are concerned, did you ever stop to think—why it is that the factory in which you work has a baseball or some other sort of athletic team organized by the management? Why is it that the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. H. A. and the Y. W. H. A. get $50.000 presents from some Rockefeller or Gary? Why is it that the American Amateur Athletic Union has at its head a rich industrial or a banking magnate to supervise the activities of the organizations to which thousands of young workers belong? It is because the bosses are interested only in the development of their workers? Do they, the bosses, really care for their workers' health? No! They do it because their class (the capitalist class) interests are served by the athletic and sport movement that is supposed to be neutral but in reality is a tool of the master class.

How can this be explained? you may ask.

The capitalist class finds that by sports they are able to draw the young workers into the sphere of patriotic propaganda that teaches that it is unpatriotic to go on strike, etc. And by making the more advanced athletes or the stars the ideals or heroes of every young man or woman they are able thru their newspapers to raise the athletic enthusiasm to such a high pitch that the sport lovers become like maniacs that care for nothing else than their favorite sport, and if they are athletes themselves all their thoughts are busy with the problem, "how would I be able to become as famous as my hero," that gets pages of propaganda from the capitalist press. Thus the capitalist class has profited by diverting the thoughts of their workers away from the exploitation that they are subject to and makes them blind to the economic conditions that confront them. Thus the term neutral sports really means neutralizing workers in the class struggle.

Workers, join and build up the workers' sport movement by joining the Workers' Sport Alliance, whose object it is to make the working class of this country healthy physically and also mentally by making them class-conscious. Thus making them able both physically and mentally to oppose the attacks of their foes, the capitalist class and its lackeys and stool-pigeons. In the Workers' Sport Alliance you get a chance to participate in your favorite sport, as well as a chance to become familiar with the economic system of society that you live under.

KLAN KLEAGLES SPREAD POISON AMONG MINERS

Union Official Makes Vicious Proposal

By J. SNYDER.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 3.—The United Mine Workers of Iowa were advanced sixteen years ago toward the industrial idea of organization. They were backing up many different kinds of movements and many of the camps were carried by the socialist party at election time. Militancy in the union had to be tolerated by the leaders.

Gradually there has come race division, religious intolerance and "red-baiting," fostered by narrow-minded preachers, teachers, labor leaders and Ku Klux Klan knight gown brigades.

Now comes the anti-Klan organizer, and in order to be a "good American," he boasts that he helped put such men as Alexander Howat out of the miners' union.

Anxious for Meagge.

The camps used to be visited regularly by traveling speakers of the radical movement but now such speakers seldom appear. The Workers Party should have more field men out among the miners. They are ready and anxious to hear the real interpretation of the class struggle as it exists today. With unemployment in pratically every camp in Iowa, the miners are coming to see that something must be done of a more radical nature than merely joining the merchants in the slogan "Buy Iowa Coal."

A United Mine Worker vice-president suggested the other day in one of the camps that the men pay fifty cents each and insert an ad in in the daily press to urge the public to buy the operators' coal. This the miners refused to do as they felt that the operators were well able to do their own advertising if they really wanted to open up the mines.

Plot Against Union.

They are onto the fact that conspiracy exists to shut out the miners' unions and to turn all advantages toward the non-union mines. Word has reached them that freight rates in West Virginia are reduced something like 54 per cent per ton on non-union coal, and has been raised about the same degree in the central west, where union miners are stronkest.

The miners are also learning that the coal operators were paid by the government for opening up new mines during the war, and that now these new mines are being used to play quits when any bunch of miners show any spirit to fight for better conditions. By having twice as many mines as are needed, this is easily done. So scarce has work become that when an inspector thinks of shutting down a dangerous mine, even some of the miners beg him not to do it as then they will have no work at all. Now they are averaging only about fifty days a year.

Strong Discontent.

A spirit of discontent, near to rebellion is arising in some quarters. There is no dissent to the Workers Party claims against the capitalist system nor to the claim that the government from town marshall up to the United States president is under the thumb of capitalist organiaztions such as the mine owners' association, the merchants' and manufacturers' associations, the chamber of commerce, Mr. Ford's enterprises and other great combinations of wealth.

The miners are ready to listen. They are ready to read and they need must think and with the proper propaganda they will act in unison for a complete change in the industrial, social and political affairs of this nation and the entire world.

It seems to me that we must devise some way to get more Communist propaganda among the miners.

Teachers Lose Union; Lose Raise.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 3. — Grade and high school teachers in St. Louis have lost a one-year fight for better pay. Local teachers have fared badly since the hardhoiled board of education succeeded in disrupting the teachers' union in 1920.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

A Comrade to be Proud of!

To the DAILY WORKER:—I have always spent a little money on revolutionary literature. When Daniel DeLeon was alive, I stayed with the S. L. P., but after his demise the action of those in leadership seemed to favor reform rather than revolution. I sincerely hate the reformer, trying to delegate to our children the task we ought to face ourselves. I have been deluged with reform literature, Socialist party, LaFollette paper, Columbia Sentinel, Ku Klux Klan—insanity morphine. Some have even tried the Samsonian weapon on me, but I still remain a Marxian Communist, nothing else will do this world any good that I can perceive.

70—Walks 22 Miles Everyday.

I shall indeed distribute the literature, altho I am 70 years of age. I can walk 22 miles from 7 o'clock till three. It is quite a scattered neighborhood. My nearest neighbor is two miles away.

Hikers, Take Notice!

If any comrade comes into this neighborhood I hope he comes whether male or female, holy or unholy. I don't bother myself about anybody's morals—are they Communist? is all I wish to know. If they can stay over night and eat what my poor fare may be, I shall be glad to keep them a couple of nights at least. If a speaker could be gotten into the Baptiste Valley a few might be stirred to action.

I may write some rhymes for the DAILY WORKER under the name of "Thor" altho my beard is not red.

Yours fraternally,
Thor.
Aguanga, Riverside Co., Calif.

Some Opinions by Teachers.

To the DAILY WORKER:—I distribute the LaFollette Illusion" to a group of progressive teachers. They intend voting for LaFollette. Their point of view may be interesting. They realized that LaFollette's program is inadequate, but were anxious to take a crack at the two old parties.

One of them declared that LaFollette was a step forward. His rise to power would permit the left wing in his own party greater freedom of action. He conceded that the Communists made out a pretty strong case in the LaFollette pamphlet.

Another was anxious to see what LaFollette would do, despite the fact that he had long ago lost all respect for the socialists and really favored a labor candidate for president.

A third agreed that the ultimate aim of Communism was correct, "but first there came Kerensky and then came the Bolsheviks."

A fourth considered LaFollette a politician, making deals for places in the cabinet with the Bryan democrats, etc. This was practical politics. LaFollette in power would probably be as bad as the old partyites. He saw in LaFollette a representative of the middle class rather than of the workers.

There is little implicit faith in the LaFollette myth among the progressive rank and file of the white collariat. The drift, the prejudice of one step at a time and the desire to be led out of the great American deadlock of reaction account for their support of a man whose policies they have little faith in.

Fraternally yours,
W. C.

Fascist Propaganda In Schools.

To the DAILY WORKER:—At Des Moines in 1921, the National Education Association surrendered its political conscience to the keeping of the American Legion.

In the November issue of the "Normal Instructor and Primary Plans" on page 81, the question is asked: "What are you doing in your school to further this splendid movement?"

This use of the schools must be brot before the working class again and again. The need of working class education for working class children must be driven home. "He who holds the children, holds the future." We must overcome the insidious influence of the capitalist school over the mind of the rising children.

As a teacher, I see the bunk at work and am doing my little bit to offset it.

A wobbly comrade on the threshing gang here desires the address of Tom Doyle, a big bug in the I. W. W. Please send the necessary information.—Cyril A. Harding.

Editor's Note:—Mail addressed to National Headquarters, I. W. W., 1001 W. Washington St., will reach Tom Doyle.

Ever Met This Poor Dub?

To the DAILY WORKER: Another farmer had his cattle sold in auction in the state of LaFollette because he was unable to pay his mortgage on time. But bad as this is, the farmer needed the lesson. For it seems that only thru many bitter experiences shall we workers learn the simple lesson that there are two classes in this country: the exploiters and the exploited.

This farmer, John Taltinen, living in the vicinity of Poplar, Wis., is the father of eight children. During the war, to save waste and win the war, he helped by filling the bread he and his children ate with bran out of the same sack he fed to his cattle.

Strange as it may seem he is still strong for capitalism. He argues that probably "LaFollette didn't know of the foreclosure." It is a blessing he says that no bolsheviks are allowed in this country because they confiscate the land from poor farmers!—A. Farmer, Duluth, Minn.

Views on Music

To The DAILY WORKER:—I agree with Comrade Alfred V. Frankenstein when he says, "The rendition of Jazz-music is one of the fine arts." "The symphonic handling of it combined with a sweeping, wild and excessively difficult piano part, knocks the highbrows off their feet." Jazz (along with Sanburgian free-verse, and slang) is part of the budding infantile protest-cult of America, which having been given its greatest impetus by young, proletarian Negroes, should be encouraged by Communists.

As a breaker of religous idols, set up by music-masters of the old world, the syncopated harmonical technique of Paul Whiteman's orchestra is without parallel.

However, European music should not be discarded, for, as a great Russian political economist recently stated, when referring to religion as well as the various branches of the arts, "The proletariat should use it's heritage."

Edward James Irvine.

CHINESE TONGS PARK GATS FOR FOURTEEN DAYS

After That There May Be a Peace Pact

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—Copies of an agreement declaring a 14-day armistice between the Hip Sing and On Leong tongs were on their way today to every city in the United States, where Chinese of the warring factions have been shot, murdered, stabbed or beaten in recent weeks.

The truce terms were written in oriental characters and put up on a bulletin board in Chinatown, here, where no Chinese has ventured of late to be seen on the streets unless absolutely necessary.

The Agreement.

Frank Moy, business representative and interpreter of the On Leongs, said his tong agreed:

1. To withdraw all guns and gunmen.

2. The Chinese benevolent association, which arranged the armistice, will be responsible and pay indemnity if the Hip Sing tong fails to keep its agreement.

3. The Hip Sings must move, bag and baggage, out of Washington, D. C., and Pittsburgh, and conduct no business in these cities.

4. All On Leongs, who were expelled from that tong and taken in by the Hip Sings, must be expelled from the Hip Sing tong.

Frank said the Hip Sings had lifted a $10,000 price placed on his head when the agreement was signed. He said the On Leongs had $5,000,000 in their treasury, which they would spend to the last cent, to get what they are after. What they are after Frank did not say.

Hip Sings Tightwads.

He said the tong war had cost the On Leongs $90,000 thus far. The Hip Sings, Frank explained, conducted their end of the war at bargain price, spending only $15,000 of the $40,000 in their treasury.

It was largely thru the offices of representatives of the benevolent association from Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia that hostilities were called off—for fourteen days.

City Almost Destroyed.

CAMPOLGNO, Italy.—For the second time in its history, a landslide has almost demolished this little town on the Italian-Swiss border. The inhabitants have fled.

On With the Fight, Workers!

When the shouting has died away and the lights are turned out and it is discovered that reactionary imperialist capitalism has won the election in these United States, there is going to be as many broken hearts among those who make sentimental piffle serve in place of revolutionary principles, as there was in the romantic ditty, "After the Ball."

We can prevision the punctured hopes of many a petty bourgeois, socialist and capitalist indifferently, who has been cheering until breathless and hoarse as he marched forward to 1776. We Communists are not concerned with them or their puerile sobbings. We have not been overly optimistic of electing Bill Foster and we need no balm, bandages or consolation.

Communists take part in election campaigns primarily to engage the attention of the workers while their political consciousness is aroused, and to show them that only by proletarian revolution can their particular class interests be advanced or even protected.

That we have reached hundreds of thousands who have heard our program for the first time, is more important than that seats may be obtained in a capitalist parliament. Altho that would help us reach some more. That we have immensely strengthened our party and aided in clarifying the minds of tens of thousands and brought thousands of them into our party is a success in the election independent of votes cast for our candidates.

It is a rock-bottom principle of the Communist International that the parliamentary end of the political struggle shall be auxiliary to the political struggle for power outside of parliament. Our Communist struggle for power in the industries has not slackened, been neglected or forgotten one moment just because of an election campaign. The labor fakers and bosses know that.

We mention this because, when the dejected and disappointed workers—the others do not concern us—return from 1776 with a liberty bell not only cracked but busted, we have a program for militant struggle against the employing class. We, the Communists, have the only program of struggle for immediate as well as ultimate demands.

To the workers we offer the program of forming fighting shop committees, strenthening the unions by amalgamation, using these and other organs to fight against wage cuts, longer hours and the open shop. We—the Communists—have the only program for relieving unemployment, the only program for stopping capitalist wars, the only program for emancipation of the working class. And on the morning after election day, we, the Communists, invite all workers into our party for revolutionary struggle against the power of capital.

I. W. W. Reads It—Smith Tells 'Em

Prominent Communist baiters in the I. W. W. who have for months kept suspiciously silent on the whereabouts of their erstwhile generalissimo, Walter Smith, still have nothing to say altho their chieftain has rather impertinently thrust himself into a fade-out scene.

In 1921, Walter Smith, then on the general executive board of the I. W. W., was the head and front of the anti-Communist forces. He rallied the hosts of ignorance and anarchism and put down with stern hand the "politicians." Learning that the editor of the I. W. W. paper in New York was publishing matter favoring affiliation to the R. I. L. U. Smith and Carlson—his eager assistant—rushed to New York and deposed the offender, putting a good anarchist anti-Communist in charge, who promptly made it easy for the paper to die. It is still dead.

Smith it was who took the lead against the R. I. L. U. He spent much wobbly money on telegrams and railroad fare to stop George Hardy from speaking for affiliation to wobblies or anyone else. Smith and his crew, some of whom are now at the fore in the injunctionite crowd—Bowerman, for one, framed up the suspension and expulsion of Mike Nowak, Hardy and others who were "suspected of being Communists" because they advocated working class unity.

But the most valiant fight of Smith was against those wobblies who went to Russia for refuge instead of going to Leavenworth, thereby forfeiting bonds. No words were too vile for Smith to use against the "bond-jumpers."

However, the fearless Walter was later nailed in California by the criminal syndicalism law and released on $250 bond with several others. He suffered a revulsion of feeling on bond-jumping, trying hard to get a majority of the group to agree that all should beat their bond. Failing this, he jumped anyway with three others. The I. W. W paid the $250 besides the loss of international prestige Smith's fight against the R. I. L. U. cost, to find out he was an india-rubber crutchh. The present convention had to act. It passed a motion that if Smith didn't make good the $250, he would be considered a bad boy, and without flare of trumpets, expelled.

Last Wednesday Smith stepped up with the following wire from Centralia, Washington—"Please convey to the delegates at the 16th general convention, the information that I have just read in the DAILY WORKER dated October 24, that I am to be expelled from the organization within thirty days. This will inform your body that same can take place immediately if you desire.—Walter Smith."

It will be noted that in spite of the attempts by Communist haters to discredit the DAILY WORKER, it is read and credited by them. Jim Rowan is said to get up at 6 a. m. to read every word before going to court. There are some other characters from whom we would like to see telegrams like Smith's. There's John Leheney. Will somebody drag him out of hiding and tell the truth?

Where Unity Is Weakness

The condition of the mill workers of New England is deplorable. In a recent address, a Fall River mill agent offered the consolation that the present depression was not confined to the cotton business, but prevailed thruout the United States. He did not tell the workers that the mill owners were getting along very nicely, eating, drinking and making merry and were not worrying particularly about the temporary lull in their profit making pastime. Not so the wage slaves who produced the profits that enables the bosses to take trips around the world when their mills are not busy.

Calvin Coolidge, in a radio election address, put out the slogan: "Vote the republican ticket and maintain the present prosperity." The mill workers of New England are wondering what Silent Calvin's conception of depression would look like. They certainly don't want any more of the kind they have now. Calvin's campaign manager is the owner of some of the biggest mills in New England.

Monsignor Cassidy, of Fall River, in a speech on the economic situation in the textile industry, offered as a solution of the unemployment problem, co-operation and unity between workers and employers. That is Samuel Gompers' plan. It is the plan now generally endorsed by the officials of the American Federation of Labor. The trouble with that plan is that it is the cause of the workers' poverty. It has been in operation since the dawn of the capitalist system. The workers are united with the capitalists in creating wealth, but the capitalists grab most of it, leaving the workers barely enough to exist on.

That kind of unity is not what the workers need. They need unity among themselves against the capitalists. They need the kind that the capitalists, the clergy, and the labor fakers are opposed to. They need the kind the Communists advocate: unity of the workers organized as a class to fight against capitalism, for better conditions of life and for the ultimate overthrow of the capitalist system and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government, which means the rule of the workers thru the dictatorship of the proletarint.

Only then will prosperity mean more of the good things of life for the workers. Only then will exploitation end.

Eminently Logical

At the "informal" luncheon tendered President-elect Calles of Mexico by the most prominent spokesmen of American business interests, the workers of the United States and Mexico were accorded a historical treat.

Mr. Calles was dined and wined by the New York State Chamber of Commerce. Judge Elbert H. Gary, the open-shopper L. F. Loree, Otto H. Kahn, and Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., were amongst the chosen guests. General Calles assured the industrialists, merchants and capitalists that Mexico will give them "the most ample guarantees." He denied the rumors circulated about him "as a man unfriendly to capital and as one who will carry with him that attitude and transmit it to the citizenry of Mexico, to the detriment of foreign interests."

The message delivered by the new president of Mexico was heartily welcomed by the rulers of American capitalism. A particularly sympathetic chord was struck by Calles at this banquet when he declared: "My program is eminently constructive and eminently logical." The captains of American finance and industry rejoiced at this confession. In fact, Mr. Frederick H. Ecker, president of the New York State Chamber of Commerce complimented the president-elect by calling him "one of the outstanding men of the world."

"Eminently logical." Yes, it has been the experience of the working class of every country with this type of social-patriot. First of all, the Calles type of "labor champion" rides into power on the backs of the masses. Next, the Calles leadership turns to mouthing the meaningless phrases of the hypocritical social-democracy. It becomes "eminently logical" for Calles and his stripe to take a further step and openly serve the interests of the exploiters. There is no contradiction, but only eminent logic in Mr. Calles being feasted one day by the bankrupt social-democrats of New York and the next day by the billionaire bankers and manufacturers.

We feel certain that the working masses of Mexico will not discard an ounce of vigilance. If ever it was necessary for the exploited farmers and oppressed Mexican workers to be on guard, it is triply necessary now with the ascendancy of General Calles to the presidency of the republic.

Labor's "Beggars on Horseback"

The following sketch of the conduct of the British labor party leaders reached the DAILY WORKER from London after the election which resulted in the defeat of MacDonald and his policy of subservience to the ruling class. That his fall did not result from his unwillingness to go the limit in catering to the wishes of the aristocracy can be seen from this article.

THE stories which flooded the capitalist and yellow labor papers after the election of Ramsay MacDonald to the position of Prime Minister to His Majesty King George, reminded one very strongly of the sentimental stories of the "poor but honest" boy who rose to fame and wealth by his great inherent qualities. MacDonald's christian piety, his "beautiful home life," and his idealism which scorned the riches of the world for the greater riches of doing good for his fellowmen, all of these were blazoned forth as making up the essence of this noble character.

The fact that MacDonald started life as a poor boy and that he had the fear of Christ hammered into him by his fanatical Scotch parents were taken as proof that here was a man who was marked off from the common run of politicians, and that his term in office would be marked by the finest idealism and devotion to the cause of the workers, and "humanity in general."

The Pious Fraud

But what a different story can be told now of the pious MacDonald and his gang of second rate ward politicians. Only one thing marks them as being different from the politicians of the capitalist parties: They were more vulgar, more petty, and displayed more of a cringing spirit to royalty and the trappings of the court that Baldwin, Asquith or Lloyd George ever did.

No sooner did they assume office than they immediately started out to ape the capitalists in their dress and manner of living. The tailors of Bond street who had shuddered lest the coming of a labor government would destroy their trade in the manufacture of court dress were pleasantly surprised when the whole gang of renegades flew to them to be fitted out in pantomime dresses usually worn when the bourgeoisie appears at the court of their royal parasites. "Labor" ministers who had been elected to parliament from districts where workers had been unemployed for more than a year at a time cared only that they should be properly outfitted once they were in office.

Men who knew the sufferings of the workers, who knew how bitter the struggle for bread is among the workers who had suffered to elect them, had only one thot: To get knee breeches, silk stockings, and cutaway coats so that they could be "presented" to the symbol of the brutal imperialism of British, George the 1-5 and Mary the 4-5.

Liked To Get Mugged

Then the rush to get photographed! MacDonald photographed as he warmly shakes hands with Baldwin, leader of the conservative party, at a garden party staged at Hamton Court Palace soon after the "labor" cabinet had been formed. Henderson, Thomas, Walsh photographed in court dress and the photos printed in the picture papers for the enjoyment of the toiling workers, railwaymen, and miners who had elected these scamps thinking that they were thereby going to rid themselves from the evils they were suffering under.

Then we have the infamous bribe accepted by MacDonald from his "admirer" Grant who afterwards received a baronetcy. The interest on the $150,000 he got amounts to about $7,500 a year. That this pious, idealistic Christian would stoop to common acceptance of bribes does not seem to shock the editors of the yellow labor papers who are defending MacDonald for taking the bribe on the ground that others have done it before him! To these reactionary scoundrels the only sorrowful part of the vile transaction is that they were not the ones to get the money.

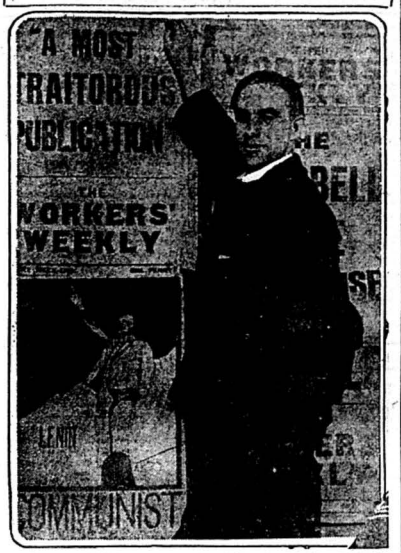
The MacDonald gang showed by their conduct that they were of the same calibre as the average ward politicians who gets elected to office for the boodle there is in it. The "poor but honest" drivel concocted by the imaginative pen perverts is just the usual camouflage that is always spread over the ugly sores of capitalism. The officialdom of the British labor party are typical products of the present rotten system. They only mouth phrases in opposition to capitalism because that is necessary to get the votes of the workers.

Saw The Main Chance

In reality they are in politics because they want to ape the capitalists. And they are only in the labor party because the opportunity was never offered them of becoming part of the capitalist political parties. Besides even if they did join capitalist parties there is every likelihood that they could not rise as high as they have done on the backs of the innocent workers in the labor party.

The MacDonald "labor" cabinet exhibited all the traits of the newly rich. They aped the men of wealth they had coveted for years. They displayed themselves in such a ridiculous light that the cunning ruling class of Britain knew even from this exhibition that they had nothing to fear from these middle class aspirants for the display and pomp of the royal court.

ROSS CAMPBELL, BRITISH COMMUNIST



Shown exhibiting poster advertising the Workers' Weekly, official organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain, which was branded by the capitalist press as "a most traitorous publication." The Communists considered this abuse the highest form of flattery, coming as it did from the upholders of the capitalist system, which the Communists are out to destroy. Campbell was charged with sedition, but the government did not prosecute, owing to pressure from the left wing of the Labor Party. A general election resulted.

Soviet Rule Has Big Publishing Agency

Functions and Progress.

THE Gosisdat (State Publishing Agency) is probably one of the largest publishing agencies in the world, and certainly turns out the most varied type of publications. It was formed in 1919 by the fusion of the publishing department of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee and the literature department of the Education Commissariat. At that time the civil war was still raging on many fronts, and consequently the literature first issued by it was mainly propagandist, altho even then, V. V Vorovsky, who was at the head of the agency, tried, as far as possible, to promote the publication of scientific and contemporary literature generally.

With the cessation of the civil war and the introduction of the new economic policy, the Gosisdat extended its work very considerably, and at the present time its output is ten times as great as it had been before 1921. Whilst other publishing agencies issue mainly their own special literature, the Gosisdat's publications are of a universal character, and altho, on the whole, it works on a commercial basis nevertheless it is compelled to issue everything necessary for educational purposes, whether profitable or not. Its main aim is not profit but the supply of good literature.

The Gosisdat, however, has never had, and has never attempted to attain, a monopolist position. On the contrary, if another Soviet publishing agency chooses any special line for instance, when the State Technical Publishing Agency or Gosizdat did started publishing a series, the New Village), the Gosizdat at once cuts down its own corresponding publications, but the demand for books is so great that, generally speaking, there is room for more than one agency in any one subject.

Publications.

The chief publications of the Gosizdat are now of three types: social economic works, scientific literature, and text books. Text books form 60 per cent of the total output. The social economic works published include the works of Marx and Engels and the best books on Maralism. As for scientific literature, in includes the resumption of the publication of 40 scientific journals (mostly at a loss, but very important for scientists), and the publication of the works of the Russian scientists and popular science books. The latter are particularly important, being in great demand by workers and peasants. The popular science series are of three main types: (1) For those of no education, and who are only just able to read; (2) For those who have attended elementary schools, and who are, to some extent, accustomed to read; and (3) For readers whose education is about up to the standard of the secondary schools.

The books published include works on biology, physiology, eugenics, physics, chemistry, aviation, etc.

In addition, special series have been published such as the Darwin Library, and the Biographical Library, which include the lives of great scientists, artists, fiction writers, poets, social workers, etc.

The Soviet Book Trade.

The progress of the Soviet book trade is shown in the following table:

Value of Turnover in Gold Roubles.
Year	Total	Gosisdat
1922	6,500,000	3,500,000
1923	18,000,000	11,500,000
	Books Sold.
Year	Total	Gosisdat
1922	15,000,000	8,000,000
1923	43,000,000	21,000,000

Still more rapidly has the book trade increased in the provinces alone, thus, while in 1922, the value of the Gosidat's sales in the provinces amounted to 850,000 gold roubles, in 1923 it reached 1,500,000 roubles.

Similarly, the number of book trading establishments have increased from 100-150 in 1922, to 250-400 at the beginning, and to 500 at the end of 1923. It is interesting to note that whilst the number of book trading establishments in the capitals increased but very slightly during that period, they were doubled in provincial towns, and increased by 4-5 times in the county (uyezd) towns.

Private Capital.

The share of private capital in the total book trade of the U. S. S. R. is not more than 10-12 per cent, but the number of private enterprises in the capitals is about equal to the state and co-operative enterprises, and in provincial and county towns, the private enterprises constitute only a half of the state and co-operative enterprises. Of the state enterprises, the Gosisdat accounts for 60-65 per cent of the capital.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

The Fire in the Flint.
By ART SHIELDS.
Federated Press Review.

Where the Ku Klux Klan and the peon Latin landowners rule over a subject black race the plot of this story is laid. The description of Central City, Ga., would apply to a score of other cotton belt towns.

The story begins with the return of a brilliant young Negro doctor to the south after nine years training in northern medical colleges, at the front and in Paris. He returns, full of idealism and the ambition to found a hospital for the members of his race. He did not realize how the south had changed since the war and that his old father had been right when he tried to advise him that only bad Negroes got lynched. That is the beginning. The story ends with the doctor's lynching.

It is a stark tragedy. The author, himself a Negro, offers no obvious solution for the race conflict. But thru the pages of The Fire in the Flint one sees a race rising to the light out of squalor, ignorance and suppression. And one gets the view of the white young doctor who would rather belong to a group rising to something better than one trying to keep the place it had.

Underneath this tragedy of the Negro race, whose women are freely ravished and whose men murdered when they resist oppression is a darker tragedy of the white race which is spiritually destroyed by its role as slaver. Thru Judge Stevenson, a relic of the bygone southern gentlemen, you understand what has happened to the white man of liberal sympathies.

The southern white liberal's fear to express himself on the race problem—and he had reason to be afraid—has poisoned his character and made him a moral coward generally.

Two organizations are dramatically pictured in this book. You see the Ku Klux Klan in its clownish regalia, but savagely earnest in its determination to kill those Negro agitators form "uppawth." The sheriff is kleagle and peon landlords are leading actors on the other side is the Negro cotton tenants' union, organized to get a fairer price for their cotton, and doomed to go out in a welter of blood.

Walter F. White has done a service in this book. He gives an understanding of the race problem which is specifically needed in the labor movement that is now confronted with the tide of Negro workers moving into northern industry.

The Book of Bums.
By Esther Lowell.

Jim Tully has given the world a wholesomely unlovely tramp autobiography in Beggars of Life. Tully, reputed ex-wobbly and pugilist, writes of his youthful days without sentimentality, without excuses for the brutal code of the road. He took to the jungle and side-door pullman as the only escape from grinding slavery in an Ohio factory.

Tully paints vivid portraits of the scared and torn men and women he met. Their humanness always found him sympathetic, even when it was Amy, the Beautiful Fat Girl, whose 500 pounds of flesh housed a warm, human heart. Or Oklahoma Red, the "b-a-d g-u-y," who met death failing to make a freight.

The sketch of democratic landslide tactics in Chicago is brilliantly done, whilst the number of book trading establishments in the capitals increased but very slightly during that period, they were doubled in provincial towns, and increased by 4-5 times in the county (uyezd) towns.

Private Capital.

The share of private capital in the total book trade of the U. S. S. R. is not more than 10-12 per cent, but the number of private enterprises in the capitals is about equal to the state and co-operative enterprises, and in provincial and county towns, the private enterprises constitute only a half of the state and co-operative enterprises. Of the state enterprises, the Gosisdat accounts for 60-65 per cent of the capital.

Tully writes, "The nonproducers of the nation are tramps in one sense or another. The prattling parasitic clubwomen, the obese gambler in bonds, the minister in a fashionable church, all are tramps who have come to have beds and bath, and the economic security that men go mad to obtain." He disclaims interest in the sociology of tramps and suggests eliminating greed from our social system.

Tully offers no solutions, claiming only that he is a "casual writer who has been living in the memory of adventure." The autobiography shows that he knows the injustice of society built on profits but that he either does not know or cannot succumb to any of the formulas for change.

Beggars of Life, by Jim Tully; Albert & Charles Boni, New York, $3.

MACDONALD GOVERNMENT QUITS

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE "great American king" is wearing the crown today. It rests lightly on him for he is full of dope and does not feel the pricking of the thorns. But tomorrow and for more tomorrows he will drop his crown in the rubbish heap, and scratch his head, wondering how he gets this way every once in a while when the capitalists get him excited over an election campaign. He does not have much time to think as a rule. When he is unemployed he is in mental anguish over the fear that he may not get another job and when he does get a job, he is kept so busy that his brain takes a vacation.

COOLIDGE maintained his silence like a little hero. He said nothing but big business talked out loud. It is becoming clearer and clearer every day that what big business wants in the White House is not brains, but a quiet little servant who will be president as little as possible. Wall Street is true with fellows who even have a fondness for Shakespeare.

PRESIDENTS with a taste for literature are liable to wander off the reservation once in a while, so Wall Street was not going to let a jewel like Coolidge slip out of its grasp. Coolidge only set a new fashion for presidents. If he finds any place in history, it will be as the man who initiated the silence strike. Or he may be known in history as the "First Dumb-Waiter of Wall Street." Let's wait and see what the electoral college will show. Anyhow, if we believed that the workers could only emancipate themselves by the ballot only, we would hunt up a bootlegger, and drown our sorrow.

PRESIDENT CALLES of Mexico does not know when he is well off. He was fairly secure in life and limb while the civil war raged in Mexico. He was not so badly off in Europe even, yet he comes to Washington and mixes in with such people as Calvin Coolidge, Secretary of State Hughes and other members of the government. After this business of letting "shot" by the movies was over, the confiding Mexican threw his arms around the shoulders of Secretary Morrison of the A. F. of L. and jabbed William H. Johnston, of the Machinists' Union playfully in the stomach. We owe our information to the Washington correspondent of the Federated Press. He did not say whether Calles still has his watch or not.

THE National Security League has sent out literature for use on little children. This is a greater atrocity than even what the child labor amendment is seeking to remedy. But the stuff is funny. It says that speech is free in America provided you don't say so and so. This sounds as funny

K.K.K. SEEKING MORE TROUBLE AT NILES, OHIO

Grand Titan Announces New Parade Effort

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NILES, O., Nov. 4.—The Ku Klux Klan, thru a statement made public by Fred Warnock, "Grand Titan" of the district, announces that it will try to stage another parade within two weeks.

Evidently Warnock is assured of the support of the state troops who came in to rescue the klansmen after the citizens had arisen and driven them out of town following their murder of four men.

No Fear of Arrest.

He is going about free and without fear of arrest in spite of the murders staged by members of the Klan under his jurisdiction, and in issuing his boastful statement, accused the county authorities of interfering with the parade last Saturday.

Militia Head Embarrassed.

The statement embarrassed Major General Hough, the commander of the troops, who had evidently not been consulted. When shown it, he stammered somewhat and mildly protested that "no organization of any kind will be permitted to hold demonstrations while we are here."

Kistler, the Klan mayor, however, had no hesitancy about promising help to the Klan in the future, troops or no troops. He said, "I will grant the Klan a permit to parade any time they ask for it."

Four Murders, No Kluxers Pinched.

Kistler's house was bombed last week, altho little damage was done. Secret service men from the state capital are investigating and announce that they are going to make a "surprising revelation" when the bombers are arrested. No Klansmen have been arrested for the murders committed last Saturday.

30,000 Workers In Parade.

PRAGUE, Nov. 4.—At the recent congress in Prague, 1,600 shop councils of the various countries were represented. During the congress 30,000 workers demonstrated in the streets of Prague in favor of its decisions, which were:

Organization of the struggle against high cost of living; maintenance of 8-hour day; struggle for higher wages; united proletarian front; workers' control of industry; further co-operation with trades unions.

If All Else Fails Religion Is Still There to Do the Job

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANILA, Nov. 4. — Religion may soon come to the aid of General Wood and his military staff in dealing with the uprisings of workers in the Philippine Islands. By a vote of 31 to 26 the house of representatives has forced thru a bill permitting the teaching of religion in the public schools. The bill will now go to the senate.

The strong opposition vote on this measure is an indication that the members of the house, most of whom are in favor of Philippine independence from the United States, appreciate the use to which the teaching will be put. The Philippine schools are under the direct control of a secretary of education, appointed by the President of the United States. The rule of the American government over the school is iron.

A large number of the inhabitants, especially in Manila, have come under the thumb of the Catholic church.

CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION TO FIGHT EDUCATION WEEK

Protest Meeting, Friday, Nov. 7

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 4.—John J. Tigert, commissioner of education and member of the army educational corps, is turning the schools over to the American Legion. That is the explanation for the vicious anti-radical propaganda that is thrust upon our schools in the shape of "Educational Week" given by Roger N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union.

Denounced by Y. W. C. A.

Baldwin says he received a letter from the general secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, Mabel Cratty, stating that that organization has declined to participate in the Educational Week movement. Miss Cratty wrote him the decision was made "because of certain elements in the announced program inconsistent with the position of the organization's national board in regard to world peace and international co-operation."

Schools Robot Factories.

Baldwin explains that "certain elements" are the topics for speakers in the program which aims to instill in the children a hatred and distrust of anything radical and blind unquestioning adherence to things as they find them. In other words to train them to become perfect robots.

The American Civil Liberties will hold a mass meeting on Friday evening, Nov. 7, (we compliment them on choice of day) at the Community church to protest against "American Legion interference with education."

Investigating Themselves.

ROME Nov. 4.—Fascist leaders are investigating the murder of a workman who was stabbed to death after a gang of young black shirted men picked a quarrel with him during the Fascisti celebration.

GOMPERS BUSY IN SUBMARINE WAR ON FOES

Fights for Dictatorship in the A. F. of L.

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 4.—Additional indications pile up showing that the Gompers' officialdom in the American Federation of Labor is working energetically to submarine La-Follette's so-called third party movement.

Sam Gompers, himself, in Washington, issued a half-hearted statement on the eve of the election, clinging to the Wisconsin senator as the only available straw in this year's political whirlpool.

But Gompers' Crowd Switches.

But Gompers' loyal lieutenant in New York, James P. Holland, president of the New York Federation of Labor, came out boldly in upholding the Gompers' elements in the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, the Printing Trades Council, the Building Trades Council, and the Hudson County Labor Council, over in New Jersey, in switching from La-Follette to the candidacy of Morgan's pet lawyer, John Wallstreet Davis, on the democratic ticket.

Evidently the movement in New York state, from LaFollette to Davis, has been carried on underground for some time; since President Holland proclaimed at the last moment that he had lined up "representative labor officials" in Buffalo, Albany, Rochester and Utica.

Gompers Destroyer From Within.

In fact the whole affair smells strongly of Gompers' customary tactics of entering, controlling and then destroying movements that he could not crush openly.

We can go back as far as the Montreal convention of the American Federation of Labor, when the railroad elements put thru their Plumb Plan endorsement over the head of President Gompers. But Gompers did not allow the defeats that he suffered at the Montreal A. F. of L. convention to disturb his power in the least. Instead, by careful maneuvering, he gradually sunk the Plumb Plan into oblivion, until it is now ancient history.

But then came the organization of the conference for progressive political action, supported by this same block of railroad union officials, and challenged Gompers' political policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies."

When Compers saw he could not destroy the conference for progressive political action when he beheld it gaining strength, Gompers changed his tactics of fighting it from without, and began to bore from within.

At the Washington gathering of the LaFollette elements, in November, 1922, immediately after the congressional elections, I talked to Gompers, after he had made a speech at that meeting, and asked him if he were BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 4.—Reports reaching here from Brazil today asserted that revolutionary trouble had broken out in the Brazilian navy. The battleship Sao Paulo was said to have rebelled and with another ship from Rio Janeiro harbor, left for an unknown destination.

MEXICAN STRIKERS PROTEST THE MURDER OF COMRADES BY TROOPS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 4.—Over 500 workers of Tampico are protesting the death of three of their comrades and the wounding of 11 by federal troops sent to protect the properties of the Mexican Gulf Oil company, against whose injustice the workers are out on strike.

Once more the government is forced to protect foreign capital against its own workers. The strikers of the Mexicon Gulf Co. are asking for the recognition of their union and the 8 hour day instead of 12 to 14 hours. A group of 30 went to the refinery to prevent the work of strikebreakers and thugs, they were unarmed, they were fired upon by federal troops.

That the workers' requests are not unreasonable is proved by the fact that the majority of oil companies in Tampico have long granted what are now asking.

INFLUENCE OF U. S. AND BRITISH IS HARD HIT IN CHINA

Defeated Wu Pei Fu Is Reported in Flight

(Special to the Daily Worker)

TIENTSIN, China, Nov. 4.—With the defeated Wu Pei Fu reported in flight to an unknown destination on one of his transports, while troops of the de facto government set up by the "Christian General" Fen Yu-hsiang and Chang Tso-lin are driving Wu's troops into the country and disarming them everywhere, the political influence of Japanese imperialism is immensely enhanced.

In a like measure is the influence of America and Britain crippled. Their imperialistic interests are bound to suffer and much, even war, depends upon what compromise can be reached between them and the victorious Japanese.

American Interests Worried.

The watchdog of the Yankees, Brigadier General Wm. D. Connor, commanding American forces in China, has notified the capitalist government at Washington that "persistent rumors" say that Tuan Chi-jui, head of the Anfu party connected thru Chang with Japan, and Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the nationalist-socialist at the head of the Canton government in South China, have been invited to Peking to take part in the reorganization of the central government.

Battleships Guard Standard Oil.

The American gunboat Ashville is "maintaining order" at Tientsin, while the destroyers Steward and Pillsbury ("Eventually, why not now?") are protecting Standard Oil company property at Hsinho, where the defeated troops of Wu Pei Fu are trying to escape by boarding seagoing ships.

Jap Business Interests Rule.

The fact that Japan by its clever military moves has control of the Chinese nation and has shut out British-American imperialism behind the backs of Chang and Feng, is causing much concern as to what Japan will do with its power.

Altho Tuan and Chang as well as Sun Yat Sen have all previously proclaimed the need for a strongly centralized government which would unite all China, the material interests of Japan dictate a policy of keeping China divided enough to make extreme foreign exploitation possible without exciting general resistance by national liberation forces. Especially is such resistance expected from Sun Yat Sen's party.

This uneasiness over the forces behind Sun, among which are the Communist Party of China leading the nationalist workers' and peasant Kuomintang party, is strengthened by the recent telegram sent by Sun Yat Sen to the president of the fifth assembly of the League of Nations, sitting Geneva.

CZARIST SCIONS ALARMED AT NEW RUSSIAN TREATY

Fear of Work Makes Them Stage Protest

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 4.—In the midst of the universal rejoicing among the French workers that France has at last recognized the workers' and farmers' government of Russia, a small group of decaying Russian gentlemen and gentlewomen, former scions of the Russian czarist nobility, now living in France, have raised their voices in aristocratic disdain of the Soviet rule.

Go in Body to Embassy.

Under pretense of a demonstration to honor the fallen war "heroes" of France, these Russians—most of them members of a small colony, which disgruntled czarist aristocrats established in France when the Russian proletariat decided to dispense with the nobility—will go in a body to the Russian embassy to hoist the Russian tri-color—the emblem of czardom.

Meanwhile, the details necessary to the installment of the Soviet ambassador in Paris go quietly on.

Russia is greatly rejoiced over the recognition by France, altho the Communist leaders in Russia have been careful to point out, especially thru the Moscow newspapers, that only the desire for trade relations has caused Herriot to take such action.

Premier Rykoff states that all the great powers of Europe have now recognized the Soviet government of Russia, and that there remain now only Japan and the United States. Of the possibilities of American recognition, he says:

"Even if the American elections bring no changes, it is scarcely possible that the United States will be able to maintain its attitude toward the Soviet. The seven years' existence of the Soviet regime, its unceasing growth, its trade and economic expansion must be sufficient argument even for the irreconcilable United States."

Herriot Voted Confidence.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The chamber of deputies today gave Premier Herriot a vote of confidence, 410 to 170, when, upon the reconvening of the parliament, he demanded the indefinite postponement of interpellations, the chief of which was criticism of the government for renewing the Morgat loan to aid France in stabilizing exchange.

Many Die in London Wreck.

LONDON, Nov. 4. — Many persons were killed and injured in derailment of the Liverpool-Blackpool express near Lytham today. The Exchange Telegraph originally estimated the dead and the injured at 40, but this evening these figures were revised to 13 dead and 36 injured.

M'DONALD LAYS HIS MANDATE AT KING'S TOES

Baldwin Expected to Form Government

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 4.—England's first labor-socialist government passed out of existence this evening.

Premier MacDonald went to Buckingham palace and tendered the resignations of himself and his colleagues to King George and they were immediately accepted.

It is confidently expected that King George will summon Stanley Baldwin, the tory leader, within 48 hours and charge him with the task of forming a new government. It will be tory in complexion, not coalition.

There has been gossip that Viscountess Astor or the Duchess of Atholl might be invited to accept a government post, but this is believed generally to be improbable.

The cabinet commission, including Premier Ramsay MacDonald, which has been investigating the authenticity of the so-called Zinoviev letter, has examined a number of witnesses without obtaining evidence of much value.

The Latest Count.

The latest count shows the conservatives have 410 seats, the labor party 52, and the liberals 40. But there is no such disparity between the total vote cast for each party. This shows the conservatives with 8,000,000, labor 5,500,000 and liberals 3,000,000.

J. H. Thomas is expected to resume his position as head of the National Union of Railwaymen and some of the other labor leaders who occupied posts in the labor cabinet will be taken care of by the unions.

The representation in parliament gives the conservatives one seat for every 20,000 votes, while the labor party has only one for every 36,000. Had the proportional representation system been in operation, the labor party would squeeze up close to the tories.

Churchill on Warpath.

Winston Churchill is already on the warpath for the building of the Singapore base. It is reported he may be taken into the Baldwin cabinet, perhaps as home secretary. If rumors are well founded the labor movement may expect increased activity on the part of Scotland Yard and the czarists. The MacDonald cabinet decided not to publish the result of the investigation of the so-called Zinoviev letter.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Stanley Baldwin was summoned to the palace at 6:30, when King George offered him the premiership. The MacDonald government which Baldwin replaces has been in office since January 22.

600 Accidents In One Month.

FRANKFORT, Germany, Nov. 4.—In August there were 600 accidents in the hard coal mines in the Rhine-Westphalian district, or 20 accidents daily. These were largely due to the speedup system. The great masses of unemployed miners in this section form a reserve army with which the mine owners constantly threaten the workers who are still employed. The oppressed and enslaved miners submit to job conditions which result in the loss of hundreds of lives and thousands of injuries.

More Weavers Strike.

WESTERLY, R. I., Nov. 4.—Seventy-five weavers, winders and twisters at the New England Silk Co. plant are on strike against a wage reduction.

Election Reports Tomorrow!

THIS issue of the DAILY WORKER went to press too early to include the returns from Tuesday's elections. Tomorrow's editions will contain the full reports of the election with our comment and analysis of the results.

Help The Daily Worker and Labor Defense

THE Workers Party, Local Chicago, is to run a big bazaar and entertainment, Nov. 26-30, at Folkets Hus, 2733 Hirsch Blvd. Branches, comrades and all sympathetic units are called upon to work hard to get donations of all sorts, sell tickets, etc. Only three weeks remain before the bazaar begins.

Preparations are well along for the greatest display of goods, and best entertainment ever put on. The bazaar is for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER and Labor Defense.

Those in charge say that with the willing co-operation of party units and members, over $1,000 can be raised for each.

The bazaar workers' conference, composed of delegates from all branches of the Workers Party and Young Workers League will meet Saturday, Nov. 8, 3:30 p. m., at 722 Blue Island Ave. Also at the same time and place on Nov. 15.

BOWERMAN IS CHARGED WITH AIDING POLICE

Delegates to I. W. W. Discuss Centralization

By KARL REEVE.

William Hanley, in telling of the arrest of Arthur Linn, of the agricultural workers, charged to the convention that Fred Bowerman aided the police in court to convict Linn of robbery. Linn has been confined in jail up until yesterday. Linn charges that he saw Bowerman a few feet away from him when he was arrested.

Grad, of industrial union No. 120, told the convention that he has again tried to get some money out of the Rowan faction for convention expenses and was turned down cold by his own faction.

Linn was arrested, according to Hanley, on October 13, the very day the conventions of the I. W. W. were called by both factions. "Legal moves to have Linn released have been checked by some forces in opposition to his release," said Hanley.

Executive Session.

The hall was cleared just before Hanley appeared before the convention, while the delegates discussed some matter in secret. It was thought to have pertained to Linn's imprisonment.

The question of decentralization was again discussed pro and con by the convention when discussing the reducing of the per capita tax from 15 to 7½ cents. Swanson, who favors abolishing officials broached the theory that the fewer the officials the less the fights there would be among officials, and that officials therefore should be eliminated. Welinder again came out for decentralization and favored cutting support of general headquarters in half. Welinder said that five out of seven of the general headquarters staff should be dismissed, and that two were enough to take care of all general administration work.

In Propaganda Stage.

Charles Gray declared this "is just an anarcho-syndicalist scheme of decentralization." He said that when breaking ground in new fields the general headquarters must have money to advance for speakers, organizers and literature. "Only four out of twenty-nine industrial unions in the organization are self-supporting," said Gray. "Twenty-five are in the propaganda stage which means the I. W. W. is in the propaganda stage and must be financed by the general organization."

Cole, another I. U. 110 delegate, declared that the move to decrease the per capita tax is "the move of a disgruntled few who themselves have no executive ability, but are crying about pie cards." He said that begging for funds outside the organization put the I. W. W. in a bad light with the unorganized workers.

Oates took the side of the decentralizers.

ROWAN-BOWERMAN-GRADY INJUNCTION CREW OPENLY ISSUES ITS CALL IN AN ATTEMPT TO SPLIT THE I. W. W.

Because it will live as an historical document recording the treachery and perfidy of its signers, a document which places them in the class of reptiles in human form who seek to disrupt the organization for which better men have died, for which hundreds of workers are now rotting in prison, and upon which thousands of workers look as their only protection from the greed and vengeance of capitalism, the DAILY WORKER prints the following manifesto, in which the whole Rowan-Bowerman-Grady injunction crew throws away all pretense and openly calls for a split in the I. W. W. which will mean its certain destruction.

There is more we could say about it, but we call attention to every paragraph in the "Plan of Action" as being carefully and deliberately designed to wreck the I. W. W. and we add that this is the work of stool pigeons. It is proof enough that they "attack politicians." The recent months have shown to members of the I. W. W.—and the DAILY WORKER has heard from many of them, that those who fight the Communists instead of the capitalists and who cry "down with politicians" make themselves suspected agents of the employers. The document is as follows:

"Emergency Program.

"Submitted to the membership by the General Executive Board of the I. W. W.—Chicago, Ill., Oct. 27, 1924.

"The work of organization on the job has been obstructed, and the industrial unions have sustained much damage from the present situation at headquarters. Great hopes were entertained by the membership that a general convention would straighten out the matter. These hopes have turned to disappointment. The present so-called general convention at Emmet Memorial Hall, Chicago, which convened Oct. 13, has shown beyond all question that it is completely under control of the political element, whose program is the capture or liquidation of the I. W. W. It has made no effort to discover and remove the causes of the present trouble. All its actions are calculated to strengthen and perpetuate domination by the politicians.

"This so-called convention has only served to further complicate the situation and confuse the minds of the members. Intelligent action by the members on the job alone can save the organization. The I. W. W. must be taken into the hands of its members so it can function in industry as an association of genuine industrial unions and be immune from capture or destruction by political fakers or agents of the employing class.

"The principal cause of the present trouble is centralization of power at headquarters. This makes it possible for a few officials in control of the general office to cause disruption thruout the entire organization. If the members are to derive any further benefit from the I. W. W. they must take control of the organization and abolish dictatorship. In this way alone can the I. W. W. be placed on a solid foundation. To this end the General Executive Board submits the following:

"Plan of Action.

"The four industrial unions, Lumber Workers, No. 120; General Construction Workers, No. 310; Metal Workers No. 440; and Railroad Workers, No. 520, and any other industrial unions or branches, which are opposed to the rule of dictators and political machines, and concur with this plan of action, shall stand solidly together and continue to carry on the work of organization according to the principles laid down in our preamble.

"No member shall pay dues to delegates other than those of industrial unions which adopt this plan of action.

"No member shall be allowed to transfer to any of these industrial unions unless actually working in the industry of that union.

"The larger industrial unions shall advance sufficient funds to the General Executive Board to have supplies printed, and other industrial unions shall purchase their supplies from the G. E. B. for cash, at cost.

"The industrial unions shall pay no per capita tax.

"The General Executive Board shall consist of the chairman of the industrial unions. They shall elect their own chairman, who will be subject to removal at any time by a majority vote of the board. Any G. E. B. member is subject to removal as provided for in the by-laws of his industrial union.

"When the volume of business shall require it, the G. E. B. shall employ a general supply clerk, to have charge of production and distribution of supplies. He shall be subject to removal at any time he fails to perform his duties satisfactorily. His wages and those of any others who may be employed by the G. E. B. shall be paid by the industrial unions on a pro-rata basis.

"The offices of general secretary-treasurer, general organizer, and assistant secretary shall be abolished.

"All questions shall be settled by majority vote.

"All ballots put out by the present so-called convention shall be ignored.

"The Chicago and New York defense offices shall be abolished. The California defense and Centralia publicity shall receive the full support of the membership. Until permanent arrangements are made, outlying cases shall be handled by local defense committees with the co-operation of the G. E. B.

"The above is an emergency program covering the most important points that have to be dealt with immediately. Later on, a convention will be called of all industrial unions and branches adopting this plan. At this convention a more detailed program can be drawn up according to instructions from the membership, same to be ratified by referendum ballot.

"All branches and job branches are requested to hold meetings to take action on the present emergency and consider this plan, and to report action taken to the General Executive Board, Box 1125, Chicago, Ill.—General Executive Board, I. W. W., P. D. Ryan, acting chairman, H. E. Trotter, recording secretary.

"The above emergency program has been submitted to the following industrial union administrations and concurred in by them: Lumber Workers' I. U. No. 120, I. W. W., Maurice Daly secretary-treasurer, James Rowan chairman. General Construction Workers' I. U. No. 310, I. W. W., Wm. Buchwald, secretary-treasurer, P. D. Ryan, chairman. Metal Workers' I. U. No. 440, I. W. W., M. Raddock, secretary-treasurer, Fred Bowermah, chairman. Railroad Workers' I. U. No. 520, I. W. W., John Grady, secretary-treasurer, H. E. Trotter, chairman.

CORRECTION.

In the issue of the DAILY WORKER for November 3, on page 2, column 4, under the heading—"Labor Fakers In Crazy Quilt."—the following sentence appeared:

"The Chicago Federation of Labor has indorsed Igoe for state's attorney, altho the Klan which is co-operating with the Federation in backing LaFollette and the Coolidge candidate, Small, has come out for the re-election of State's Attorney Crowe, a Catholic."

This is an error resulting from a linotype operator skipping a line on the copy which, when added, would cause it to read correctly as follows:

"The Chicago Federation of Labor has endorsed the Wage Earners' League slate which is boosting Igoe for state's attorney, altho the Klan, which is co-operating with the Federation in backing LaFollette and the Coolidge candidate, Small, has come out for the re-election of State's Attorney Crowe, a Catholic."

IF THIS HAD ONLY HAPPENED IN RUSSIA IT WOULD BE "SOME NEWS"

When the telegraph editor of the DAILY WORKER arrived at his desk Tuesday morning at 9 a. m., the polls had already been open in the city of Chicago for three hours.

The news ticker had already typed off the following casualties of the "orderly processes of democracy" within this center of bourgeois "peace and order":

Shot—Condition Serious.

Antone Rudzinski was shot by six men speeding by in an automobile as he turned to leave a polling place. His condition is serious.

Seven gunmen were arrested in the early hours of the polling, three were travelling in an automobile and the others were loitering about polling places.

Several Kidnapped.

Shortly after 8 o'clock, police reported that several election workers had been kidnapped from the vicinity of a polling place on the north side.

The detective bureau is holding emergency squads in readiness to rush to scenes of disorder. Patrol wagons and ambulances are provided for to take care of the dead, the wounded and the arrested.

State Militia Called Out.

While it was yet too early to get the casualty list from the country at large, wires from Albuquerque, New Mexico, promised to give returns even before the polls opened. On reports that United States Marshal Romero was swearing in many deputies to preserve order on election day, Governor Hinkle has ordered two companies of militia to guard Las Vegas.

Teamsters' Union Official Killed.

Shortly before noon John Mackey, an official of the Teamsters' Union, was killed and Claude Maddox wounded by men firing from a speeding automobile on Chicago's south side. Morris Spagit, a democrat of the thirteenth ward, was stabbed after arguing with a republican, while Dan Contarsy, another democrat, was kidnapped by five men in an automobile.

Two Democrats Less.

From Lexington, Tennessee, dispatches later reported that two election judges were killed by a republican farmer in a shooting at the polls.

Singing Society Rehearsals.

The Freiheit Singing Society rehearsals take place every Thursday night at 8 p. m., at 3557 W. Roosevelt Road.

The Freiheit Mandolin Orchestra rehearsals are held every Friday night at 8 p. m., at 3557 W. Roosevelt Road.

COAL BARONS PILE UP PROFITS WHILE DIGGERS GO HUNGRY

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BOSTON.—Profits of 340 per cent in the past 3 months and 1428 per cent in the first 9 months of the year show the extent to which the common stockholders of Island Creek Coal Co. have exploited low paid miners during the year to date.

In spite of the depression this company made a new high record for output during the 3 months ended Sept. 30, producing 4,424,409 tons at a profit of 33c a ton after all deductions for taxes, depreciation and depletion.

PICKED "JURY" PROBES STREET CAR DISASTER

State's Attorney Holds Brahe Incommunicado

While Coroner Oscar Wolff was trying to make John Brahe, the crippled towerman employed at the crossing of North avenue and the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, where ten were killed last Sunday morning, the goat for responsibility rightfully belonging to the railroad company, Brahe himself is being held incommunicado by State's Attorney Crowe.

DAILY WORKER Reporter Barred.

This was learned when a reporter from the DAILY WORKER tried to get an interview with Towerman Brahe, upon whom the railroad and street car corporations and the coroner are trying to lay all the blame.

First the police department told the reporter that Brahe was "at the inquest." When the coroner's office was reached the reporter was told that Brahe was being held by county authorities. Finally, when Crowe's office was questioned, the reporter was met with gruff refusal and the statement that "nobody can see Brahe."

Wolff's "High Class Jury."

At the inquest, Coroner Wolff had managed to put over his handpicked "jury" of capitalist politicians and big property owners to "investigate" the disaster. He wanted a "high class jury," he said. He got one. On the jury are County Clerk Sweitzer, Chief Justice Harry Olson, former Governor Edward F. Dunne, Henry Barrett Chamberlain, superintendent of the Chicago Crime Commission, John Terborgh, vice-president of the Foreman National Bank and Robert Eitel, proprietor of the Randolph Hotel.

Bottle Smeller For Moral's Sake.

This jury is of a complexion openly interested in the attempt, practically announced before the inquest started, by Wolff to absolve the Milwaukee railroad from blame by laying it all upon the crippled towerman.

Chamberlain is chosen because he is guaranteed to follow the smell of moonshine to the exclusion of all other scents, altho the evidence shows that Brahe was not drunk, but had only followed the age-old custom, which is not a necessity for those who are too poor to deal with banks, of cashing his pay check by buying a drink at some saloon several hours before.

"Fair and Impartial" Jury.

Terborgh of the Foreman National bank is financially interested in clearing both the Milwaukee railroad and the street car company, as this bank is connected by bond holdings and interlocking directors to these two corporation corporations. Eitel's hotel business is also dependent upon the good graces of railroad companies. The three capitalist politicians are, as usual, expected to protect property interests without further orders.

However, the workers in the North avenue district are putting some pressure behind their demand to find out why their lives are played with by law-breaking corporations which go unrestrained by authority, while all the whitewashers are busy smelling bottles.

Towerman Arthur Albert, who has brot out the fact that the Milwaukee railroad had ignored the law ordering it to elevate its tracks, has revealed a new angle of the affair.

Murdered Ten to Save $60.

Albert states that he possesses a letter showing that five years ago, by agreement between the Milwaukee railroad and the Chicago Surface Lines, a perfect de-railing safety device was discontinued at the fatal crossing, "because it cost $124 a month to operate, while at that time a towerman would cost only $65 a month." Since then the towerman's wage was cut to $60, which Brahe was trying to live on at the time of the disaster.

Easton-Phillipsburg, Attention!

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 4.—The local branches of the Workers Party and Young Workers League of Easton and Phillipsburg will have a 7th Anniversary of the Russian Revolution celebration on Sunday, Nov. 9 at 8 p. m., at the Lithuanian Hall, North Seventh street, Easton. Comrade A. Jakira of Philadelphia will be the main speaker (in English) and there will be speakers in Lithuanian and Hungarian. All comrades are working to make this meeting and celebration a big success.

Unions Aid Ohio Miners.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 4.—Efforts are being made by Cleveland unions to relieve the destitution in southern Ohio mines where coal diggers in many instances have been idle nearly a year because of the depression. Funds and clothes for the 13,000 jobless workers and their families are being collected by the Cleveland Federation of Labor.

Making Pearls.

GENEVA, Nov. 4. — The Swiss chemist, Professors Duarin and Almartine, are experimenting in making carbon pearls by distilling coal to obtain jewels of the same density and color as the genuine.

The Election is Over But Communists Renew War Against Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the election is over. The workers and farmers have cast their ballots for four years more of capitalist misrule. They have expressed themselves in favor of the continuance of Morgan's social system. The Wall Street dictatorship, thru its "democracy" has won the public consent to four years of its tyrannical sway.

"Hang the guilty!" yells Coroner Wolff, in Chicago, as the ten dead in another grade crossing catastrophe are being buried, while a score still lie in agony in hospitals scattered over Chicago.

It was a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul freight train that struck a street car in a grade crossing death trap.

The guilty ones are the railroad profiteers. They refuse to spend the money to abolish the death traps. The disaster took place in the Goose Island district, in one of the sections of greatest misery in Chicago. All the victims were of the working class. So what does it matter? Capitalism doesn't care for the lives of the workers; especially when the workers consent to keep capitalism in power.

This Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, that brought death to many working class homes in Chicago, some years ago saw the lives of more than half a thousand coal miners snuffed out in the Cherry Mine disaster, at Cherry, Ill. The railroad refused to provide the proper safety appliances in its coal mines, just as it refuses to protect or abolish its grade crossings. So the Cherry coal mine became a tomb; even as the railroad's grade crossing in Chicago was strewn with the dead and dying. But at the ending of the next quarter the dividends will be as fat as ever.

• • • •

A circular of the New York Central Railroad offers as an excuse for high rates that there are 4,000 grade crossings in New York State. It would cost $100,000 to obliterate each one of these. That would be a total of $400,000,000. But the rates continue as high as ever; the grade crossings are not wiped out; and the toll of new victims mounts from day to day. That is capitalism. Those who supported Coolidge, Davis and LaFollette, voted to keep this murderous system going.

In New York City, in the depths of the East Side, Sam Roth, his wife and three children die in another tenement house fire.

They lived "second floor rear" in one of the many Goerck Street firetraps. Dense smoke arising as the hungry flames swept everywhere choked this little family of the working class into unconsciousness before the agony of death by fire reached them. Mrs. Roth was later found with her three-months-old baby clutched to her breast.

The landlord will collect his insurance. The firetrap will be repaired to receive new tenants. Neighbors and friends will bury the dead. And the profiteering in rents off the firetraps on the East Side, in New York City, as everywhere else over the nation, will go on the same as ever.

That is capitalism. The majority of voting citizens declared, on Tuesday, for its continuance. They said, "Let it go on!"

"Wipe it out!" say the Communists. "Abolish it!"

Usher in the new social order that places above all the interests of the whole working class.

And it is today that the Communists in the United States, in common with Communists thruout the world, with the slogan of "Down with Capitalism!" upon their lips, renew the struggle for the victory of the workers.

Philadelphia All Set For Anniversary Celebration Nov. 7

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 3.—Philadelphia Workers Party and the Young Workers League have arranged for a huge demonstration to celebrate the 7th Anniversary of the Russian Revolution on Friday evening Nov. 7, at the Labor Lyceum, 6th and Brown streets.

C. E. Ruthenberg, the executive secretary of the Workers Party will be the principal speaker. This will be Ruthenberg's first public meeting in Philadelphia this year.

A revolutionary musical program will lend color and distinction to this celebration. The International Concert Orchestra, conducted by Comrade John Lyman, and well known and appreciated by the Philadelphia comrades, is working overtime, preparing an excellent program.

The celebration of the Russian revolution is the biggest event of the year among the Communists and our sympathizers in this city, but this year's program and arrangements will surpass any demonstration ever held here.

The entire Workers Party and Y. W. L. membership is hard on the job working for the success of this meeting. All the friends, supporters and sympathizers of Soviet Russia will be at the celebration Friday evening, November 7.

Grade Crossing Takes 11 Lives.

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 4. — With a total of 11 dead and four more critically injured as a result of the crossing accident at North Hampton late yesterday when a large auto bus was demolished by a Chesapeake and Ohio passenger train, county officials today are endeavoring to learn the facts to present to a coroner's jury Wednesday evening.

SOME QUESTIONS FOR CLASS IN ELEMENTARY MARXIAN ECONOMICS

Class in Elementary Marxian Economics, Wednesday evening, 8 p. m., at 2613 Hirsch Boulevard. Questions for class of November 5:

1. Explain the difference between labor time as a measure of value, on the one hand, and the value of labor power, on the other hand.

2. If the purchasing power of the working class were generally increased what kind of commodities would find an increased market?

3. Would a general increase of wages for the working class cause an increase in prices of the necessities of life?

4. Why will an increase in prices of commodities, consequent upon a general increase in wages, be only temporary?

5. In what way will increasing demand for necessaries of life cause a change in the distribution of capital among the various industries?

6. What is the most beneficial to the workers, a rise in wages or a decrease, in working hours?

7. Do shorter hours tend to increase or to decrease wages?

8. What would be the effect upon wages of a general increase of the working hours from 9 to 12 per day?

9. What is the difference between "labor" and "labor power"?

10. In the value of a commodity determined by the value of the labor power used in its production, or by the duration of the labor time socially necessary for its production? Explain.

Cannonsburg to Celebrate Nov. 9.

CANNANSBURG, Pa., Nov. 4.—The Cannonsburg C. C. C. has set aside Nov. 9 for the big celebration of the 7th Anniversary of the Russian Revolution to be held in the Labor Temple at the corner of Jefferson and Pike Sts., and every branch in and around Cannonsburg must make it their duty to see that every member is at this celebration. Bring your friends.

GOMPERS BUSY IN SUBMARINE WAR ON FOES

going to the meeting of the conference for progressive political action, scheduled to assemble the next month in Cleveland. Gompers only shrugged his shoulders, sniffed the air, and grunted; all of which was intended to convey the idea that the Cleveland meeting didn't matter.

Gompers Controls in New York.

But the Cleveland meeting of the C. P. P. A., in December, 1923, took a stand against the "labor party," it refused admittance to the Communist delegates, and the next summer at the Albany meeting of the New York conference for progressive political action we find Gompers' Tammany Hall politicians in the New York labor movement absolutely in control.

During the past year the C. P. P. A. has been drifting more and more towards the Gompers' position. It was Gompers who pushed Plumstrick and Nockels out of the July 4, 1923, farmer-labor convention, in Chicago. It was Gompers who inspired LaFollette's attack on the June 17 national farmer-labor conference, in St. Paul, this year.

Gompers has been in league with the worst elements fighting the Communists. It was Detective Burns who said that altho he did not sleep in the same bed with Gompers, nevertheless they were in agreement on many things.

Gompers used the conference for progressive political action and the LaFollette movement to destroy independent political action for the workers and farmers under the standards of the farmer-labor movement.

Regains Dictatorship.

Now he is using his machine, like the Tammany Hall crowd in New York, to destroy the conference for progressive political action, so that he will again become the dictator of the political policies of labor's officialdom.

Two of the original sponsors of the C. P. P. A., "the labor party," and "recognition of Soviet Russia," have been completely dropped. While recognition of Soviet Russia was the big issue in the British political struggle, LaFollette has been absolutely silent on this question while Hughes, Dawes and other republican campaigners have carried on a systematic attack against Soviet Russia. Gompers is at one with Secretary of State Hughes on the question of warring against the Workers' Republic and he has pulled the LaFollette campaign along with him on his side in this fight.

Watch El Paso Convention.

The situation will undoubtedly itself considerably with the meeting of the American Federation of Labor in a few days at El Paso, Texas. There the Gompers' officialdom will have to declare itself on the promises of the LaFollette campaign that it is "going to organize the unorganized."

It can pretty safely be predicted at this time that Gompers' position will not only be against the "third party" idea, but that moves will be made for the liquidation of the conference for progressive political action.

Where Will the Socialists Go?

This raises the question of what will happen to the socialists in this changing political panorama. The Hillquits and the Bergers are now convinced that they have killed the socialist party. But they would no doubt be content to maintain a small nucleus of an organization to give them a place, no matter how insignificant, within the conference for progressive political action. If the C. P. P. A. would only organize a "labor party" that would give the socialists a chance to drop their own organization, the "S. P." and become full fledged members of "the labor party."

But with the American Federation of Labor torpedoing not only "the labor party," but the C. P. P. A. as well, it can rapidly be seen how the socialists not only become orphans but also without any asylum offering a refuge.

It has been a clever maneuver carried out over the long period of time. But all indications are that it is succeeding beyond expectations. And all the time Gompers, backed by his expensive propaganda machine in Washington, has been carefully spreading his network of lies, charging that it is the Communists who have made farmer-labor political action impossible. For an echo listen to Fitzpatrick and Nockels in the Chicago Federation of Labor, or the Gompers' agents in any organization of the workers, anywhere in the land.

But the workers and exploited farmers will gradually realize who it is that has betrayed them, who it is that has prevented them from organizing their own class power, and then they will turn in increased numbers to Communist leadership, looking for a way out of the difficult situation in which they now find themselves.

That's Why We Celebrate

Imperialism made a bitter attempt to win Russia back. Full well it knew that the Russian Revolution began the birth of a new order that sounded the death knell to the old.

American soldiers in Siberia. American munitions to the Whites in Europe. Kolchak, Yudenich, Denikin, traitors, all financed at the request of the world's financiers.

The blockade. The cordon sanitaire. Then Wrangel. This prostitute of French capitalism, with funds unlimited, made his last stand and lost. Upon the stocks of the guns, captured by the Bolsheviki were found the words, "New Russia."

The imperialists wanted a "New Russia," not a Soviet Russia. They still want it today!

We wanted a SOVIET RUSSIA. And for SEVEN YEARS we got what we wanted. We shall continue to get it! And that is why we celebrate!

Today we have a NEW WEAPON in the battle to continue SOVIET RUSSIA victorious. Today the DAILY WORKER has taken its place beside the militant proletariat of the world, upholding the triumph in the East, striving for victory in the West. And we also celebrate on this account.

LONG LIVE THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF SOVIET RUSSIA! LONG LIVE THE DAILY WORKER! FORWARD WITH IT TO A WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT!

Look to the right. Look to the left. Look below. Find your city. That's YOUR meeting. ATTEND! CELEBRATE!

YOU'RE IN IT

Mines Dynamited.

ATHENS, O., Nov. 4.—Mines numbers 24 and 68, owned by the Middle States Coal company and operated by a group of union miners on a co-operative basis, were dynamited today at Redtown.

Number 68 will soon again be in operation, but the tipples of Number 24 were burned with a heavy loss.

Officers are conducting an investigation as there is reported to have been considerable controversy over the operation of the mines.

Two Banks Robbed.

FENTON, Ia., Nov. 4. — Both the Farmers' Savings Bank and the Fenton State Bank were robbed here early today by a gang of bandits who entered the town in two cars, cut all wires, dynamited the vaults of the two banks and escaped with $7,000.

ANOTHER HOME IS BROKEN UNDER CAPITALISM BUT LA FOLLETTE, DAVIS, COOLIDGE LIKE IT JUST THE SAME

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—For eight weeks May Thompson and her four little children slept in subway stations and in a little strip of woodland at Speedway and West 178th street, New York, because they had no other home since the father of the family, an advertising solicitor, had deserted them. The children were found by a station agent in the subway sleeping on pieces of newspaper in the women's room. The mother dozed nearby. She had tied the door shut with a string and screened the ventilator with paper.

Anthony is 9; Harry, 8; Daniel, 6; and Samuel, 2. Mrs. Thompson had fed them what scraps of food she found or could buy and cooked in the woods when the weather permitted. She would not be separated from the baby when an effort was made to take the children to the Children's Society. She went with him to Bellevue hospital where she lapsed into incoherence from exhaustion and underneurishment.

CALIFORNIA COMRADE HEAVES FEW WELCOME BRICKS BACK AT US

From a comrade way off at Carmel-by-the-Sea, California, comes this letter:

"Dear Comrades: Enclosed please find a couple of bricks for the DAILY WORKER, and also a check for $10 payment for the Workers' Monthly, for five years to begin with the first issue, Nov. 1. I am now a subscriber to the Liberator, the Labor Herald and the Soviet Rusela Pictorial. When they stop publishing, just call it even and do not extend my time on the new Workers' Monthly for these.

"You will hear from me often.

"Robert G. Leidig."

AS WE SEE IT

as Woodrow Wilson's famous interpretation of the selective service act. It was not conscription because the cannon fodder was shipped to France according to law. "It is not conscription of the unwilling," declared the notorious mountebank.

EVIDENTLY LaFollette considers his capitalistic reputation worth money. The American Defense Society, undoubtedly at the instigation of the republican party, published an advertisement purporting to show that the Communists were behind the LaFollette election campaign. They are, with a sledgehammer. The following gentlemen consider their dignity and their earning power impaired by the "red" advertisement and are suing the culprits for libel damages to the tune of $25,000 each. Arthur Garfield Hayes, J. A. H. Hopkins, George Soule, McAllister Coleman, and Eva A. Frank. Outside of the Frank person, the others are fairly well known and it is positively outrageous to label them reds. But the reds are the libelled ones.

THE name of William Gibbs McAdoo has not figured very much in the news recently, certainly not as supporter of John W. Davis. The DAILY WORKER hinted that the illness which was given as McAdoo's excuse for not appearing on the platform for Morgan's attorney, was of the diplomatic kind. As a matter of fact, while the readers of the capitalist press were preparing to send Wilson Crown Prince, a bunch of illiterates he was gadding around Washington giving one whoop for Davis and two for LaFollette. His only vocal contribution to the Davis candidacy was one speech from the rear of a parlor car in some way-station in Texas. Reads like Hiram Johnson making a speech for Coolidge on Plymouth Rock.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS INVESTIGATION BRINGS NOTHING

Memories of Politicians Get Sudden Lapse

By JAY LOVESTONE.

The Borah investigation of the campaign funds fizzled out more rapidly than many had expected. The employing class politicians simply will not take a chance on saying anything about their activities. This is particularly true because the hearings are being held in the midst of the campaign when all are anxious to poll the heaviest vote and are on guard so to prevent any loss thru loose talk.

Senator Borah told the DAILY WORKER that he knew before the investigation was begun that very little headway would be made during the campaign. Today the republicans, democrats, and self-styled progressives have succeeded in hiding the extent and character of their contributions. Besides, the committee has not made any serious effort to press for results.

Hearing Adjourned in Chicago.

The hearings at Chicago were adjourned. William Morgan Butler appeared before the committee and told the senators that his national headquarters have so far received about three and a half million dollars for the election of Coolidge. Sufficient evidence has already been submitted to indicate that the republicans have resorted to wholesale buying of newspapers and to a lavish expenditure of funds secured from the biggest business interests. The republican party has been more definitely tied up with the house of Morgan than in any of the previous campaigns.

It was also been shown that the LaFollette campaign costs will run into at least a million dollars, if the various auxiliary units are taken into account. A considerable portion of the LaFollette money has come from such notorious open shoppers like W. T. Rawleigh of Illinois, who has given $38,000 so far.

Facts Carefully Concealed.

The great precaution taken by the various witnesses to hide the facts of their campaign was shown most plainly at the hearings held in Chicago. When Samuel Untermyer showed Mr. Butler some wires and asked him to identify the same and their contents, the republican national chairman calmly declared he knew nothing about them. Not a single member of the committee would dare attempt to have Mr. Butler's memory refreshed. The republican attorney, Waymouth Kirkland, who is also lawyer for the Chicago Tribune, saw to it that nothing damaging enter the record.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Butler admitted that the bulk of he republican contributions came from New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois. At the Washington sessions Mr. Grundy was forced to tell the committee that in Pennsylvania alone the republicans collected more than $800,000. Under cross examination by Mr. Untermyer in Chicago, M. McCutcheon displayed a remarkably weak memory, when he was questioned about the breakfast that had been arranged at the White House for many prominent actors. George Barr Baker, republican publicity director, was likewise deserted by his memory when he was quizzed about many of the full page ads appearing in some of the leading dailies throughout the country in behalf of Coolidge and Dawes.

The Chicago hearings have been officially closed. The Washington hearings will wind up officially as soon as Borah reaches the capital. The committee at the capital succeeded in making very little headway in getting information from Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor as to the support rendered by this body to the Wisconsin senator.

WHY IS A BAZAAR?

The great Chicago bazaar to be held the last week of November is for the benefit of THE DAILY WORKER and the LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL, both of which greatly need thousands of dollars in order to function at full strength.

SOVIET RUSSIA FILMS MAKING CROWDED HOUSES

Will Be Shown in Twin Cities Nov. 7

Film "Holds Over."

When a film is so successful that the theatre manager extends its run and cancels another picture to do it, the film is said to be "held over," and fulfills the producer's highest ambitions. The Russian feature, The Beauty and the Bolshevik, won that distinction in New York when its original run of three days was extended to eleven at the Lenox Theatre.

Now, in Philadelphia, where on Oct 28, the picture played to 6,000 people three more days' run has been arranged. These shows will be under the joint auspices of The Freiheit and the Workers Party.

Michigan to Run Russian Films.

In Detroit, Mich., arrangements are being made for two to three days runs at at least three neighborhood theatres, and a professional distributor plans to take over both The Beauty and the Bolshevik, and Polikushka for the whole state of Michigan.

Thus far eight cities have definitely booked The Beauty and the Bolshevik, four Russia and Germany, three The Fifth Year, two Polikushka, and one Lenin Memorial.

Those who want to get in on this motion picture activity should lose no time applying for information and dates. Write to International Workers' Aid, 16 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

St. Paul Liberals Run Polikushka.

The St. Paul, Minn., local organization of the National Committee for Better Films will run a special invitation showing of Polikushka, the Moscow Art Theatre film distributed by the International Workers' Aid. The show will be held on Nov. 7, and information can be secured from Mr. Caryl Spiller, St. Paul Institute, Auditorium building. Polikushka has been chosen as the first venture of an extensive nation-wide campaign to acquaint the public with the splendid film wealth kept from them by the capitalist film producers and distributors.

Engdahl Closes the Campaign with Meet at Cleveland, Ohio

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 4.—J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, completed a series of enthusiastic communist campaign meetings, speaking here at Bricklayers' Hall last night.

This is the city that saw the gathering of the national republican convention, the conference for progressive political action and the socialist party; gatherings that placed Coolidge and LaFollette in the presidential race.

Only Working Class Fight by W. P.

Engdahl explained the anti-Communist front, extending from the strikebreaker in the White House to the Wisconsin senator, showing that the only working class fight in the nation today was being waged under the leadership of the Workers Party.

Altho the Cleveland Communists, with those of the rest of the state, were unable to get the Foster-Gitlow ticket on Tuesday's ballot, nevertheless they had candidates for congress in the field, including C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, and expect to make a good showing.

New Styles Hit Workers.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Formal consolidation of the Waist and Dress Makers' Union and the Cloak and Skirt Makers' Union is expected in November. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, with which these locals are affiliated, is promoting the amalgamation and declares that a strong organization campaign will follow the union. New styles of women's clothes have hit the waist makers especially. One-piece garments are in vogue now.

FOSTER SPEAKS AT BIG MEETING IN PITTSBURGH

LaFollette Kerensky of America

Editor's Note.—The following are the last Foster campaign meeting reports. They have arrived by mail and give added testimony to the enthusiasm with which the Communist candidate for president was greeted everywhere.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (By Mail.)—The mass meeting of the Workers Party in Carnegie Music Hall marked the climax of our campaign here. More than 1,000 workers paid the admission fee of 25c to hear the Communist standard bearer. In every way it was by far the most successful meeting ever held here by the Workers Party. Comrade Foster's caustic criticism of the three capitalist parties was repeatedly applauded by the audience. The two old parties were characterized as the twin representatives of Wall street and the LaFollette movement was shown to be dominated by middle class elements. Foster analyzed the role played by the Kerensky's and Scheidemanns in Europe and showed that the LaFollette movement was destined to play a somewhat similar role in this country—as the last bulwark of capitalism.

Gompersism Opium for Workers.

Foster pointed out that the workers of America lacked the militant organization that could fight effectively the forces of capitalism and he laid the responsibility for this on Gompersism. In this connection, Foster said: "One of the worst features, if not the say crimes, of the unions dominated by Gompersism is the exclusion of Negro workers from their ranks. No matter what their race or color may be the interests of the workers are the same and they must fight shoulder to shoulder for their emancipation from the bondage of capitalism." To show how well the capitalists understood what the solidarity between the white and the colored workers would mean to them, Foster related the following incident. During the steel strike he once spoke at a Negro church which had been subsidized to the extent of $1,500 per year by the U. S. Steel corporation. Immediately after this the subsidy was cut off.

Capitalism Leads to War.

Foster ridiculed LaFollette's plan to stop war thru referendum. He showed that capitalism inevitably leads to war and that war can be stopped only thru the abolition of capitalism. He concluded his speech with an analysis of the capitalist system and the capitalist dictatorship stating that capitalism can only be abolished thru a proletariat revolution and the establishment of a Soviet government.

The collection for the campaign fund brought in $374.32, literature and DAILY WORKER sales amounted to $69.25, campaign buttons were sold for over $20.000 and over 30 subscriptions were taken for the DAILY WORKER.

Hartford Shows Enthusiasm.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 25. (By Mail).—Five hundred workers came to hear William Z. Foster, Workers Party candidate for president, at Unity Hall, a remarkable turnout.

And every one of them paid 25 cents admission. Consider also, that on the same night, in another hall, democratic spellbinders were holding forth—Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under Wordy Wilson and the state candidates, solid business men and bankers. And still five hundred paid to hear Foster—a good omen for the election.

The meeting opened with the German Singing Society affering the "International," and another revolutionary song. District Organizer William Simons, after urging support for the Communist state ticket in Connecticut, introduced Foster as the leader of the steel strike of 1919.

Gets Remarkable Ovation.

The ovation Foster received reduces to the scrap heap any insurance the capitalists may take out against the revolution. Notwithstanding Hartford's countless insurance companies, their precautions will avail them naught, for Hartford has a strong nucleus of Communists, that banded together with the Communist forces thruout the country, will usher in the Communist society.

Foster Convincing.

You can't get away from it. Foster has a way all his own. Not rampant, raring, fire-eating oratory, but a live, here let me tell you, kind of talk, personal, enticing, that draws you nearer to his subject. For two hours, the workers listened attentively, while he condemned the capitalist parties, including the new rainbow, the LaFollette movement, which not as yet needed by big capital, would sooner or later be their last resort against an outraged, revolutionary, working class.

But fundamentally, the speech was not one of criticism, but constructive, laying the foundation for Communism. Not mere theory, but experience in the rough, the steel strike of 1919. He drew on world history to prove that the capitalist era was doomed to destruction, and that the Communist era would come, because the capitalists would drive the workers toward it.

SOVIET HAMMER STUNS TAMMANY ELECTION BOSS, BUT HE RECOVERED

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 4.—John Voorhis, president of the board of elections, tried unsuccessfully to keep the name of Benjamin Gitlow off the ballot in New York state this year, he has admitted. Voorhis, who barred Gitlow from running for mayor of New York City in 1920 and for congress in 1921, declared he would have barred the Communist candidate for vice-president if it had been in his power.

Voorhis objected to the sickle and hammer emblem on the Workers Party ballot, but could not dig up a capitalistic law which made the Soviet emblem objectionable.

FOSTER FLAYS LEWIS AS TOOL OF CAL COOLIDGE

Miners of Dillonvale Greet Strike Leader

By MAX LERNER.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

DILLONVILLE, Nov. 4.— Miners came from a radius of many miles to listen to the message of Communism delivered by our candidate for president, William Z. Foster. Many of the miners, living in and around the Wheeling-Bellaire mining and steel section, recalled the days when Foster had been in that field during the heat of the steel strike, when Foster's life was often in danger.

The meeting and the spirit of those present was a tribute to the growth of our movement among the miners as well as to their intelligence, fighting spirit and courage. The comrades of Dillonvale and the surrounding territory are to be congratulated for their efforts.

Joe Kobylak, veteran fighter among the miners of the valley, introduced Foster as the one who was leading the third cycle of American history after Washington and Lincoln, the cycle of the American workers' revolution. Foster analyzed the meaning of capitalism in detail, exposed the records of the candidates of the old parties and pointed out at length the true nature as well as the grave danger of the LaFollette movement.

G. O. Party Strategist.

In deading with the renegades and betrayers of the working class, Foster cited the example of John L. Lewis, international president of the Miners' Union. This man is supporting Coolidge. He is on his board of strategy. He, the president of a union for which the miners have made innumerable sacrifices against all the vilest efforts of the supporters of Coolidge and the many Coolidges to destroy, he is the most voluntarily bedmate of a strikebreaker. There was but one conclusion to draw from this, Foster pointed out, that John L. Lewis, being the political bedfellow of strike breaker Coolidge, must also be the bedfellow of the coal operators, the capitalists, the Coolidges, in the industrial field, in the Miners' Union where he can only be acting as the agent of capital for the destroy the vigor and health, the very character and meaning of the organization.

An appeal was made to join and strengthen the Workers Party and the Young Workers League by Max Lerner, district organizer, and the method of voting for the Communist candidates in Ohio was explained in detail. The meeting ended very enthusiastically after Comrade Foster had briefly gone into the necessity of continuing the fight for Sacco and Vanzetti in reply to a question.

WHAT WILL THEY BE
When They Grow Up?

What life work will your boy or girl take up? You are thinking about that. It is the thing that you are most anxious about. Yet, you do not want to push the children too strongly toward any particular calling just because it appeals to you. Why not let them explore the possibilities for themselves? Without their knowing it, they will give you a hint of the way their tastes and talents tend, and upon that you can build in the right direction.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE
SOLVES THE PROBLEM

Give your children The Book of Knowledge. It brings the wide world within their grasp. It teaches them to observe, to think for themselves. It draws them irresistibly to what interests them most. IT WILL HELP YOUR CHILDREN FIND THEMSELVES. And all the while they are learning, learning, learning—from the charmingly written descriptions, from the 10,000 interest-arousing pictures, from the witchery of fact cunningly woven into a moving story of all the world has learned in science, history, geography, literature, art and ideals.

CHILDREN LOVE IT

"The arrival of The Book of Knowledge was hailed with shrieks of delight and the children have made it almost their only reading matter since it came," writes Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart, the well-known novelist and playwright.

The best of it is that The Book of Knowledge educates the children without their knowing it, the process is so pleasant.

WHAT IT HAS DONE

Thousands of letters from delighted parents prove the value of The Book of Knowledge. These letters have come from people in all walks of life. All agree that to give the children The Book of Knowledge is one of the biggest things that can be done for them. In more than a million families, the children already have The Book of Knowledge.

You Will Be Glad You Inquired

What would The Book of Knowledge do for your boy or girl? Would you like to see for yourself? The method of teaching by pictures, with clear, simple explanations and delightful conversational talks, you will find in the wonderful pictures and stories taken from The Book of Knowledge that we invite you to have free. Come Over!

At any time during the day or evening if you have an hour to spare—come over and volunteer your help to enable us to get out a heap of mailing, inserting and other odd jobs on the campaign to increase the circulation of the DAILY WORKER and the WORKERS MONTHLY. We are very busy and have loads of work —help us out—come over!

INCREASED MEMBERSHIP—INCREASED ACTIVITY.

DISTRICT No. 1 comprises Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island. This is the very heart of the shoe and leather and the textile industries. Here unemployment is rife and half-time work prevalent. Here the workers are exploited ruthlessly in the cotton mills, the shoe factories, the wire mills. The vast majority of the workers are unorganized and helpless. They are ready for our message; they need the DAILY WORKER with its inspiring call to action. There are 2510 members of the Workers Party on the rolls in District No. 1. Of these only 100 are in English branches. If everyone of our members would make up their mind to go out and get ONE new subscriber for the DAILY WORKER we could quadruple our English-speaking membership.

BUILD THE DAILY WORKER—this is the immediate and the revolutionary task of every party member in District No. 1.

USE FAKE ISSUES TO DIVIDE THE INDIAN PEOPLES

Division is Fostered by British Agents

By CHAMAN LALL.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

SIMLA, India.—Division is growing among the peoples of India just when the alien rule of the British begins to show signs of weakness and inadequacy. It can easily be conjectured that the bitterness dividing the people is not of spontaneous origin but sedulously fostered by the British Indian government and its agents.

Outbreaks between Hindus and Mohammedans with loss of life are becoming the order of the day. In the latest disturbance at Shajahanpur three lives were lost in rioting over the silly issue of trees near a temple. The branches of a tree overhung an area near the temple and the Hindu objected. Previously there had been uproar because the Mohammedans objected to music near their mosques.

Students of despotic government with an understanding of the economic and political interpretations of exploitation, readily recognize that these trick issues are nursed to mislead the wretched inhabitants of India and distract their attention from the desperate struggle for emancipation. The average per capita income of Indians is stated in the national assembly to be not more than 25 shillings (1 shilling, 23c) a year. India is becoming increasingly impoverished under British rule.

Labor legislation in the national legislative assembly meeting at Simla has come to an end with adjournment until January in Delhi. Besides the successful challenges to the British autocracy on salary grabs and other measures, the assembly, which is composed largely of elected members, passed some progressive bills. The penalty on workers for breach of contract with employers, a form of industrial slavery, is being removed. Maternity benefits were proposed as well as weekly payment of wages and greater freedom of assemblage. Taxation will be investigated by a commission selected by the assembly instead of appointed by the British. Not all of these measures will become law because the upper house, mostly appointive, has a voice and the government has final decision besides.

French Rivers Rise.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Heavy rains thruout France sent the Meuse and Marne rivers to flood stages and covered thousands of acres of farm lands. The Seine has risen a meter in Paris in the last 48 hours.

NEW YORK TIMES WORRIES LEST LABOR LEARNS OF HUGE PROFITS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—"A business acquaintance was just in to see me. 'I'm in a fine stew,' he said. I asked why, and this is the story he told.

"'Well, all last year my business was only fair and I told the boys working for me to be reasonable; not to ask for too many pay raises all in a bunch. I told them I'd have to close down the works if they bothered me too much, for the margin of profit was small. 'Well, I got thru the year with a quarter million profit—and was I lucky. In other enterprises I made four times that amount, and naturally put the whole thing into my income tax returns. The figure was published yesterday morning on the first page of the Times.

"'Now my men aren't going to stop and figure that part of my income came from other enterprises. They're going to say, 'Well, here we are, sweating in this boiler factory while our boss is living off the gravy.' I'm going to have a fine time explaining. What's more, I'll probably have a strike or two on my hands.'"

All this was said by the president of one of Wall Street's biggest banks, as quoted by the New York Times. The big financier was quoting a business acquaintance who had been put "into a fine stew" by the publication of the income tax figures. "An inexcusable invasion of personal rights," says the banker to the Times.

Jailed for Selling "Service Record," a Legion Weekly Rival

By E. J. IRVINE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—"Service Record," organ of ex-service men and a rival of the "American Legion Weekly," has been discriminated against at the behest of Legion officials, and agents who sold "Service Record" have been threatened and arrested by legionnaires.

G. D. Whiteman, 1124 Park Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa., wrote from the Allegheny county jail this month, saying he had been jailed for selling "Service Record."

William B. Michael, 3419 Lucas Ave., St. Louis, Mo., declares he was threatened with arrest for selling the same journal.

G. L. Williams of Spokane, Wash., an ex-captain, wrote on Oct. 23, that he was in jail for peddling "Service Record" on the streets.

Mick Hogan, Sycamore, Ill., states that the city clerk there refused him a permit thru influence of legion men.

Two agents of "Service Record," Brower and Knight, are in Portland, Ore., jail for vending the magazine.

Radicals Nabbed in Spain.

BARCELONE, Nov. 4.— Seventeen radicals were arrested in a police raid on a syndicalist meeting here today.

LIBERAL CANDIDATE WINS IN HOT CUBA ELECTION CAMPAIGN

HAVANA, Nov. 4.—Gen. Gerardo Machado, liberal candidate for the presidency, polled a 60,000 majority of Cuba's popular vote in Saturday's election and will receive 125 out of the total 139 electoral votes, according to official tabulations from nearly complete returns today.

General Mario Menocal, conservative candidate, and Machado's only opponent, has issued a manifesto alleging fraud in connection with the election. The vote, however, is not generally considered close enough to warrant a contest.

No serious disorders were reported on election day or since.

Australian Militants Rebel Against Labor Party's Tame Attitude

By W. FRANCIS AHERN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

SYDNEY, New South Wales.—Delegates representing nearly 100 trade unions in New South Wales, met at Sydney to consider the establishment of the Australian Labor party as a working-class political institution. It was held by the delegates that under the present executive control, the party was getting away from its historic mission.

The unions demanded the creation of a united front of all organized workers against the employing class, also that the A. L. P. should function as a militant party instead of continuing to present "tame" attitude. Motions carried by the conference included the following:

1—The enforcement of the unanimous resolution of the 1921 and 1922 All-Australian Trades Union congresses in favor of the alteration of the rules of the constitution of the A. L. P. to allow of the affiliation of other working-class parties, with the right of propaganda and organization, or condition of loyal acceptance of the decisions of conference.

2—The unrestricted right of trade unions to send delegates of their choosing to labor conferences.

3—The adoption by the A. L. P. of the policy decided on by the industrial workers.

4—The immediate calling together of the Council of Action and the All-Australian Trade Union congress to unite the movement again on the policy and according to the interests of the unions.

The unions threaten that if these demands are not agreed to by the A. L. P. they will run their own trade union parliamentary candidates in opposition to the A. L. P. candidates.

$6 to $12.50 Minimum Wage in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 4.—Legal minimum wages for experienced female employes in Ontario factories vary from $10 to $12.50 per week. The lowest rate is for small places and the highest for Toronto. The rates for beginners range from $6 to $10, this wage being limited to the first six months. These minimum rates of wages cover electrical, food (not seasonal canning), tobacco, rubber, jewelry, and other industries not covered in special orders.

MINERS' UNION OFFICIALS DEFEND PITTSBURGH SPIES

Finks On the Run in Gary Stronghold

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 4.—Organized labor in Pittsburgh after 22 years is beginning to move forward, but it took a Beattie case to show the delegates where the reactionary officialdom was receiving its orders and whose interests they were looking out for. At the first meeting in October, the trial board brought in a verdict of guilty as charged against Beattie, but recommended no penalty. Later moving to accept his resignation, a move to save him as a delegate. After a heated discussion this motion was voted down and Beattie was expelled as officer and delegate of the body notifying his International, local and the A. F. of L. Robinson, executive board member of District 5, United Mine Workers, was the lone delegate that attempted to openly defend Beattie, asking the delegates if they were going to convict a man on the information of a state constabularyman. He was plainly told that no one outside of the labor movement testified, and if Freeman was responsible for the lead on the stool pigeon and spy they were thankful for it. Beattie was likened to a leper who should be ostracized by all working men and women.

Defenders of Spies.

All those who defended Beattie will have to answer for the reason of their actions in time to come. The first was Arthur Ireland, a member of the machinists and former officer, now running the Free Press, a supposed labor sheet, was called upon to explain an editorial several weeks ago, what he meant by "character assassins." Also in the meantime, another spy turned up in the steel company town of McKeesport. He also was secretary of the central body and an officer in the Street Carmen's Union.

The last meeting of the Pittsburgh C. L. U. saw the election of a progressive for Seattle's former office of secretary, P. J. McGrath of the Street Car Men's organization, won by a 3 to 1 vote against Nelson of the same organization. Old progressives said that it took 22 years to accomplish this.

Fakers in a Pickle.

Dave Williams, vice-president of the machinists' organization and member of the Pennsylvania labor board, who is responsible for the evidence on these stool pigeons and spies, spoke on continuing to rid the labor movement of this form of reptile, and the introduction of a bill in the state legislature compelling the detective agencies to file the name of every employe with the copy of their application with the state secretary. This and the election of McGrath got under the skins of the fakers. This time it was Mickey Eagan, another official of the miners who started an abusive attack on Williams and Duffy, an A. F. of L. organizer, for interfering with the affairs of local organizations. In his attack he threatened to beat Williams up. Williams said that there are more spies in Pittsburgh. If the trade unionists do not get frightened by the threats they will be able to rid themselves of this element.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4. — William Burns, held in jail for nearly a year awaiting trial for criminal syndicalism, is now in solitary and has been refused visitors and other privileges. Burns was arrested by federal officers in Yosemite Park, where he was trying to organize the employees, and will be tried in a federal court for violation of a state law.

BANKER SINGS WAY TO HEAVEN WHILE EMPLOYES LIVE IN HELL

When James B. Forgan, Chicago millionaire banker, was singing a last holy hymn, a few days ago, in preparation for his own death, and when capitalist newspaper men were busy gathering in a list of his business achievements so that they might be ready with a fitting post-mortem should Forgan die in time for the next edition, hundreds of barge-workers and their families in the employ of the New York Central railroad, of which Forgan was a director, were toiling most of the twenty-four hours of the day and "living" for the rest of the time in two dark cabins below deck.

From a woman in one of these cabins—the wife of one of the barge captains working for the New York Central—there comes to the DAILY WORKER a vivid description of conditions among the employes of one of the wealthiest and most extensive railroad systems in the world—a system owned and operated by Wm. K. Vanderbilt, by F. W. Vanderbilt, by Harold S. Vanderbilt—and by the hymn-chanting James B. Forgan.

Must Live on Barges.

"If you want a job with the railroad," writes this woman, "you are compelled to live on the barges with your family, and you must always be on the job when needed. The 'living quarters' consist of two small cabins, in which there is room for a table and a couple of chairs. Some of the cabins are below deck, and are so terribly damp that everything smells musty.

"I lived in one of these dark dungeons for ten months and my health was so bad that tuberculosis was not far off. I can name a boat on which a family of eight lived until one child was drowned and the father died of consumption.

Work and no Rest.

"Often they work the boats at night, and that means no sleep, for the men run about on the ships, shouting and cursing."

For three days after the death of Forgan, Chicago bank buildings were draped in black.

Report by Council For Protection of Foreign Workers

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 4.—The Council for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers at its final meeting issued the following statement:

"The books of the council were audited by the undesigned committee and were found to be correct in every detail. The total receipts were $271.37 and the expenditures $271.15, balance on hand, 22 cents.

"The council during the period of its activity held a large number of well attended meetings, visited many organizations and distributed thousands of pieces of literature. The council thanks all labor and fraternal orgahizations who have contributed towards financing the important work in its charge.

Bricklayers to Get $1.62½.

BELLEVILLE, Illinois, Nov. 4.—A strike of union bricklayers in Belleville which began last spring has been settled. The union demanded an increase of 25 cents an hour. The settlement provides an hourly increase of 12½ cents. The new scale is $1.62½ an hour. The agreement expires in April, 1925. Local building activities were demoralized since the strike.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 4.—"The Communists don't believe in honesty and truth. They say honesty and truth are bourgeois virtues. The socialists believe in these virtues. Why, I wouldn't tell a lie even to help the socialist party or to save my life." So a socialist Demosthenes delivered himself before a Brooklyn audience the other night when a Comunist campaign speaker stopped in front of a socialist street corner meeting.

Comrade Amter Gets Busy.

A Cannon meeting was being held in a hall a few blocks away. The comrade who stood listening to this socialist moron, Comrade Sadie Amter, ran to the hall as fast as she could and with the help of a few other comrades they started a Communist meeting on the opposite corner.

Comrade Amter spoke for an hour explaining how the governments are making use of the yellow socialists all over the world in their efforts to stem the rising tide of Communism. By that time the meeting in the hall was over and Comrade Cannon took the stand amid cheering and aplause as the speaker introduced him as the Communist candidate for governor of New York.

No Class Collaboration.

"There is just one thing," said Comrade Cannon, "that I would like this great gathering to take away with it and that is this: That it is a mistake to think that the working class can collaborate with any other class in the great struggle for power. The working class if it expects to gain must remain true to its class. It cannot be saved by any bourgeois LaFollettes. It is because we understand this that we are Communists. This was once the position of the socialist party when it was a real socialist party. Today it is a liberal, petty bourgeois party and stands for the small bankers, the midle class business men and lawyers and not for the workers."

It was a great demonstration—the crowd which reached way over to the other side of the street remaining to the very end.

"Non-Partisan" Politics in the Labor Press

The degeneracy of any organization is shown in its press. It is a known fact that when a labor organization adopts a militant attitude toward capitalist control of society, such militancy is clearly discernible in its press. When it loses that militancy the change is immediately reflected in its printed organs.

The papers which reflect the ideology of the American labor movement have excelled themselves during the campaign just ended. And in the tone of their political propaganda may be seen how utterly degenerate is the ideology of the organized labor movement as a whole. Altho occupying a position where the cause of working class progress could as easily be served as can its betrayal, from coast to coast the whole tribe of so-called "labor papers" has been openly offering itself for sale to the highest bidder. They have done this because the labor bureaucracy itself is a parlor house of painted prostitutes.

The labor bureaucrats of Gompers' immediate family were so unattractive that the republican and democratic parties alike would give them nothing more than a glance. So Gompers went out in the alley and sold himself to LaFollette. The yellow socialists in the garment trades especially were hot rivals. Now they are crying at being deserted by the Sullivan-Costello-Brindell-Curtis crew who fell for the seduction of Tammany Hall. The labor press of all these factions offer themselves shamelessly.

In some obscure rag with a sounding name like The Labor News, the reactionary republican party had published the "labor record" of Coolidge. A California "labor paper," which shall remain nameless, picks it up and runs it. It is then reprinted as the certificate of the toilers to their "friend" in the White House. It contained the endorsement of the Brotherhood of Trainmen whose "sterling" president, W. G. Lee, announced that no vile politician could bribe him.

This also contains the bland expression of "labor" that—"As to the Boston police strike, it is the opinion of the great many representatives of labor that such a strike was unwisely called." That the cops' union voted 1,134 to 2 for a strike, means nothing to these labor fakers.

The organ of five railroad labor bodies, disagreeing markedly with Bill Lee, flopped without blushing from Coolidge to LaFollette. But Berry of the Pressmen's Union was filling the air with cheers for Davis, while Lewis of the U. M. W. led toothless old Mother Jones to Calvin's welcoming arms and in the press of both organizations the cloven hoof of a sell-out has left its track. These be the fruits of "non-partisan politicl action." The whole tree is rotten and should be yanked up by the roots. When that happens, the "labor" press will represent labor—not before.

A Jewel of Imperialism

If consistency is a jewel, the Chicago Tribune editorial column is a jewel of imperialism, naked and unashamed.

It is perfectly consistent and not at all a mischance that in Sunday's Tribune the editor led off with an editorial entitled, "Vote for Coolidge and Dawes," followed by another entitled "Elevate the Guns."

In the latter it is carefully and clearly explained that battleships in Wall Street's navy cannot shoot as far as those in Threadneedle Street's navy. The Trib wants the guns on Morgan's battleships fixed so as to shoot farther by elevating the trajectory. After comparing Morgan's ships to Britain's, in such invidious manner, one would not be surprised at Britain's "polite suggestion that the elevation of American guns would not be received with pleasure."

The Trib, however, waves aside such objections. "Britain needs an efficient American navy," it asserts. It continues, "The American navy in the next war will be on the Pacific. And it will not be aiming at anything British. It will be protecting British interests as well as its own."

Nothing could more frankly proclaim the next war with Japan. But we know the policy of English imperialism enough not to be so certain of its alliances as the Trib pretends to be. However, be that as it may, for a policy of "Elevate the Guns"—no matter whom they are to be aimed at—the Trib says, "Vote For Coolidge and Dawes."

That under the exhortation for elections the Trib should insert a pious word or two about Coolidge "co-operating sanely for world peace" and having "given an example of pacific policy which has made powerfully for world peace" is not at all inconsistent with the above, even though it is an utter falsehood. For the falsehoods of imperialism are consistent to its purpose of American domination by fair means or foul.

The World in Bondage

The flotation of the first Dawes loan in the United States brings to the foreground with extraordinary clarity the extent to which American imperialism has succeeded in establishing its financial hegemony over international capitalism.

This year establishes a new peak in the foreign loans subscribed in the United States. Practically every banking house in the country has negotiations for loans or has already handled loans for foreign governments or corporations. Within the last five years the total British investments in other countries fell from twenty to seventeen billion dollars. At the same time, American foreign investments increased at a terrific pace. New York has outstripped London as the world's financial center, despite the latter's advantages gained thru centuries of banking experience.

In the first ten months of this year, the combined total foreign issues reached a sum close to nine hundred million dollars. The vast proportion of this huge sum was consumed in financing foreign governments, in maintaining the capitalist organs of oppression abroad. Nearly one hundred million dollars were invested in foreign industries. More than fifty million dollars were sunk in Canadian railways. When we call the roll of the debtor governments we find the Argentine, Hungary, Canada, San Domingo, Jugoslavia, Japan, Switzerland, Holland, Czecho-Slovakia, Norway, Bolivia, Belgium, Peru, Finland, France, Germany, and Sweden.

When we turn to the foreign industries coming under increasing American control, we find French and Canadian railways, Japanese electric concerns, Austrian and Hungarian public utilities, and Finnish general manufacturing groups.

This has been a banner year for American imperialism. The immediate outlook for the extension of Yankee capitalist supremacy is bright. But these conquests are only the silver linings of the dark gray clouds of war that are hovering over Europe and the Far East. Every dollar invested by the American capitalists abroad is a dollar taken from the exploited working class at home. Every dollar invested by the American financiers in Europe and the Far East is a dollar invested in the next world war.

Fools at King Capital's Court

In medieval times kings costumarily kept a kind of human being, often artificially disfigured into grotesque form, in attendance at their thrones, dressed like a clown and privileged to crack jokes at the monarch without making acquaintance with the headsman. In return they drank the king's wine, ate at his table, enjoyed the boon of the kingly smile and doubtless were given a few coins.

A few weeks back the plute press was full of stories and photos of a visit made to the White House by a group of famous actors and comedians, led by Al Jolson, John Drew and Charlotte Greenwood. Stories filled the newspapers with eulogistic detail of how they "breakfasted" with Cal Coolidge, how "spontaneous" Al Jolson's humor was, and how all sang and laughed like "happy and innocent children," and even Silent Cal deigned to bestow a royal smile.

It is our sad duty to disclose that the Borah committee investigating campaign expenses was told that the whole affair was staged for election purposes by Rhinelander Waldo of New York with G. O. P. money. Waldo paid $1,297 in carfares and hotel bills alone, while Gilson Gardner testified that the stunt was offered for his favorite candidate at the price of $50,000.

The theatrical profession has need to make itself heard in protest at this disgraceful prostitution of professional prominence. But Communists are not surprised. In 1847 Marx and Engels wrote:—"The bourgeoisie has stripped of its halo every occupation hitherto honored and looked up to with reverent awe. It has converted the physician, the lawyer, the priest, the poet, the man of science into its paid wage laborers."

But in the case of the visit to Coolidge, it did more. These actors were earning their living professionally as wage laborers more or less honestly. They volunteered, for an extra stipend, to prostitute what they call their art to capitalist politics.

Several people were killed here at a railroad crossing owing to the criminal cupidity of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and the Chicago surface lines. Both roads spent more money trying to get Coolidge and Dawes elected than would eliminate all the dangerous crossings in the state of Illinois.

Should present indications hold good, there should be some excitement at the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor. It is not likely that Gompers will have the "red" bogeyman to work up hysteria, so the crooks will most likely fight among themselves.

Now that a Christian general has charge of Peking, the American missionary business should take a decided boost as far as collections are concerned. Whatever donations Rockefeller made to advertise Jesus in China has not been wasted.

The British labor ministry might not have needed to resign yesterday if it had rallied the workers against the capitalists instead of raiding the radicals with capitalist police.

If the election campaign lasted another month, LaFollette would not have enough labor fakers behind him to make a decent dinner party.

POISONING THE YOUTHFUL MIND AGAINST LABOR

Gompers in Alliance with the Fascists

By KARL REEVE.

The American Federation of Labor is co-operating with the American Legion and the National Security League in attempting to make labor haters and red-baiters out of the school children of America, it was learned at Sunday's meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

A communication was received from Mathew Woll, as member of the educational committee of the A. F. of L., asking the Chicago Federation of Labor to co-operate to make American Educational Week a success. "It is fitting that we co-operate to make Education Week a success," says Mathew Woll, crown prince to Gompers, in his letter.

The American Federation of Labor officials have thus formed an alliance with the capitalists by trying to get LaFollette elected on the political field, and are aiding the National Security league and the American Legion to permeate the educational with anti-labor propaganda. "The employer who keeps his men at work contentedly today is America's most practical patriot," says the National Security league propaganda, to be distributed by the thousands to children during the week that the A. F. of L. has indorsed and is going to aid. "Don't waste men, it is important that efficiency be maintained."

White Guards Unite.

The "American Education Week" that Woll asks the Chicago Federation of Labor to aid, is a new drive against the Communists and militant organized labor generally. The department of the interior has issued a program, with which the American Legion, the National Security league, the National Educational association and the American Federation of Labor officials will co-operate in putting into effect. President Coolidge officially announced "Education Week" to be held from Nov. 17 to 23.

The program is proof that the A. F. of L. official family is supporting a purely anti-labor program. "Revolutionists, Communists, and extreme pacifists are a menace to the constitutional guarantees," says the program which suggests subjects for lectures by teachers to the school children. "The red flag means death, destruction, poverty, starvation, disease, anarchy and dictatorship." "America first—the red flag—danger.

Productive Institutions.

"The school as a productive institution" is another subject which the bankers and open shoppers, assisted by the A. F. of L. officials, advise teachers to lecture on. "Religion, morality and education are necessary to good government," says the program.

If the Chicago Federation of Labor co-operates with this program, it is going to collaborate with the capitalist government to "stamp out revolutionary radicalism." Also, to devote the final day, Sunday, to "God and country." It is a beautiful program —for class collaboration, fascism and white guardism.

Against Labor.

Now that the election is over, and Gompers has taken all he could get from the capitalist bankers backing LaFolette, Gompers and his clique of officials are indorsing a movement emanating from Calvin Coolidge and Charles G. Dawes, with a program made up by Coolidge's department of interior, and tons of literature against labor being distributed to the children by the National Security league.

What is an American? is the query fired at the immature minds of the school children by the literature which the open shoppers are going to circulate in co-operation with the A. F. of L. officials. "One who says 'if I fail or fall behind my fellows, the fault and discredit will be mine, no other's'." "I harbor no class resentment."

They Prefer Fascism.

The propaganda to be spread broadcast by the Coolidge men urges "maintaining, at whatever cost, the rights of property." Even "democracy" is considered too radical by the backers of "education week." "Warfare, as against a plague, upon every movement and every effort, which tends in any degree, to convert our representative form of government into a democracy," is the battle cry of the National Security league.

But the Gompers' machine, Coolidge and the American Legion have good company in their fight to make open shoppers out of the school children. William English Walling, official prostitute of the employers, is circulating a leaflet during this week entitled, "What Bolshevism Really Is."

French President Signs Decree.

PARIS.—President Doumergie today signed a decree authorizing the issue of the 10-year treasury bonds for an internal loan of indefinite amount November 12.

"To Action!" for The Daily Worker

Editorial in The Workers' Tribune, Polish Communist Weekly.

DO you fare badly brother! Do you fare badly sister! You work like an ox, or perhaps even harder, and what have you? The bitter worry over what you will put into your mouth tomorrow, what you will feed your children with, and what you shall cover your nakedness with.

You are worse off than the ox. He does not think of the morrow, does not dream that things could be better. He chews his cud and carries his yoke until the time comes when he will be driven off to be butchered. But he knows not the worry which harrasses you. And he does not know what you know—that from your bloody labors arise the magnificent skyscrapers, the wonderful palaces for the idlers, who never touches work with their hands; that the labor overtaxing your strength creates a superabundance of luxuries for them, while you are unable to satisfy even your most humble needs; that the bloody tears of your wrongs shine with a myriad colored lustre of jewels sparkling on the necks of the masters' harlots.

You fare badly brother and sister! You know that it is not a necessity of nature, but human wrong, terrible injustice, the vile social system that divides the abundance of riches available to humanity so that the rogue who produces nothing takes as much as he wants, while the man of all-creating toil receives barely enough to keep him from dying of hunger as long as he is of use to the exploiters.

You desire emancipation from this misery, you desire justice, a ray of happiness, which is justly due you for your labors.

But what are you doing to bring this ray of happiness to us?

You know that there are countless millions of such as you, of workingmen and workingwomen, wives of the workers. You know that we are in the great majority; that if we rose to action together we would crush completely the parasitic vermin that suck our blood, that the only thing needed is the awakening of our sleeping power, organizing it and throwing it into the struggle!

But that must be done. It will not do itself. You forge your shackles every day, increase the power of your oppressors with your labor. But you hesitate to apply your hand to break these shackles.

The first wedge which crumples the prison walls of our present miserable existence is the word of working class truth, the workers' paper.

Tell us, how many readers did you get for our "Workers' Tribune?"

You are silent? You have nothing much to brag about? Perhaps you do not even know that in order to insure its steady publication our "Workers' Tribune" should have at least, twice the number of readers that it has at present; that today it is constantly in danger of suspension due to the lack of money for printing and paper, which with the present number of readers costs almost twice as much as is received from the sale of the paper?

And how many readers did you gain for our English language daily, the DAILY WORKER?

"Oh," you say, "why worry about the English daily when our Polish weekly is just about breathing!"

Your attitude is wrong. We must worry much more about our English daily. The English daily is the torch lighting the way of the struggle for emancipation of the entire working class of this country. If it did not exist all the working class papers published in other languages which reach only groups of workers isolated from each other would amount to practically nothing.

You say that you do not understand English, that you cannot read this paper yourself. That's bad. You should know not only enough English to understand the orders and insults of the boss, but also to be able to speak to your fellow worker. You should learn, and it is precisely by reading a workers' paper that you should do so, because it is working class matters that you have to speak about.

But even now, when you cannot read English, your younger brother and sister, or your child can. Did you ever hand them a DAILY WORKER?

You do not know how to agitate your American fellow-worker, because you do not speak English. The DAILY WORKER will do that for you very well. If you are not able to agitate yourself, then the greater your duty to circulate the paper. Hand it out, secretly pass it where it will be noticed if you are afraid to do so openly for fear that you may be reported to your boss and be thrown out of work.

One way or another, but act! Emancipation will not come of itself. You must do everything that you can afford to, you must do more than you can afford to do to spread the light of revolutionary workers' thought, you must build the mass Workers Party.

To action, those who do not want to humbly die in slavery!

The first step on this road of action is the circulation of the revolutionary workers' press, our "Workers' Tribune" among the Polish workers, and —which is still more important—the circulation of the English language paper, the DAILY WORKER.

WAR AGAINST WAR—ACTION NOT PRAYER

Dick Svenden in "Labor Call" (MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA)

Labor Defends Its Journalists

By M. A. SKROMNY.

A trial which roused all Russia and had its echo even in this country, just ended in Nikolaiev, Russia. According to a cable which reached here a few days ago, six of the criminals received the highest penalty, being sentenced to death. The capitalist press laconically reports that they were sentenced "for murder of a village correspondent, who accused the village administration of anti-Communist activities."

The motive in this report was to create the impression that bolshevik "atrocities" are "still" being perpetrated. . . No account of the case is given, not even the names mentioned.

A few months ago when the murder was discovered in the small village of Demovka and the murderers arrested, the DAILY WORKER gave a detailed report of the case. Now we can add the grewsome details which came to light at the trial in Nikolaiev.

Malinovsky Exposes Criminals.

The victim, Gregory Malinovsky, was a rural correspondent for "Krasny Nikolaiev" and other labor papers. When he came back from the Red Army he found a gang of criminals, moonshine distillers etc., intrenched in official positions in the village. The population was terrorized.

"We are party members, you can't do anything against us," boasted some of these rulers. Everybody was forced to pay graft in order to avoid trouble. A great majority of the little dark village Demvka is illiterate, and they saw the new life and freedom as represented by these "communists." Nobody dared to complain, they didn't know how to do it, and those that knew were afraid.

Life was unbearable in the village until Gregory Malinovsky came back from the army. He has been a true Communist. He fought at many different fronts defending the revolution. What he found in the village shocked him. He immediately began an attack on the gang at the village meetings and in the press. The gang was scared and decided to get rid of him. One night he was found shot to death with a shotgun not planned to be found. For four months no investigation was made. Finally the murderers were arrested.

Plan Beastly Revenge.

The brother of the victim, Andrew Malinovsky, confessed that he fired that fatal shot at the instgation of the village grafters. They made him so drunk with moonshine that he heard the shot fired and fell to the ground. The gun was given to him by one of the village officials after they made him drunk. He returned the gun and was promised immunity. Some of the instigators "have seen the world." One of them lived for a while in Bulgaria, another—was in the United States, a third was living under a false name for many years, since he participated in a criminal affair.

Sentence Approved by Workers.

When the case was first reported in the DAILY WORKER the Chicago group of the Novy Mir correspondents passed a resolution demanding a "just sentence which should be a lesson and warning to the enemies of the revolution within Russia and the white guards in other countries." The resolution together with many other resolutions from groups of correspondents from many parts of Russia was printed in the Moscow Pravda, a few days before the trial started in Nikolaiev.

Hundreds of peasants from nearby villages attended the trial and eagerly awaited the sentence.

Now the sentence has been passed. Six of them will pay with their lives for the brutal murder, for their crimes against the workers and peasants of Russia, for their crimes against the Soviet government.

The sentence will meet with approval in every village and every factory of the Socialist Soviet Republics.

These are some of the murderers. In the center is Andrew Malinovsky, who fired the fatal shot that killed his own brother. The others are some of the instigators.

Russia and the World Revolution

By Wm. Z. Foster

THE fact that the Russian revolution started 140,000,000 people on the highroad to emancipation gives it most tremendous importance. For centuries the masses in Russia suffered hopelessly under the iron boot of the czars. Then came the historic upheaval of 1917 and swept this tyranny aside with an irresistible flood. The revolution is the greatest thing in the whole life of the Russia people.

But of far more importance than its effect upon the Russian people is the influence of the revolution upon the proletariat of the world. This is profound, far-reaching, and epoch-making. It is what gives the Russian revolution its real significance and erects it into the supreme event in history.

In many ways the Russian revolution has deeply affected the course of the world labor movement. But in this short article only three of these can be indicated: (1) the establishment of a living symbol of proletarian revolution; (2) the creation of a clearly-defined, well-organized world revolutionary organization; (3) the realization of a tremendous fund of revolutionary experience. These three phases are of the very greatest consequence to the international working class.

I. The Symbol of Revolution.

Until 1917 the program of proletarian emancipation rested pretty much in the realms of theory. The workers of the world talked of it, dreamed of it, and speculated about it. But it lacked reality. It was but a scientific calculation and an inspiring hope. It was only by the advent of the Soviet government in Russia that the concept of revolution took on flesh and blood. Then it became a living, vibrant thing and an ispiration to the workers of the world.

The masses learn best from concrete facts; they require definite object lessons. They cannot be satisfied with theory alone. To them incomparably the best argument for the world revolution is to see a workers' revolution take place successfully in some country. The Russian revolution has provided them with that vitally necessary object lesson. It is a tremendous demonstration of the possibility and practicality of the proletarian revolution. It is the world symbol of the working class victorious.

When the Russian workers and peasants gave the death thrust to Russian czarism and capitalism, a thrill went thru the world workers. They were deeply inspired and heartened, not to sit idly by and hope for the Russians to bring about the world revolution, but to wage war similarly against the exploiters in their own countries. And as the Russian revolution has progressed, overcoming the unheard of difficulties confronting it and gradually consolidating its power, it is driving deeper and deeper into the hearts of the workers the conviction that they can and must also overthrow the power of their bourgeoisie in similar fashion. The facts that the Russian workers have broken the united front of capitalism and established one proletarian government, that they have forced the capitalist world to recognize this government, and that they are unquestionably making the new proletarian society a success, constitute a revolutionary factor of high importance thru their stimulation and education of the international working class.

Much of the early stimulative effect of the Russian revolution was lost because the workers' organizations in most countries were dominated by social-democrats and other reformers, who choked back the rising revolutionary spirit of the workers. But Russia is now entering into a new stimulative period, after the long and depressing era of hunger and economic chaos. Industry is improving and the workers' standards of living are rapidly rising. In all other countries the workers' standards are falling. This contrast, of a growing prosperity in proletarian Russia, and an increasing poverty in capitalist countries, always before the workers' eyes, is bound to exert a powerful effect and to greatly stimulate revolutionary discontent and action. Russia is the living embodiment of the new society. It is the inspiring symbol of the proletarian revolution. As such it is of vast significance to the international working class.

II. The Communist International.

But the Russian revolution has furnished the workers of the world will not only the greatest example of a successful proletarian society, but also with a powerful revolutionary organization. The Communist International is the most important working-class organization in the history of the world. It is a direct outgrowth of the Russian revolution and is intimately bound up with the latter's fate.

The Communist International is a world organization in the most real sense of the word. It is highly centralized and disciplined. Its various sections are animated by the same conceptions of Communism. It is in an altogether different class than the Second International, which has autonomous, undisciplined, and individualistic national sections. It is the militant, fighting vanguard of the international proletariat.

A first condition for the effective functioning of such an organization as the Communist International is that it establish its headquarters within the protection of a great proletarian power. To try to live in a capitalist country would be to condemn the organization to an underground existence and to reduce the international movement to a chaotic and impotent condition. But proletarian Russia furnishes a headquarters and protection to the Communist International, even as it gives it much of its inspiration and leadership. This is of greatest importance to the world's workers.

In 1914, when capitalism came to a crisis at the outbreak of the world war, the workers in the various countries had to rely upon the leadership of yellow social-democrats, who dominated their organizations and who led the masses into the brutal slaughter. And in 1918, when the workers, disillusioned by the war, surged all over Europe in a revolutionary wave, these same social-democrats, still controlling the workers' political and industrial organizations, dissipated the revolutionary movement and saved capitalism.

But since those times something important has happened, the most important thing that has taken place since the end of the war. This was the formation of the Communist parties in the various countries and their unification into the Communist International. The significance of this will be apparent in the next great crisis of international capitalism. If this crisis does not come before, it is bound to come with the beginning of the new world war which is now in the making. When the capitalists of the world attempt to force the workers into another murderous war like that of 1914-18, they will have to deal, not with treacherous social-democrats, but with a militant Communist movement. In this crisis the Communist International will raise its counter-slogan of a war against capitalism; it will deal the capitalist system a death-blow and establish the international proletarian dictatorship. Then will be appreciated the present building up of the Communist International which is so greatly aided by revolutionary Russia.

III. Revolutionary Experience.

Far more important, however, than even the establishment of a living example of successful proletarian revolution and providing a world revolutionary center, the Russian revolution has been the means of the workers accumulating a tremendous fund of revolutionary experience. This is enormous in extent and incalculable in value. Before the Russian revolution, proletarian revolutionary experience was meager. It was little beyond that gained in the Paris Commune. Nearly everything was theoretical. But the revolution in Russia has changed this. Its vast experience has shown the workers of the world the broad outlines of the way all proletarian revolutions will have to take and the forces they will have to contend with.

Russian revolutionary experience is so stupendous that hardly the faintest outlines of it can be indicated here. No longer is the working of the dictatorship of the proletariat a matter of speculation. The Russian revolution has made it thoroly understood. Likewise, the part the Communist Party has to perform, with its iron discipline and elaborate nuclei system, in maintaining the dictatorship. The principles underlying the Soviet form of government are now an open book. The true petty-bourgeois character of the social-democratic, anarchist, and syndicalist movements has been demonstrated as clearly as day. The enormous resistance of the capitalists and their intelligentsia hangers-on has been learned. Their instinctive campaigns of sabotage and counter-revolution have been experienced and ways devised to check them. A vast fund of information has been accumulated as to the relations between the workers and farmers and of the need and manner of the workers taking the lead in the revolutionary struggle and in the work of social reconstruction.

In the realms of industry the Russian workers have gained an enormous experience. They have tried out almost every conceivable system of management and tested all of them. They are solving the problems of developing the spontaneous discipline and incentive to work, to take the place of the capitalist slave-driving methods of the past. They have worked out the principle of the new economic policy, and they know its dangers and advantages. LiKewise, the Russians have learned the true functions of the trade unions, the co-operatives and other working class organizations, before, during, and after the revolution. They have also mastered the principles of proletarian military organization, after a bitter and sanguinary experience. They have learned the most valuable lessons as to the psychology of the masses during the revolution and its attendant hardships. They have solved the questions of proletarian justice, control of the press, and a thousand others that were not even dreamed of before the revolution.

This tremendous fund of revolutionary experience, gained at such great cost by the Russian workers, is at the disposal of the world proletariat. All of it, of course, cannot be applied in every country, but a vast amount of it can. It shows the right way for the workers to go and the pitfalls they must keep clear of. Profiting by the errors and accomplishments of the Russians, the workers in other countries will same themselves endless hardships and suffering. The Russian revolution marks an epoch in the history of the working class. To Marxism, or socialism in theory, it has added Leninism, or socialism in action. It has blazed the trail for the world revolution.

On this Seventh Anniversary of the Russian revolution the active Communists thruout the world should call to mind the three above-mentioned phases of the world-significance of the great 1917 upheaval. They should be stimulated by the example of the Russian revolution to make redoubled efforts in their own countries, they should diligently strive for the upbuilding of the Comaqnist International, and they should study and absorb the great lessons taught by the vast experience of the heroic Russian working class. Thus they will realize in some degree the world importance of the Russian revolution.

The Russian Communist Party

Organizer, Leader, Inspirer of the Workers' Revolution

By MOISSAYE J. OLGIN

If the Russian Revolution has been victorious it is due to the leadership of the Russian Communist Party. If the Russian Communist Party was capable of leading the revolutionary working masses to a lasting victory, it is due to the application of THE PRINCIPLES OF BOLSHEVISM as expounded and put into practice by Lenin.

Party of the Masses

The Russian Communist Party has always been a party of the working masses. Whether its number was small or large, whether the temper of the masses was quiet or stormy, whether the work of propaganda and organization was easy or hard, whether persecutions were severe or slack—the Russian Communist Party always strove to be with the masses, within the masses, to organize its nuclei in the shops among the rank and file workers, to participate thru them and thru its leading bodies in the everyday struggles of the working masses, to formulate the demands of the workers and to give direction to their revolutionary struggle.

Revolutionary Spirit

The Russian Communist Party has always had an abiding faith in the revolutionary spirit of the working masses. At a time when the "economists" of 1898-1901, the forerunners of Menshevism, preached a riveting of the workers' attention to economic demands only, leaving political struggle to the "enlightened" intelligentzia and the bourgeoisie, Lenin for the first time formulated the conception of PROLETARIAN HEGEMONY, i. e., leadership of the working class in all forms of struggle up to the final liberation. At a time when the Mensheviki (1905-6) preached collaboration with the Russian bourgeoisie in the struggle against czarist autocracy, the Russian Communist Party, then called Bolsheviki, appealed to the workers to wage a relentless war BOTH against czarism and the bourgeoisie who only used the menace of a workers' revolution to force czarism to make concessions to the propertied classes. At a time when, after the defeat of the first revolution in 1906, the Mensheviki preached acquiescence, abolition of the secret revolutionary organization and adaptation to everyday reform work under a semi-autocratic regime, the Russian Communist Party was busily engaged in reorganizing its ranks, improving its illegal apparatus, spreading its influence among the masses, preparing them for revolutionary action. At a time when, after March 1917, the socialists of all brands together with the bourgeoisie declared that the revolution had run its course and that nothing remained for the working masses but to accept the order of the bourgeois democracy as final, the Russian Communist Party formulated the slogan, "All Power to the Soviets" leading the working masses into real battles for the power of state. At a time when, in the fierce years of 1918-1921, the socialists, turned counter-revolutionary, hopefully anticipated the collapse of the Soviet system in consequence of mass exhaustion, hunger, starvation, the Russian Communist Party KNEW that the revolutionary ardor of the masses is inexhaustible, that the persistence of the workers in their struggle for a better future knows no limits. The Russian Communist Party built on that rock of revolutionary potency and the building proved lasting.

Party of Action

The Russian Communist Party has always been a party of action. It viewed the working class as an army engaged in a war against a powerful resourceful foe. It knew that an army in war time can be either preparing for battle or engaged in actual combat. It strove to wake up the working class to the realization of the immediate need of action. It strove to coordinate all activities of the working class in the direction of struggle for power. It knew nothing in the life the worker that was too small to defend by means of concerted action. It knew nothing in the realm of workers' rule that was too big to strive for by way of revolutionary struggle. It demanded from every member of the party to be active within the party organization. It demanded from every member and every party organization to be active within the working class whenever and wherever they could reach it. It demanded from the working class to react to all events in economic, political and social life, whether the appointment of shop stewards, (starosty) or the enactment of a new labor law, whether a cut in wages or a movement of the students, whether war against a foreign power or the organization of a sham parliament, whether a mass strike in another country or an upheaval of the peasantry in Russia,—to react collectively, organizedly, purposefully, never losing sight of the final goal. After the October Revolution it was the Russian Communist Party which led in all activities of the workers and peasants: organization of the state and organization of the army, fight against counter-revolution and fight against diseases, reconstruction of the economic apparatus and reorganization of the educational system, extermination of corruption and introduction of new standards for human behavior in the new order. "Keep moving! Keep trying! Do not get discouraged by failures. Do not get rattled by success. Work steadily and work according to a plan!" This has been the slogan of the Russian Communist Party,—the only government in the world which learns from its errors and has the courage to correct them.

Revolutionary Discipline

The Russian Communist Party has been the party of strong discipline and centralization. From that memorable discussion at the second congress of the Russian Social-Democratic Labor Party in the summer of 1903 when Martov the Menshevik defined membership in the party as "giving constant assistance to the party" under the control of the organization while the Bolshevik Lenin demanded "personal participation (of the members) in one of its organizations," down to the last discussion within the Russian Communist Party by the end of 1923 when Trotzky was understood to demand more democracy within the party and more freedom from what he termed the rigid rule of the old guard of Bolshevism while the majority of the Communist Party insisted on maintaining stern unbending discipline akin to the discipline of a military organization and on keeping the old tried revolutionists in leading positions, the question of discipline, of obeying the rule of the majority, of carrying out and defending the policies of the majority even if they are against the individual member's conviction, was paramount in the Russian Communist Party. It was due to this law of cohesion that the Russian Communist Party could attain to its present position.

The Russian Communist Party is now the leading party of all the parties united in the Communist International. We all take the lessons of the Russian Communist Party as showing the way of proletarian dictatorship to all countries now under the iron heel of the capitalist state. What are the main characteristics of this party at present?

The Shop Nuclei

a. The Russian Communist Party is built on the basis of Shop Nuclei. All communists engaged in a factory are united in one body called the ZAVODSKAYA YATCHEIKA, Shop Nucleus of the party. All Communists serving in an army unit form the company nucleus. All peasant Communists living in one district are united in the Volost (district) nucleus. But the shop nucleus remains, both numerically and by its revolutionary proletarian weight, the foundation of the party.

The shop nucleus is the channel thru which most of the political and social problems of the state reach the workers of a particular shop and thru which the attitude of the workers towards one or another measure is made known to the party and to the Soviet government. The shop nucleus as a body and thru its executive bureau and political secretary keep in the closest touch with the workers of the shop, factory or mill, participating in their daily troubles and trying to find solutions to all their problems according to the advice of the party. The shop nucleus organizes schools, courses, lectures, talks, discussions among the workers of the establishment, presenting to them various phases of the life of the country, drawing them into the discussion of the governmental problems, making them active participants in the daily affairs of the state. The shop nucleus is the meeting ground for all Communists holding office in the factory, whether it be the director (manager) of the establishment, the chairman and members of the shop committee which is the lowest unit of the labor union, or the educational leader who conducts the cultural work among the workers. Being the meeting ground for all these local functionaries, most thoroughly discussing all problems that arise in the life of the factory, making decisions that are binding upon all its members and being composed of the most enlightened and active elements of the establishment; the shop nucleus brings unity into the shop, endows all activities with a purpose, reveals to the workers their significance for the achievement of the goal of the working class.

The shop committee is not a self-sufficient organization. Nor is it a mere propaganda center. It is connected in a thousand ways with the most intricate details of the shop life. It knows every employee and all his worries. It makes it the duty of every member to be engaged in one or more of the numerous committees, boards, bureaus that thrive among the workers. It participates in shaping the will of the party by bringing forth and trying to express the will of the revolutionary masses within the shop or mill. It never loses itself in mere details of local life, always keeping in touch with the broadest problems of the state, but at the same time it never loses contact with the actualities of life. "Every factory must become our fortress," wrote Lenin as early as 1902. Thru the shop nucleus every factory is now a fortress of the proletarian dictatorship.

The sessions of the shop nucleus, ordinarily once a week, are open. Non-members frequent those sessions in ever greater numbers. Non-members participate in the discussion on equal terms with members, but without a vote. Non-members are deeply stirred by what is going on within the shop nucleus and within the Communist Party. There is gradually disappearing the line of demarcation between the nucleus and the non-partisan workers, the latter being drawn into the life of the party and being confirmed in the conception that it is the party of the working class.

Rich, colorful and many-sided is the life of the shop nucleus. A broad knowledge of communism, of party activities, of state activities is required of a secretary of a shop nucleus who is the mainstay of the party. A constant and lively line of communication is maintained between the shop nucleus and the local (district) committee of the party, between the nucleus and the highest party organizations.

The shop nucleus is the instrument thru which the working class exercises its cultural leadership in the village. It is the shop nucleus which delegates lecturers, teachers and performers to one or the other village, sends the peasants aid in harvest time, distributes literature in the village and generally attempts to raise the cultural and political standards of the rural population.

Closer to the Masses

b. The Russian Communist Party is drawing ever closer to those who work in the factories, mills, railroads, mines, to the proletariat of manual labor. The Russian Communist Party knows that dictatorship of the proletariat means dictatorship of the producers of wealth over all remnants of the old system. The Russian Communist Party, therefore, makes every effort to increase its ranks by men and women working at the bench, to give to such men and women the most responsible positions in the party and in the state, to discourage the entrance into the party of elements hailing from the bourgeois intellectual groups, to adapt the life of the party to the standards of living of the average factory worker.

There has been a steady and consistent proletarianization of the party and the state apparatus. In 1918 the Central Executive Committee of the R. C. P. consisted of 13 intellectuals and 1 worker; in 1924 it consists of 25 intellectuals and 29 workers. The Central Committee of 150 members is overwhelmingly composed of workers. In 1923 the percentage of workers in the Communist Party as a whole was 41, that of the peasants 28, and that of office employes, 31. At present the percentage of workers in the party is 66, with 35 per cent actually working in factories and shops. Out of 88 combinations of factories ("trusts," i. e. groups of germain factories with one general management), 80 are under the presidency of members of the Russian Communist Party, most of whom are workers. Out of 438 factories employing 200 workers and more, 233 have Communist directors (managers) mostly coming from the working class, in the textile industry, 70 per cent of the managers are Communists and workers. This in spite of the fact that there was a scarcity of managerial experience even among the most revolutionay workers. The proletarianization is being carried out by the party in order that the party and the state be an adequate expression of the working class not only in the formulation of principles and in the pursuit of policies but also in the composition of the personnel.

The Russian Communist Party makes it easy for factory workers to join its organization. The Russian Communist Party puts up almost prohibitive demands to non-workers who wish to become members. Recommendation by five members who have been in good standing for no less than five years is required for a non-worker. The recommendation of three members in good standing for three years, is required for factory workers. The entrance of workers into the party has now been made easier by introducing the recommendation of a general meeting of the workers of the factory or shop where the aspirant is employed. The goal put before the party by its last congress (May 1924) is one million members of whom more than a half are actually working by hand at the bench.

It is the conception of the Russian Communist Party that a worker by hand possesses, as a general rule, all the revolutionary qualities essential for a proletarian government surrounded by numerous enemies from without and compelled to work in a petty-bourgeois medium in the country itself: honesty, courage, endurance, discipline, simplicity, moderate life, a clear view, an unbiased mind, and a genuine devotion to the interest of the working class. It is the conception of the Communist Party that only exceptional elements of the non-proletarian class can rise to the heights of Bolshevism. This is why the party bases its structure and the structure of the Soviet on the rank and file manual workers in intimate

The White Babtist and the Red Bear

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Before the proletarian tailors of Russia fitted the czar out in a brand new suit of clothes cut out of the Russia which the Little Father claimed to love so well, the greater power known today as the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, was represented in the animal kingdom by the bear, just as Britain has the lion and the United States the eagle. Kipling, the singing British imperialist, wrote of "the bear that walks like a man." The bear had a habit of starting on a stroll in the direction of India every now and then, which tendency made Kipling sing and the guns of the British navy thunder.

In 1917, November to be exact, the Russian bear changed his skin, but his ability to make trouble has not perceptibly lessened. Indeed not! Whereas formerly he bothered England chiefly, every capital in the world is now anxiously watching his movements. He is the "Red Terror" in the eyes of the capitalists. And nowhere is greater anxiety shown than in Washington, the capital of the United States, and the seat of our Teapot Dome government. And of all the men in Teapot Dome, nobody is more grieved over the animadversions of the Red Bear, than one Charles Evans Hughes. The diplomats of Europe have already parted with most of their hirsute adornment in frantic rage over the rise of this new and embarrassing phenomena. Our American Baptist secretary of state has still some chin alfalfa left, which may account for the fact that today he stands almost alone against this mighty power that threatens the regime of the old codgers of capitalism and the capitalist system itself. Let us take leave of the animal kingdom for the time being.

Shortly after the United States government began its crusade for democracy and incidentally to protect the shekels of J. P. Morgan, citizen of the world, excepting Soviet Russia, the Russian workers and peasants led by the bolshevik party and by Lenin in particular, took over the country bag and baggage, and decided that they wanted peace, bread and land and were going to have them. Strange to say, the these were peaceful aims the other nations associated with Russia in overthrowing their competitors, the kaiser and his capitalist owners, felt very much aggrieved, because the Russian workers and peasants would not continue to fertilize the trenches of Germany, Poland and Austria with their dead bodies.

It is well to state here that before the November revolution in Russia, a "democratic" and "kindly" gentleman by the name of Kerensky, was premier of that country. He was a short bridge between the rule of the czar and the rule of the workers and peasants thru the Communist Party. Kerensky was very kind and peaceful; kind to the czar and his followers, kind to the European and American representatives of the brigand governments, but not so kind to the millions of workers and peasants, he was sending to the trenches at the command of Morgan and the rulers of France, England and Italy.

During the short reign of this nice man Kerensky, he appointed as his ambassador in the United States, one Boris Bakhmeteff, who figured much in the news, usually in the role of prophet. A more unfortunate prophet never lived. Jeremiah weeping by the waters of Jericho, was no more pathetic figure that this name Bakhmeteff, as one after another his predictions of the collapse of the Soviet government were impaled on the sharp bayonets of the Red Army. Job scratching himself on the dungpiles of Jerusalem was an object of envy, politically and prophetically speaking, compared to the countryless ambassador and his lost but not found predictions of Soviet disaster.

But tho badly bent as a prophet, Bakhmeteff could look his three square meals in the face very day without batting an eyelash. His cellar well stocked with the choicest of pre-Volsteadian brew and if his bank account was ever sneezed at, it must have been by some victim of hay fever. A man may be down politically but he is never out, provided his pocketbook has the graceful curves of a Parisian mannekin. Bakhmeteff was not out, owing to the generosity of his friend the white Baptist of Standard Oil and Teapot Dome, with a residence in Washinton, but the United States treasury is out $187,000,000.

It is often said that a prophet is never honored in his own country. This was true of Bakhmeteff. It was also true that he was honored by very few in any country. But the few who honored him were mighty, and he stayed and liquidated, literally, most of the $187,000,000 which the generous Charles Evans Hughes, allowed him to draw from the United States treasury

It came to pass as the scripture would say, that after the Russian workers and peasants seized power, toppled the czar from the throne and did a lot of other necessary scavenger work, that the governments with which the United States was associated in smashing the Central Powers, refused to "recognize" the newly organized Soviet Republic, even tho it was the expressed wish of the Russian masses that the czar and his bureaucracy should land on the rubbish heap of history in such a condition that their return could not be expected unless there was a modern resurrection pulled off. There wasn't.

The various governments sent armies into accessible parts of Russia in an attempt to overthrow the Soviet power. They sent navies to bombard its coasts. They subsidized counter revolutions, provoked rebellions, hired spies to hatch plots and sabotteurs to destroy bridges, wreck railways, mines and in general bring the industrial machinery of the Workers' Republic to ruin.

How they failed to accomplish their purpose need not be told here. The successful struggle of the workers and peasants of Russia against their myriad foes is an epic in human history that will thrill countless generations to come when the rotten capitalist system is no more and the red flag of Communism floats triumphant over the capitals of the world.

The Soviet power stood the impact of the terrible blows rained against it by the enemy. The spears of capitalism were shattered against the shield, fashioned out of the bone and sinew of the Russian working class The Soviet power stood like the rock of Gibraltar. There were scars, but there were more on the enemy. Finally when the capitalist powers found they could not destroy it by the old weapons, they decided to make the best of a bad bargain. The anti-Soviet coalition began to crack. The fissures opened wider and wider and it was finally rent in twain. One nation after another made peace with the Soviet government, until the count stands today as follows: Germany, Austria, Denmark, Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Afghanistan, Finland, Poland, Persia, Great Britain, Italy, Greece, Mexico, Norway, China and France.

In addition to the countries recognizing Russia de jure, other countries have important trade agreements with the Soviet Republic. This is the case with Czecho-Slovakia and Hungary while Japan is reported to be on the verge of signing a treaty with Moscow. Thus in seven years from the date on which the Bolsheviki overthrew the Kerensky regime and ostablishing the Soviet Republic all the great powers, and most of the small nations have either recognized the workers' government of Russia de jure or de facto, with the exception of the United States, which is now the outstanding figure in a circle of irreconcilables, among whom are listed, Belgium, Switzerland, Spain, Belgium, Irak, Hedjaz, and the south American republics who are afraid to antagonize the Wall Street eagle.

A capitalist diplomat must have an excuse for the predatory excursions of his masters. When they go to war it is one thing, when they refuse to make peace is something else. A capitalist diplomat who cannot dig up a decent excuse for a war or whatever other adventure the capitalist class he is serving may be engaged in will soon find himself digging for his breakfast in some other garden. The American capitalists are even more moralistic than their older and more blase European contemporaries. Thus in the matter of Soviet recognition the European governments fought until they were licked to a standstill, in the meantime threatening never to "shake hands with the bloody Bolsheviks" but later they did, and sent perfumed notes to Moscow telling about the cordial relations that hitherto existed between the Russian people and the people of whatever country found itself obliged to talk business with the revolutionary government of Moscow.

It is no accident that the governments of Europe were obliged to do penance for their sins by making a pilgrimage to Moscow, the Mecca of the social revolution. Bankrupt as a result of the war, their productive powers impaired, the markets of the world lost to them, lost in most instances to the United States, which profitted by the war "for democracy," they hungered for the Russian markets and the Russian wealth that lay buried in her soil waiting to be exploited. Their fear of Bolshevism was great, but beggars can't be choosers and having to choose between the devil of Bolshevism and the deep blue sea of industrial bankruptcy, they took a chance on the devil, hoping against hope that he could be deborned and dehoofed and otherwise made to conform with the God of capitalism. But so far he is the winner.

The United States capitalists did not find themselves in the deplorable condition that confronted the European governments after the war was over. They had gold, their machinery was in good condition and they were cocky with the feeling of having won a victory, without it costing them much, outside of a few billion dollars which they did not miss They looked on Soviet Russia with the eye of implacable hatred. They felt themselves ordained by the God of capitalism to wage eternal war on this unholy monster that threatened the profits of the money hogs. When capitalists get this idea into their heads, particularly healthy capitalists like ours, it takes a lot of knocking to relieve them of their illusions.

And when such ideas become part of the mental processes of a White Guard Baptist, like the bewhiskered Hughes, it is safe to say that nothing short of an intellectual delousing process will suffice to cure the patient.

Since 1917, the United States has been the most outspoken and threatening foe of Soviet Russia. While L. K. Martens the envoy of the Soviet Republic to the United States was finally hounded out of the country by the Harding administration in 1921, the bogus ambassador Bakhmeteff, unrecognized by Russia except as an unprincipled scoundrel, ranked high among the diplomatic corps in Washington, while he squandered the funds of the United States treasury, posing as a representative of a dead government.

The recognition of the Soviet Republic by France on the eve of the seventh anniversary of the great revolution, which for the first time in human history saw the coming to power of the proletariat, is the worst blow yet delivered against the policy of Baptist Hughes and the battalion of death that supports him. While in Europe, the labor movement, reactionary tho it is, unanimously favored recognition of the Soviet regime, here in America, the spokesman of the American Federation of Labor, was the strongest anti-Soviet bulwark of the Coolidge-Hughes administration. Gompers, no less than Hughes, feared the psychological effect of such action on the part of American workers who were fed for years on atrocities and tales of horror and misery, governmental inefficiency, and progressive debility of the Soviet power. To be obliged to recognize "these horrible monsters" after all the cursing and praying, would put these political skypilots in a bad light.

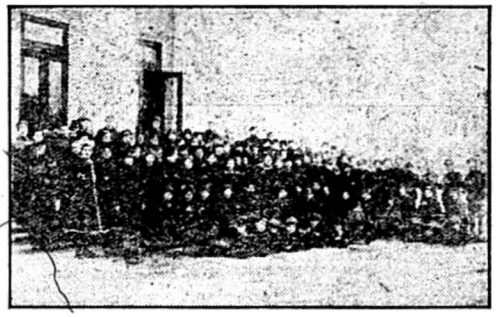
The American capitalists have held out well if not wisely. But it is not very likely that they will succeed in accomplishing their main purpose thru this policy, namely the overthrow of Soviet rule. After seven years of struggle, the workers' and peasants' government is stronger than ever. International capitalism has felt the power of the Red Bear in the east. He comes now to the exploited masses of the world in the guise of a deliverer. He causes no fear in their hearts. But to the capitalists he is a nightmare and a terror and well he might. But they must recognized him. He refuses to be ignored.

The capitalists of the world find they must recognize the Soviet government. They know this will strengthen its rule, but yet they cannot help it. One sixth of the earth's surface cannot be wiped off the map by the stroke of a diplomat's pen any more than the red army could be wiped out by strokes of the capitalists' swords. Like the believers in predestination, the capitalists are out of luck either way. "They'll be damned if they do and they'll be damned if they don't." And we say, the sooner they are damned the better.

The lone Baptist of Washington must now lean more heavily than ever on his "labor" prop Samuel Gompers. But instead of a prop he will soon find himself leaning against a coffin, in which will be enclosed the dead hopes of the enemies of Soviet Russia. There may still be enough of the $187,600,000 given to Bakhmeteff out of the United States treasury, left to pay the funeral expenses. Baptist Hughes may have the honor of reading the prayers for the dead, as the workers of the world shout:

"Long Live Soviet Russia!"

A DETACHMENT OF RED SAILORS



Seven Years Ago - -

By Max Bedacht

War! Millions of humans in uniform set against each other, armed with most modern and effective instruments of murder and destruction, moving by the order of little groups of big capitalists to conquer the world for them. That was the picture of the world in 1917.

Capitalism, born in a revolution and destined to die by one, had been moving rapidly toward the climax of its development. The over-increasing intensity of exploitation had increased profits to unheard-of proportions. New capital was accumulated in ever greater haste. Yet most of the chance for home investment seemed to be exhausted and the hunger for foreign fields of exploitation grew apace.

While the increasing intensity of exploitation had raised the productivity of labor tremendously, the share of labor in its products grew relatively smaller. This discrepancy could not but develop into a conflict, which would either change production from one of profit for a few, to one for satisfying the needs of many—or it would throw the world back into barbarism.

Capitalism, driven by an ever-increasing hunger for profit, reached out into unconquered territory. With its native proletariat armed to the teeth in attempts to colonize all the world and to transform it into one huge profit mill for one dominating group of capitalists and to reduce the working class portion of the human race to robots, that was the aim it set out to accomplish. This process of transformation to be achieved by a series of imperialist wars which were to settle the question of the supremacy of one group of the warring capitalist nations and at the same time are to solve the problem of military conquest of the earth.

This stage of capitalist development, altho of recent date, could not surprise the world by its appearance. Marxism, Communism, had laid bare the very entrails of the capitalist system predicting the phenomena of imperialism. Unlike the angurs of old, the Marxians base their predictions not on the windings of the entrails, but on a scientific analysis of the origin and character of the food passing thru the body of capitalism. This food was seen to be the life-blood of the working class; it was seen to circulate thru the body of capitalism as profit, turning into new capital; it was seen to fatten up that body of capitalism to a degree that it became a menace to the working class. So that the working class had only two alternatives: To destroy capitalism as the dominating force of society, or to be swallowed up irretrievably by the profit-hungry monster.

Preparing for the crisis and helping to hasten its advent, the Marxians, the Comunists, had organized and educated the most conscious portions of the working class for the constantly intensifying struggle against capitalism. Imperialism was shown to be a menace to society itself. As an answer to a call by capitalism for imperialist war, was issued the call for the proletarian revolution. Thus the fear of the working masses for an imperialist war was alleviated by the hope for a revolution. "The capitalist governments will not dare"—that was the opinion of the masses on the very eve of the first of a series of imperialist wars. But they did dare. The call for the war went out. The governments followed the urge of their profit-hungry ruling class and transformed the world into a shambles. Most of the official leaders of the working class failed miserably in awakening the only fit echo to this call for war—the call for a proletarian revolution.

But there were exceptions. The Marxians, the Communists, the confronted by an unprecedented wave of patriotic paroxysm, upheld the revolutionary banner of the proletariat. Especially active in this respect were the Bolsheviks, the left wing party of the Russian socialists. With conferences at Zimmerwald and Kienthal, they succeeded in uniting these Communist forces internationally and to create a nucleus around which the revolutionary resistance of the proletariat of the world against the imperialist governments and the imperialist war could be organized.

Imperialism had its weakest spot in Russia. The capitalist class of that country was only just developing. In many instances the Russian capitalists were only the administrators of foreign capital imported into Russia. This urge was met half-way by the semi-feudal desires for expansion of the old autocracy of the Romanoffs and their immediate backers, the great landowners. Thus backward Russia, too, launched its ship of state on the high-seas of the imperialist war.

At the head of the government stood a thoroly rotten autocracy whose morality sometimes was even too much for the none too delicate nostrils of an always-devoted bourgeoisie. Side by side with this rotten and corrupt autocracy and its machinery of state, the capitalist class (the bourgeoisie) stood, supporting the autocracy and revelling in its position as his majesty's most loyal and devoted opposition. That was the upper strata.

But below this thin veneer of wealth and power there were the masses of Russia—a not very numerous but class conscious proletariat and and large mass of poor, starving and overawed peasantry.

The corrupt bureaucracy of the autocracy could not supply the leadership—and the under developed industry of Russia could not supply the materials necessary for a successful prosecution of the war. The collapse was inevitable. It came with a crash.

The Russian workers, whose organizations were suppressed and whose leaders were persecuted even in normal times, found the war an added weight on their shoulders. The police become the all-powerful taskmaster driving a disgruntled proletariat back into the treadmill of capitalist profits. But this proletariat had a revolutionary tradition. The only attempts of mass revolt against unspeakable and irresistable czarism in the past were made and led by this proletariat. The increased pressure upon them could not subdue them but could only increase the counter-pressure in the same ratio.

The army in the field, the masses of exploited and oppressed peasants in uniform, the strongest basis of czarism, began to crumble. Corrupt generals, even up to the minister of war, Suchomlinov, betrayed them; corrupt officials stole their equipment or the money appropriated for them; reactionary officers tortured them; and their fathers and brothers at home on the land were ruined by the food policies of the government. Under these sufferings of the soldiers, the proverbial loyalty of the Muzhiks was crushed and autocracy found that bayonets may be good to lean upon, but are not good to sit upon.

The crash came. Strikes developed in Petrograd; the troops sent against the strikers fraternized with them. The army deserted; the crown slipped off the head of the last of the Romanoffs of Rasputin's infamy.

For years the bourgeoisie had acted as his majesty's loyal opposition. But never did this bourgeoisie dare to even think of revolution. But now that they were confronted with a fait accompli, Miliukoff, the outstanding leader of the bourgeoisie had coined the slogan, "Rather defeat than revolution!" But here the workers and peasants in uniform had made the revolution. The very ground was shaking upon which this bourgeoisie stood. Danger lay in hesitation.

So they acted. They deserted the front trench of defense of the old order—czarism, and retreated to a stronger line of defense, a capitalist provisional government. The bourgeoisie had in the Duma representation a natural general staff. All that was needed was a little change of roles and the same drama could continue under a new name. Yesterday the landowners were the masters, with the bourgeoisie as loyal satraps. Today the bourgeoisie threw over its shoulders the cloak of authority and received the oath of loyalty from the new satraps, the rich landowners. The masses, the suffering workers and peasants, altho they had set out in grim determination to throw down from the pedestal of its power, czarism, were to continue to suffer, to continue to be exploited and oppressed. The whole machinery of state remained what it was. The component parts changed color—that was all. The monarchists of yesterday became the republicans of today. The imperial colors were replaced by red. The old police officials had their uniforms altered to fit new requirements, but they and their system continued in power. Under the cloak of republicanism the forces of the old order fought for life against the revolution. And yet the world at large and the exploited at home were persuaded that this was the revolution.

No matter how dignifiedly these pseudo-revolutionists played their role in this comedy in the open, secretly they conspired for the return of the Romanoffs. The day after the proclamation of the provisional government in March, 1917, Miliukoff, who to this very day parades his staunch republican qualities in Paris, proposed the proclamation of Alexis, son of the deposed Romanoff, as czar and the appointment of his uncle, Mihail Alexandrovitch, as regent. In the council room of the provisional government, the loyal hearts of the "monarchist-revolutionists" could beat more freely and the betrayal of the very revolution they pretended to lead could be proposed more shamelessly.

All achievements and hopes of the revolution would have undoubtedly found their graves in these council rooms, had the revolutionary masses abandoned their posts after the first victory. But they did not. Simultaneously with the usurpation of power by the bourgeoisie, the revolting workmen and soldiers created the instrument of a revolutionary government of their own, a workers' and soldiers' council, a Soviet. The bourgeoisie had its general staff in its Duma committee, while it found its instrument of power in the existing machinery of government. Counter-revolutionary as it was, the Duma committee found a willing accomplice in the old machinery of state. The revolutionary masses of workers and soldiers on the other hand, had their general staff in the leading proletarian parties, but they lacked an instrument of power and struggle. They had to create one.

The Soviets of workmen and soldiers came into existence in answer to that need. They became the organizational instrument through which the fight against the old order could be carried on and, with the final defeat of this order, they became the basic structure of the new one. The Soviets represented the authority of the forces of revolution, just as the machinery of government under the czar and under Miliukoff or Kerensky were representing the authority of the counter-revolutionary forces. A fight to the finish was inevitable.

Either the old order would succeed in defeating the Soviets, then revolution was doomed and the old government would remain in power—or the Soviets would be victorious, would destroy the old order and its government; then these Soviets would become the government of the new order. The hesitating leadership of the Soviets, that of the Mensheviks, prevented the facing of this conflict. They desired to solve it not by a victory of the Soviets, but by their abdication.

Thus the conflict between revolution and counter-revolution manifested itself not so much in the struggle between the Soviets and provisional government, but in battles for leadership of the Soviets between the henchmen of the bourgeoisie, the Mensheviks and the representatives of the Revolutionary proletariat—the Bolsheviks.

The Mensheviks at first denied that support of the provisional government was tantamount to a betrayal of the revolution; but when the language of the facts began to thunder so loud that they could no longer claim ignorance, then they maintained that a victory of the bourgeoisie is necessary and consequently their support of it was justified.

The revolutionary masses did not share this treacherous opinion. They refused to fight on the battlefields of imperialism for Constantinopole while their revolutionary land committees at home were sent to prison by the former czar's jailers wearing red cockades.

The logic of the struggle drove the Soviets into the hands of the Bolsheviks. Created for struggle, the Soviets followed the most aggressive leadership and elected Bolsheviks on all committees.

Now the decks were cleared for action. The conflict became a clear one between the working class followed by the poor peasantry and the allied bourgeoisie and landowners, with the Mensheviks and socialist-revolutionaries as their henchmen. The revolution could proceed.

Like lightning penetrates darkness so was the counter-revolutionary attitude of the Mensheviks and socialist-revolutionary leadership of the Soviets illuminated for a moment by the Kornilioviade. Here were the commanders of the army using their mandate from the republic to overthrow it. Here were the ministers of the revolutionary government in conspiracy with the monarchist generals in counter-revolutionary plots. Here was the revolution threatened in its existence by the very people entrusted with its defense.

Excitement rose to fever heat. The

The Russian Revolution and the Communist International

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

The glorious victory of the Russian workers on November 7, 1917, did not only bring into existence the first workers' government. Great as was the triumph of the Russian proletarian revolution in establishing the workers' state in Russia, the Russian workers thru their victory made even a greater contribution to the workers of the world. Thru their victory, they laid the foundation for the creation of the Communist International, which is today the center and rallying point for the revolutionary workers the world over.

There had been left wing socialist groups within the Second International even prior to the outbreak of the world war in 1914. When the Second International fell to pieces under the impact of the war, these groups endeavored to come together in order to form a nucleus for a new international. Meetings were held at Zimmerwald and Kienthal, during the war, at which tentative efforts were made to unite these groups. These efforts, however, did not bring any permanent results.

It required the clarifying experience of the first victorious proletarian revolution to lay the foundation for the new international. The Russian workers under the leadership of the Bolsheviki organized their Soviets and with the slogan "All power to the Soviets" on their lips, struck the blow which brought the first proletarian state into existence; they showed on the field of action the course which the proletarian revolution takes and the basis of the new proletarian state. The way to power for the proletariat was no longer a theory, but had been demonstrated thru action. The experiences and examples of the Russian workers made the Marxian theory they had put to test stand out in a great new white light. The murky clouds in which the Second International had hidden the principles of Marx were dispersed by this great shaft of light. Thru their example, thru their practice, thru their action on the field of battle, the Russian workers taught the revolutionary groups in other countries the road they must travel in order to win their victory.

In every country, strong groups in the socialist parties rallied to the principles of Marxism as illuminated by Leninist practice in the victory of November 7, 1917. Thus the Russian proletarian revolution created the Communist International. When the call for the first congress of the Communist International was issued, in March, 1919, there were groups in every country ready to answer the call and to join in forming the Communist International. The Russian workers, thru their victory, had not only created their own workers' state, but had created the organization which would lead and direct the world proletarian revolution.

The Communist International.

In the seven years that the Russian workers have defended and made safe their victory, the Communist International has spread its influence to the uttermost places of the earth. Today there is not a place on the face of the globe where the Communist International has not some following where its appeal to the workers of the world has not some response. In fifty-one countries the Communist International has organized its sections. It is the leader of an organization of revolutionary workers which number from two to two-and-a-half million and its influence and leadership extends over tens of millions other workers. If, when Marx and Engels wrote the first Communist Manifesto, it was true "that a specter was haunting Europe—the specter of Communism," this is a thousand times more true today.

The capitalist governments the world over hate and fear the Communist International. And well they may, for its power is not limited or restricted by national boundaries. If the English ruling class hates the Communist International it is because it knows that the influence of the Communist International reaches into England, and when it speaks, the English workers respond. If the French government hates and fears the Communist International, it is because it knows that hundreds of thousands, yes, millions of French workers listen when the Communist International speaks and are ready to follow its leadership. If Mr. Hughes hates and fears the Communist International, it is because he knows that in the United States the Communist International has its organized section and its followers ready to unite with the workers the world over in rallying under its leadership.

Protecting the Workers' Victory.

The Communist International created thru the Russian revolution has in turn become the greatest defender of the victory of the Russian workers.

If the might of the imperialist capitalist world has not been organized and thrown against the Russian workers' state in one united effort to destroy it, it is because the power of the Communist International has made such a united offensive impossible.

When in 1920, England threatened Soviet Russia, during the Polish war, it was the power of the Communist International, speaking thru the English workers' councils of action, which called a halt to British imperialism. It was the power of the Communist International which was expressed in the strikes of Italian workers, German workers, French workers, yes, even American workers, who refused to handle munitions of war for use by Poland against Soviet Russia.

The imperialist capitalist nations have not dared to openly mobilize their power and strike at the Russian Workers' Republic because within the borders of these capitalist imperialist nations, there stand the armies of the Communist International, ready to act under its leadership against such an imperialist attempt. If the imperialist capitalist governments dared to, they would long ago have made the attempt to destroy the first proletarian government. That they have not dared to, is due to the fact that their attempt to mobilize their power would be answered by the marching millions of proletarian workers with the cry, "Hands Off Soviet Russia!"

Celebrate Beginning of World Revolution.

In celebrating the anniversary of the triumph of the Russian workers we do not only celebrate the victory of the Russian workers. We celebrate the beginning of the world revolution, we celebrate the creation of the Communist International which came out of the victory of the Russian workers, we celebrate the creation of that Marxist-Leninist leadership of the revolutionary workers which has already spread its principles and organization to all parts of the world which today is thundering at the doors of capitalism and which tomorrow will crash thru those doors and become the center of the World Proletarian State. As we hail the glorious triumph of the Russian workers, we also cry out, "Hail to the Communist International built upon the rock foundation of the Russian proletarian victory!"

masses turned for leadership to the Bolsheviks who had answered the attacks of those in power against the revolution by the slogan: "All power to the Soviets!"

Yes, all power to the Soviets! Let the masses that started the revolution defend and complete it. Let those masses transform the only instrument of defense of the revolution, the Soviets, into their instrument of power, into a revolutionary government.

With the leadership of the Soviets in the hands of the Bolsheviks, the situation clarified and the struggle between the Soviets and the old state began in earnest. It ended with the defeat of the old order and the glorious advent of the new. At last the proletariat of the world had regained its power of speech and through its Russian brothers it answered the crime of the first imperialist world war with the establishment of the first workers' state. For the first time in history the proletariat had claimed its heritage and succeeded by its own efforts. A new epoch was initiated and the construction of a new society had begun. The domination of property over the people was ended and the control of the people over property was established. The dictatorship of capitalism was terminated and the dictatorship of the working class proclaimed instead. The revolution of February had been a skirmish of the advance guard. The victorious emergence of the proletariat from that skirmish suggested to the defendants of the old order the tactic to take command of the attacking army, thus insuring its defeat. But the watchful eye, the clear insight, and the spirit of relentless struggle that dominated the Bolsheviks and their revered leader, Lenin, frustrated this plan. In the revolution of November, the main battle was fought in which the strategy of capitalism collapsed and the final victory of the toilers was achieved.

Marxism, Communism, had achieved its triumph. Lenin, the incomparable theoretician and strategist, had united Marxian theory with Communist tactics and action in a perfect synthesis of the November revolution and the establishment of the first workers' state.

Seven years have passed—seven years of struggle, of suffering, of misery, and of brilliant achievements. The taking over of power by the Soviets marked the beginning of the most heroic efforts that only a revolutionary class is capable of performing. Although the Soviets presented in themselves a new machinery of government, one that was to replace entirely the old one, yet, too many threads of the old administrative machinery of the vast empire of Russia still ran through the hands of the old bureaucracy. Says Ariande Tyrkova, a bitter foe of the Soviets, of the first days after November: "The minor council of ministers continued its sittings, striving to preserve the succession of authority and, if possible, to reinstate the power of the provisional government. . . The entire mechanism of the state was under their control." Sabotage set in on a scale never before witnessed, and perpetrated by a class who, during its rule, had dealt with mere talks of sabotage against them, as major crimes. To destroy the last remnants of this state machinery became the foremost task of the new rulers. The worker who had come out of the factory only yesterday to exchange his tool for a rifle, today had to exchange his rifle for a pen and become part of the administrative machine of the new workers' state. For a time, two parallel machines fought a life and death struggle; one old, experienced, trained in its task, but obsolete and representative of a defeated class: the other, new, inexperienced, to a certain degree even chaotic, but representative of a victorious new ruling class, the proletariat. But this new class had that indispensable quality of a revolutionary class of which Danton speaks: "L'audace, l'audace, et toujour l'audace!" Boldness, boldness, and forever boldness! Thus the old state was destroyed, utterly annihilated, and, like a phoenix out of the ashes, there emerged finally the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The victory of the Russian workers seven years ago rekindled the hope of the toiling millions the world over. The sun of the new workers' state of Russia lighted the path of struggle that the proletariat of the world must travel. It inspired these masses. It taught them how to succeed.

But this victory also drove fear into the camp of capitalism. Its solidarity manifested itself at once and the deadly foes on the battlefields of Europe, entente and central powers, became allies on Russian soil for a common campaign against the Soviets. The "humanitarian" Wilson tried to spit the red heart of revolutionary Russia on the bayonets of an expeditionary force of American soldiers. The successors of Danton and Robespierre, the present rulers of France, played the role of the Duke of Brunswick in the Russian revolution. The armies of the maglomaniac William, harrassed the workers' republic and robbed it of its most valuable provinces. And while English money bought and paid for counter-revolutionary uprisings within Soviet Russia, an English army stole for the ruling powers of England, the valuable oil-fields on the south of the Black Sea. But even against a world of enemies the Russia of the workers prevailed. The enemy within was smashed by the force of the Red Terror—the enemy from without by the force of the Red Army. And today, though grinding their teeth in impotent rage, one by one the capitalist governments must recognise the hated new power. The United States alone, of all great nations, cannot forget the wrongs it did to Soviet Russia. It refuses recognition. But, like revolutionary France of old told Austria, so Soviet Russia can tell the Peck-sniffs at Washington: "Soviet Russia is like the sun. You may refuse to recognize it; but yet it shines."

Revolutions are the locomotives of history. The revolution of November, 1917, pulled the development of society along with the speed of an express train. It broke the power of capitalism in Russia. It revealed the rottenness of world capitalism. It demonstrated the strength of the proletariat. Like a monument to that strength it stands out in its greatness and magnificence and sings out to the proletariat of the world the inspiring hymn of the Social Revolution:

Arise ye prisoners of starvation!
Arise, ye wretched of the earth!
For justice thunders condemnation;
A better world's in birth!

Leaders--Not "Heroes"--of the Russian Revolution

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

IT is well that Nov. 7, the anniversary of the Russian Bolshevik victory, falls so quickly upon the period of the American national elections. It gives workers in this country, who have been won to the reading of Communist literature, an opportunity to compare the "heroes" of American politics, puny and colorless, with the inspiring personalities of the men and women—the leaders—who carried to victory the standards of the Russian workers' and peasants' struggle for emancipation.

In his little pamphlet on "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," we find A Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions, heading one of his chapters, "A Leader, Not a Hero."

There were those who wanted to deck up Lenin as a "hero of the masses," in the effort to disprove the materialistic conception of history. But Lenin was the leader of his class; not its hero, Losovsky points out in reply.

Thd same is true of all the other comrades of the Russian Soviet revolution whose names are becoming more and more familiar to toilers in every land.

There is Michael Ivanovitch Kalinin, the peasant president of the Soviet Republic, the second president under Soviet rule. He was selected for this position when Sverdlov died of the typhus in 1918. Kalinin has been a connecting link between the city and land workers.

Leon Trotsky is still the Soviet minister of war. He is the head of the Red Army. Trotsky is the man of action, the originator, the organizer He was born in 1877, suffered imprisonment and exile under the czar, spent some time in the United States immediately preceding the revolution, but returned to Russia at the first opportunity to help build the Soviet Republic.

We hear more and more of Christian Rakovsky, who was the president of the Ukraine, now mentioned as the Soviet ambassador to Paris, since French recognition of Soviet rule. Louise Bryant wrote of Rakovsky that he never reached any important decision without consulting Lenin Rakovsky comes from the Balkans having been born in the little Bulgarian town of Kotel. Driven from one country to another under the whip of reaction, he has, since the Nov. 7th revolution, in 1917, represented the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia in other lands. While president of the Ukraine he was also a member of the Executive Committee of the Communist International.

Of course, at the head of the Soviet foreign office, in Moscow, is Gregory Vassilievitch Tchicherin. Tchicherin is so deeply serious in his work that he could not, on one occasion, see the humor of an American capitalist newspaper publishing a fake interview with Lenin, discussing everything from the Irish problem to the Russian ballet. This Tchicherin comes from one of the oldest and most aristocratic families of the days of the czar. But he has been guiding successfully for years the foreign affairs of the Bolshevik Republic.

Side by side with Tchicherin, we find Maxim Litvinov, who worked with Lenin since the Russian Communist Party was created up to the time of the latter's death. Litvinov was one of the Soviet representatives sent to London in the early negotiations over the question of British recognition.

In England with Litvinov we find Leonid Krassin, who once managed the great Putilov factory and was considered one of the most able engineers in Russia. He was a great power in Russia's early days of reconstruction.

There are plenty of other men of great ability in the Soviet foreign office, who run rings around the diplomats of capitalist countries. Another outstanding figure is Michael Karakhan, who has been carrying on such successful work in the orient, especially with Japan and China; not to overlook the great achievements of Joffe.

But there are not only men comrades in Russia's foreign service. Alexandra Kollontai, veteran of the Russian revolutionary movement, is the Soviet representative at Christiania, the capital of Norway. She spent much time in exile in Germany while the czar still ruled in Russia, but returned immediately following the inception of the revolution.

Moissaye J. Olgin, who has just returned from Soviet Russia, says that someone tried to tell him that Anatol Lunacharsky, the Soviet minister of education, was just a figurehead in the workers' and peasants' government. But Olgin later learned that this informant was an anti-Bolshevik and spent his time in denouncing, in a similar manner, all Soviet officials. Lunacharsky holds that illiteracy was Russia's greatest curse under the czar and he is working to wipe it out as rapidly as possible under the Soviet rule. Reports indicate that he is succeeding very rapidly.

It was Alexis Ivanovitch Rykov who succeeded Lenin as the president of the Council of People's Commissars. This was the unanimous decision of the Central Executive Committee and ratified the action of the All-Russian Soviet Congress.

But these are all comrades engaged in the work of the Soviet government. There are also the comrades more active in the Communist International like Gregory Zinoviev, president of the Petrograd Soviet, but also the head of the Communist World Party—the Communist International.

Karl Radek is declared to be one of Communism's best propagandists. He has been for a long time head of the Soviet propaganda bureau.

Nikolai Bucharin, another powerful Communist writer, is the editor of the official organ of the Russian Communist Party, the Pravda.

George Steklov is the head of the editorial staff of the Izvestia, the official organ of the Russian Soviet government.

These are only a few of the leaders—not "heroes"— of the Russian Soviet revolution. They are of the revolution. They sprang from the victorious struggle of the masses of oppressed against the capitalist reaction. Under the dictatorship of the proletariat, the transition stage towards Communism, multitudes of such leaders are rising to take up the new tasks—the building of the Communist society. The workers in all other lands may well envy the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia their leadership.

This is something for the hero-worshipping American workers to look into on this Seventh Soviet Anniversary.

Seven Years of Triumphant Soviet Rule

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THE Workers' and Farmers' Soviet Republic, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, is now entering upon its eighth year.

The years of foreign invasion, the years of famine and war, the years of economic blockade are at an end. The enemies of the working and farming masses of Soviet Russia have been defeated. Communism is increasing its strength rapidly.

The economic chaos wrought by the war and czarist-capitalist inefficiency the ruin of industry and agriculture coming in the wake of counter-revolutionary insurrection and sabotage the stifling of economic progress thru the imperialist blockade—are all at an end.

Ignorance, illiteracy, oppression, economic backwardness, exploitation—these are, more and more, happily becoming by-gones for the Russian working and farming masses.

The Birth of Red Russia.

November 7, 1917: The birthday! The capitalist Kerensky puppet government is overthrown. The Communists win power. "All power to the Soviet of workers, soldiers and peasants! Peace! Bread! Land!" are the slogans of the victorious Communists under the leadership of the old guard of the Russian Communist Party—Lenin and Zinoviev. Soviet rule is established. The roar and thunder of the social revolution strike terror into the hearts of the imperialists the world over. The workers of the world hail the new day.

Comunism Ends World War.

November 7, 1918: The first anniversary! It was the Communist propaganda and the Communist spirit spread amongst the great mass of German soldiers that brought about the end of kaiserism and the imperialist war. Not until the effective Communist agitation directed by the Bolshevik Party of Russia broke up the efficient German military machine was the Prussian junker-capitalist alliance forced to seek an end of hostilities. Not until the allied imperialists began to dread the rising Soviet power were they compelled to consider even an armistice.

Soviet Republic Crushes Intervention.

November 7, 1919: The second birthday! The countless efforts of world imperialism camouflaged and inspired by Woodrow Wilson, to overthrow the Soviet Republic have been decisively crush by the prowess of the Red Army. While the Russian working and farming masses under the leadership of their Communist Party were putting to rout their enemies at home and abroad, the social-democratic leaders in other European countries were serving as the hangmen of their proletariat. It was the traitorous social-democracy of Gremany that drowned the Spartican revolution and that aided and abetted the overthrow of the Soviet Republic in Bavaria. It was with the connivance and comfort of the Hungarian social-democracy that Mr. Hoover was able to engineer the drowning blood of the Soviet government in Hungary. In all these dark hours the Russian Communist Party, at the head of the Soviet Republic, held aloft the banner of the world social revolution.

Ring of Iron and Fire Broken.

November 7, 1920: The third anniversary! More and more the capitalist powers are beginning to recognize that Soviet Russia is invincible. The oldest capitalist government, on whose land the sun never sets, Great Britain, recognizes its failure to crush the workers' and farmers' Soviet Republic by force of arms. Captain O'Grady is appointed to negotiate with Comrade Krassin at Copenhagen This marks the beginning of the collapse of the murderous blockade of the Soviet Republic. It marks the beginning of the end of the so-called cordon sanitaire—the capitalist imperialist ring of iron and fire thrown around Soviet Russia in order to break the backbone of international Communism.

Last Imperialist Attack Shattered.

November 7, 1921: The fourth birthday! The victorious Red Army has succeeded in sweeping into oblivion the imperialist counter-revolutionary lackeys. The Kolchaks, the Yudenitches, the Wrangels and the horde of lesser hooligans have all been smashed by the workers' and peasants' Red Army. The American working men are beginning to demand peace with Soviet Russia. American soldiers stationed in Murmansk and Siberia mutiny. Reactionary Poland is forced to give up its war against the Soviet Republic. The Kronstadt revolt, the last flicker of counter-revolutionary hope, is extinguished.

Vanquishing the Famine.

November 7, 1922: The fifth anniversary! The allied imperialists, despairing of their nefarious plans to overthrow the Soviet Republic thru a frontal attack, are planning to resort to other means. Soviet Russia is invited to meet the imperialist agents at the Genoa and Hague conferences. The famine sweeps the Volga valley. The working classes thruout the world rally to the support of the starving workers and peasants of the Soviet Republic. The Fourth World Congress of the Comunist International and the First World Congress of Red International of Labor Unions mark the victory of the Soviet Republic over the worst famine in the history of Russia. The trial of the social-revolutionary enemies of the Soviet Republic brings into ugly relief the alliance between the saffron social-democracy and the black monarchist reaction.

Rebuilding Soviet Russia.

November 7, 1923: The sixth birthday! The famine has been completely liquidated. The harvest brings a bumper crop. Gigantic exhibition in Moscow shows inestimable progress in the rebuilding of agriculture in the Soviet domains. Red Russia is building a huge air fleet and increasing the effectiveness of its revolutionary army. Tremendous headway is being made in the reconstruction of industry.

Communist Russia Triumphant.

November 7, 1924: The seventh anniversary! The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is triumphant. Imperialist France, the arch enemy of Soviet Russia, the essence and incarnation of capitalist hostility to the first workers' and farmers' Soviet Republic, recognizes the bankruptcy of its anti-Soviet policy. The French government is compelled to extend unconditional de jure recognition to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. At least nineteen capitalist governments have been forced to confess the failure of their campaigns against the Soviet Republic and have granted full recognition to the Soviet government. Within one year at least twelve capitalist governments, amongst which are to be found England, Italy, the Baltic countries and France, have formally recognized the Soviet government. Japanese recognition is now only a matter of weeks at the most. Soon the entire continent of Asia will have recognized the Soviet Republic.

Soviet industry and trade are making remarkable progress. Soviet Russia has come out victorious over counter-revolution, foreign invasion, famine and capitalist blockade.

The Communist International, the leader of the international revolutionary proletariat, is stronger than ever. Its active, disciplined adherents are increasing by leaps and bounds. Today the Communist International is the mortal and only dreaded enemy of the imperialist blunderbund at the head of which now stand the American financial and industrial capitalist overlords.

connection with the old guard of pre-revolutionary Communist fighters. Members of the Central Committee are Communists of long standing. Secretaries of the District and Province Committees may be only Communists who joined the party prior to October, 1917. Secretaries of the County Committees must be Communists of three years' standing. Members of the Central and Province Control Committees can only be Communists who actually participated in underground work before the revolution.

Lenin Enrollment

c. The great event that manifested to the world the attitude of the masses towards the Communist Party and brought the party into the very heart of the working masses, was the Lenin Enrollment. When Lenin died, the party issued a call to the workers to join the party of Lenin. One hundred thousand were expected to join, two hundred and fifty thousand filed applications, swelling the membership to 700,000, flooding the local nuclei, upsetting all calculations, putting an end to the party discussion, overwhelming the organization with the task of assimilating the new mass. Only workers engaged in industrial establishments were allowed to enter the Lenin enrollment. A quarter million offered its active services to the cause of the revolution, pouring new blood, new energy, new vigor, new impetus into the body of the party. This was how the heart of the working class responded to Lenin's cherished organization.

"Why did you join the party just after Lenin's death? Why did you not become Communists before?" the writer asked many a rank and filer.

"Because as long as Ilyitch lived we were sure he kept an eye on the party and he would always find the best way. But when he died, we simply had to join the party in order to help it in its work."

The task of passing upon the candidates of the Lenin Enrollment was left to the general meeting of every mill, factory, shop or pit. Those meetings will remain forever in the history of the party as one of its most enchanting moments. Here they have come, the non-partisan workers. Here they sit in judgment over applicants desirous to join the party. What does this assemblage of non-Communists know about the Communist Party? How will it be capable of weeding out the undesirables and recommending the proper material? Never fear. The workers know. The workers understand very clearly the role of the Communist Party. Not in vain have the workers partaken of the great struggles.

One worker after another rises to object to individual applications.

"This man is a weakling. A Communist must have a will."

"This man is stupid. He will not be able to acquire the knowledge a Communists cannot get along without."

"This man was a Menshevik. We do not believe in his sudden conversion. He has yet to prove his devotion to the new order and to Communism."

"This man is inclined to religious superstitions. He may not become a Communist till he rid himself of false ideas."

"This man is not punctual in money affairs. We will not be able to trust him."

"This man has not led a clean family life. He is not fit for Communism."

"This man is drinking. A Communist must be sober."

One by one the aspirants passed in review before the masses of workers who chose the right men and women for candidates to the Communist Party. The mass chose its own party. The "non-partisan" mass chose its own Communist leaders.

Greater than this closeness of working class and party the world has never seen.

The party is now conducting a stupendous work of training those new Communists, many of whom are men and women of mature age. A host of teachers is giving this mass instruction in the first principles of social theory ("The ABC of political science"); a host of other teachers is introducing the more advanced among the Lenin Enrollment into the study of Marxism, while the secretaries of the nuclei and the party as a whole are drawing the new recruits into the various phases of actual party life, pushing them forward even to the most advanced positions.

The Vydvishentzy ("those moved to the fore") are only one case in this variegated problem. Hundreds of workers recommended by the local nuclei were taken from the factories and placed in the highest offices of the Soviet government, the aim being, first, to have those fresh and unspoiled minds observe the workings of the various institutions, simultaneously inspecting them in the name of the party and learning their mechanisms, second, to place those workers in responsible positions in the respective offices after they have acquainted themselves with their administration. The party thus makes it possible for a capable aspiring worker to skip all intermediary steps and attain to higher administrative work in the shortest possible way. The "ones moved to the fore" bring with them proletarian conceptions of economy and order, proletarian working power, and proletarian freedom from bureaucratic bias.

Democatic Centralism

d. The Russian Communist Party is built on the principle of Democratic Centralism. The party is centralized from top to botom: the decisions of the Central Committee are law for every party organization and every member. The decisions of the Central Control Commitee are equally binding upon every party body and every member. The decisions of the lower institutions may be annulled by the institutions above them. The choice of officers by lower institutions is subject to veto by the superior bodies. The authority and prestige of the party must be a matter of the highest concern for every member. The entire party structure presents a pyramid the top of which is the Central Committee while the Regional and Provincial Committees, also the Central Committees of the individual states which form the Union (such as the Central Committee of the Ukrainian Communist Party) represent the section of the pyramid just below the top the County Committees and the local nuclei forming the second and third layer respectively. The entire structure is shot thru by a greater number of cross sections which represent direct communication between the top and the various portions of the pyramid, such means of communications being regional conferences, provincial conferences, conferences of local committee secretaries, conferences of secretaries of nuclei in a given city or district, general meetings of numbers of nuclei in the same industry or the same locality, etc. All these ways of party intercourse convey to the entire organization the will and the views of the leading body, at the same time conveying to the Central Committee and to the Central Control Committee the will and the views of the rank and file members.

The Central Committee which is the actual government of Russia consists of 54 members; the Central Control Committee consists of 152 members. The Central Committee is the highest authority of the party, giving direction to all the activities of every Communist organization, at the same time it decides upon all the problems confronting the Soviet state.

The decisions of the Communist Party are being carried out not only within the party but wherever a Communist happens to work. All Communists working in the same establishment or delegated to the same non-partisan conference or congress, or elected to the same Soviet political or industrial or educational office, are organized as a Communist faction (caucus). The course of action of the faction is determined by the local or central committee. The decisions of the committee or caucus are binding upon every member. Communists appearing in a non-Communist gathering or organization, always act as a unit. No Communist will ever criticize the stand of another Communist before an audience of strangers. Communists appear to be all of one opinion and defending the same course when acting in non-Communist surroundings. This is one of the reasons of their great influence among the non-partisan masses. The Communists know what they want in every case, they are never caught unprepared, and they stand all for one and one for all.

The party decidedly forbits caucuses and groupings with the party organization. No intermediary discipline may stand betwen the member and the party as a whole. No group loyalty may interfere with the loyalty of a member to his party. Every vote of a party member within the party organization must be dictated by his best understanding and not by the collective understanding of a group. The party forbids caucuses as tending to disrupt the unity of the organization and weaken its power in the face of the enemy who waits for just such a schism in the leadership of the proletarian revolution.

But while practicing a severe centralism which makes every member a soldier in a well disciplined army even to the extent of dictating him his kind of work and changing his place of sojourn, the Russian Communist Party is organized on a democratic basis. Every secretary of a nucleus is elected by its members. Every County Committee is elected by a county conference. Regional and provincial committees are being elected, at conferences of the region or the province. In the times of underground work prior to 1917 the officers of the party were appointed from above. At present, when the party leads a free and open existence, the party leadership, from the lowest to the highest functionaries is being elected from below, —with limitations as to the party standing of the comrade to be elected.

There is freedom of opinion and freedom of discussion within the Russian Communist Party. Freedom of discussion, however, must not be abused so as to shake the very foundations of the party. When a group within the party criticises its activities in such a manner as to in inspire the bourgeoisie with new hope of a near collapse of the proletarian power, when the passions let loose within the party not only tend to denounce existing evils but to discredit the party outside its ranks and to undermine its vitality within, then the criticism reaches beyond the mark and freedom of opinion turns to be a danger. Such was the case with the last discussion.

One must always bear in mind that the Russian Communist Party is carrying out a colossal revolutionary task, that the revolution has not yet been concluded, that the enemies are numerous and cunning, and that every rift within the party means a weakening of the power of proletarian rule.

Housecleanings

e. The Russian Communist Party is a governing party. It represents power. It imposes on its membership heavy duties but it also puts them in a privileged position. The Russian Communist Party is apt to attract persons who join it, not out of devotion to the cause of the revolution, but out of selfish motives. The Russian Communist Party is aware of this danger and is combatting it with all the frankness that characterizes every one of its actions. "We are not infallible," says the party. "We make mistakes. We commit blunders. Only those who do not act do not err. But we are ready to remedy evils. We will not stop before the most drastic measures. The party must be and will be an example of service, of proletarian integrity, of revolutionary sincerity and devotion." In 1921 the party started its most famous housecleaning; in the course of several months 200 thousand were excluded out of a total membership of 700 thousand. In the spring and summer of 1924 another housecleaning was conducted, this time exclusively among the office nuclei, i. e. among those Communists who work in Soviet institutions.

What are the reasons for exclusion from the party? First of all, a non-worker who is a member of the Communist Party must do work for the party. Even a factory worker is expected to render regular services to his organization, but he is not always in a position to do so. As for a non-worker, an intellectual or semi-intellectual, it is not sufficient for him that he does his duty in the Soviet institution: he must also be active within his nucleus and within the party. Non-active intellectuals, however useful otherwise, are considered ballast and thrown overboard.

Dutiful and capable discharge of governmental work is another demand put up to a Communist. He who shirks his duties, who soldiers on the job, who is inefficient, who demoralises the staff, who does not live up to the standards of a proletrian administrator is being mercilessly expelled from the party and removed from his position, no matter how great his former services may be. The party has now changed from a war footing to a comparatively peaceful line of constructive activities. Men who were good fighters at the front may prove rotten administrators in economic or cultural affairs. The party

The Youth in the Revolution - - By Oliver Carlson

It is always an exhilirating sight to see a mass of young people enjoying themselves. The spirit and enthusiasm at a football game here or in Great Britain, the steadied motion of the young athletes of Germany or Sweden as they execute their maneuvers are interesting and enjoyable to everyone; but these in no way compare with the almost limitless flow of life and laughter and goodfellowship to be found at any gathering of the Russian Komsomols (Young Communists).

Whereas the whole trend of the education given in all capitalist countries is one wherein the individual is taught to think first and foremost in terms of his own success, in Russia it is the opposite. There the students are taught to regard society as a unit of which they are parts. They are developed so that their own advancement and success is measured in terms of their ability to contribute to the development and advancement of the entire community. Social science becomes a part of the training of children from the time when they enter school, but it does not cease when school days are over but is carried on in the workshops, the mines and the offices. Furthermore, there is at no time made the hard and fast line of distinction between manual and mental work such as we find thruout the rest of the world. The work schools, which are being established all over the Soviet Union as rapidly as conditions permit, link up the school and factory, combine theory with practice and make out of the rising generation men and women who possess a balanced training, so they can serve in the capacity of both brain and brawn workers.

Children Both Heard and Seen.

The discrimination against the youth which exists in every other country is not to be found in Russia. The political barriers which prevent all under 21 years of ago to vote (in many countries the age limit is 23 or 25 years) does not exist in Russia. Every worker there irrespective of his age, can participate in all elections. The barriers set up by the trade unions in all other countries against the admittance of young workers do not exist in Russia. Quite to the contrary, the youth have their special representatives on all committees of the unions to see to it that the interests of the young workers are especially looked after.

In every respect the young people of Russia are trained in such a fashion that they will be prepared to state their views and opinions on all matters. In their schools, in their clubs, everywhere, they are expected to govern themselves as much as they possibly can. They are trained to speak up, not to hold their tongues. The old saying about "children should be seen but not heard" is in bad standing in Russia. There they want their children both seen and heard. As a consequence, I have seen any number of good sincere Communists from other countries almost shocked at the forwardness, or as some of them put it, "the audacity" of these youngsters. The environment under which these comrades had been forced to live the whole of their lives made it almost impossible for them to accept the idea of children talking as equals to their elders. But the youth of Russia, freed from the old restraint, is developing at an almost unbelieveable rate. Time and again I have witnessed long and serious discussions on political problems of the day by groups of kiddies ranging from nine or ten to fifteen years of age. It is no longer an unusual thing over there.

The backbone of the Soviet government is the Communist Party but back of that party stands a Young Communist League with a membership almost a million strong. This is a mighty army of young workers ranging in age from 15 or 16 to 22 years of age. Most of them had no part in the earlier struggles of 1917 or 1918. They have developed into man and womanhood under this new workers' government—and there are none so loyal to it as just these young Communists who know that theirs is the actual task of building a new social order. And back of the Komsomols stand the Young Leninists, hundreds of thousands of them, as the third line of defense for the workers' state.

Creating a New World.

Small wonder that the joy, the enthusiasm of the Russian youth exceeds that of the youth of all the world for it is a joy and an enthusiasm that arises out of a consciousness of their importance in creating a new world. The youthful guardsmen of the Russian proletariat are the guarantee that world capitalism can never reconquer the Soviet government. They are the guarantee that the rising generation has thrown off for all time to come the shackles of serfdom and wage slavery. They stand as a guide and an inspiration to the working class youth of all the world to follow in their footsteps.

For every year that the Soviet government has existed there has grown up behind it a million new ardent supporters. From Vladivostok to Leningrad and from Murmansk to Tiflis the Young Communist League and the Young Leninists are to be found, training, organizing, educating their members and their supporters to become able and efficient citizen-workers in the United Socialist Soviet States. The first seven years of struggle are past. The critical period is over. The Youthful Guardsmen will see to it that the future will make up for the misery, the ignorance, the brutality inflicted upon the masses of Russians for centuries.

knows no personal considerations. He who is not fit, must go.

Honesty, integrity, clean living are a fundamental pre-requisite of a Communist. Members are being expelled for laxity, corruption, favoritism, for hob-nobbing with bourgeois elements, for extravagance, haughty attitude towards subordinates, an inclination to draw away from the mass of workers. This is a workers' republic, the party says, and a member who cannot live the live of a worker may not stay in the party.

A maximum of earnings has been fixed by the party for its members. What a Communist receives above the maximum must be turned over to the treasury of the party. Last summer the maximum which no member of the party could overstep was 190 roubles monthly ($100.)

It is a privilege to be a Communist in Russia. It is a strenuous task to be a Communist in Russia. The party demands, and takes, all a man's energy, all his abilities, all his life. A Communist must set an example for the rest of mankind. Those who fall short quit the party.

Women, Youth, Pioneers

f. A ramified organization has been constructed to work among the women. A splendid, active, boyant, aggressive and spirited organization is the Union of Communist Youth with a membership of 600,000. A beatiful, inspiring, happy and hopeful organization is that of the Pioneers, the Communist children. Color, riotous joy of life, reckless contempt for bodily difficulties, a burning desire for constructive work in the present and in the future are being brought into Russian life by the youth and children's organizations.

The Watchman on Guard.

g. We tread a narrow path in a difficult country We are surrounded by enemies. We have little experience. We are, so far, alone in our great endeavor to create a new order. We must be cautious. As long as we are united and uniform in action, we are safe, and safe is the cause of the revolution. As soon as we have deviated from the straight path, as soon as there appears the slightest crack in our solid wall of unity, the revolution is endangered.

This is how the Russian Communist Party looks upon its task. This is why it is so anxiously watching every dissention in its organization. The party is aware that the bourgeois elements which still remain in the country serve for some political expression. Having acquiesced in the existence of the Soviet system and in the proletarian dictatorship, the bourgeois elements are hoping for a slackening of the proletarian rule, for disagreements, dissentions and struggles within the party itself, as this would increase the chances of some kind of a "democratic" (bourgeois) order in the future. A deviation in the direction of so-called democracy, a deviation from the tried principles of proletarian dictatorship under the leadership of a monolithic Communist Party is, therefore considered by the party not as a difference of opinion but as a concession to the petty bourgeois classes which are still numerically strong in the Soviet Republic. Only Bolshevism will carry the revolution to a victorious conclusion.

Strength in Unity With the Masses

"We, the non-partisan workers, are with you. Together we shall work to make our Workers Republic a Communist country." "Lenin, our great leader, is dead, but his party lives and will continue his work. We shall follow its lead." "We, plain workers of the shop, greet your congress and are certain that you will make decisions to the best interests of the working class." "We have come from a far away district to tell you that you must unflinchingly follow the path of Leninism, for only in this way shall we win." "Long live the Party of Ilyitch! Long live our victory the world over!"

In these words non-partisan workers, delegates from factories and plants greeted the 8th Congress of the R. C. P. at which the writer had the privilege to be present. In these words, the intimate unity, nay, the sameness of the working class and the Communist Party found its expression.

The Russian Communist Party is strong with the strength of the working masses.

Long live the Russian Communist Party, the leader of the Russian Proletarian Revolution!

ELECT COMMUNIST IN MINNESOTA

Morgan Tightens Dictatorship at Washington

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE National Security League is very frightened lest children between the ages of two and six start revolutions. Here is what it says to the toddling infants, who are just learning to ask for pennies with which to buy candy: "It is unlawful to start a revolution. You are not only not free to do so, but you will be punished if you do." It would not surprise us to read a story in the capitalist papers one of these days as follows: "Revolution threatens U. S. A. Gary and Rockefeller locked in oil tank. League of Communist Infants seize power." Then the story in the Daily News: "Yesterday when the twelve o'clock whistle blew, as if by preconcerted arrangement, a fleet of baby buggies, surrounded the loop and armed with suckers, cross word puzzles, dolls and other weapons of modern warfare, the hidden army of the League of Communist Infants, overthrew the government in Chicago. The police were immediately disarmed and sent home to wash the dishes while the revolutionists drove terror into the hearts of residents of the loop by their unearthly yells." "Everything is hawled up," declared Mayor Dever as he was carted to the guillotine in a baby carriage. "I have the satisfaction of dying for Chicago. . ." He would have said more but a member of the youthful chekis threw him into the subway and cried: "Dig, damnit, dig." Thus," declared the Chicago Tribune, "the terrorists are combining business with pleasure."

THIS is perfectly ridiculous, but so is the National Security League. Since the 11-year-old member of the Junior section of the Young Workers League was arrested New York, by a small army of policemen, it seems that the nerves of the ruling class of this country are badly jangled. Children who develop red hair on the outside of their heads and red ideas on the inside are in for hard times.

GLENN YOUNG is happy again. His friend Small was elected. Young said this means that the "forces of law and order" are on top. The notorious Klansman is not the only one to rejoice over Small's election. There are others. John Fitzpatrick and Victor Olander for instance. Fitzpatrick said Small's election was a victory for labor. "Labor" is not hard to please! It's funny "labor" didn't lick Crowe, tho it tried to. Looks as if the labor fakers do not have much ice in elections. They have been selling their alleged influence to the politicians, but the latter are now learning that they have been throwing their money away.

SMALL was elected by the Ku Klux Klan and by the republican machine. The Daily News and the Tribune opposed him to save their faces. But those papers supported Coolidge and Dawes. It was the Coolidge landslide that carried Small back to office again. The labor fakers make much of the opposition of the Tribune-News to Small. But John H. Walker supported Deneen for senator, and Deneen had the support of the Tribune. Walker claimed that Sprague, Deneen's democratic opponent was anti-labor and connected with the non-union firm of Rochchilds, but this little thing did not bother the so-called Wage Earners' League, which endorsed Sprague. The labor fakers know what they are after. They are out to feather their own nests, but it is doubtful if they are worth the money wasted on them by the capitalists during election time.

THERE is another way of looking at this however. It is not the services rendered around election time that means most to the capitalists. The workers are obliged to go on strike occasionally in order to force a better standard of living out of the employers. This is when labor fakers come in handy. They force the strikers back to work, brand the strike outlaw unless they go back and settle with the bosses at terms as favorable as possible to the latter. So perhaps after all their little gift around election time is not badly placed.

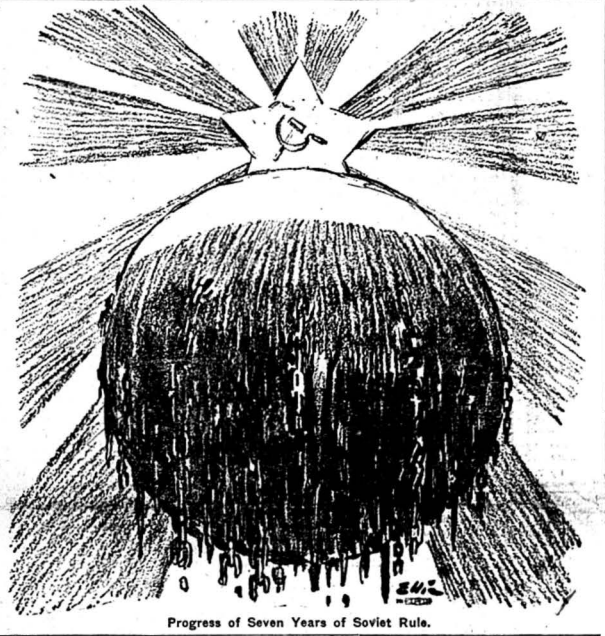
THE DROPPING CHAINS



Progress of Seven Years of Soviet Rule.

Seven Years of Labor's Rule

Manifesto by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League on the Seventh Anniversary of the Russian Proletarian Revolution.

Seven years ago, the workers and peasants of Russia triumphantly swept away the last vestiges of the rule of the government of their exploiters and oppressors and established the Soviet Government and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

For seven years, this government of workers, which is abolishing capitalist ownership of the means of production and distribution and building a Communist social system, has withstood the blows of the capitalist world seeking to destroy it.

The Russian workers' government has triumphed against the counter-revolutionary struggle of the exploiters to overthrow it. The Russian workers' government has triumphed in the struggle against world imperialism seeking to destroy it. The Russian workers' government has triumphed in the fight against the blockade of capitalism thru which capitalism sought to destroy it. The Russian workers' government has triumphed in the struggle against famine growing out of the destruction wrought by the World War.

Victory After Centuries of Struggle.

Thru all ages, oppressed classes have fought and struggled to end oppression and build a social system in which all men could be free. Slaves have fought against their masters; serfs against their feudal lords; workers against their exploiters; the pages of human history are filled with the heroic struggle of the oppressed classes to end the right of the privileged few to profit at the expense of the masses.

It is this age-long struggle which is reaching its climax in the present world era. It is as the first great victory in this age-long struggle that the Russian proletarian revolution stands. The workers of Russia have overthrown their masters. The workers of Russia are the rulers of their country. In their hands is the power to create a social system in which oppression and exploitation will be no more and those who produce wealth will enjoy the wealth which they produce.

The New Social Order.

What is the aim of the workers' government of Russia? To create a social system in which those who toil, those who produce wealth, will no longer labor for the enrichment of a small group of exploiters but in which all that the inventions, discoveries and genius of the human race has achieved will rebound to the happiness and well-being of the people of Russia.

In capitalist society as it exists today everywhere but in Russia, a few exploiters and oppressors of the workers in the factories and workers on the land own the machinery of production and distribution. Thru this system of private ownership of the things that masses are dependent upon for their livelihood, these exploiters enrich themselves and amass great fortunes, live in luxury and splendor.

The Russian workers and peasants have said that this system must go! In its place must come the social ownership of the means of production and distribution. In place of the czars and kaisers of industry who manage the

WORKERS PLAN TO TURN OUT FOR NOV. 7TH

World Revolution Began on Nov. 7, 1917

What many of us seem to forget several times each day is that the revolution is on. It began November 7, 1917. It has continued every minute and day since that date. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is our first triumph over the bourgeoisie.

We now keep close watch upon the clashing imperialisms of the great powers, upon the developing revolutionary independence movements in the Orient, upon several continental countries in which the fields are not as green nor the grass as long for upper class grazing as before the war.

The revolution is on! And in Communist Parties in 43 countries we work unceasingly, hopefully, determinedly—knowing of course, where conditions are more favorable, less favorable, but never knowing exactly when the lightening of an angry revolution ary proletariat may next strike an arrogant but dying expoliting class.

Slogan of Marx—Courage!

The slogan of Marx to the workers in conflict with the exploiters was "Courage, courage, and once again—Courage!" He knew it took valor, a never-say-die spirit for this greatest of all tasks, winning the world for the proletariat. Lenin also knew. The Bolsheviki possessed this nerve and pluck in abundance. And that is why November 7, 1917, marks history as the date upon which a country of 150,000,000 people faced about and challenged the world's exploiters to a ne-

Safe blowers, plying their trade while many policemen were away from beats on duty at the polls made two strikes here last night, according to reports to police today.

Van Sitma Brothers, Michigan boulevard jewellers, reported $20,000 worth of jewels stolen from their store by thieves who broke into an electrical company's store next door and cut their way thru the wall in the Van Sitma establishment.

Other yeggs obtained between $5,000 and $6,000 from a safe which they cracked in the offices of the Royal Blue Stores Co.

FRAME WORKER FOR RAILROAD AS WRECK GOAT

Plot to Send Towerman to Prison

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad is responsible for the death of ten people in the street car-train wreck Sunday morning, Alderman Arthur Albert told the DAILY WORKER.

"The railroad management is playing the usual game of the large corporation," Albert said. "They are trying to send a poor, bewildered towerman to jail for manslaughter. But the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad is responsible for the deaths."

Railroad Violates Laws.

"The railroad has violated an ordinance making it compulsory for them to elevate tracks over street car crossings. This ordinance was passed on Feb. 3, 1893. The violation of it has resulted in many deaths for which the railroad officials are responsible."

John T. Gillick, general manager of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, admitted at the last session of the coroner's inquest that he had never heard of this ordinance in spite of his responsible position with the railroad. Gillick admitted in his testimony that his road had abolished the automatic derailers because "it took too many men to keep the ice cleared away." Alderman Albert brought out that the railroad abolished the automatic safety devices in 1919 because levermen to run these devices cost the railroad company $124.00 a month, whereas the "common laborer," as Gillick put, are paid only $65.00 per month, as towermen.

Sacrifice to Railroad's Greed.

The testimony brot out that John Brahe, the towerman, whom the police and the capitalistic coroner's jury are trying to blame for the railroad's negligence, lost his arm in the service of the railroad. Gillick admitted that towermen are very often "employed by the roadmaster because incapacitated for other service by injury."

Gillick told the jury that he did not think the tracks could be elevated "because the railroad could not afford it." The coroner's jury, led by former Governor Edward F. Dunne, long a corporation lawyer, is aiding the railroad by placing the emphasis on psychology, alcholism, and new ordinances, and ignoring that the wreck was caused by the violation of a long existing ordinance.

Judge Olson Threatens.

When Alderman Albert suggested to the jury that Brahe has been terrified by his long confinement, and should be heard before adjournment, so that he might be gotten out on a writ of habeas corpus or otherwise, Judge Harry M. Olson declared that "Albert should be punished for his remarks, and in a regular court of law he would be punished, too." Olson declared Brahe would most likely be sentenced for manslaughter, and otherwise shielded and defended the railroad company.

The inquest will be resumed today

STRIKEBREAKER COOLIDGE AND OPEN SHOP DAWES IN SADDLE; EXPECTED TO RIDE LABOR HARD

Strikebreaker Coolidge and Open Shop Dawes are in the saddle. Reactionary imperialist capitalism, as predicted by the DAILY WORKER on election morning, has won.

The incomplete returns indicate that the "man on horseback" in the executive branch of the capitalist government will have a comfortable majority whip against opposition in the lower house of the congress in spite of the tack on the saddle by the "still rampant radical bloc" in the senate.

The Workers' Interesting Prospects.

With the world economic situation threatening widespread unemployment and the only relief to it being the promising chance of a great war with Japan and her allies, and frosh reaction riding hard at home, the American working class can be promised an interesting four years.

Five States Doubtful.

Five states are, at the moment of writing, in doubt. These are Arizona, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico and North Dakota.

The only state so far reported giving LaFollette a plurality is his own backyard, Wisconsin. But he still has a chance in Minnesota and North Dakota. In all but the "solid south" of twelve states, where voting is a democratic ritual, the strikebreaker in the White House has received a mandate to stay there and do it some more.

The 69th Congress.

With 1,000 candidates contending for 435 seats in the house of representatives, the returns, altho incomplete, show an increased majority for the republicans in the 69th congress.

In the senate, however, where 32 seats were being contested, the LaFollette bloc promises to hold the balance of power by a narrow margin, altho possibly losing, two of its leading fourflushers, Brookhart and Magnus Johnson.

Mormon Sugar Senator Peeved.

Senator Reed Smoot, after visiting Silent Calvin late at night, expressed a fear of the new senate and said that "in the event the republicans cannot control," he favored "turning the responsibility over to a coalition of democrats and LaFollette insurgents."

Dictatorship Winning Factor.

Everywhere the first line of capitalist outposts, its propagandist machinery of press, pulpit, rostrum and radio swayed the great mass of workers to voting against their own material interests. The club of "hard times" held over the workers if they dared "make a change," is a tremendous factor.

"Force and Violence" When Needed.

When all blandishment and economic intimidation fails, or is even questioned, the capitalist dictatorship showed in the way it treated its own oppositional groups in this election, how murderous and vicious it will be when the revolutionary party of Communism becomes a serious challenge to capitalist rule.

Keeping the Masses Trained.

The suave way of the capitalist press associations and election officials working together have of centering the public eye on the capitalist candidates by simply not reporting the returns or balloting for any others, among them the Communist candidates on the Workers Party ticket, is another instance of how capitalist dictatorship works.

These capitalist agencies control the reporting of statistical returns.

MINNEAPOLIS COMRADE GOES TO LEGISLATURE

Capitalist Press Says Youngdahl Won

By CLARENCE A. HATHAWAY
(Special to the Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 5.—The capitalist press today conceded the election of Emil Youngdahl, Communist candidate for the legislature on a farmer-labor party ticket.

He polled 4,483 votes, despite the stubborn opposition of Robly Cramer, editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review and other labor leaders.

J. F. Emme, Communist, running for congress against the solid opposition of the reactionary labor officials and the capitalist press has polled over thirteen thousand votes so far in St. Paul.

The farmer-labor candidates ran far ahead of LaFollette on returns tabulated yesterday. Coolidge swept the state of Minnesota.

According to all indications, Magnus Johnson, has lost out to Thomas D. Schall, his blind opponent.

RED RUSSIA PROCLAIMS BROAD AMNESTY ON ITS ANNIVERSARY

(By the Federated Press.)

MONTREAL, Can., Nov. 5.—Thousands of Russian political refugees are barred from the benefit of an amnesty proclamation by the Russian government thru America's failure to recognize the Russian government. The amnesty for the Russian government's foes will take effect with the celebration of the seventh anniversary of the present regime November 7.

A. A. Yazikov, special representative for Russia in Canada told the Federated Press that the amnesty order applies only to Russians residing in countries that have accorded diplomatic recognition to his government. This excepts thousands of followers of Denikin, Kolchak, Yudenitch and Wrangel who are now exiled in America, he explained.

The amnesty order, says Yazikov, shows that the new social order in Russia is too strong to be overthrown. All persons coming within the scope of the proclamation will be furnished passports to the home land on presenting themselves to local Russian representatives after November 7 and before June 7 of the following year.

and what votes for Foster the election judges did not steal from the Workers Party have not yet been reported and will not be shown for some time.

Capitalist Arithmetic Helps.

Chicago comrades assigned to watch the polls already report how brazenly the capitalist election machine worked and how, as they expected and observed with some amusement, all protestations were either laughed at or threatened into silence.

These Funny Figures.

The way of election judges with ballots is the eighth wonder of the world. In Chicago congressional contests, for example, the Workers Party votes allowed to be reported were, by districts, as follows: In the 1st, 15 votes; the 4th, 15 votes; the 7th, 355 votes; and in the 9th, 25 votes.

"If You Want to Be Home Tomorrow, You'd Had Better Be Home Tonight."

The "orderly processes of democracy," the "methods of peaceful change" touted by all capitalist apologists, and used as a basis of attack by LaFollette upon the Communists, were exposed as the rankest frauds and the Communists who knew what was coming had many a good laugh at the LaFollette watchers who were scared away by gunmen and hard-boiled election judges. "You've got a wife and kids. Well, if you want to be home with 'em tomorrow, you'd better get to them quick tonight," was the way one bunch of "judges" disposed of a watcher who was "saving labor from (labor's) dictatorship."

Gunmen Busy Marking Blanks.

In other places reports show that ballots were handed over to a bunch of plug-uglies who did their stuff with a pencil and enthusiasm. Then these votes were solemnly "counted." But in many places counting ballots was the last thing the "judges" thought of doing. When Workers Party watchers, who couldn't be scared away, were encountered, judges lovingly settled the matter by saying, "Well, Foster won't be elected anyhow, so we'll give you fifty votes. But, a hell with counting."

A dozen little socialists,
That hoped to keep alive,
Farmer called the coppers,
And then there were five.

Five little socialists,
Looking for the sun;
Along came LaFolette,
Then there were none.

industries for their profits, must come the workers' control and management of industry.

This is the new social order that the workers' government of Russia is building today. It is this new economic basis of society that is being created thru the rule of those who toil and produce wealth.

Before the Russian workers' government lies the ideal of a social system which will give to all those who work and toil in Russia, a high standard of life. The Russian workers want not only food, clothing and shelter, but the opportunity for education, recreation and the establishment of a high culture to all those who are willing to work and serve the new social order.

It is this ideal that is being realized in Soviet Russia thru the might of the Russian workers manifested in the dictatorship of the proletariat which rules that country.

• • • •

The Struggle Against Capitalism.

The capitalists, the world over, are opposed to the new social order that is being built in Soviet Russia. To them it means the loss of their privilege to exploit the workers and amass great wealth for themselves.

It is because of this that the capitalist governments have been fighting Soviet Russia. It is because of this that the American capitalists who control the government at Washington are the bitter enemies of Soviet Russia.

Soviet Russia is a dagger thrust straight at the heart of world capitalism.

It is because the capitalists of all capitalist countries fear that the workers inspired by the victory of the Russian workers will follow in their footsteps that they are maligning, misrepresenting, lying about the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. It is because they fear that the workers of their countries will organize their power, establish a workers' government and begin the task of abolishing capitalism and building the Communist society that they resort to every means to weaken and destroy the Russian workers' government.

The basis of capitalism has been weakened by the World War. The capitalist system is in the period of decline.

The capitalists are struggling desperately to rebuild the industrial system from which they profit. The American capitalists are playing the leading role in this effort. The Dawes' plan is their latest effort to restore capitalism in Europe. Thru this plan the German workers are to be ground down to more bitter poverty, and their enslavement to be the means of placing greater burdens upon the workers of America and the world over.

Down With Capitalism!

Workers of the United States! On this seventh anniversary of the triumph of the Russian workers, join with them in the struggle against world capitalism.

Youth of the United States! The youth of Russia has gained the opportunity to develop in an environment which gives them educational opportunities, recreation and culture and does not chain them to the machine at an early age. Join with the youth of Russia by joining in the struggle against capitalism.

Remember the betrayals of the trade union bureaucrats and social patriots who have allied themselves with the spokesman of the small capitalists, LaFollette, to prevent the workers from carrying on their own political struggles. Learn the lessons of the Russian revolution.

Young Workers! Follow the lead of the revolutionary Russian youth in the organization of the struggle against the bitter exploitation of children, against the menace of new capitalist wars.

The Russian workers' government was established thru the leadership of the Communist Party of Russia. To carry on the fight against capitalism in the United States there must be a powerful mass political party fighting a revolutionary struggle in the interests of the workers. Fighting with this Communist Party there must be an organization of youth who hold aloft the ideal of the new social order among the young people of the land.

The Workers Party of America and the Young Workers' League of America are fighting the battle against capitalism in this country. Come to their aid and join them in the struggle!

The Russian workers are marching forward to the new life.

LONG LIVE THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF THE SOVIET REPUBLIC!

FORWARD TO THE WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES!

DOWN WITH THE DAWES' PLAN!

DOWN WITH THE LAFOLLETTE MOVEMENT!

WAR AGAINST IMPERIALIST WAR!

DOWN WITH CHILD LABOR AND THE EXPLOITATION OF THE YOUTH!

WORKERS, JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA!

YOUTH! YOUNG WORKERS! JOIN THE YOUNG WORKERS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA!

LET US SEND TO THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF RUSSIA THE MESSAGE THAT WE TOO ARE MARCHING FORWARD TO THE WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES AND THE TRANSFORMATION OF CAPITALISM TO COMMUNISM.

Workers Planning to Turn Out for Nov. 7 Celebrations ver-ending struggle for the possession of the world.

"I Did War—Defeat Capitalism.

Outposts are necessary to every battle. And if this is a world struggle then formidable outposts are essential in every country, outposts for revolutionary Russia, which steadily grow in strength until they also take power. In a letter dated October 21, 1917, to St. Petersburg comrades, and while still in hiding, Lenin expressed his hopes, yes, his firm conviction, that the greatest sympathy and unlimited support of the exploited of the whole world would be assured the Bolsheviki as soon as they took power. And in his speech to the Petrograd Soviet on November 7, 1917, he said: "The burning task before us is the liquidation of the world war. But to end the war, it is clear, we must first defeat capitalism. In this the international working class movement will help us."

The fond hope which Lenin carried in his heart in those days, the hope for unlimited support from international labor, has in great part been realized. That Soviet Russia, today, seven years after its birth, still flies the red proletarian banner attests amply to the fact that the great powers, singly or combined, have been unable to again win Russia for the exploiters.

Nov. 7 Mass Celebration.

And still all of labor is not yet aware of the significance of the Russian revolution. And many of our own circle of the faithful forget at times that the revolution is on and being on requires a courage that knows no hesitancy, apathy or defeat.

Therefore the anniversary of the victory of the Russian proletariat is given us so that we may, once each year, and far more than upon any other occasion, renew our spirit, our perseverance, our hopes. The seventh anniversary of the Russian revolution is with us. Seventy-five major mass demonstrations have been organized in this country to win the proletariat for the revolution, to inspire us for it.

It becomes the revolutionary task of every comrade to add his every ounce of energy to make the demonstration in his city a challenge to the exploiters, a mass celebration of workers.

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER is not moving into the White House on March 4, and Benjamin Gitlow will not be able to take a trip down the Potomac on the Mayflower. Jim Cannon will not be obliged to move to Albany. William F. Dunne may pay an occasional visit to Springfield, but Small will continue to rifle the state treasury. Let him be to it. J. Louis Engdahl did not congratulate his victorious opponent, Charles Deneen and he does not intend to. Our candidates did not win this time and they never expect to get elected by capitalist ballots. But when the robber class loses the right to vote, then, there will be no Coolidge landslide. There will be a landslide that will bury the capitalist system.

Coolidge Wins But the Communists Step Into a Strategic Position

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, LaFollette sits midst the wreckage of his house of cards. His political deals have all gone awry.

He set out in his Don Quixote attack on the republican and democratic citadels of Wall Street by attempting the destruction of the Farmer-Labor movement for independent political action of city and land workers. He has ended not in personal aggrandizement, as he expected, but in his own humiliating defeat.

Under the slogan of "Get something now!" his supporters from Gompers to Hillquit, promised much. The organization of the class power of labor was held an Utopian dream. The fight of the Communists for the farmer-labor party was anathema to the place hunters of the third party movement.

• • • •

LaFollette lives at Maple Bluff Farm; prompting some jokester to exclaim that instead of "Fighting Bob" it should be the "Wisconsin Bluff." Certainly the LaFollette wreckage that lies strewn over the land indicates that the Wisconsin senator built a big fire under a boiler with very little water in it.

He has carried his own state; perhaps North Dakota. That is all. Coolidge swept Minnesota with its two Farmer-Labor U. S. senators; both LaFollette campaigners. When Johnson and Shipstead betrayed the Farmer-Labor movement of Minnesota, especially at the June 17th conference, they threw the doors wide open to republican victory in their state.

• • • •

The corporation lawyer, U. S. Senator Walsh, in Montana, endorsed by LaFollette's running mate, U. S. Senator Wheeler, as against the Farmer-Labor candidate, is elected. But instead of LaFollette carrying the state, the democratic votes cast for Walsh knifed the LaFollette ticket and went to Coolidge instead. Wheeler double-crossed his own crowd. In turn he was double-crossed.

In Illinois the LaFollette campaigners were found at all times clinging to the coattails of Governor Len Small, in company with the Ku Klux Klan. Len Small is re-elected, to be sure, but he carries the state in company with Coolidge, not LaFollette. The LaFollette total in Illinois will not run far ahead of the highest socialist vote, in the big years, while this year the socialist vote has almost disappeared.

In New York City the victory went to Al Smith, for re-election as governor on the democratic ticket; while Coolidge, republican, carried the state by nearly a million. The Gompers' labor fakers in New York, spawn of Tammany Hall, crawled aboard Al's band wagon just in time to escape the LaFollette debacle. In New York state, as in Illinois, the LaFollette vote will not run far away from big socialist results in the early days of the war. But the New York socialists also suffered disaster. No members of congress. No members of the state legislature. Total obliteration!

But one must turn to Wisconsin to witness the big effect of the LaFollette-socialist alliance on the socialist party in that state. Thru his deal with LaFollette, Vic Berger is returned to congress, the lone socialist. But everywhere else disaster is visited upon the socialist candidates. The Milwaukee County socialist ticket is beaten. Leo Krzycki, socialist candidate for the second Milwaukee district, is defeated for congress. The socialist ticket in the state was running a crippled third, not within hailing distance of socialist totals cast in the state in previous years.

• • • •

LaFollette's joust with the windmill of capitalist politics is therefore featured by three results:

First: The Wisconsin senator did not cut into the republican party, as did the Roosevelt insurrection in 1912. At last reports the Coolidge landslide was running close to the Harding victory in 1920. Wall Street held its pride, the G. O. P., intact against LaFollette's assaults.

Second: If LaFollette won any appreciable middle class support it came from the democratic party, long a refuge for little business. But even here the LaFollette inroads were not great. Tammany Hall held its own in New York. Tom Taggart lost nothing in Indiana. "Boss" Brennan held the democrats together in Illinois, in face of defeat. The Solid South remained loyal to the Jeffersons and Jasksons of the donkey party. In spite of many pre-election claims LaFollette made not the slightest dent below the Mason and Dixon line.

Third: The bulk of the LaFollette vote without doubt came from workers and farmers who were ready for independent political action. It was this movement that LaFollette and Gompers, Johnston and Stone, Hillquit and Berger, sidetracked into an imaginary "third party" movement. Their leadership has brought these masses up against the proverbial stone wall at the end of their blind alley venture. It is against this stone wall that the LaFollette "third party" and the Hillquit-Berger "socialist" party will go to pieces rapidly, now that the workers and farmers stand completely disillusioned with the passing of Election Day.

• • • •

The LaFollette-Gompers-Hillquit attack on independent political action, with its betrayal into a "third party" movement, has given class action of the workers and farmers a big setback.

But the after-the-election disillusionment must awaken the city and land workers to their real needs. They will get on the right track.

They will learn that the Communists were right. They will find that the "red baiters" in the labor movement were wrong. Increased numbers will accept Communist leadership.

In this campaign many self-confessed friends of labor were put to the test and found sorely wanting. They were unmasked as labor's worst enemies.

The line of demarcation has been drawn as between labor and little business. The workers have won some slight victory in this election if they have learned to cut loose from all political connections with the capitalist social order. Then there will be a great impetus, to the work immediately ahead, of building the class power of all who labor and are oppressed under capitalism.

Coolidge and capitalism won this election. But enlightened labor inspired by Communism has been placed in a favorable strategic position for future struggles.

NEW YORK WILL CELEBRATE 7TH YEAR ON FRIDAY

Anniversary Meeting at Central Opera House

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 5.—The completion of the seventh victorious year of the Russian Revolution will be celebrated next Friday evening with music and oratory at two meetings—Central Opera House, 67th St. and Third Ave., New York, and Amalgamated Temple, Arlon Place, Brooklyn.

Gitlow, Olgin and Others.

The program for the Central Opera House meeting is announced as follows: Speakers: Ben Gitlow, Moissaye J. Olgin, Juliet S. Poyntz, E. Radzi, Jack Stachel. Music: Freiheit Singing Society and Russian Quartet: Arcadia Berkenholtz, violin virtuoso, David Crenatelu, second violinist, Harry Dick, cellist, George Halpern, pianist.

Brooklyn Program.

At the Amalgamated Temple the program will be: Speakers: W. W. Weinstone, Ludwig Lore, Schachna Epstein, E. Elston, L. Prusiehn. Music: Lithuanian Aldo Chorus, Workmen's Circle (at large) Mandolin Orchestra, Constance Menkel-Januska, soprano.

Every class conscious worker in New York should attend one of these meetings Friday, Nov 7, and rejoice with his comrades over the success of the first Workers' Republic. Every class conscious worker should not only come himself, but bring another along to be inspired for the struggle that is ahead. With these meetings begins the new campaign of the Workers Party, which does not go to sleep after election as other parties do, but goes right ahead with the campaign to establish a Workers' Soviet Republic here in America.

Said Lenin

"No amount of condemnation and lies will be able to do away with the great historical fact that it was for the first time in hundreds and thousands of years that the oppressed slaves have risen in their anger and have declared that they are not going to fight the battles of their masters.

"It was for the first time in thousands of years that the vague and blind instincts of the masses found their expression in a clear-cut political program, in an organized struggle of millions of oppressed under the leadership of the proletariat, which resulted in the first victory of the working class and the victory of the Russian Proletariat.

"This first victory is not yet the final victory. We have made many mistakes. We are not afraid to admit it. We shall continue to study our experiences soberly and impartially in order to improve our weapon of struggle against world capitalism.

"We know we have only made a beginning. The triumphant end is yet to come. And altho we cannot say precisely when and in what country the proletariat will make the next decisive step, THERE IS ONE THING WE DO KNOW—AND THAT IS, THAT THE ICE IS BROKEN, THE WAY HAS BEEN SHOWN TO THE WORKERS OF THE WORLD HOW TO FIGHT CAPITALISM AND ESTABLISH THE RULE OF THE WORKING CLASS."—N. The Coolidge "Landslide"

The expected has happened. The reactionary republican party has carried the election. Coolidge and Dawes will now direct the capitalist cause for the coming four years.

It is yet too soon to tell the exact number of votes the various candidates polled. But one can already safely estimate the significance of the results of the contest. The superior political organization, the unexcelled publicity machine, the unlimited financial resources of the upper crust of our ruling class have carried the day. The employing class control and ownership of the workers' jobs was never more ruthlessly utilized than in this election. In no previous campaign was money more lavishly expended by the biggest business interests than in this campaign. The slogan of "cash or chaos" has won.

The disastrous showing made by the democrats under the leadership of Davis was a foregone conclusion. Widely touted as a candidate of reaction, Mr. Davis could not make as effective an appeal as Coolidge for a multitude of reasons. First of all, the employing class could not and would not so readily invest their resources in removing Coolidge from the White House and placing in his stead one just as black. There is no use in disturbing machinery when it runs smoothly was the belief of the bankers and manufacturers who run the country. Then, the lower layers of the owning class, which as a rule are in the democratic fold, certainly could not be attracted to Davis by his record and campaign.

Present indications point to surprisingly small strength for the so-called LaFollette progressive party. Between the LaFollette assurances not to disturb anything fundamentally, not to resort to any "radical changes," and the republican and democratic pleas to save the constitution and continue or restore prosperity, the inertia of the great mass of voters could not but come into play heavily in behalf of those who would have things remain unchanged and untouched. The dismal failure of the LaFollette party to approach having even the slightest influence in the electoral college will only tend to lend further confusion to the chaos already prevailing in the Babylon of the self-styled progressives. The failure of the LaFollette movement to carry certain sure northwestern states will go a long way toward divorcing a large section of the masses who were misled into the Wisconsin senator's camp and toward promoting genuine class political organization amongst the exploited workers and poor farmers.

In so far as the Communists are concerned this campaign is to be judged not by the number of votes officially recorded for the Workers Party by the bosses' political machine. It is to be judged solely by the opportunity afforded the Communists to utilize the election campaign for bringing their program to the masses and for enhancing the cause of Communism amongst these masses. With this as our criterion, the election campaign has proved of considerable aid in helping build a powerful Communist Party in the United States.

Lessons in Democracy

For many months nearly 20,000 Filipino sugar workers have been on strike in Hawaii. These workingmen rose in revolt against the American sugar barons among whom is to be found United States Governor Farrington of the islands. The working and living conditions of the Filipino wage slaves on the sugar plantations are too deplorable, too gruesome to face description.

As soon as these brave Filipino workers declared their strike they were immediately subjected to all the vicious blessings, to all the lessons in the purest of American democracy. First of all, they were evicted. Secondly scabs were brought in in great numbers. Thirdly, the courts were brought into play against them. Last and worst, the entire military power of the U. S. government in the islands was mobilized against them. The workingmen were jailed, clubbed and hounded.

Recently matters took a most serious turn. Failing in their attempt to drive the Filipino strikers into submission, the American capitalists openly resorted to unrestrained violence against the workingmen. Pablo Manlapit, the leader of the strikers, in discussing the brutal attack made by the armed gunmen of the United States government on the Filipino strikers, has declared that the dead and wounded workingmen were shot in the backs. The hospitals in the neighborhood of Liube, Hawaii, have, since mid-September, been crowded with defenseless strikers who were wounded by the strike-breaking military forces. The United States government is now making an attempt, thru acting Adjutant-General Bolton, to collect from the sugar planters the 3,000 odd dollars which were expended in the murderous strike-breaking expedition.

The wholesale wounding and slaughtering of Filipino strikers in Hawaii should rouse every workingman and poor farmer in the United States to immediate effective protest. The words of Karl Marx that no country can be free as long as it is ruled by a government which oppresses other people and countries, are brought out in their painful truthfulness in this incident. Likewise the Filipino nationalist leaders should not lose this opportunity to unmask and denounce the Yankee imperialists as hangmen of defenseless colonial peoples.

November 7th

This issue of The DAILY WORKER is one of the two editions gotten out this year to celebrate the greatest event to the working class in all history. That event is of greater significance to the workers of the world, including American, than anything that could happen on November 4, except the establishment of a Soviet Republic in the United States.

The class conscious workers of America, who are not carried away by the LaFollette illusion, or the Coolidge illusion, will celebrate November 7 as the day on which the first working-class government in the history of the human race was founded. They will come together in mass meetings thruout the country, listen to speeches, telling the story of the Russian revolution, distribute literature and coin the enthusiasm engendered at those meetings into members for the Workers Party, and new readers for The DAILY WORKER.

This issue of The DAILY WORKER will reach thousands of exploited all over the United States. On the heels of the victory of Teapot Dome government at the polls, this special edition will raise the hope of those who are depressed and urge the workers on to battle for their freedom in the only way it can be won, by fighting the capitalists with the object of overthrowing their robber system and organizing a workers' and farmers' government.

Congratulating the Victor

With the transmission of congratulations by John W. Davis to Coolidge, even the shouting of the campaign is over.

The mere congratulation by itself is a formality. No one considers it in any other light. But in view of certain events which transpired in recent weeks, the contents of the Davis congratulation to Coolidge are instructive. The disgracefully defeated democratic candidate now expresses the hope that the Coolidge administration "may by its success ensure the welfare of the country."

We wonder what happened to all the long speeches of Mr. Davis urging the voters not to endorse Coolidge because of his failure to measure up to the democratic standard of "common honesty" amongst big capitalist thieves. We wonder whether Mr. Davis would have the world believe that the overwhelming endorsement accorded Coolidge by the mass of misled, confused and cajoled voters has made him honest over night.

The Davis telegram of congratulation merely adds further evidence to the truth of our contention that in the mud-slinging contest between the democrats and republicans the country was treated merely to another case of the teapot calling the kettle black. When Davis speaks of the "success and welfare" of the country, he has in mind precisely the success and welfare of the uppermost group of the employing class which has engineered the return of Coolidge to the White House. When Coolidge answers Davis and appreciates "the patriotic sentiments" of his political adversary of yesterday, he is merely chiming in with the sentiments directed towards the success and welfare of the monarchs of American finance and industry who rule this country.

This incident illustrates the indisputable truth of the essential unity of class interests between the democrats and the republicans. We now expect that Mr. LaFollette will run true to his color and also transmit congratulations to Mr. Coolidge on his sweeping victory. This would complete the entente cordiale of the standard bearers of American capitalism. It would put the finishing touches on the political picture as it appears today after the election campaign. As a good patriot and loyal citizen, LaFollette will in all liklihood not delay long in joining the Davis prayer for the success of Coolidge and reaction.

The qualifications of an election judge are now known. It is to be able to count up as far as three. That makes three political parties recognized. Then divide the total vote cast between the three by shooting dice for the first and record place. Some people think the workers can win this way. Funny, isn't it?

Coolidge attributes his election to a "divine providence." But we remember that his campaign manager, Wm. Morgan Butler, is a textile multi-millionaire of New Bedford, Massachusetts, who got rich by working girls and men, also, for from $6 to $15 a week.

LaFollette can now feel himself given a mandate by the nation to lay himself away beside old King Tut. But Tut, poor chap, was really a progressive compared to the Wisconsin crawfish.

Those liberty bells, those liberty bells,
How many a yarn the darn things tell,
Of votes and jobs and lots of jack,
But, drat the luck, look at that crack!

WORKERS PARTY CELEBRATES END OF BIG CAMPAIGN

Communist Candidates Give Impressions

It was a Coolidge landslide. Silent Cal roped in the moron vote. There was much noise on the streets of the Windy City. In the G. O. P. headquarters there was rejoicing. Teapot Dome had won.

In the democratic headquarters there was gloom. Ditto for theLaFollette headquarters. But there was one bright spot in Chicago where an election victory was not celebrated, but rather the end of a splendid Communist campaign. That spot was Imperial Hall.

On short notice, an advertisement in the November 4 issue of The DAILY WORKER, hundreds of Workers Party members gathered to hear the election returns and listen to snappy speeches from leading party workers and those who carried the Communist banner in the campaign.

Singing and Eats.

It was not all speeches either. There was the singing of the International, and also snappy Communist campaign ballads by two members of the Junior League. There was roast beef, sandwiches and coffee.

The comrades who did the hard work of the campaign in Chicago were satisfied that they did their work well and the various speakers dwelt on the tremendous organizational and propaganda value of the campaign to the Workers Party.

Comrade William Z. Foster spoke briefly on his impressions of the election campaign and particularly the condition in which the bureaucrats of the American Federation of Labor find themselves in now. He declared the prospects for building up the Workers (Communist) Party were bright.

Socialist Party Hard Hit.

Comrade Cannon, back from New York, where he ran for governor, told of the splendid fight made by our party there, practically delivering a solar plexus blow to the socialist party, which is smashed in the LaFollette entanglements and has completely turned its back on the class struggle and every form of working class independent political action.

Max Shachtman, Arne Swabeck, Alfred Wagenknecht, Sam Hammersmark, Walt Carmon and Joseph Manley made short talks. After the speaking, dancing was enjoyed and then we all walked out into the cool air and learned that we must keep Kool with Koolidge for four more years.

RALLY LABOR IN NEW STRUGGLES

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

RAMSAY MACDONALD tried the same stunt in the British elections that LaFollette tried here in America. Both failed disastrously. They expected to win the favor of the capitalist class, by denouncing the Communists. The capitalist press gave these denunciations wide publicity and took advantage of them to point out that Communism was so wicked that not even LaFollette could stand for it. But the big capitalists pointed out that they prefer politicians who are 100 per cent for them and who defend their system from all attack, than those who attack them in order to win favor with the masses.

CAPITALISM in America is not yet in a condition which would force it to use a LaFollette to pull its chestnuts out of the fire for it. It is strong and confident, so strong in fact that not even the most brazen orgy of corruption in the history of American politics had any damaging effects on its fortunes. This proves that the masses are not political puritans or worshippers of abstract ideals. They believe the G. O. P. can bring them prosperity and that a change of government would mean greater unemployment and a shutting down of factories.

"WE have the factories, the banks, the railroads, in fact everything," declared the G. O. P. strategists in effect. "Elect Coolidge and Dawes or prepare for the bread line." The masses have a holy terror of unemployment as well they might, but they are suffering from an illusion that will bring misery and woe in its train, when they expect Coolidge and Dawes to keep the factories open, if there are no markets. The workers will ultimately learn that they can get nothing from the capitalist parties but promises and nothing from the capitalists but slavery and exploitation.

IT seems that the "LaFollette Illusion" was but a puling infant compared to the Coolidge illusion. Silent Cal received 18,000,000 votes, while LaFollette received only four million. Granted that at least the G. O. P. stole one million votes from Bob, this leaves Cal thirteen millions ahead of the Wisconsin senator. LaFollette polled the so-called progressive vote, out-

RAILROAD PUTS WRECK BLAME ON WATCHMAN

First He Was Drunk, Now He's Moron!

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad violated two city ordinances and one state law, in addition to illegal management previously disclosed, testimony at the coroner's inquest at City Hall on the train wreck which killed ten people disclosed yesterday.

Evidently despairing of proving that Watchman John Brahe was drunk while on duty, those who are trying to hide the criminal negligence of the railroad, switched their attack, and put Dr. Hickson on the stand.

Alienist Attacks Workers'

Dr. Hickson, who aided Darrow to save the necks of Leopold and Loeb, called Brahe a "high grade moron, with the mentality of an 11even and a half year old child."

Bernard McGraw, one of the brakemen who was on the train which crashed into the trolley on a North Ave. crossing last week, declared the company officials did not give the trainmen any information or instructions about the city and state laws which the railroad violated. The testimony of McGraw and several other switchmen revealed that the freight train was 58 cars long, each car being approximately 40 feet long.

Thus the city ordinance declaring that no freight trains more than 20 cars long shall be switched, and another city ordinance that no freight train longer than 700 feet shall be switched, were both ignored by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, and no information was given to the employes that these ordinances existed and were being violated. The freight which crashed into the trolley was approximately 2,320 feet long or 1,620 feet longer than the limit fixed by the city ordinance.

John C. Steinhofer, 819 Center Ave., another brakeman on the train which

The Spirit of the Revolution

The Results of the Elections

Statement by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party

THE victory of reaction in the elections strengthens big capital in the seat of power in the United States. It demonstrates the tremendous power of the ruling class, thru its machinery for moulding opinion, the press, the radio, etc., combined with the ability to manipulate the economic factors of society, to compel the masses to follow its lead. The economic basis for the victory of reaction was, to a considerable extent, the slight revival in agriculture and industry, enlarged and magnified by capitalist manipulation and publicity. The election demonstrates also the cowardice and political the weakness of middle classes, which, altho dissatisfied with the hegemony of big capital, and in spite of their grievances produced by the agrarian and industrial crises for which the republican party offered no remedy, refused to follow even such a mild course of protest as the one expressed by the LaFollette movement. It further demonstrated the complete inability of the official leadership of the labor movement to enthuse the working class for any kind of action. Big capital has thereby completed its task of mobilizing its forces for continued oppression and exploitation of the working masses. It is now the duty of the workers and poor farmers to awaken to the real state of affairs and to begin the mobilization of their own forces for the struggle against their oppressors.

In the election the interests of the working class were fought for only by the Workers Party. Only the Communists held aloft the banner of the proletarian revolution. For the first time in history Communism was an issue in a national election campaign, represented by an organized Communist Party. In this sense the election was a great step forward, a great victory for the revolutionary movement of the workers, for the world revolution.

The election has furnished striking justification of the policies of the Workers Party, and complete confirmation of the correctness of the advice of the Communist International. It placed the Workers Party in the forefront of the struggle as the representative of the interests of the working class, gave it political experience, established it before the masses, gave it an exceedingly good opportunity to present its program to hundreds of thousands of workers. None of these things would have been accomplished in anything like the same degree should the campaign have been carried out under the name and with the program of a farmer-labor party that was rapidly becoming non-existent. While the Communist vote will be small, this can be no measure, in this campaign particularly, of the importance of the campaign. It is well known also that the capitalist dictatorship in America will never count Communist votes.

An outstanding feature of the election result is its demonstration of the extent to which the capitalist press controls the minds of the masses. This is seen in its ability to magnify the insignificant little strikebreaker, Coolidge, into an heroic figure. Luckily for the success of this object of the capitalist class, Coolidge talked very little in the campaign, but still the creation of the myth of the "strong, silent leader" around this petty servant of capitalism, is a great testimonial to the power of the capitalist press.

The slogan of "Coolidge or chaos" was undoubtedly effective in terrorizing great masses of voters. It was a threat against the working class that industry would be closed down and millions more of workers would be added to the ranks of the unemployed, were Coolidge not elected. At the same time it served notice upon the middle classes that their only protection against the rising of the working class, against the spectre of Communism, was to be found in a strong, militant, "open shop," strikebreaking, reactionary government of big capital, personified in Coolidge and Dawes. In the absence of arguments that could convince the masses of these things otherwise the arguments of terrorization were quite effective. The capitalist dictatorship is prepared to use terrorism much more drastic than this if necessary for its continued rule.

The reactionary officialdom of the labor movement, which only with the greatest reluctance, and under severe pressure, broke with the old parties in this campaign, and which itself is responsible in a large measure for Coolidge's victory, may now be expected to try to convince the workers that even the middle-class revolt is hopeless and that they must return to the back door of the old party councils, there to beg for crumbs in the time-honored Gompersian manner.

Among large sections of the working class there will appear a dangerous tendency to deprecate all kinds of political action as futile, as leading nowhere, a tendency resulting in complete indifference and abstention on their part from political action. The fact that the LaFollette movement, supported by these workers, altho objectively a movement of the middle classes, the well-to-do farmers, and certain sections of the labor aristocracy, failed to get the expected mass support in the election, will undoubtedly create a spirit of pessimism as regards the possibility of creating a new mass party within the frame of "democratic" capitalist government. Among some sections of militant workers it will strengthen the syndicalist tendencies of conscious opposition to working-class participation in politics. All of these reactions—the Gompers' return to the old parties, the rank and file indifference, and the syndicalist opposition to politics—alike play into the hands of big capital. We warn the workers against all of them equally.

To permit Gompers and his lieutenants to switch the labor movement back to the old capitalist parties would be to leave the working class at the mercy of its worst enemies. Indifference and abstention from political action means the voluntary withdrawal from the most important field of struggle, which is tantamount to surrender to capitalism. The syndicalist tendency, altho dictated by a healthy reaction against the illusions of parliamentarism, yet strengthens the reactionary elements in the labor movement and thereby plays into the hands of labor's worst enemies.

The demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement, as compared to the pre-election estimates of all sides, not only seriously retards the development of the so-called "third party," but also completely eliminates the immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer-labor party of industrial workers and poor farmers, distinct from the Workers Party. A general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan of "For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party," would not be profitable or successful. The policy of applying the united front tactic by attempting to form a mass farmer-labor party of which the Workers Party would be a part, is not adaptable to the present period. Our chief task in the immediate future is not the building of such a farmer-labor party but the strengthening and developing of the Workers Party itself as the practical leader of the masses and as the only party that represents the working-class interests and knows how to fight for them. The best means to this end is to agitate and fight for the united front from below with the rank and file workers in their daily struggles, in the spirit of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International.

This election will be interpreted by the strikebreaker Coolidge, and the "open shop" per" Dawes, as a mandate to crush the labor movement of America and to extend the rule of Morgan-Rockefeller capitalism abroad. It will be taken as a blank check, drawn upon the American working class, for increased exploitation, for lower wages, for longer hours, for persecution of militants, for breaking up of unions, for intensification of imperialism and militarism, for preparation of new wars, and for every

WORKERS PARTY C. E. C. ISSUES APPEAL TO WORKING CLASS TO PREPARE FOR BIGGER BATTLES

Declaring that the victory of Coolidge and Dawes, the outstanding spokesmen of open shop strikebreaking capitalism, was the victory of Wall Street, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, issued a statement calling on the workers and farmers to "awaken to the real state of affairs and begin the mobilization of their own forces for the struggle against their oppressors."

The statement declares that the basis of the republican party victory was in a considerable degree due to the slight revival in agriculture and to their ability to manipulate the machinery for moulding public opinion, thru press, radio, pulpit and the thousand and one means at their disposal.

The cowardice and weakness of the middle classes, did not allow them to follow even such a mild form of protest as that represented by LaFollette. The official leadership of the labor movement failed to enthuse the masses for any kind of action.

Carried Revolutionary Banner.

"In the election," continues the statement, "the interests of the working class were fought for, only by the Workers Party. Only the Communists held aloft the banner of working class struggle and working class solidarity, the banner of the proletarian revolution. For the first time in history Communism was an issue in a nation al election campaign, represented by an organized Communist Party. In this sense the election was a great step forward, a great victory for the revolutionary movement of the workers, for the world revolution.

Policies Justified.

"The election has furnished striking justification of the policies of the Workers Party, and complete confirmation of the correctness of the advice of the Communist International. It placed the Workers Party in the forefront of the struggle as the representative of the interests of the working class, gave it political experience, established it before the masses, gave it an exceedingly good opportunity to present its program to hundreds of thousands. None of these things would have been accomplished in anything like the same degree should the campaign have been carried out under the name and with the program of a farmer-labor party that was rapidly becoming non-existent. . ."

The Communist statement points out that the workers were terrorized by the employers with threats of closing down the industries unless Coolidge was elected. The little insignificant strikebreaker was magnified into an heroic figure. The middle class-

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 6.—Communist candidate, Comrade Biell, from the Los Angeles 66th assembly district, surprised everyone by polling 1,400 votes.

The Workers Party in this city ended the campaign of Communist education in the capitalist elections with great enthusiasm. Many speakers were out, including Comrades Schneiderman of the Young Workers League, A. Levin, Fred Biedenkamp and Mother Bloor.

On Monday, the big anniversary celebration of the Bolshevik revolution was very successful. Comrades Minor and Bloor were the speakers. Ninety Workers' Monthlies were sold to the packed house, which greeted the seventh birthday of proletarian victory with joy and applause.

CAL'S VICTORY ENTHUSES U. S. IMPERIALISTS

LaFolletteites Are Taking Heavy Flop

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Imperialist capitalism is sitting pretty. With a nonentity for president whose road from a bad bill-collecting back country lawyer to the chief executive's chair was made easy by breaking a strike of policemen, and insured by a dish of bum crab meat eaten by "Normalcy" Harding, Wall Street is in high feather and stocks and bonds are climbing higher every hour. There has, however, been no increases of wages announced.

Same Crowd in the House.

The presidential race has been settled. The only little corner left the LaFollette crowd is the U. S. senate. In the house of mis-representatives the old guard will hold 'er down with the old republican majority.

The parcel of fake insurgents LaFollette endorsed were returned to their old places. Nothing more. They will still be able to get much out of big business for little business even by combining with the democrats.

The LaFollette group of twenty, including the yellow socialist Berger, and consisting chiefly of 16 disgruntled republicans, even if they form a coalition with the democrats, can muster only 206 as against an old guard line-up of 229. That's that.

The Senate Line-Up.

In the senate it looks like 54 republicans, 41 democrats and one phoney "farmer-laborite." In this republican majority, of course, are listed the vacillating middle class elements. The margin of straight reactionary control is so slim that at times the LaFollette tribe may be able to get something across. And then again, maybe not.

The LaFollette bloc is preening itself on the alleged ability to throw Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa out of the position of presiding officer of the senate in the second session which opens next month. Cummins is a bitter foe of Brookhart.

As to Brookhart, this timid son of the golden standard west is leading by the skin of his teeth against his democratic opponent, Steck, in Iowa. The

SAM AND CAL IN UNITED FRONT AGAINST REDS

Gompers Joins Legion in 'Education' Week

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—The American Federation of Labor and the Fascist American Legion of scabs have joined hands in boosting "Education Week," proposed by the United States government of Cal Coolidge as a means of starting a campaign against the "Reds."

Vice-President Matthew Woll of the A. F. of L., has sent out letters to every affiliated body urging that class collaboration be not up with the capitalists against the Communists to put across "Education Week"—a week to be devoted to attacking Communists. The strike-breakers of the American Legion are to be co-operated with as much as possible, orders Woll.

The Gompers family has maintained the most disgraceful relations with the legion for the past year, and it is certain that the labor fakers will have their machine oiled up, so that at El Paso, these crimes against the workers will be approved and ordered continued.

es were scared with the spectre of Communism.

Seek Stairs Politics.

The failure of Gompersism to lead the workers behind the LaFollette banner may be the signal for another procession to the back doors of the old parties. Other sections of the workers will become disgusted as a result of the Coolidge victory and will display a tendency to shun political action altogether.

The Workers Party strongly warns the workers against these tendencies. Abstentation from politics on the part of the workers means surrendering the field to the enemy.

"The demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement," the statement continues, "as compared to the pre-election estimates of all sides, not only seriously retards the development of the so-called 'third party,' but also completely eliminates the immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer-labor of industrial workers and poor farmers, distinct from the Workers Party. A general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan of 'For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party,' would not be profitable or successful."

Party's Chief Task.

The chief task of the Workers Party now, the statement declares, is to develop the party as the practical leader of the masses and "as the only party that represents the working class interests and knows how to fight for them." To this end a united front from below is urged in the spirit of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International.

The declaration calls on the workers to militantly struggle against the boaser. The open shoppers will look upon the Coolidge victory as a mandate to crush labor. Industrial unionism thru amalgamation, and shop committees are urged, and the workers are called on to struggle for the immediate protection of the labor movement and for its advancement and that the Workers Party is the only organized center for such a struggle.

BALDWIN NAMES HIS CABINET: IT'S ALL-TORY

Jobs Are Scarcer Than Applicants

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Premier-Designate Stanley Baldwin completed the formation of his tory cabinet this evening and sent the names to King George for approval.

It will be an "all tory" cabinet.

Earlier in the day there had been reports that Baldwin was meeting with obstacles over the surplus of candidates for some of the ministerial posts.

The Cabinet Lineup.

Baldwin was expected to announce the cabinet personnel tonight. It is understood that it will include Austin Chamberlain as foreign minister; Neville Chamberlain will be minister of the public health; Lord Birkenhead secretary of Indian affairs, Lieutenant Colonel Leopold Armory secretary for the colonies and E. F. L. Wood, secretary of agriculture."

Tory headquarters intimate that Baldwin invited Sir Robert Horne to be chancellor of the exchequer, but the directors of Baldwin's steel works refused to release Sir Robert to serve in the cabinet which will be headed by the principal owner of the works.

Churchill Chancellor.

Winston Churchill will be chancellor of the exchequer according to the London Evening Standard. The Standard says that Horne was offered the labor ministry but refused. It criticised Baldwin for not offering him a higher post.

Lord Curzon has accepted the post of lord president of the council, the Standard continues, Lord Cave, lord chancellorship, Sir Samuel Hoare, air ministry, Sir Douglas Hogg, the attorney generalship, and Sir Thomas Inskip, the post of solicitor general.

Sir A. Steel Maitland has accepted the labor ministry, according the Standard.

Following is the official list of the new cabinet:

Chancellor of the Exchequer—Winston Churchill.

Foreign Secretary—Austen Chamberlain.

Lord Chancellor—Viscount Cave.

First Lord of the Admiralty—Right Hon. W. C. Bridgeman.

Home Secretary—Sir William Joynson-Hicks.

Secretary of War— Sir Leming Worthington-Evans.

Secretary of India—Lord Birkenhead.

Secretary for the Colonies—Lieut.-Col. Amery.

President of the Council—Lord Curzon.

Attorney General—Sir Douglas M. Hogg.

Air Minister—Sir Samuel Hoare.

Labor Minister—Sir A. Steel-Maitland.

Agriculture—E. F. L. Wood.

Minister of Public Health—Neville Chamberlain.

Minister of Education—Lord Percy.

President of the Board of Trade—Sir Phillip Libyd-Graeme.

side of the class conscious vote for Foster. But is quite clear that millions of workers voted for Coolidge out of fear, that an election deadlock would bring "bad times."

THIS election shows at what a low level the class consciousness of the masses is in America. The expectations of a greater revolt against Big Business has not materialized. The "people" did not get seriously excited over the sale of the Teapot Dome and the Naval Oil reserves. That was graft, at its worst, but graft is inseparable from capitalism and the American citizen hardly ever asks the question: "How did you get it?" To get caught is the principal crime.

WHAT the political influence of Sam Gompers really amounts to was exposed in this election. It is almost nil. He neither gave money nor votes to LaFollette, yet the latter, who is supposed to be a political strategist of the first order, issued his denunciation of the June 17, farmer-labor convention, thus giving that promising movement a very damaging blow, on the threat of Gompers' displeasure and in order to win the favor of the middle classes and small capitalists. But if LaFollette had endorsed the Communist movement, the big fellows could not have flayed him any more viciously than they did.

DR. Melamed, editor of the Jewish Daily Courier, commenting on the death of the Zionist leader, Dr. Shencken, in the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul grade crossing disaster, pointed out that Soviet commissars were living allowing his readers to draw the inference that this was very unfair, while an estimable person like Dr. Shencken died. We have no particular reason to desire the demise of either Drs. Melamed or Shencken, but it would not surprise us, granting that the Doctor's god is not as big a joke as the Doctor himself, to learn that god took special care of Soviet commissars who are very useful people, and had no time to waste looking after Zionist panhandlers and other freaks of nature who eke out a living acting the part of pied pipers of capitalism.

NO doubt Dr. Melamed has a god of some kind on his waiting list. Why not put it up squarely to him, that he wants speedy action on the hated Soviet commissars. If the good Lords is dilitent to kill Russian commissars at railroad crossing, there is nothing to prevent him from using his thunderbolts. If he will not do even this it looks bad for Melamed. He may have to brave the Cheka like Boris Savinkoff, instead of fighting the Bolshevikki from Chicago.

caused the tragedy, admitted that the air brakes on the freight train were not in use. He was not informed, he declared, that a state law requires the use of "brakes for the control of the speed of a train by the engineer, without requiring the brakeman to use the hand brakes." The air brakes on the train were not in use, thus violating the state law. Including the city ordinance which requires the railroad to elevate street car crossings, the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has hus far been exposed as violating four laws when the accident occured.

Job Shoved on Him.

Attorney Oscar A. Kropf announced to Coroner Oscar Wolf, who has just been re-elected on the Coolidge ticket, that he is now "acting at the request of Harry Olson, one of the jurors, to protect John Brahe in his constitutional rights."

Kropf did not seem to relish the job, as he commented to friends that "the job of protecting the poor imbecent Brahe has been shoved on me."

Kropf told the DAILY WORKER that he cannot say whether he will ask for a writ of heabus corpus until the jury brings in a verdict. "So far nothing against Brahe has been brot out," said Kropf to the DAILY WORKER.

Dr. Hickson admitted on the witness stand that there was no evidence of "recent acute alcoholism," when he examined Brahe on Wednesday. "If Brahe had been drunk on the night of the accident I would have known it. In my opinion he was not drunk," said Dr. Hickson, thus smashing the police farme-up which tried to show that Brahe was drunk on the night of the accident.

Brahe told of his movements the day preceding the accident. He had been with the railroad for two years steadily prior to the accident. Brahe declared he saw no lights and had no warning that the freight was approaching the crossing. He denied he had been drinking while on duty, or that he had been drunk. No charge has been placed against Brahe, altho he has been in the custody of the police since the accident.

Every witness who has testified to being on the scene of the accident said that no lights were placed on the end of the freight train as it aproched the crossing. No lanterns of any kind were visible at the crossing.

CHINESE 'SON OF HEAVEN' GETS BIG PAY SLASH

Now He Is Called Son of Something Else

(Special to the Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 6.—The "Son of Heaven" has lost his job. The world outside of China is perhaps little aware that altho the Manchu dynasty was overthrown in 1911, it still has an emperor, a mere boy, it is true, and bottled up in the imperial palace within the walls of what is known as "the forbidden city" at Peking.

Nevertheless, China had a real emperor, and feudalism in China worshipped him as the "Son of Heaven."

When foreign imperialism divided up China among the great robber powers, provision was made for the "Son of Heaven" to stick around and draw his pay. This would keep the feudalistic sentiment quiet, along with other concessions.

Christ and Capital Against Feudalism.

But along comes christianity and capitalism and boots the "Son of Heaven" out the back door. Yesterday the "Christian General" Feng Yu-hsiang, who has seized Peking in behalf of Japanese interests, sent his soldiers into the "forbidden city" and threw the fedualist "Son of Heaven" bag and baggage into the alley. All feudalist remnants of court titles and Manchu privileges were thrown at the "Son of Heaven" as he went down the stairs.

The worst of the matter is that injury is added to insult. The "allowance" previously provided the "Son of Heaven" was $4,000,000 a year. This is cut by General Feng to $500,000 a year. The Chinese workers and peasants are not celebrating, however, as this doesn't mean that their burden will be lighter, but only that somebody else will get the difference.

Imperialism's Crocodile Tears.

This action by the "christian" tool of Japan, is being seized upon by American and British interests. They are making a great fuss about the "outrage," trying to arouse the ignorant Chinese against Feng, in hope that American-British imperialism can ride on the tide of "popular feeling" and oust Feng's Japanese control.

It is quite funny to hear the English grow morally indignant at the "mere pittance" of half a million a year, when a million unemployed walk the streets of England to whom the empire of Britain scornfully throws a dole of a few pennies. It is still funnier to listen to the American legation attaches chirp when nearly 1,000,000 jobless in America are not given a red cent or a place to flop.

Try to Make Red Scare.

The biggest effort of the American and British imperialists is, however, to lay a basis for armed intervention by themselves by stirring up foreign sentiment with loud howls about China going "Bolshevik." If the American and British capitalists can make their people believe their yarns that the "Reds" are capturing China, they can establish a moral foundation for armed intervention to oust Japanese rule.

American workers are advised to look with suspicion upon news stories from China alleging "Red rule." Capitalist newspapers are smelling around trying to find some connection between the Soviet ambassador, M. Karakhan, and the new government. American and British diplomats in China are pretending to fear "Bolshevism" because Sun Yat Sen, the nationalist leader of South China has been invited to Peking to help form a new government.

Sun Talks Back to Britain.

The point of view of Sun Yat Sen, and the reason why British business is raising such a scare about "Reds," may be seen from the following telegram sent by Sun Yat Sen to the fifth assembly of the League of Nations, meeting at Geneva:

"In view of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's disquisitions on the independence of Georgia and international peace and justice at the recent sessions of the assembly of the League of Nations, it may possibly interest the league to know that on Sept. 1 I protested to Mr. MacDonald against delivery to my government of an ultimatum, which threatened hostile British naval action in the event of my government taking the necessary measures to suppress a rebellion at Canton instigated by imperialistic and reactionary interests. To this protest Mr. MacDonald has not replied.

"I understand his silence to mean that the British policy in China will continue to express itself in acts of imperialistic intervention an din support of counter-revolutionary activities against the national movement, which aims at the establishment of a strong independent China.

"It is no wonder that after assisting rebels and reactionaries in Canton, Mr. MacDonald goes to Geneva to champion the cause of counter-revolution in the Republic of Georgia in the guise of an 'honest broker' scenting Caucasian naptha.

"(Signed Sun Yat Sen."

Fate of Socialists at Elections Accelerates the Drift to Communism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Milwaukee socialist daily, "The Leader," edited by Victor L. Berger, arrives with the election news. But nowhere do we find a word of editorial comment. For once Berger is silent. But silence, in this instance, speaks volumes.

* * * * *

The alliance with the LaFollette campaign didn't help the socialists. Instead it worked disaster upon the socialist totals. This was conclusively shown in the vote for sheriff of Milwaukee County, for instance, where Edmund T. Melms, former socialist sheriff, was snowed under by the republican with the small vote of 29,828 against 43,020.

The re-election of Berger to congress is claimed, but the incomplete returns showed that he was hanging on by the proverbial skin of his teeth.

* * * * *

With half the precincts reporting in the state, the socialists were running far in the rear even of the democrat, the results showing: Blaine (LaFollette progressive), 168,848; democrat, 130,933, and socialist, 23,910. This will give the socialists less than 50,000 votes in the state; where they have often polled more than that number in Milwaukee alone. The so-called lone LaFollette landslide, in his own home state, went to Blaine, the LaFollette candidate, and not to Berger's candidate, Quick. Under the LaFollette-Berger alliance the socialists delivered their votes to the republican.

* * * * *

The closest approach to any opinion from Berger is to be found in his column, "Findings," where he comes to the conclusion, "That the moral fibre of our people has deteriorated is plainly shown by the questionable reaction of the common people to the latest revelation of bribery and corruption." Berger spent his space, the day after the election, in his column, speculating on the Teapot Dome scandal. While watching his party crumple up, with the counting of the votes, he turned philosopher.

The Wisconsin election returns, if one would discuss "moral fibre," indicates what happens to an alleged working class political organization when it runs away from the working class struggle, joining hands with labor's foe—the middle class of small business.

* * * * *

But, where Berger seeks refuge in silence and philosophy, the Rev. Norman H. Thomas, socialist candidate for governor in New York State, openly confesses, as the DAILY WORKER pointed out during the campaign, that the socialists—under the LaFollette-Tammany Hall-socialist alliance—were going over to Tammany Hall's candidate, Al Smith.

The Rev. Thomas now declares that the socialists were up against it, "not only because of the popularity of Governor Smith and the fear of Colonel Roosevelt in labor circles in general, but also because of the special hold Governor Smith had on unions normally socialistic." (N. Y. Times, Nov. 5.)

When the DAILY WORKER charged this before the election, the Rev. Thomas grew very indignant, but even he now crawls on the after-the-election band wagon, complimenting Tammany Hall's "Al" on his election stating, "That means a far more competent and liberal administration of state affairs than Colonel Roosevelt would have given."

Just to show his deep submissiveness in applauding "Al," the socialist reverend regrets that Al should be tied up with "the Bourbon democracy of the South," claiming this "unnatural alliance cannot last forever."

* * * * *

In other words the Reverend Thomas has flopped side by side with Morris Hillquit, in kissing the feet of Tammany Hall. They both confess that no "Labor Party" will come out of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. Their only hope, a forlorn hope, is that "there is evidence of a new party" a phantom third party—rallying around Tammany Hall in New York, as the C. P. P. A. has been doing, but graciously admitting the socialists.

* * * * *

On the eve of the elections "Jimmie" Holland, president of the New York State Federation of Labor, denounced the socialists for trying to get a few votes for Thomas. He charged the socialists with trailing the LaFollette campaign for the mere purpose of getting a few votes for themselves.

But Holland was wrong. The socialists have been stripped of the little strength they had left. They got nothing thru their alliance with LaFollette. They betrayed the class struggle and suffered the fate of all traitors.

* * * * *

From the national office of the socialist party comes the declaration that the socialist voters were confused by the LaFollette campaign. That states the situation clearly; with the socialists responsible for much of the confusion, along with the LaFollette boosters.

But the results of the election will help dissipate the confusion. The workers should be ready to do some clear thinking. When they think clearly, they will think Communist.

* * * * *

These features of the election's results should clarify the fight of the working class for power. "No compromise" in the class struggle becomes a bigger slogan than ever for oppressed masses. This must accelerate the drift of workers and poor farmers into the Communist movement.

Russian Comrades to Sing and Dance at Anniversary Party

Tomorrow evening the grand concert and ball in celebration of the seventh anniversary of the Russian revolution comes off. Everything is set to make this a big party. Held under the auspices of the Russian branches of the Young Workers' League and the Workers Party everybody will be there, young and—all others (Communists never grow old). It will be held at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsh Blvd., and begins at 7:30 p. m. Come early so as not to miss any of the concert which contains a real revolutionary program. There will also be speakers in Russian.

Communist Votes In Cook County.

When the election judges got thru shaking dice to see who would be given the heavy vote in Cook county, they thought it advisable to give the Communists a few, so as not to look altogether queer.

This is what they said we got in Cook county: Foster for president, 938 votes; Engdahl for senator, 723 votes; and Dunne for governor, 721 votes.

Upholds Labor Board.

Federal Judge Wilkerson upheld the authority of the United States railway labor board to compel witnesses to testify. The decision affects 105 witnesses, chiefly labor union heads, who have refused to appear.

CHARGE DOWNING MADE EDITOR TO AID ROWAN SPLIT

I.W.W. Convention Here Exonerates Doyle

Thomas Doyle was exonerated of all charges relating to the controversy within the I. W. W., by action of the convention now meeting in Emmet Memorial Hall, and was then discharged from his office as secretary-treasurer of the I. W. W.

Delegates Erwin and Leonard, of Industrial Union 310, opposed the exoneration of Doyle to the last ditch, claiming that Doyle had violated the constitution.

Charge Doyle Guilty

Edwin, who has sided with the injunctionites thruout the convention, declared Doyle was equally guilty with those who brot the injunction, in stirring up disruption within the I. W. W. "I don't see why you should whitewash Doyle and then let a goat out of the others" Erwin stated.

Chairman P. J. Welinder favored the exoneration of Thomas Doyle, but charged that Doyle was inefficient in the handing of the office of secretary-treasurer. Welinder charged that Mortimer Downing was selected as editor of the Industrial Worker irregularly by the Rowanites.

"There is an individual named James Stack who was going from one lumber camp to another in the Northwest, condemning the I. W. W." said Welinder. "Stack tried to get I. W. W. members to act as scabs in the September strike. Now it is learned that this same James Stack was employed for the Centralia publicity committee to act as advance man. Stack was employed by James Rowan, and his job was to sound out sentiment among the membership towards Rowan. I was convinced that Rowan was hatching a plot not in Chicago but in the Northwest to split the I. W. W."

"I received a letter from Thomas Moore asking me to curtail the sales of Industrial Solidarity and Industrial Pioneer and push the sales of the Industrial Worker as much as possible. Mortimer Downing and James Rowan are working hand in glove to split the I. W. W."

Welinder declared the Industrial Worker committee met on May 4 and then adjourned. Following adjournment, Welinder said, Mortimer Downing came to Seattle, and another meeting of the Industrial Worker committee was called, when the matter of firing Gahan, then editor, and putting in Rowan's man, Mortimer Downing, was discussed. No grounds could be found to eject Gahan, Welinder said, so the meeting of the Industrial Worker committee was suspended.

Charges Downing Frame-up

A general membership meeting of Seattle was then called, Welinder stated, and Gahan was put out and Downing made editor, altho there was no specific charge against Gahan. Welinder characterized the whole action of Downing as a frame-up of the Rowan crowd who wanted to gain control of a portion of the I. W. W. and split the organization. Welinder read a resolution brot up in the Spokane convention of industrial union 120 which Cantwell and Matt Johnson voted for, declaring in favor of "sticking with Rowan until hell freezes over."

Delegate Broman of the lumber workers portrayed the removal of Doyle as a matter of "Making one man the goat to appease the anger of many." Speed declared the men that "threw the Rowan gang out of headquarters deserve a vote of thanks." He declared Doyle entitled to a thoro exoneration.

Delegate Joe Oates, who would not vote on a motion which was finally lost, that "Doyle be exonerated and his temporary suspension become permanent on acceptance of his resignation," a moment later loudly declared he wore no man's collar and had decided opinions at all times. Oates has been recorded as not voting half a dozen times during the convention.

Oates presented a statement by Erwin that the delegates were trying to whitewash Doyle. Oates said nothing had been proved against Doyle and he favored his exoneration. Erwin's motion that "This body demands Doyle's immediate resignation," was not seconded.

other type of oppression needed for the greater profits of the capitalist class.

All of which means that the labor movement is facing a serious crisis. If it would protect itself, the only weapon at its command is militant class struggle. The amalgamation of the craft unions into powerful organs of solidarity, into industrial unions, must be carried out. The industrial unions must be given a firm basis in the shops, by the widespread organization of shop committees. The labor movement must widen its conception of political action beyond participation in elections, and must consolidate its forces for struggle under the leadership of a revolutionary party. All hesitations and petty bourgeois illusions must be put aside. Struggle for the immediate protection of the labor movement and for its advancement in the present situation calls for a clear-cut program of class struggle. The Workers Party is the only organized center of such a struggle. Rally around the Workers Party more than ever before. We must build the Workers Party of America!

LABOR OF SEVEN NATIONS IN WAR ON DAWES PLAN

Attack U. S. as Head of Attack on Workers

By A. L. CONRAD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

COLOGNE, Germany. — (By Mail.) — An international conference of workers, in which Communists played a role, denounced the Dawes reparations in their sessions in the People's House in Cologne. Representatives from France, England, Czecho-Slovakia, Switzerland, Italy and Holland appeared.

After resolutions of sympathy for the political and revolutionary prisoners of various countries and an appeal for international support for the striking Belgian miners, who have now held out for more than 17 weeks, a French delegate briefly outlined the international situation.

Morgan Plots War on Labor.

He stated that America was organizing and financing the struggle against the working class of the whole world; that the lack of unity among the capitalists was leading to further dissensions and jealousies between the imperialist powers; that England fears the America's growing might in European and world finance and the economic unity between Ruhr coal and French industry, and that the antagonism between England and France increases daily.

The acceptance of the Dawes plan insures not only the further oppression of the German workers but means unemployment and misery for the workers of all Europe, he said, since the balance of the industrial market will be further disturbed by the increased production of German industries, as arranged in the Dawes plan.

Tell of Long Workday.

A remarkable feature of the conference was the great number of Rhine-Ruhr miners, metal workers, railway workers, textile, chemical and glass workers who presented to the conference the greetings of the groups they represented.

They spoke energetically for these groups, demanding the combined resistance of the working class of Europe against the Dawes plan, against capitalist justice in Europe, and for the freeing of political prisoners.

The Federated Press correspondent has recently had the "privilege" of reading a number of applications for loans from American capitalists to large German industries. In almost every case the German industrialists use as an additional reason why they are worthy of receiving a loan, that "owing to the political situation we are now working our employes nine and ten hours daily, and even more."

U. S. Plans to Make Another Bid for Oil Rights in Roumania

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Peter Jay, American minister to Roumania, who was called home for consultation some months ago when the Bratiano dictatorship in Roumania enacted a mining law which proposed to force the sale of a controlling share of oil companies operating in that country to Roumanian nationals, has gone back to Bucharest.

He has not found a definite solution of the quarrel between the Roumanian business magnates and the foreign oil companies, reflected in the passage of this confiscatory law.

However, Jay is convinced that a way will be found to harmonize the interests of Standard Oil, Royal Dutch-Shell and the companies in which the Bratiano brothers have a profitable interest.

His return to Roumania means that further negotiations for the modification of the new law are to be carried on there, after the British and American elections shall have given an indication of the degree of activity which the London and Washington governments will display in support of their respective oil corporations.

Boost for Spolanski Was Boomerang

For days the Chicago Daily News advertised the articles of Jake Spolanski, alias Shpolianshy, alias Spalinski. Then the stool pigeon who has worked hand in glove with Gary's steel trust started his articles. The circulation of the Daily News went steadily down, Spolanski was disclosed to be unable to get his citizenship papers, and his trash was too poor for even the Daily News to swallow. The News cut the articles short, and advertising such as the above proved a boomerang.

SPOLANSKY'S RED SCARE SCARED 'NEWS' READERS

Illiterate Dick Drops Offal on Lawson

The market for imported bunk is poor, even in Chicago.

And the homemade brand of lie has it all over the foreign kind, as far as roping in the reader goes.

The Daily News fell for the foreign bull, and the foreign bull has gored a big hole in the cashbook of the Daily News.

When Victor Lawson again meets his circulation manager the latter may attempt to point out that such escapades as the printing of the recent "red" scare stories is too costly to be tried very often.

Hit the Pavement.

Jakey Spolansky, former department of justice fink, who found himself wiping the dust from the seat of his pants in Washington's back yard when the government had its little clean-up week last spring, and who is the "author" of the "red exposures" that the Daily News has been smearing all over its front page, has proudly announced to the DAILY WORKER that his stories have sent the circulation of the News shooting skywards.

But when Jakey says that, he lies, as usual. The very day after Jakey told how—cleverly disguised as a head of cabbage—he listened in at a "red" convention in the Illinois woods, the circulation of the Daily News dropped 3,431 copies. And when the next day he brought in a "story" of a vaudeville act which the Communists were supposed to have staged to bring harmony between two opposing factions, the circulation dropped again—4,916.

Progressing Favorably.

At first the readers that the Daily News had roped in by an extensive advertising campaign were a bit disappointed. A day or two later they were disgusted. Within another 24 hours, they were no longer readers of the Daily News.

And the circulation of the Daily News went down—and down.

Everyone knows that June is one of the poorest months of the year for newspaper circulation. Everyone knows that October is one of the best. But for the Daily News, the circulation figures of June, 1924, were far above the figures for the corresponding days of October. For in October the "red" series were the chief feature of the News—and people just didn't want to read them.

Red Scare Scared Readers.

The very first day of the Chicago newspaper revolution, Oct. 14, brought 6,204 readers less than the Daily News had on the 14th of June. Oct. 16, the high-water mark of circulation for the News during the time of the "exposures," brought the News 12,702 readers less than it had on the corresponding day in June.

And the total circulation for the "red" period of October was less than the circulation for the same days of June by almost 15,000.

One trouble was that the bunk was more than three years old. And the readers just didn't like the canned goods.

Meanwhile, the Communists of Chicago have been carrying on their work, and more things than the October leaves have been turning red.

CHICAGO CIVIC OPERA OPENS SEASON HERE

Blood and Thunder is Scheduled for Start

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Wednesday the Chicago Civic Opera company opened its season at the Auditorium theatre with "La Giaconda," by Ponchielli. Reorganized three years ago, with increased finances and a better staff of artists and technicians, the local opera probably opened its most brilliant season here Wednesday. New voices are added to the list, both principals and chorus singers, and altho attempts were made to attract some of the best artists to European musical centers, the great majority of the finest stayed with the Chicago company.

In Grip of Villian.

"La Giaconda," which opened the season with Rosa Raisa in the name part, and "Tosca," the opera of the folowing night, in which Claudia Muzio starred, are both good blood and thunder operas, dealing with the adventures of a dramatic soprano in the clutches of a baritone of the deepest dye. Gioconda and Tosca both depart this life in aproved fashion Of the two the first work is probably the more spectacular. It has in one of the most famous of all operatic ballets, "The Dance of the Hours." The music of both is of that gripping, emotional sort that has made Italian opera so popular.

On Friday "The Prophet," by Meyerbeer, will be presented, Charles Marshall singing the part of the Prophet. The rest of the schedule up to Nov. 11 is as follows:

Saturday matinee—"The Pearl Fishers," by Bizet, the composer of "Carmen." This will be the first performance of the opera by the Chicago company. Graziella Pareto, Charles Hackett, and Giacoma Rimini will star.

Saturday night—"Aida," by Verdi, with Rosa Raisa, Forrest Lamont and Cesar Formichi.

Monday—"Lucia" by Donizetti, with Totl dal Monte, (debut performance) Antonio Cortis and Virgilio Lazzari.

Tuesday—Tannhauser," by Wagner. Cyrena Van Gordon, Forrest Lamont, Joseph Schwartz, and Alexander Kipnis starring.

Greatest French Opera

Further the schedule is not announced. But Director Polacco says there will be a greater variety of opera produced this season than last, when French and Italian works outnumbered those of other nationalities two to one. At least one Russian work, "Boris Goudunoff," by Musorgski, will be sung this season. An American opera, "Bianca," by Henry K. Hadley, is to be put on. And we are promised what to the writer is the greatest of all French operas, Debussy's "Pelleas and Mellisande."

One of the new singers in the company is well known to working-class audiences. Ivan Dneproff, the tenor has, among other appearances, sung here for the concerts of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and given free concerts for the strikers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union who were out last spring.

The return of the ballet corps of Andreas Pavley and Serge Oukrainsky is announced.

At last two changes in the orchestra are worth recording. There is a new concertmaster, Gregor Skolnik by name, and Joseph Siniscalchi, the demon technician of the clarinet, returns to his old chair.

ELECTION OVER! WORKERS FACE BIG WAGE CUT

Textile Toilers to Urge A. F. of L. Action

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 6.—Aid to the United Textile Workers in the wage cut crisis striking New England with the passing of the election is one of the most serious issues facing the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The union will put its case before the general body of labor and call for united backing in what may prove to be a life and death fight for organization in this huge industry.

Will Lower Wage Standard.

Cotton and woolen manufacturers have let it be known that the wage standard would be lowered after election. The United Textile Workers' Union has announced that it will take up the challenge. It must have abundance of outside aid.

The manufacturers are better organized than they were in the 1922 struggle: three mergers have been accomplished in the New England cotton industry alone. And more southern mills are owned by northern capital than before, so the New England boss is frequently able to shut down his northern mills and fill orders from the south until the northern workers will listen to wage cut arguments.

Need Outside Aid.

In the great 1922 strike considerable outside aid was furnished and the United Textile Workers held the fort for nine months in Manchester, New Hampshire, and the Blackstone Valley in Rhode Island. In these same fields the bosses have flung down their challenge again. A company union at Manchester has voted for a ten per cent wage cut for the 14,000 workers there. The local textile council of the A. F. of L. is opposing the cut but it must have money and organizers from the outside to prepare for the fight. A ten per cent cut has already gone into effect in the Blackstone Valley mills of the $39,000,000 Fabrics textile cotton corporation. The United Textile Workers is conducting an organization campaign and has issued word that the wages must be restored, but here again the need is outside assistance.

The difficulties facing any textile union can be guessed when it is understood that the workers are on less than half time employment and that the average wage, even at full time is not more than $20 a week President Thomas F. McMahon, of the United Textile Workers, put the average as low as $18 in talking to the Federated Press. Pauper wages in "good" times, near-starvation in periods of industrial depression, is the rule in the textile industry. Its workers are about as badly off as those in the bituminous coal fields.

Plan Organization Drive.

A national organization drive, sustained thruout the winter, is the hope of the textile union. The drive must be national, because the southern workers, getting an average of eight to ten cents an hour less than their northern workers are being used by the employers to defeat the others. Latest reports from the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and other southern states show many mills working full time. That is the case in few northern mills. The United Textile Workers' Union has scattering locals in the South, but is not yet in the position to lead a big struggle there. Yet organization of the South is imperative for the preservation of the union in the North.

Since the United Textile Workers' Union is the only textile labor movement affiliated with the American Federation of Labor it is the only one which will get A. F. of L. backing. There are several other unions functioning in the industry, two of which were strong enough to be considerable factors in the 1922 strike. This multiplicity of unions complicates the situation.

To the Women of the Bronx.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—An interesting lecture will be given Nov. 12, at 8:30 at 1347 Boston Road. After the lecture discussion will follow. Also how to help the Paterson strikers will be taken up. All are welcome. Auspices women's committee and the U. C. W. W. councils No. 8 and 5.

Open Forum, Sunday Night, Lodge Room, Ashland Auditorium.

Young Workers League Members Take Notice

Mailing order house campaign meeting will be held at 3322 Douglas Blvd. to make arrangements for the campaign at Sears, Roebuck & Co. All members of area branches Nos. 1, 4, 5 and 6 are instructed to be present at this meeting. It will be held Sunday, Nov. 9, at 6 p. m. You will get your instructions as to what time and place you are to help in the campaign. Make the campaign a success. Be at the meeting on time.

Members of branches Nos. 2 and 3 will meet at 722 Blue Island on Sunday, Nov. 9, 6 p. m., to make arrangements for the work at Philipsborns.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

SOME FACTS AND FIGURES

About Building the Labor Movement.

TODAY the DAILY WORKER has a circulation of 5,000 MORE A DAY than it had on October 4—one month ago. Fifty per cent of this splendid growth is the increase in news stand sales, bundle orders from branches, individuals and dealers.

Thruout the country the election campaign has brought home the necessity for the DAILY WORKER at every important meeting where workingmen gather. And to this lesson the DAILY WORKER will not lose any of its circulation now that the election campaign is over. The winter days will see an increase in the attendance at Workers Party and union meetings, and a corresponding increase in the necessity of more bundle orders of the DAILY WORKER. And in many cities plans are being made for widespread news stand sales. We will grow some more.

The other fifty per cent of the growth of the DAILY WORKER since October 4 has been due to the Bricklayers. It has come in subscriptions—the most substantial, most dependable growth for a working class paper.

o o o

It Has Been Due to the Bricklayers

In the campaign Local New York, under the leadership of Comrade L. E. Katterfeld, has been the outstanding factor in the success of building the DAILY WORKER. During this period the DAILY WORKER has been placed on the news stand of New York and over 1,000 subs have been secured. Most were short term subs. But already the comrades are being mobilized to retain and even increase their gains by a close follow-up on every expiring subscription. The organization of DAILY WORKER agents in this city as in others is being closely knit together to form the advance guard of the local. To the comrades of New York goes great credit for splendid, constructive accomplishments for the DAILY WORKER in the past month.

Local Detroit

This local has contributed a good share to the building. A DAILY WORKER committee is responsible for bundle sales BY EVERY BRANCH, EVERY SINGLE DAY. This is a feature that is not as yet in use in any other local in the country. Subscriptions have shown a net gain of 123 over last month and the local as yet is only beginning to gather up steam. Local Detroit has BUILDERS!

Local Cleveland

DAILY WORKER agent Comrade J. Hamilton is an established "live wire." Under his leadership and due greatly to his efforts this city has shown a net gain of 38 subscriptions since October 4. Bundle sales have increased and the increase in the Cleveland circulation of the DAILY WORKER speaks well for renewed activities of the party there.

o o o o

Local Philadelphia under the guidance of John Lyman has shown an increase in subscriptions. Minneapolis, Worcester, Superior, Milwaukee, Springfield, Ill., Baltimore—many other locals have done nobly. Today we are building the DAILY WORKER—we are building the Labor movement and here are the builders who have sent in new subs on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week:

A New Star in Hanna, Wyo.

Among the many splendid examples of accomplishment since Oct. 4 the work of Bricklayer Fred. Williams of Hanna, Wyo., is unequaled. This comrade newly elected to serve as branch agent has in his small town stuck in the hills of Wyoming, secured to date 29 new subscriptions among which NOT ONE was for less than six months. He has sent in other subs for the Workers Monthly, the Young Worker and Young Comrade. To this Bricklayer goes special recognition for a real contribution in building the DAILY WORKER.

o o o o

There have been other comrades—willing Builders—who despite adverse circumstances have contributed their share. Comrades A. W. Harvitt of Toledo, Stoltz of St. Louis, Anna Cornblath of Los Angeles, Jean Stevenson of San Pedro, Jas. Lawrie of Seattle, M. J. Bjorbacka of West Concord, Helen Pedonen of Superior, Elsie Pultur of Findlay, V. Vidor of Springfield, Ill.—many others who have helped so loyally to "Build the DAILY WORKER."

CARLSON TO TELL OPEN FORUM ABOUT LIVES OF YOUTH IN RUSSIA

Youth, and its problems, are as always a vital subject, and Sunday night it will be handled in an entirely new way from an absolutely different viewpoint. There will be a lecture at the Open Forum of the Workers Party at the "Lodge Room," Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren street, at 8 p. m. by Oliver Carlson.

Oliver Carlson is just returned from Soviet Russia where he spent two years as a member of the executive committee of the Young Communist International. He has had ample facilities to learn how the Russian people, and particularly the young people, the youth of Russia live in their environment of revolutionary turmoil. He will speak on the subject and give a comparison of the lives of the youth of Russia and the youth of America.

Everyone is welcome and there will be questions and discussion. Don't forget the date, next Sunday night, and enter from Van Buren street.

COMMUNISTS ARE FEARED BY FASCISTI

Socialists Are Harmless, Says Massolini

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ROME, Nov. 6.—"The Communist Party is the only group in Italy that the Fascist government has need to fear."

With these words, spoken in this city in the course of an address on the occasion of the anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome two years ago, Premier Mussolini paid unwilling tribute to the decisiveness and the clear-headedness of the Communists, and unconsciously scored the passivism and futility of the socialists and democratic groups of Italy.

For the so-called constitutional opposition Mussolini had nothing but jeers. "We have learned by experience how little the socialist threats amount to. The sum total of socialist and democratic action will be the casting of votes by the representatives of these parties in the next parliament.

Strike Hard Blow.

"The Communists, on the other hand, have seized every opportunity to strike a blow at fascist rule. It is against the Communists that we must array ourselves."

Because of the menacing attitude of labor bodies all over Italy, and because of the fact that the control of the militia to take part in the four days' celebration of the march on Rome, the fascist festival has been cut short. Within two days the government realised that further attempts to prolong the "jubilee" might lead to armed uprisings of the workers.

Meanwhile, fascist atrocities continue unabated. Marciano Gino, a workingman of this city who is a member of the Communist Party, was knifed to death by a gang of six blackshirts who attacked him in a restaurant in Rome. The Roman police have made no attempt to arrest the murderers.

Long Sentences.

The sentencing to a term of 29 years of imprisonment 29 of the workers who took part in the riots against the fascisti strikebreakers at Florence a year ago has been in part responsible for the hasty closing of the anniversary ceremonies. The trial, which has been going on at Empoli for almost three months, failed to hold the attention of every working man in the country. Of the 152 workers arrested, only 36 were acquitted. The rest have received sentences of from three to 29 years each.

The atmosphere in which the trial has been conducted has been wholly fascist. Lawyers for the workers have been threatened with death for daring to conduct an energetic defense.

And the long sentences imposed have failed to satisfy the fascist sympathizers, who have thrown the trial clamored for the death penalty for every one of the prisoners.

Cheers For Communism.

"Long live Communism!" were the only words uttered by the condemned workers at the close of the trial.

Prosecution of the daily organ of the Communist Party, Unita, and of Avanti, organ of the Maximalists, is now going on in Rome with a view to the suppression of both of these papers. Suit was brought at the time of the late secretary of aviation in the cabinet of Mussolini and implicated in the killing of the socialist deputy. Both of the newspapers on trial told of the grafting operations conducted by prominent members of the Mussolini government, and told of facts that were patent to everyone.

Monopoly In Sports News.

Among the charges made against Finzi were that he was implicated in the proposed sale of the Italian oil reserves to Harry F. Sinclair, American oil magnate and that he sold gambling permits at fancy prices. At the beginning of the Mussolini rule, Finzi was instrumental in having a law passed which forbids publication of sports news in the Italian newspapers. He then began publication of a paper of his own, in which all of the sports news was contained. Finzi's paper was of course, never prosecuted for violation of the law.

Lawyers are conducting the prosecution against Unita and Avanti are basing their arguments, not on any denial of the charges made, but on laws passed by the last parliament making any newspaper which publishes statements disparaging to the government or the, "national honor" of Italy liable to suppression.

Girl Match Workers Win Aid.

OTTAWA, Can. — A successful tag day in Ottawa showed that public sympathy is behind the girl workers in the Eddy match factory across the river in Hull, Quebec. The Eddy company took advantage of a slack period to endeavor to break the union. It asked the workers when the factory reopened to sign an agreement not to join the union. The girls stood out and won this point, but there is still strife because the company is refusing to appoint forewomen as required under the union agreement.

FARMERS MOVED OUT, BROOKHART MOVED TO WASH.

Iowa Senator Typical Real Estate Shark

By J. E. SNYDER.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 6.—It is said that the old line farm-owning republicans of Iowa moved to southern California and the tenants they left behind elected Smith Brookhart to the United States senate from that state.

There grew up a "united front" between the established trade unions of the state and the tenant farmers to the extent that they voted and continued to vote for a would-be "reformer of capitalism."

It was not a class united front from any conscious standpoint, but a rebellion against railroad rates on farm products, farm machinery on the part of the small farmers and tenants and the high cost of living and receding wages on the part of the wage workers.

Near Rebellion.

It can be said that the entire west and south is in a state of mind near rebellion against an enemy called "Wall Street." They would march on this enemy with gun and sword and destroy the monster without quarter. Little thought or reason is given to this rebellious spirit except by the Ku Klux Klan that says "Wall Street" is made up of Jews and catholics, and should be driven out of power. By which it is implied that the protestants are to be put in power because of the exceptional virtues of some of their number, like John D. Rockefeller, Henry Ford, Mr. Mellon and company.

In all of Iowa perhaps one-half of one per cent of farmer-labor has some conception of a class united front. Of this small percentage three-fourths of that number are miners and other wage workers, leaving the number of farmers that are class conscious almost nil.

A Change of Masters.

At one time the socialists polled quite a vote in Iowa, but in looking up this membership we find that they were hardly good populists and stood for no more than the reformism now advocated by Smith Brookhart who is hell bent on running the rascals out and putting "good" men, like himself, in. We understand that in Iowa many a widow and orphan could testify to Brookhart's brand of honesty, were his real estate deals all brought to light.

Iowa has many towns of from forty to one hundred thousand population. These towns contain packing houses, small stock yards, elevators, and milk depots, as well as all sorts of smaller industries. Many of the workers in these industries are young men and women born on Iowa farms and in the small villages. They carry with them to the industry all the ideology of the country church and capitalized school besides a belief in advertising the quality of "their" coal characterized by signs on auto windshields, "Buy Iowa Coal," "Buy Monroe County Coal," when it is well known that coal can be loaded in other states and shipped cheaper than they dig it out of most of the poorly equipped ill ventilated mines in Iowa.

Not Easy Job.

Much of this rebellion could be coined into a class united front by an effective propaganda and interpretation of the market, the wage system and an attack on the ethical preaching, the populace has been fed on these past hundred years in the middle west. It will not be done in a day, nor a year and to do it, other sections must pay a large part of the expense of education.

That it is necessary to educate these people stands to reason for from the central west and south of these United States will come many an innocent youth with prejudice burned into his brain to break the strikes of the workers in the large industrial centers. A united front is possible if we institute a propaganda for the union front before attempting to organize the impossible and non-existant.

Bricks and Consequences

By ALFRED WAGENKNECHT.

OCTOBER-NOVEMBER saw a return of bricks as a style event. It is now recalled that burning blocks of clay (bricks) was practiced by all ancient civilized nations. The Babylonians, 6,000 years ago, burnt them well. Bricks were extensively used during the time of Sargon of Akkad (3800 B. C.). One day while picking pelican from one of his many hollow teeth, the Sargon of Akkad is said to have muttered: "She's a brick."

This alone shows in what esteem bricks were held in the B. C. days.

The sight of the ancient city of Babylon is still marked by huge mounds of brick. They were thrown down from the ruined towers, palaces by lovers and layers of brick to build surrounding cities.

This alone shows that bricks were heaved in B. C. just about as they are heaved today.

* * * *

The first brick buildings in America were built in Manhattan in the year 1633. A governor of the Dutch West India Company did the job. These bricks came from Holland.

This alone is conclusive proof that bricks can travel long distances. And it is reported that only recently, in 1924, a descendant of a European family, himself carrying a Dutch name busied himself with a kind of brick at a point formerly called New Amsterdam.

The Chinese also understood bricks. The Great Wall in China is made of brick. Last month two Chinese armies met at this wall. On one side of the wall was Wu Pei-fu and in back of him Americans and and Britishers saying sic 'em. On the other side of the wall was Chang Tso-lin, and in back of him the French and the Japanese saying sic 'em.

And there was the Chinese Wall, of brick, between the two, playing a part that really had revolutionary significance.

* * * *

A standard dimension for bricks was established in England in 1625. The standard set was 9x4½x3 inches. And in 1650, at New Haven, the first American brick was born. The birthplace is still visible on the right, as the locomotive swerves to the left, out of New Haven towards Wallingford (named Wallingford before "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" surmised a running state existed, we understand).

We think this establishes bricks, singly or by the ton. This being the case, we shall proceed by reverting to the first line we wrote, above.

October-November saw a return of bricks as the fashion. Upon a bright day in early October a bright idea took shape in Chicago on a boulevard. The idea resulted in a revolution in brick. A dimension was dropped (who cares where). It was dropped to facilitate the promotion of a new scheme in building. This revolution in bricks resulted in bricks for the revolution.

* * * *

Walt Carmon did it. There is or was a city in further Spain, during the time of Julius Cæsar named Carmona. It may be that Carmon's ancestors hailed from there. Anyway, one day in 1247 a certain Ferdinand put a rough-shod boot upon this fair city and exclaimed: "As the Morning Star shines in the Dawn, so shines Garmona in Andalusia." Which, brought right down to the reign of Carmon in the circulation department of a building at 1113, was improved upon thusly: "As the Sun shines above the Clouds, so shall shine daily the Daily." In this wise Carmon went Ferdinand some better.

If we counted right, there were 33,333 of these bricks for the revolution sent out, no telling where not. And Carmon, without moving an inch from 1113, dared 33,333 recipients of bricks to fire (heave is the official word of action) them back at him.

And then the heaving began, heaving bricks to build, much the same as in Babylon. Just as the old bricks were esteemed B. C., so were the new. They travelled from very long distances, some even from Amsterdam avenue, the very same spot to which the first imported brick travelled from Holland.

Dropping a dimension gave these bricks wonderful revolutionary significance. It gave them exactly the proper measurement for circulation building. Circulation is the barometer which shows the distance of the revolution from the point at which it will occur.

It made heaving them easy and their travel light. And to come back to what's fashionable—we now announce that it is quite the thing to carry a half dozen of these new bricks (Carmon patent) in your pocket at all times, pulling one out every time a worker heaves in sight, and then heaving it back with that worker's name and money.

It is said that every brick-colored proletarian, whether small potato or large, must heave back a brick before the week-end or take the consequences!

THE CONSEQUENCES: May a ton of brick, the kind standardized in England in 1625, fall on you if you're the only one who don't.

Case Against Luigi Ceccoli is Dropped After Many Months

By BARNEY MASS
(Special to the Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—On a motion made by Attorney Sugar, charges against Luigi Ceccoli, of carrying concealed weapons were dropped. Sugar argued that the seizure and search of Ceccoli was illegal and biased.

On June 8 an attempt was made here to popularize the Fascisti outfit. A meeting was called to celebrate the inauguration of the Fascisti reign of terror in Italy. Italian workers came to the meeting to see what was up. On learning the purpose was Fascisti propaganda they got busy and dispersed the meeting.

Of course arrests were made. Ceccoli who had first hand knowledge on the Fascisti government was arrested as he was leaving the hall. The police as usual went thru his personal belongings without having a warrant to follow this procedure. They charged Ceccoli with carrying concealed weapons.

The sentiment of the Italian workers on that evening proves that not only is the Fascisti bunch of cutthroats becoming unpopular in their own country, but that the masses of Italian workers here will not tolerate any attempt to introduce the same form of government in this country.

Fink Beats It As Farmers Back Up Communist Speaker

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KANSAS CITY, Kansas, Nov. 6.—"Run along now like a good detective—we want to talk to the Communists."

At the door of the Kansas City stock yards, a dejected-looking group of farmers, who had just sold their cattle at a sad price, were gazing at a bit of paper plastered up on one of the gates. The paper read:

"Capitalism is driving the farmers from the land. We demand land for the users, a five-year moratorium for the farmers."

And below, in large, bold type, the words, "Workers Party of America."

At this point appeared the fink. "You're under arrest," he announced to Comrade George Vucic, who was responsible for pasting up the Communist sticker.

"Nothing doing," came from the lips of half a dozen farmers. "This young man has an appointment to talk to us. That sticker's just plain sense and that there Workers Party is all right."

The fink sized up the crowd and disappeared.

COMRADE FEURER, ARDENT FIGHTER FOR CAUSE, DIES

Well Known in Party Activity in Bronx, N. Y.

Joseph Feurer, an untiring worker for the cause of Communism and active member of the Bronx, N. Y., Workers Party Branch died on the morning of Oct. 21.

Comrade Feurer was born in Switzerland on July 3, 1862. In his youth in his native country he was brought up religiously. He began working at the age of 10, and when he reached the age of 16 was able to support his mother. As he became older he frequented a church whose pastor spoke more of material things than of gods which preachers of all times have taught the masses. From that time on he attended public meetings and became a socialist and later a Communist.

In 1891 Comrade Feurer migrated to the United States and has been a resident of New York City ever since. In the early 90's he was one of the organizers and also president of the Swiss Embroiderers' Union the first organization of its kind in America, thereby gaining the hatred of the embroidery bosses at that time. Comrade Feurer, ever since he entered this country was identified with the radical movement, and for many years was a member of the socialist party so long as it remained a party of militant class conscious workers. He was in the midst of all their struggles, and making sacrifices from his meagre wages. For many years, until it ceased to exist, he was a prominent member of the German socialist club named "Workingmen's Educational Association Bronx." In those times when the red flag was the symbol of the socialists, the class struggle and send his only son named Jack to the socialist school conducted by the W. E. A. on Wednesday afternoons and Saturday and Sunday mornings.

Comrade Feurer was always busy whenever funds were to be collected for a worthy cause. He himself gathered several hundred dollars for the Russian relief for the Friends of Soviet Russia, and also for the International Workers Aid to help German comrades.

Aside from his activities in the radical movement, Joseph Feurer was identified with numerous Swiss societies, and he was particularly enthusiastic in working for the Swiss Gymnastic Society New York, and also in the Federation of Workers' Gymnastic Societies. His efforts at making radicals out of his countrymen did not meet with such success as he had expected, but he kept at them for years until the end.

The funeral of our beloved Comrade Feurer took place on Friday, October 24. Many organizations were represented and paid him a last tribute. Among the numerous speakers was Comrade Ludwig Lore, editor of the "New York Volkszeitung," the champion of labor which Feurer had read since he came to this country. The body was cremated in the New York & New Jersey Crematories in North Bergen, New Jersey.

Thrown into Jail 43 Times I. W. W. is Driven Insane

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 6.—Peter Lustica is in the California state hospital for the insane as a result of unremitting persecution by the Los Angeles police. He is a member of the I. W. W. He was first arrested in the San Pedro free speech fight in the spring of 1923. Since then he was put in jail 43 times, always on charges growing out of his distribution of literature or attempts to help his comrades in prison. When his mind began to break under the persecution he was released from the city stockade and he attempted suicide. The confinement in the asylum followed where he labors under persecution delusions that arose from the realities of persecution at the hands of the police. The Los Angeles office of the General Defense committee is trying to find a home for Pete where he can recover under sympathetic care.

O'Flaherty a Jesuit!

To The DAILY WORKER:—In the columns of "As We See It" by T. J. O'Flaherty of October 14, you refer to the recent society formed in Utica, N. Y. by the Masons and Knights of Columbus, jointly. You state:

"In Utica, New York, Catholics and Masons have joined in a local organization known as the Hamilton-Jefferson Association. Prominent members of the Knights of Columbus are leading the attack of a section of the Knights of Columbus. As this organization has grown in power and influence a tendency has developed to act independently of the clergy. This kind of thing has reached the point where the Bishop of Detroit, Michael Gallagher, hinted that the pope might be obligated to place the Knights under the ban as he did a similar organization in France.

"The so-called "atheist" element is now in control of the organization. It is an open secret that many of the leaders are Catholics in name only and rarely attend mass or any of the other Catholic services. This element favors a friendly alliance with the Masonic order. The bishops are strongly opposed to this move, fearing its effect on the rank and file who are already suffering what they call those who are Catholics go to hell, after death."

Religion Used to Divide Workers.

Why were those two columns placed in the paper? Surely Comrade O'Flaherty must be aware that religion (all denominations) are controlled by the international bankers. Religion is a weapon in the international bankers' hands by which workers have been divided for countless centuries to this date. Masons, Knights of Columbus, Holy Name Society, Elks, etc., etc., Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A. etc. etc., are all controlled by one string, the international bankers—regardless of the labyrinths by which these organizations are divided or sub-divided, organized or disorganized or merged together. As I stated once to Comrade Englahl that in my way of thinking religion (all denominations) is the internationally organized espionage agency of the international bankers.

These two paragraphs of Comrade O'Flaherty is disillusioning to workers, and is not the truth. Well trained Jesuits often write that way. It is sickening to read such material—in a Communist paper.

Yours for more power for its workers and for more power to comrade O'Flaherty so long as he gets under the skin of both the international bankers and his thoroughly entrenched reptile agents, priest, parson, rabbi, the trinity, which in its nakedness is but one, holding the string by which the international bankers reigns supreme in all countries but Soviet Russia.

Louis Reguera, Boston, Mass.

Reply—The irritibility of my critic can be excused on the ground that he is as Spanish as I am Irish, and therefore holds the Pope in as high esteem as on who once watched the priest pretend to turn crackers and wine into an ancient Hebrew, tho, unless the metamorphosis took place in the holy ghost room, it did not take place at all as far as I could see. This and other "miracles" were responsible for my present lack of reverence for the Holy Father and his army.

Opposition to organized or unorganized religion, however should not blind one to the fact, that the capitalist system is as plain as the nose on my critic's face, or any other nasal appendage for that matter. There are various props of the capitalist system, beside the Catholic Church, and they are fighting for the premier position at the table of capitalism. They fight each for that privilege, just as the capitalist parties fight each other for the lucrative honor of being the governmental organ of Wall Street. This does not detract from the fact that all churches are servants of capitalism, but some of them are more capable servants than other.

Analysis of K. of C. Correct.

My paragraphs on the Knights of Columbus are based on authentic information. The facts are as follows: The Knights of Columbus was organized under the direction and with the approval of the Catholic hierarchy. It was designed to be the political arm of the church, in opposition to the Masonic order. It happens however, that a group of men have entrenched themselves in power within the Knights of Columbus and have on more than one occasion defied the hierarchy.

Let me give an instance: Bishop Michael Gallagher of Detroit, sent a representative to Washington, to appear before a meeting of the highest council in the Knights of Columbus. He was refused, hearing, on the ground that he was not dressed like an ordinary mortal.

Bishop Gallagher, was angry over this and in a sermon delivered before the Detroit Council of the Knights, made very serious charges against the officers of the order, declaring that many of them were in reality atheists, did not attend church for a number of years and were in the organization for what they could get out of it. He said that "His Holiness" might be obliged to place the ban of the church on the Knights of Columbus as he did on a similar organization in France.

Following the Bishop's sermon, a convention of the organization was held in Montreal at which the Bishop's partisans, put up a slate of their own and were badly kicked by Grand Knight Flaherty and his faction. The minutes of that convention are interesting and would have a salutary effect on comrades like my critic, who allow themselves to get the crazy notion into their heads, that the machinery of capitalism and its props, religion and lay, runs smoothly. It does not, which is well for us.

I assure, comrade Reguera that I am neither a Jesuit nor the son of a Jesuit, tho I confess to a little swelling of the upper story over the insidious flattery hidden away in the fifth paragraph of his letter. If the feeling of nausea induced by my two offending paragraphs, in the sensitive intellectual stomach of Comrade Reguera, has not yet subsided, I hope this reply will make him a well man again.

T. J. O'Flaherty.

DETROIT WILL HAVE BIG MEET SATURDAY, NOV. 8

Dunne to Speak at 7th Anniversary Gathering

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—The Seventh Anniversary of the Russian revolution will be celebrated in Detroit Saturday evening, Nov. 8, under the joint auspices of the Workers Party and the Young Workers' League. The meeting will be held in the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin.

Wm. F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, will make the principal address. Comrade Dunne, who has just recently returned from Russia where he attended the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, and the congress of the Red Trade Union International, will have a message direct from the revolutionary front. Ruth Reynolds will speak on behalf of the Young Workers' League, and the combined junior sections will round out a most interesting program.

Russia Has Many Victories.

The past year has witnessed numerous victories for the Soviet government. These victories have not been confined to the material conditions within Russia, tho the general improvement of the lot of the workers and peasants thru the re-establishment of industry and the consequent increase in production, has been gratifying in the extreme. But in the realm of foreign relations Soviet diplomacy has also major victories to her credit. Nineteen nations have accorded full recognition to the union of Socialist Soviet Republics. France, greatest enemy of Russia with the single exception of the United States, has been the last to fall in line.

The class conscious workers of Detroit, in common with the workers of the entire world, rejoice in every advance made by Soviet Russia. They hail the revolution as the first great victory in their own struggle for emancipation. The House of the Masses will register another record demonstration. Admission is 25 cents.

HUGHES CHARGED WITH SMUGGLING ANTI-REDS IN

May Not Find Many "Green Peasants" Here

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 6.—Charges that the U. S. state department and American consulate in Paris assisted him in falsifying his application for visa for entrance into this country have been made by Alexei M. Moshkwinow, who now announces thru the New York Evening Graphic that he is really here to organize anti-Soviet activities.

Moskwinow gave Federated Press an interview months ago in which he told frankly that he represented what he called the "Green Peasants" movement of Russia.

He alleges that the American government officials connived with him to enable him to come to this country and form the All-Russian Peasants' Association, 324 E. 14th St., New York, for organizing an anti-Soviet movement to overthrow the existing regime in Russia.

An Adventurer.

Evan D. Young, named by Moskwinow as the man in the division of European affairs in the U. S. state department that he saw on June 4, 1924, admits by wire from Washington that he talked to the Russian and said he met him first in Riga, Russia, where he was singing as Alfred Frauenstein, and where he was known as an "adventurer." Young said that Moskwinow was the only one of four men who in April cabled from Paris about visas. He says he saw Moskwinow in Washington when Secretary Hughes would not and that Moskwinow claimed then to represent 40 per cent of Russian peasants (30,000,000 people) until closely questioned. Then he said his group was about 40,000 strong and aimed to overthrow the present Russian government without foreign intervention. Young says he wrote a note to Hughes to deny the others visas.

WORLD CONFERENCE ADMITS RUSSIA HAS BEST ELECTRIFICATION PLAN

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 6.—The Soviet delegates to the international conference of hydraulics, upon which over thirty different countries were represented, report that the conference recognized that the best electrification plan was the one adopted in the Union of Soviet Republics.

The report made on this subject by the Russian chief delegate, Professor Glouskhoff, director of the Institute of Hydraulics, was unanimously recognized as a most valuable contribution to the labors of the conference and, as a result, the Union of Soviet Republics was included in the number of those four states which were recognized by the conference as having thoroly studied the hydraulic resources and potentialities of the country.

Shirt Manufacturers in Rush to Settle with Amalgamated

NEW YORK.—Shirt manufacturers who have not yet settled with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in the present strike for enforcement of agreement are crowding the rooms of the settlement board in the New Union Square hotel daily to sign the agreement.

In addition to the United Shirt Manufacturers' Association, which signed within 48 hours, the Shirt Contractors' Association and several independent firms have settled. Barata's Shirt Co., formerly non-union, has signed with the Amalgamated now and its 400 workers at Greenpoint will be in the union.

The terms upon which the union is settling include provision for upward readjustment of the wage scale which was reduced in violation of the previous agreement. Registration of contractors is another item in the agreement which the union is insisting upon enforcing. Nonunion workers in Greenpoint and Ridgewood particularly responded to the strike call of the union in order to get their shops organized.

Many Victims of Moorish Forces Are Big Worry to Spain

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 6. — The complete victory of the rebel Moorish forces under Abdel Krim against the power of Spain is causing considerable worry to the imperialist governments of both England and France.

To Spain had been entrusted the task of "pacification" in the northern part of Africa—a task which it has conscientiously tried to fulfill by force of arms.

Now that Spain has been driven from North Africa, both France and England are watching each other jealously, each fearing that the other will make further gains. France fears that her power on the African continent may be weakened, and England that he self-constituted guardianship over the straits of Gibraltar may be questioned.

The expressed determination of the Moors to prevent foreign intervention has complicated the situation considerably for the imperialists.

BANKERS' SCHEME TO MAKE OWNERS OF RAIL WORKERS

Must Starve for Five Years, That's All

WASHINGTON.— From the Bankers' Railway Bulletin, a propaganda service, comes a new red herring to be dragged across the trail of public ownership and democratic management of the railroads. The new scheme is simple—let all the railroad workers save 20 per cent of their wages for five successive years, and plant those savings in railroad securities. That would buy the railroads, says the propagandist of the Bankers' Railway Bulletin, and "it ought to put an end to wage controversies and strikes; it ought to end the agitation for government ownership on the part of the employes."

Will End Strikes Too.

But that is not all: "If successful it might provide a precedent in quieting the complaints one hears against the present organization of industry without recourse to socialism or other economic and political heresies—a precedent which might, possibly save this country from the state at which several European countries have arrived and to which many others are headed."

It goes into argument to show that while the Plumb plan would not provide penalties for inefficiency, the magic of stock ownership in a private railroad corporation would make every man efficient. All he needs do is save up 20 per cent of his wages each year, and hand them over to the company for shares in its future.

Nothing in the article explains how a railroad worker can save so much from wages fixed by the rail labor board.

Debate on Evolution

SAN FRANCISCO.—As the opening gun of The Science League of America against the anti-evolutionists in California, a debate will be held between Maynard Shipley, president of the league, and Daniel O'Connel on the subject: Resolved, that the theory of evolution should be taught in the public schools as opposed to Biblical doctrines. O'Connell, widely known as a political liberal who served time in a federal prison for his opposition to the war to end war, is a reactionary in religious matters and has challenged Shipley to the debate.

Propaganda In Schools.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Another bit of propaganda for school children is announced by the American legion, which offers prizes to public school pupils of San Francisco for essays on The Value to the Community of the Palace of the Legion of Honor. The board of education has approved the contest. Needless to say, the prize-winning essays will be intensely patriotic and militaristic. The money for the aPlace of the Legion of Honor was donated immediately after the war, to erect a memorial to San Francisco's war dead. But like the Centralia memorial, not a stone has yet been laid. The city has rented the ground to gasoline service station.

Boost Price of Milk.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Life becomes still harder for the babies of New York City following November 1. The Borden Farm Products company, popularly called the milk trust, has boosted the price one cent per quart. Grade B, bottled, becomes 15 cents and Grade A, bottled, 18 cents per quart.

SHOE WORKERS IN UNITED FRONT AT NEXT CONVENTION

Militants Roll Up Sleeves for New Task

By M. SHARAF.
Special Daily Worker Correspondent.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 6.—Local 1, of Chelsea, Mass., has seceded from the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America, and has applied for a charter in the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. It is rumored that the latter organization paid heavily for the change that took place in the local.

Militants Explain.

The DAILY WORKER correspondent interviewed the union officials and a number of active members. They all told of the great handicaps they had been under since the Amalgamated came to Chelsea. If any shops close down or move out of Chelsea, as has been the case recently, the workers of those shops were forced to take jobs under unspeakably bad conditions because the locals of the Amalgamated did not permit them to receive employment in shops under their jurisdiction. They said they could not go to Boston because the Boot and Shoe controls that vicinity.

Change Their Tactics.

They had a membership of 800. Only 400 were left at the time the local changed its allegiance. This local has been conducting a strike during the last two months. The general office of the Amalgamated did not contribute one cent towards helping win the strike, tho they have a regular strike fund. If this strike is lost, the Chelsea union is lost. The militants of the Chelsea local foreseeing this, raised the slogan of "boring from within."

Change Gives New Impetus.

The militants said they would work real hard for the next months to get their views across to the Boot and Shoe Workers so that in May when the convention takes place they will secure for the Brockton district locals their charters from the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. And with the Brockton militants in the fold a new era for the shoe workers of the country would be on its way.

The arguments were concluded with the statement that for more than 20 years the militants had fought the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union from the outside. "Now we are going to do something from within," they said.

Canadian Bankers Squeeze Out Small Fry in Money Trust

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 6.—Canadian financial interests are concentrating their wealth. During the past three years the banking interests of Canada have undergone a process of amalgamation that resulted in the gradual elimination of the small financier class and the establishment of a money trust in the dominion.

Here are some of the highlights in Canadian finance during the period mentioned: Merging of the Merchants' bank with Bank of Montreal (subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific railway); failure of the Home Bank of Canada because it would not join the Bankers' union; amalgamation of the Bank of Hamilton and the Bank of Commerce; union of the Bank of Hochelaga and the Bank Nationale of Quebec, and in September the absorption of the Sterling banks of Ontario by the Standard Bank.

Canadian banks now act as mere collection agencies for the eastern financial centers. No credit of any importance is extended to western business enterprises. Advances on agriculture are absolutely nil. In the fruit country of British Columbia the banks will not advance a cent on crop returns and in some cases the government has taken first mortgages on fruit crops to secure payment of water and land taxes.

MEXICAN PRESIDENT IS FETED BY U. S. GOVERNMENT AS PART OF PLOT TO STRANGLE MEXICO

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—In formal announcement to the press, the state department outlined its program for the visit of President-elect Calles of Mexico to Washington. A representative of the department and a troop of cavalry were sent to the station to escort him to the Mexican embassy, and later he was presented to President Coolidge. Next morning he was to be taken to lay a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington, again under escort of cavalry. After lunch at the White House with Mexican embassy and state department officials, he was scheduled to go to Mt. Vernon on a government yacht, and then return to the embassy.

Calles, elected by the exploited toilers of Mexico is to be choked with honey and showered with honors by the American ruling class not in the interests of the Mexican workers.

Some First Thoughts on Big Incomes

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

WHO favors the Coolidge brand of prosperity? You won't get a prize for guessing right first time. It's too easy after a glance at the table of family incomes below. Cautious Cal in a last minute appeal for the support of the millionaire bloc ordered the internal revenue office to show why the privileged classes should rally to the administration which piloted the ship of state thru 1923.

Fifteen families in 1923 had combined personal income of more than $100,000,000. That is the first finding of a hurried analysis of such personal income tax figures as got into the daily papers. The combined income of these members of America's superaristocracy would support more than 100,000 workers' families at the rates of pay considered proper for section men on the railroads.

The way these huge unearned incomes poured in, making it possible for these favored families to live in the lap of luxury, is shown in the table:

Family	Estimated 1923 Net Income
Rockefeller	$27,960,000
Ford	16,490,000
Payne Whitney	7,560,000
Harkness	6,940,000
Mellon	6,471,000
George F. Baker	4,970,000
Vanderbilt	4,871,000
Dodge	4,480,000
Guggenheim	4,368,000
Marshall Field	3,890,000
McCormick	3,712,000
Pratt	2,599,000
Cochran	2,424,000
Huntington	2,316,000
Wood	2,080,000

These incomes are estimated from the taxes paid on the basis of statistics of income for 1922 issued by the bureau of internal revenue. Allowance is made for the 25 per cent reduction in tax rates made since that year.

The huge Rockefeller income which heads the list is too much a symbol of America's plutocracy to require much comment. It is drawn from the sweat of workers the world over, from oil workers, coal miners, iron workers and railroad workers, in fact from almost every field in which capitalism has found a basis for large scale exploitation of human labor.

The Ford income is also a byword. It represents the enormous private profits which can be derived from highly speeded mass production in which the workers becomes nothing but a cog in the wheel.

But it is impossible to go into the history of each income. These superwealthy families are so interlocked by marriage as well as by common desire to exploit the workers that they share in almost every form of enterprise—The Mellons in oil, steel, coal and aluminum—George F. Baker of the First National bank of New York in practically all the enterprises controlled by the New York banker ring, notably U. S. Steel and American Telephone and Telegraph.—The Guggenheims exploiting the copper miners.—The McCormicks rooking the farmers thru the price of farm implements. These are just hints at the operations which produce for these families the splendid incomes revealed by the official taxgatherers.

To assure such incomes in the future they depend upon reactionary governments which will allow no tampering with the right of expolitation.

Chicago Location Of Chief American Zeppelin Works

The removal of the Goodrich Rubber company headquarters from Akron to Chicago and the establishment here of the chief American zeppelin works was forecast today, when it became known that the visit to this city of Dr. Hugo Eckner and three chief officers of the ZR-3 was primarily for the purpose of investigating facilities and feasability of the plan.

The plan was revealed by P. O. Lehmann, a brother of Capt. Ernst A. Lehmann, chief pilot of the ZR-3. P. O. Lehmann also said Capt. Lehmann had accepted the position of vice-president of the American Zeppelin Works.

Members of the German party refused to comment on the announcements on their arrival here.

Amalgamated In Cleveland

CLEVELAND.—The Cleveland joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has placed two flying squadrons in the field to unionize factories still outside the field. Unemployment is decreasing somewhat, although many unionists are still out of work in the northeastern Ohio district.

The education season sponsored by the joint board opened with a lecture on Labor in Government.

SELLING JOBS TO COAL MINERS GETS HARD KNOCK

Two Rank and Filers Expose Conspiracy

By E. B. HEWLETT.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Nov. 6.—If a miner wants a job in No. 2 Orient mine, he must have $100.00 or he is out of luck. This was discovered when Joe Klynas, employment agent was exposed as a "job seller," in cahoots with the mine boss.

It has been rumored for a long time that no one could get a job at No. 2 Orient mine from a boss as at other mines, but must see an agent and pay him $100.00, who would then give the applicant some sort of order to take to the mine boss who would put him to work.

Paid The Money.

On or about October 16, 1924, William Shrader and Henry Savolick, who had been to the mine many times to get work and had been told that more men could not possibly be put on, as they had too many already, went there again and heard the same story. So they were told by a friend who to see if they wanted a job. They were introduced to Joe Klynas to whom they paid $100.00 each.

William Schrader went up to miner's sub-district office and told Lon Fox, who is president of the sub-district, that he would try and secure evidence against the bosses and agents, if the sub-district would furnish the $200.00 to buy the jobs. At first Fox did not want to do it, saying that he tried many times to get men to secure evidence against "job sellers" but some of them never came back and others did nothing. Schrader informed Fox that he had been a member of a local union in West Virginia for six years and had property worth $2,000 which he would put up as security.

The sub-district office then gave them the $200.00 which they paid to Klynas and he told them to go to the boss the next day and get the latter an envelope with their miners' papers, and a slip of paper with their names on it to George Pollack, boss of the Orient No. 2. When they had done this a job would be given them.

Investigated First.

When Schrader and Savolick went to the boss next day, they were informed there was no job but when he was handed the envelope he told the two miners to come back at 4 p. m.

When they returned, the boss, took the employment slips back, saying he would have to investigate. Then Schrader and Savolick went to the agent and demanded their money back. He took them into a private room and advised them to return to Pollack, the mine boss and go thru the same performance they went thru the day before. They would then get their jobs. He was right. This time the boss gave them an order for a lamp, known as a "bug light" and they went to work.

After having worked for a few days, Schrader, who was employed as a loader, had no coal and asked the boss for shift work. He was told there was no work for him. The boss says, "Schrader, I have made a mistake when I hired you." Schrader replied: "I guess you did, Mr. Pollack."

Schrader then exposed the whole business and got seven other men to confess to buying jobs. This kind of graft has been going on for a long time.

Agent Is Arrested.

The only man so far arrested was the agent. The boss has not been touched. The agent is free on a one thousand dollar bond.

Now that the ice is broken, others are opening up. Kero Kenny confesses to buying a job on February 5, 1923. The fee at that time was $50.00. Frank Laukis, who confessed to buying a job from Joe Poschkus, was threatened with death by the latter. Poschkus pulled his gun on Laukis and would have killed him had not a woman come between them.

Lon Fox, sub-district president, says he will not allow this to drop until the mine bosses and manager are discharged and their mine papers taken away. It is expected that several more will confess. All those who confess are promised immunity.

Under Soviet Rule

Since the workers and peasants of Russia, under the leadership of the Communist Party, overthrew the feudal-capitalist dictatorship of the czarist regime and established that of the proletariat, the American press has been filled with furious denunciations of the alleged persecutions and terrorism carried out against their opponents by the workers' government. In this orgy of abuse the socialists took a leading part.

Soviet Russia was not a democracy, they wailed, the Communists outdid the capitalists in cruelty to their political opponents! Even Eugene V. Debs beat the air with protests against the incarceration of counter-revolutionary brigands who sought to overthrow the government which Debs so often expressed his willingness to die for.

But the Soviet government has given many proofs that it is not carrying on a war of revenge, against even its most bitter opponents. It has on many occasions pardoned active counter-revolutionists, sentenced to death. Recently it commuted the death sentence on Boris Savinkov, agent of Kornilov, Poincare, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill, in causing death and destruction to the workers and peasants of his own country.

And again on the seventh anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet government, the Communist leaders of the Russian masses make another splendid gesture of peace and forgiveness in granting amnesty to thousands who had fought against the workers of their own country and in behalf of the capitalists of the world.

Needless to state, the capitalist press will not play up this act any more than it does the fact that in every capitalist country in the world thousands of workers are rotting away in vile capitalist dungeons and that even under the so-called labor party government in Britain the stupendous number of 253,000 Hindoos, were imprisoned in India because of their struggle for independence from Great Britain.

The lying capitalist and socialist press has done its worst to put Soviet Russia in a bad light. But the very fact that the Russia of today can afford to be magnanimous to its enemies is the best possible evidence of its growing strength and stability.

Now It Can Begin

With the decisive election of Coolidge, the biggest employers are preparing to lose no time in launching their national open shop offensive against the working masses.

The near future will very likely witness a repetition of the "grand offensive" of 1922. All evidence tends to indicate that the textile workers will again be marked first for slaughter by the capitalists. New England, the home of the re-elected president, has been chosen as the first ground of battle by the bosses. The textile workers of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island have been ordered by the mill barons to accept wage cuts from 10 to 20 per cent.

This drive against the textile workers bears all the ear-marks of being only a prelude to a general onslaught on the workers of all industry. For some time the well-kept press has been ranting about the need for the deflation, the readjustment always downward, of course—of wages. In launching the wage-slashing campaign against the textile workers, the bosses made it their business to be better prepared than they were two years ago.

For months the textile workers have been unemployed or allowed to work only part time. Their resources have been deliberately depleted by the exploiters. Nearly two-thirds of the members of the United Textile Workers have been excused from dues payment in the last few months because of wide-spread unemployment. At the some time the textile barons have been consolidating their forces thru gigantic mergers. The textile operators have been solidifying their ranks for a fight to the finish.

The textile workers can be counted upon to resist heroically these dastardly efforts of their exploiters. This, however, is not enough. Behind the textile barons stands the united power of the strongest employing interests of the country. Behind the textile workers must stand the united forces of the working class from coast to coast. The struggle of the textile workers is a struggle of the entire working class. The employers feel that now they can begin their much-heralded and somewhat delayed open shop drive. They are beginning to garner the fruits of their election victory. The time to halt these anti-labor maneuvers is at hand.

In Minneapolis

According to unofficial returns Emil Youngdahl, Communist candidate for the state legislature on the farmer-labor ticket, is elected despite the opposition of fake progressives and labor leaders.

While the so-called progressives found nothing contradictory in supporting republicans and democrats as the case may be, they achieved a notable unanimity in their opposition to the Communists everywhere.

But for the Communists of Minnesota, the farmer-labor party would be as dead as the shinbone of Saint Anne by this time. The vacillating policy of William Mahoney of St. Paul and the weather cock gyrations of Robly D. Cramer, the alleged "red" of Minneapolis would long since have made the party a cog in the republican machine. But there was nothing red about Cramer except his hair.

The "progressives" had a lot of fun charging the Communists with being visionaries while the former were "practical" politicians. But in that kind of a game, the older political prostitutes can give their pupils cards and spades. The Communists stuck to their principles, and while they did not win many victories in the parliamentary sense, they gained a greater victory in winning the respect and confidence of the masses which was lost by men like Mahoney and Cramer, who supported republican politicians against the Communists running on the farmer-labor ticket.

But the immediate success which these spurious progressives hankered for did not materialize, and they are now left without either virtue of the reward of their treachery. They have allowed La-Follette to inflict a dangerous wound on the farmer-labor party of Minnesota. The Workers Party kept the banner of independent working class political action flying, and is the only party in the United States today that is a farmer-labor party in the real sense.

MacDonald Steps Out

Ramsay MacDonald moved his furniture from 10 Downing street. Stanley Baldwin moved his in. The business of the empire goes on as usual. The exploitation of the workers continues. Nothing has really changed except that millions of British workers are no longer under the illusion that they are running the empire.

The MacDonald government was never a labor government except in name. Even its name was badly diluted. Several Lords and Sirs occupied important position. With few exceptions even the untitled members made no secret of their devotion to the capitalist system.

Stanley Baldwin succeeded Lloyd George. MacDonald succeeded Baldwin. It is Baldwin's turn again. This is democracy, according to the gospel of the Second International. Under it capitalism can change its servants when it pleases.

The MacDonald government was not a labor government but it was forced to do a few things that the ruling class did not like, therefore it gave it the boot. The Soviet loan guarantee and the Campbell case left a bad taste in the months of the British bourgeoisie. The idea that extra-parliamentary action should cause a British government to act was repugnant, unless of course it was extra-legal action on the part of the ruling class. Baldwin will take his orders all the time from the British Federation of Industries.

The Fat Boys Cheerful

The New York stock market reacted splendidly to the unexpected news that Foster had not won the election. The reports ran as follows:

"An enthusiastic and vigorous forward movement in the principal railroad stocks was the stock market's response today to the results of the presidential election. New York Central and Atchison were leaders in this movement. In the first two hours the twenty railroad stocks in the International News Service compilation gained 2.12 points.

"Industrial leaders were taken in hand later and boosted to the highest prices of the year and in some cases to the highest point in their history. American Smelting hung up a new high record. American Sugar made a good response. Oil stocks were not weak and Mexican Seaboard advanced. Call money advanced ½ cent."

If the workers will take this news and ponder over it, remembering that if anything helps the bosses as a class, it hurts the workers in proportion, they will see what they voted for. Also, they will, if they follow that line of reasoning far enough, understand why the Workers Party's struggle is just beginning and why it is the first political party in America which is organizing by basing its lowest and most powerful units on the job, in the shops and factories.

It is reported that James J. Davis is taking a trip to South America and that John L. Lewis is to get the job of secretary of labor. It is also whispered that Lewis is out to trim old Gompers. Even foxy Sam fell for the LaFollette illusion, but it would not surprise us to hear that he is now suffering from a headache.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge suffered a severe shock on November 4. That was the day the Coolidge landslide took place. When Silent Cal was handed the nomination for the presidency, Henry thought he was handed a lemon. But it was Henry who got squeezed. Now watch Cal talk to the workers!

Norman Hapgood says that bunk killed the La-Follette candidacy. We can claim that the Workers Party helped to debunk him.

Significance of the 1924 British Elections

By J. T. MURPHY.

WHILE the election campaign is concentrating upon the Campbell prosecution and the Russian treaty and developing into a frenzied fight against Communism, there can not be the slightest doubt that the fury of the onslaught means more than the imminence of the revolution in Britain.

As a matter of fact that latter is so near or so far, that we need waste any time discussing it at this juncture and concern ourselves with the other reasons governing the anti-bolshevik campaign.

When the conservative party leaders decided on a general election in 1923, two outstanding problems faced them. First, to secure unanimity in the acceptance of the Dawes' plan then in process of completion and second, the consolidation of the forces of capitalism against the rising class feeling amongst the workers due to the prolonged unemployed crisis. The capitalist leaders knew quite well that if they came forward with the Dawes' report as the basis for a "European settlement" that the labor party leaders would pounce upon it and make the utmost political capital from its proposals as a means of advancing the labor party.

Labor Party Got Job.

They knew that the only party that could get this plan accepted in Britain was the labor party. Without the Dawes' report they also knew things were going from bad to worse for they had no plans apart from it. Looking back over the last twelve months, I think we are driven to the conclusion that all other explanations for the surrender of an overwhelming party majority in the parliament have to take second place to this determination to secure the acceptance of the Dawes' plan, the nature of which they alone knew at that time. By the time MacDonald was safely installed the plan was practically ready for him to operate.

The manner in which the conservative leaders carried out their strategic retreat is worthy of study. Choosing the most imperialist of programs arising from the imperial conference—tariff war against foreign competition, empire development, colonial preference, etc., Baldwin cut free from the limitations and commitments of his predecessor, Bonar Law, and at once took a bold stride forward towards the solution of the second outstanding problem—the consolidation of the forces of capitalism against the rising tide of working class discontent.

Immediately he succeeded in bringing back into the fold of the conservative party leadership those who had been cold shouldered because of their coalition leadership viz: Birkenhead, Chamberlain and Co. He drove the liberal sections together on the basis of free trade, and once having done that used the results of the election as an opportunity to modify the party position on the question of tariff war as a means of easing the relations between the conservatives and the liberals ready for the next step when the united forces of the two parties would be required to dispense with the services of the labor party.

Between Two Parties.

In this task he was aided by the attitude of Churchill who, standing first in between the two parties as the rallying force against the labor party, developing the cry which both Baldwin and Asquith echoed at the proper moment for a united front against the labor party. It was easy for him to do this as a free lance and to take the right step on to the conservative platform at the proper moment.

The moment of the election in 1924 completes the process. The conservative party was never more united. The whole of the conservative press is unanimous in the application of the united front policy against labor while the pact for the elimination of three cornered contests where these are deemed to endanger either liberal or conservative seats is consumation which it would have been risky to prophesy to happen nine months after the 1923 election.

But these developments do not constitute the limits of the strategy. Besides committing the labor party to the Dawes' plan and involving it in every phase of imperial responsibility the aim thruout has been to split the labor party. This the conservative party in particular has had in view all the time, taunting MacDonald and his right wing colleagues on their association with Communism and those who sympathize with it. How could all their denials be accepted so long as they did not prove their words by dissociating themselves from these people. The more the labor party leadership developed along the lines of liberalism and imperialism, in their efforts to gather elements from the liberal party and to capture liberal votes at the coming election, the more they were urged to cut the painter. But the time was too short altho MacDonald led the way with the attack first upon the Communists in spite of the incidents of the Campbell prosecution and the signing of the Russian Treaty.

Conservative Strategy.

In this part of the capitalist strategy the conservative and liberal leaders have not been successful altho MacDonald was willing. In fact, the have to dispense with the labor government over-reached itself, for instead of splitting the labor party and weakening the development of class war politics within it, the pushing of the labor party into the position of opposition party will strengthen this development as the only means of developing the labor party.

But why the haste? Here I think we come to the crux of the new situation. The crisis came not on the Campbell case. Had the labor government not made an ass of itself on this question the crisis would still have been upon them. This crisis depended on the Anglo-Russian Treaty. Yet to still narrower limits must we draw it. This hung upon the question of a guaranteed loan and debt recognition.

Raised Great Howl.

On the lines of approach to the Bolshevik delegates, MacDonald received the plaudits of every capitalist paper in the country. But when it came to the loan question especially, there was an almost universal howl. But for this feature, it is probable that there would have been an accommodation with the liberals. This gave the conservatives their chance to develop their campaign against the treaty as a whole and with the help of Lloyd George, the liberal party was swung into line.

Why this complete change in the attitude of the liberals who previously were in favor of developing the relations between Britain and Soviet Russia? None of the liberal leaders have given coherent reasons for the change but have simply echoed the tirades of the conservative party against helping the Bolsheviks. The echo is so complete that we are driven to the conclusion that the conservatives hold the key to the riddle.

Turning to the conservatives for an explanation, we find the following interesting theory propounded by Baldwin on the eve of the election. "Russia never has been, and I do not believe ever will be, one of our principal markets. Geographically and linguistically, conditions are against it, just as those conditions are against us in our trade on the lower waters of the Danube. Our natural markets are the Dominions, South America, and the East. There we have a better chance of competing with the world.

Baldwin's Views.

"Whether we like it or not, the natural exploiter of Russian trade is Germany. They have always done the largest trade in Russia because, geographically, they are the most favorably situated and they study the Russian language and understand Russian methods of business. In my view the thing for world trade, of which we should do our share, would be the development of Russian trade by us and when it becomes possible by Germany that she should turn into that market, which some day, but not yet, will be a great market—that she should turn into that country the surplus of exports which is to provide for the payment of reparations and incidentally of some of our interest to America—that she should do that rather than the bulk of that surplus should be turned either into this country, or into our own special markets which I have described."

In addition therefore, to the hatred of the Bolshevik government of Russia there is also a very definite fear of the increased competition that the rehabilitation of Germany is bound to bring. As a matter of fact, in the same speech Baldwin states: "It is perfectly true that the increased trade that will come from the rehabilitation of Germany, that is to say the increased world trade, must be coupled at the same time with an increased competitive power in Germany, and you have to weigh the balance of advantage. The probability in my view is that the balance on the whole is to our advantage, too, subject to one or two observations I shall have to make." These observations I have already quoted.

On Dawes' Plan.

The position therefore, becomes clear. The opposition to the Russian Treaty is based upon the acceptance of the Dawes' plan by the British imperialists. To carry out the Dawes' plan and secure reparations it is obvious that they are anxious to be able to compete effectively and at the same time to be safeguarded against the competition. The latter part of the scheme won't stand a great deal of examination but the question of competition and the relation of the Russian Treaty thereto is all important for different reasons to those put forward by Baldwin.

For example, we should require to be credulous to thing that British capitalists are prepared to hand over any market to a competitor. Even Baldwin's Limited are not so generous if their recent completion of a £70,000 order from Russia is anything to go by. The argument that the geographical and linguistic factor is against British trade too funny for words. If the Russian market is to be handed to Germany because they are neighbors, why not China to the Japs and South America to the United States. As for language, is Chinese easier for the poor Britisher to learn than Russian?

The Russian Market.

I think we must go a little deeper than these specious reasons. When all allowance is made for the hatred of the Bolsheviks there is not the least shadow of a doubt that when the British capitalists see their competitors rushing into the Russian market, they will not be far behind. A comparison of the trade they have already made with Russia and the trade made by their competitors with Russia since the revolution will prove that. But the fact of the matter is, both British and foreign capitalists do not want to aid the Bolsheviks of Russia at all and will only develop in that direction accordingly to the pressure of circumstances. A further factor must be taken into account and that is, the British capitalists have got first offers and hold a favorable position in relation to their competitors for the Russian market.

But these offers are not altogether timely when placed in relation to the competitive factors operating in the world market especially with the Dawes' plan holding premier position in the capitalist plan of campaign. They know as well as we that the placing of orders to the tune of thirty million pounds would have a decided effect upon unemployment and upon the workers generally. They know that immediately there is the slightest sign of revival of trade it is the signal for the workers to make demands for a recovery of their losses, for wage improvements, etc. To get such demands at the time when all the other conditions of the market arising from the application of the Dawes' report are insisting upon reductions of wages and the lengthening of the working day and week would be fatal to the efficacy of the conquest of the world market.

Behind The Screen.

The opposition to the Russian Treaty is therefore, more than an anti-Bolshevik campaign and is based upon a planned offensive against the workers of Britain to bring their conditions down to competitive levels established in Germany. Until that has been accomplished there will be no means enabling the placing of large orders from Russia.

This conclusion is forced upon us by the general preparation going on thruout industry for this offensive. Hichens, a chairman of Cammell Lairds, stated frankly to the I. L. P. summer school that "The main cause of the present trade depression lay in conditions outside the control of Britain—in European unrest, in the poverty of other nations due to the war, in foreign rivalries and competition. . . . As a temporary measure to meet this situation, I believe it is inevitable that real wages in this country must fall. I say real wages because it is possible that nominal wages reckoned in money will rise. They tend to rise, in fact, at the present moment."

The industrial correspondent of the "Morning Post" writing on September 22, of the iron and steel position, says, "A reduction in production costs would appear to be the only way in which to get the industry back onto a sound basis, and prevent the blowing out of further furnaces in the near future."

Demand Wage Cut.

The "Financial Times" of the same date declares in reviewing the coal situation created by German competition, "There is only one way left to combat German competition and that is to get the costs of production in this country down to the German level. Under the seven-hour working day and the new wage agreement that may be regarded as a sheer impossibility, for the miners will sacrifice neither one nor the other of these conditions." Sir George Hunter, a prominent shipbuilder, declared also "Improvement in the shipbuilding industry would not come unless the shipbuilders could induce the leaders of trade unions to help them reduce their costs and to co-operate with them." These quotations could be multiplied ad lib, but there is here sufficient to reveal the fact most clearly that the defeat of the Russian Treaty at this juncture is part of the general economic offensive against the working class of Britain bound up with the operation of the Dawes' report. The coincidence of the two features accounts for the ferocity of the anti-Bolshevik campaign far more than the growing importance of Communism in Britain. While the fact that the labor party is bound to the Russian Treaty more positively and wholeheartedly than to the Dawes' plan made it imperative that the labor government should be immediately displaced altho the conservative party tactics had not come to full fruition.

Served The Purpose.

The calling into being of the labor government was therefore, determined primarily by the need to secure the acceptance of the Dawes' report by the working class movement. The end of the labor government was caused by the historic association of the British working class movement with the Workers' Republic of Russia and these associations cutting clean across the fulfillment of the plans of the imperialists in spite of the willingness of the labor leaders to serve. The treaty of negotiations were conducted on approved bourgeois lines. The compromises forced upon the Russian workers were bourgeois compromises. But the objective situation ruled that the operation of the treaty interfered with the major plans of imperialism involving the intensification of imperialist competition thruout the world and the deeper enslavement of the workers. Hence the defeat of the labor government. Hence the new coalition of the Tories and Liberals.

But the plans are not complete and the sequel is destined to prove as interesting and important as the incident of the labor government. The defeat of the Russian Treaty is bound to make it the first plank of all labor agitation dealing with unemployment and whether MacDonald and his friends like it or not, draw the working class of Britain closer to the workers and peasants of Russia. The failure of the capitalist plan to split the labor party before driving it out of office is destined to deepen the working class development within it; to strengthen the class conscious forces and give a leftward impetus to the whole movement. The speeding up of the forces of the competitive struggle of imperialism has thus destroyed the labor government, but how deeply the country is being ploughed for Bolshevism!

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Jacques Grdon, concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, was soloist with the organization at the regular concert given in Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday. Gordon played for the first time in America, the Gregorian concerto for violin and orchestra, by Ottorino Respighi. Respighi has busied himself greatly in the last few years studying medieval Italian music and this concerto is one of the fruits of his labor.

Thruout the three movements there is a sombre, mysterious atmosphere, reminiscent of the old illuminated manuscript music that is still sung in Italian cathedrals. The work must be ferociously difficult to play, and Gordon did it perfectly. To us there seems a great improvement in the concertmaster's work. The tension in his style, so annoying heretofore, was entirely gone.

Liquid What?

Contrasting with modern composition, Gordon played the eight concerto by Spohr. This concerto is a work of simple, almost ingenuous liquid melody thruout, tho there are passages of virtuosity which is not music that is the fault of the concerto form.

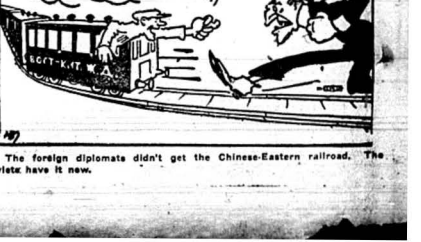
Following this was an English horn solo with orchestra. The symphonic poem "The Swan of Tuonela" by Jean Sibelius. Tuonela is the Hades of Finnish mythology, and in this weird and gripping movement the composer describes the swan that swims on the river surrounding Tuonela. The use of the English horn produces just the effect the subject needs. And if there is anything connected with the playing of the instrument that Mr. Napolilli does not know, it is not worth knowing.

The Less the Better.

To open the concert Mr. Stock chose that bit of musical laughter the overture to "The Bartered Bride" by Smetana. He followed this up with a work by Smetana's greatest musical compatriot, the twenty seven variations for orchestra by Dvorak. If some twenty of these were excised from the score, one might listen to the composition in a better frame of mind.

The rhapsody "Finlandia," also by Sibelius, closed the program. This is the composer's best known effort. It starts out with a cold, gloomy section, and winds up fast and furiously with an infectious dance rhythm.

TOO LATE!



The foreign diplomats didn't get the Chinese-Eastern railroad. The Soviets have it now.

TRUTH ABOUT "ZINOVIEV LETTER"

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

MOST people who know anything about China, and they are comparatively few, that China had a republican form of government since the Manchu dynasty was overthrown. And it had—after a fashion. But a civil war is a great scavenger and part of the rubbish brought to light by the battling generals, Chang and Wu Pei Fu, and their assistants, is the "boy emperor" who was drawing the rather generous allowance of $4,000,000 a year in a poverty-stricken country.

IT took a christian general by the name of Feng to drop this monarchial specimen into the back yard and cut his pay to the proportions of that of an American movie villain. During those years that China was supposed to be enjoying the blessings of republicanism—we write this with a sardonic grin—the poor workers of the celestial kingdom, were licking their chop sticks, while the "boy emperor" was worrying his head off trying to find a way of spending his yearly pay check.

GENERAL FENG is reported to be a christian. Let us hope there is a Chinese brand. If there isn't and Feng is akin to the tribe of which America boasts, the difference between what the young ex-emperor will receive from now on and what he received in the past will not lighten the load on the backs of the Chinese workers, but it may give Feng a heavier paunch.

ALL things considered, things are moving in China. The capitalist papers tell us that the Chinese were just as fond of their little boy emperor with his $4,000,000 salary as when the Manchu dynasty reigned. Peculiar how the masses are always supposed to adore their rulers. The Russian masses loved their little father! But today there is a ton of granite on his chest, or where his chest used to be, and the Russian masses that he formerly tyrannized over are breathing freely and going about with smiles on their faces. The American workers are supposed to revere the little nincompoop in the White House, while the British slaves are praised for their loyalty to the crowned specimen of senility, who was born with a golden crown in his royal cradle. Bunk without end.

THE boy emperor of China is lucky, so far. But revolutions have a queer way with them. You can never tell what they are going to do next. The Chinese revolution is not yet over by any means. Foreign capitalist powers prevented the revolutionists from finishing the job. But there are revolutionists yet in China whose appetite for the head of reaction is not whetted. Watch Sun Yat Sen. We cannot vouch for what he is going to do next or whether he will always be true to the principles for which he is fighting. But so far he has done well and has proved faithful to the trust reposed in him. If Sun Yat Sen is successful in his plans, it is possible the "boy emperor" may be chewing chopsticks, unless he loses his teeth.

SO John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, is going to be rewarded for his services to the G. O. P. by the post of secretary of labor in the Coolidge cabinet! James J. Davis, the present incumbent, will devote all his time to his fraternal organizations. That is his business. The canny Welshman gets one iron-clad, or one dollar for every sucker he ropes into the Loyal Order of Moose. It is said that Lewis did not play a conspicuous part in the election campaign owing to the fact that he wanted to keep on the right side of the miners who supported La-Follette, because the worthy John L. intends to enter the lists against Sam Gompers for the office of president of the American Federation of Labor. That is Lewis' greatest ambition, as he, in a lucid moment, confided to a friend of mine.

"LOONEY GAS" CHIEF FOR STANDARD OIL SHOWS SYMPTOMS OF INSANITY

BAYWAY, N. J., Nov. 7.—Dr. Matthew Mann, chief chemist in the ethyl lead gas factory of the Standard Oil company, has been taken to the hospital with "looney gas" symptoms. Five workers died last week from the same gas. Organized labor, thru the Workers' Health Bureau, seeks to have production stopped.

ALL ITALY IS STIRRED BY NEW FASCIST CRIMES

Province of Parma Is in State of Siege

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHIASSO, Italo-Swiss frontier, Nov. 7.—The province of Parma is today in a state of siege, and the governors of Trent, Milan, Turin, Verona and Trieste are preparing to establish a rule of martial law in a desperate effort to quell the uprisings which have been flaring up all over Italy as a result of the shooting by Fascist militia of twelve ex-soldiers who were taking part in Armistice Day celebrations in Rome.

Fire On Celebrators.

The demonstration of Nov. 4, the day on which peace was declared between Austria and Italy, in 1918, was organized by Italia Libera, a liberal association opposed to the fascisti regime. The organization aroused the wrath of the blackshirts by refusing to participate in the anniversary celebration of the fascist march on Rome two years ago, and by launching an appeal to the workers of the country to oppose the holding of the blackshirt "jubilee." While the sympathizers of the Italia Liberia were marching thru the Piazza del Popolo, in Rome, a gang of blackshirt militia opened fire on them, killing one and wounding eleven.

A tense situation has resulted. General Varini of the militia has challenged General Garibaldi to a duel as a result of Garibaldi's manifesto charging the militia with responsibility for the attack in the Piazza del Popolo. Deputies Violo and Fonzio San Sebastino, up to now staunch supporters of fascist rule, have resigned from parliament following a visit to Mussolini, during which they attempted to make him give up the dictatorship.

The fascisti, in their turn, are determined to crush every attempt at rebellion, even tho it be only symbolic. An ex-soldier in Brescia visited the graves of a number of ex-soldiers, and attempted to decorate the graves with red flowers and photographs of Giacomo Matteotti, socialist, who was slain by a gang of fascist. Blackshirts seized the soldier and tore the flowers and photographs from him.

Mass Revolt Evident.

But beneath the mere legal form of rebellion—beneath official visits to the premier and resignations from the parliament, runs the current of mass revolt. Labor organizations and the Communist Party are going about their tasks of organization with renewed vigor, preparing the working class for the struggle which is imminent. Parma, the province which has been placed under martial law, is the center of syndicalism in Italy, and has been the scene of constant fighting against the fascist government ever since the blackshirts established themselves in power. In Parma, and in other labor and peasants' centers, workers' organizations have launched manifestos, telling the workers that now, if ever, is the time to raise the red flag and to take up arms against their oppressors.

The strictest censorship has been established thruout the country. Foreign correspondents attempting to send news thru the regular channels have been stopped.

Plenty of Broadcasting.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—From two to eight radio broadcasting stations are operating nightly in large cities of the United States without serious interference in the reception of programs even by tiny crystal sets, acting Secretary of Commerce Stephen B. Davis declared today.

Another Klan Parade.

DELAWARE, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Parade of 25,000 members of the Ku Klux Klan as a prelude to a conclave of the order will be held here tomorrow night, it was announced today.

"For the Soviets!"

Communists Answer Coolidge's Anti-Red Week

TO ALL PARTY MEMBERS AND BRANCHES:—

Dear Comrades:—The department of the interior of the national government has announced that President Coolidge will issue a proclamation declaring the week of November 17-23 as American Education Week, and calling for a nation-wide observance of this week, in the public schools, thru mass meetings and other methods.

The character of this celebration is indicated in the program which has been adopted for the various days of the week's celebration. One of these is "Revolutionists, Communists and extreme pacifists are a menace to these guarantees," referring to the guarantees of the American constitution. Another is "The red flag means death, destruction, poverty, starvation, disease, anarchy and dictatorship."

From these and other quotations it is apparent that this "Education Week" is directed against the Communist movement in the United States and is to be a period of agitation for American democracy and against the Communist program.

"Forward to Soviets!"

The central executive committee of the party has decided on the "Forward to the Soviets" week as a counter-demonstration against this agitation directed against our movement. You will find enclosed a circular containing the program for "Educational Week" as developed by the bureau of education of the national government and in a parallel column, day by day, the party slogan for the same day.

The party press will carry, during the "Forward to the Soviets" week, each day, the slogans of the bureau of education and in a parallel column the slogans of the party, and all party members should conduct agitation during this week, day by day, in accordance with the slogans set forth in the party schedule. This agitation should be conducted in the shops, in the unions, thru distribution of party literature, the party press, etc.

The party will issue a special leaflet, "The Soviets vs. the American Constitution," of which every party unit should order a supply for distribution during this week. The price of this leaflet will be $2 per thousand. You will find an order blank enclosed herewith and we urge you to send in your order promptly.

Build Party Membership

The principal task set for the party branches by the central executive committee to increase the party membership during this "For the Soviets" week. We have just gone thru a great campaign agitation but we have not, during this campaign, emphasized the organizational side and built our party membership. We have prepared the ground for increasing the party membership during the campaign and it is now our duty to harvest where we have sown.

The central executive committee, therefore, sets as the task of every party branch to add at least two new members to the branch roll during the "For the Soviets" week. Our slogan is "Let's answer Coolidge's Anti-Red Week by adding two thousand new workers to the party membership. Answer Coolidge by making Communists."

Arrange Mass Meetings

Each city central committee, or where there is no city central committee, an unattached branch of the party, should hold at least one public mass meeting during the "For the Soviets" week, at which speakers should discuss the issues as set forth in the party slogans as against the Anti-Red Week slogans.

Comrades, let us make of this "For the Soviets" week a week of Communist propaganda and organization. Let us answer Coolidge by building our party. Let us answer the attempt to foster the illusion of democracy in the minds of the workers by propaganda to familiarize the workers with the Soviets.

The time is short for action. Organize your forces and make your Anti-Red Week demonstration an impressive event.

Fraternally yours,

C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party.

SOVIET GOVERNMENT WARNS THE CAPITALIST POWERS TO KEEP PAWS OFF RUSSIAN ISLANDS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—George Chicherin, Commissar for Foreign Affairs in the Soviet government, today dispatched notes to the foreign powers formally announcing Russia's claims to all the Arctic islands off the northern coast of Siberia. Russia threatens to "demand satisfaction" from all governments supporting claims in opposition to those of the Soviets.

Washington Sees No Dispute.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The United States is not involved in any dispute with Soviet Russia over island territory in the Arctic, it was learned here today. Officials believe that the Soviet note sent to the powers is simply a reiteration of the blanket Russia claim for all territory in the Arctic regions.

The American flag has been raised over Herald Island, a small island near Wrangel, by Captain Louis Lane, of the schooner Herman, but the United States has made no formal claim of ownership, and while no official statement has been made on the question, it is not believed the United States will press any claim it might have.

GRAY-HAIRED WOMAN HOLDS HOME AGAINST LOADS OF POLICEMEN

A gray-haired women of 55, armed with a revolver and backed up by two pugnacious bulldogs, held two wagon loads of policemen at bay this afternoon when they attempted to eject her and a 70-year-old woman companion from their second floor flat.

The police were summoned by two deputy sheriffs who had sought to serve a writ of dispossession and had been met with active resistance.

Charge Doheny Got Contract to Save the Oil for the Navy

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 7.—Cross examination of Admiral J. K. Robinson, in the federal court trial of E. L. Doheny oil lease cancellation suit here today, brought forth testimony that the Doheny oil interests received their second Pearl Harbor fuel oil tankage contract thru the navy's desire to protect the naval oil reserves from drainage of outside wells and to provide fuel oil storage needed for war time emergencies.

The Doheny contract was made because former Secretary of the Navy Denby wanted the Elk Hills naval reserve oil kept for the navy's use and not drained off by privately owned wells operating just outside the reserve, Robinson said.

Students Fight Red Baiting.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 7.— The United Students' League recently organized for the purpose of combating the red baiting propaganda in the public schools invites members of the Workers Party and of the Young Workers' League to attend their mass meeting on Sunday, Nov. 9, at Workers' Hall, 208 East 13th street at 2:30 p. m.

TORIES FORGED "RED" LETTER TO BRITAIN

MacDonald Committed Grave Blunder

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The committee appointed by the British labor party government to investigate the alleged Zinoviev letter, has concluded its investigation and reported that after a careful study of the evidence in the case, it is convinced the letter is a forgery.

Had not Ramsay MacDonald been so exceedingly anxious to attack Russia and the Communist movement, he would not have fallen so quickly for the frame-up.

The facts, as given out semi-officially, appear to be as follows:

The British admiralty had a very efficient espionage service in Moscow, from which it secured documents from time to time. Other departments of the British government had its own service there, including the foreign office.

Laid Snare for "Stool"

It seems that Soviet cheka was on to the activities of the British admiralty stoolpigeon, and when they discovered his business a special letter was put where he could photograph it as a test. Things happened just as the cheka expected and the British spy photographed the fake letter and sent the pictures to London.

When the foreign office in London got hold of the letter it jumped at the opportunity to prove that the Soviet government was violating the Anglo-Russian treaty. It never occurred to Ramsay MacDonald that his government was violating the treaty by having spies and agents provocateurs in Moscow spying on another labor government, and a real labor government at that.

The fake document got into the hands of the conservative party and into the office of the Daily Mail, a tory paper. On hearing this, MacDonald decided to publish the forgery accompanying the publication with a sharp protest note to the Soviet representative in London.

MacDonald Bungled.

The latter immediately branded the letter as a forgery as did the Communist Party of Great Britain for which it was supposed to be intended. MacDonald at first publicly stated that the letter was genuine, but changed his mind afterwards. His muddling hurt the labor party considerably during the election. Had he come out boldly and exposed the forgery as a plot of the tories to discredit the labor party, he could have turned the thing into a boomerang. As it is now, the tories are in power and can blame the affair on some convenient goat.

The committee that investigated the letter could not be accused of having any Communist leanings. They were: Ramsay MacDonald, Arthur Henderson, Viscount Haldane, and Lord Parmoor. They questioned chiefs of the secret service, the foreign office and the military intelligence, but these gentlemen refused to disclose their source of their information on the ground that it might shut off a valuable source of information and jeopardize the lives of British spies in Russia. They refused to tell how the conservatives and the Daily Mail got possession of the fake document.

Communists Were Right.

It is now generally admitted even in labor party circles that the Communist explanation of the reason why the reactionaries allowed the labor party to assume office, was for the purpose of getting over the Dawes plan, which would be impossible under either a tory or a liberal government owing to the hostility of labor. The King's socialists of the Second International accomplished for the master class what their older political servants were unable to accomplish. Now that the dirty work is done, the labor party leaders are turned out into the cold with a loud "haw, haw," and the Zinoviev forgery was part of the plot hatched by the tories to accomplish the end of discrediting the MacDonald government with the unthinking masses.

ROCHESTER, NEW YORK, POLLS GOOD VOTE FOR COMMUNIST TICKET

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov 7.—The vote for Foster in this city was 375, in the county 29, total 404. The Italian ward gave the Comunists 64 votes. The capitalist press said before the election that we would get less than a hundred.

They Wanted to Make Sure.

I was informed that in the precinct where I voted, that five votes for William Z. Foster were counted as republican party votes. It is the 6th precinct of the 38th ward, address, 3407 Milwaukee Ave. — A Reader, Chicago.

RED FLAG FLIES ON 7TH YEAR OF SOVIET VICTORY

World Labor Celebrates Bolshevik Triumph

Seven years ago the proletariat of Russia dared to challenge the stupendous powers of world capitalism.

Today, after passing thru the chill years of famine and pestilence and the vengeful ring of fire and steel in which all capitalist nations joined hands to crush and starve and murder them, the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia stand triumphant. They are the ruling class!

For Workers' Victory.

From Vladivostok to Leningrad, from the sub-tropics of Turkestan to the icy stretches under the arctic circle there fnes aloft the red flag of proletarian revolution, proletarian freedom, proletarian dictatorship!

Over an area of one-sixth of the surface of the earth, today is the day of days. In Soviet Russia today, millions are marching in unending processions. Red flags dip and wave above them. The buildings are aflame with scarlet streamers. And everywhere is the name of the man and the picture of the man whose genius held the starved and fighting workers true to their historical mission thru every sacrifice—Lenin!

Spirit of Lenin Lives.

Lenin is dead. But Leninism, the spirit of the great strategist of the class war, lives and inspires the workers of all the world. Lenin was sentimental speeches concerning the brotherhood of man. He taught only not a soft man. He did not make the brotherhood of the workers. To them he directed, not tearful laments at their misery, but a call to arms! A call to revolution! A challenge to the whole capitalist world!

Today in every nation of the earth Leninism inspires the workers to follow the lead of the Russian workers and peasants. The starving slum dweller of London or New York, slinking with white face from sweatshop to sweatshop seeking work, the German mechanic, gaunt-eyed, slaving under the Dawes' plan, the vaquero of the Pampas, riding under the stars of Argentina, the black plantation slave, naked and sweating under the whip in Ceylon—all these and millions more turn their eyes to Soviet Russia as to the dawn!

It is the dawn! The red dawn of a new world! Workers of the world, the voice of Marx, the hand of Lenin, beckons you to a new day! Workers of the world, unite, under the banner of the Communist International!

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 7.—North Dakota fell definitely into the Coolidge column today when tabulations from 1,965 of the state's 2,160 precincts gave Coolidge 90,903 LaFollette, 82,609 and Davis, 15,503.

SOVIET ENVOY TO PARIS TAKES OVER EMBASSY

Finds Jewels, Silver, But No Documents

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 7.—Christian Rakovsky, Soviet envoy in Paris making preliminary arrangements with the French government prior to the arrival of Leonid Krassin, Soviet ambassador to Paris, today took over the Russian embassy, the splendid palace which was once the seat of Russian nobility in France, the home of intrigue and the rendezvouz of Parisian society.

Today the red flag of revolution flies triumphant over the palace of the Czar's diplomats and the representative of the workers of Russia is in possession.

An Amusing Incident.

Rakovsky had as his guide officer who was imprisoned by the Czage in Moscow during 19[illegible] minded the Soviet envoy dent and complained of t[illegible] able experience he had in t[illegible] prison. Rakovsky shrug[illegible] shoulders and smiled, saying[illegible] no better off, for I was kept m[illegible] a year in a filthier Roumanian [illegible] with a policeman threatening [illegible] me every second day. I escaped [illegible] merely turn the swift scimitar [illegible] sian battalion on the Roumanian front. It turned Bolshevist and carried me off in triumph to Russia and I am now an ambassador. The changes of destiny are always queer."

Found Valuable Treasure.

Rakovsky found silver and plate in the embassy worth about $1,000,000. The Kerensky gang who have occupied the palace in the past seven years got away with much treasure which the French government may have to account for.

The Russian envoy was disappointed when told that it was quite likely the czarists destroyed the secret documents which were hidden in the archives.

While Rakovsky was looking over the new Soviet embassy, French Communists were holding large meetings, celebrating the 7th Anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

Vote to Trade With Russia.

MOSCOW, Nov. 7.—Christiania reports that in its closing session the Storting (Norwegian Parliament) passed unanimously a bill empowering the government to guarantee credits to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for the purchase by the latter in Norway of salted fish.

Heaiz Candidate for Reichstag.

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Max Hoelz, now serving a sentence of twenty years in the penitentiary, leads the Communist list of candidates-at-large for the Reichstag.

BRITISH TORY CABINET TAKES OVER TASK OF RUNNING THE EMPIRE

LONDON, Nov. 7.—England's tory government headed by Premier Stanley Baldwin, began to function this afternoon. It will meet tomorrow to formulate policies. The seats of office were transferred from the retiring laborite cabinet to the new Baldwin ministry at Buckingham palace at noon.

Young Workers! Take Notice!

Fifteen thousand copies of the special edition of the YOUNG WORKER are off the press. It is now our task to sell them. Every live member of the Young Workers League will be present at the meeting, Sunday, Nov. 9, to get instructions on how and where to sell them.

Branches Nos. 1, 4, 5 and 6 will meet at 3322 Douglas Blvd.

Branches Nos. 2 and 3 will meet at 722 Blue Island Ave.

Both meetings are being held Sunday evening at 6 o'clock. Branches Nos. 2 and 3 will work together on Philipsborns the first week and on the Chicago Mailing Order House the second week. The other branches will work on Sears-Roebuck & Co. the first week and on Montgomery-Ward & Co. the second week.

SHOW AMERICAN LEGION DIRECTS EDUCATION WEEK

Power Behind Program of Red-Baiting

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The American Civil Liberties Union, leading the fight against the red-baiting program written by the American Legion for American Education Week, bares the fact that the Legion is not only getting up the program but selecting the organizations to cooperate.

The Liberties Union accuses John J. Tigert, U. S. Commissioner of Education, who is supposed to be in charge of American Education Week arrangements, with "unwarranted violation of trust in the conduct of a public office and its prostitution to the private interests of a military organization."

Plan Attack on Radicals.

Features of the programs for Monday and Tuesday, November 17 and 18, the first two days of the week set aside for speeches on education thruout the country are to be attacks on radical organizations, according to the written program, which the Liberties Union says were prepared by the Legion. The announcement for Constitution Day, the 17, says: "Communists and pacifists are a menace to these guarantees." About Patriotism Day, it says: "The red flag means death, destruction, poverty, starvation, disease, anarchy and dictatorship . . . stamp out revolutionary radicalism."

Invites From Legion.

Request for speakers should be made to the American Legion, the official announcements read.

Invites From Legion.

The Young Women's Christian Association, representing 600,000 members, the Liberties Union, thru Miss Addy, general secretary that association, to take part in American Education Week came direct from the American Legion, not from the U. S. Commissioner of Education. The latter was emphatically declined because of the militaristic nature of the movement and will throw its support to the American Education Conference to be held independently the same week in New York City.

A prominent list of educators has followed the lead of Roger N. Baldwin, and other directors of the Liberties Union in protesting against the legion's militarising of education propaganda. Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard; Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, president of Brown University; H. W. Tyler, secretary of the American Association of University Professors; among the persons who have communicated their protests against Tigert's high handed alliance with a private militaristic organization to the Liberties Union.

James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, tells the union that "The legion propaganda program will not only tend to stultify the brain but act as a smoke screen to becloud just grievances and the shortcomings of misfit public officials."

Last word from Tigert is that he will go ahead with his program. The Liberties Union is organizing public meeting protests.

FOKKER, DUTCH AIRPLANE MAKER, BOOSTS FOR A BIGGER AIR WAR FLEET

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—H. G. Fokker, Dutch airplane manufacturer, arrived today from Europe with a warning to the United States that it must awaken to realization of the importance of an adequate air program for warfare.

Only ten per cent of the airplanes in the world now, he said, are for commercial purposes. Japan, according to Fokker, is engaged in an extensive plane building program under direction of German engineers. He predicted that within ten years there would be regular 24-hour trans-Atlantic travel by "plane."

MACHINE GUN NESTS READY TO UNLEASH DEATH ON WEST VIRGINIA COAL MINERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 7.—Machine gun nests in the hills about the coal mines in the Banaokville section of West Virginia are the mocking echo to the political oratory about freedom that filled the state during the presidential campaign. Supplementing the guns are high power searchlights. Armed bands range and patrol the country, some for the companies, some for the state and helping the companies, some on their own.

The company had been operating on a union basis until this spring. The West Virginia Federationist, official labor organ endorsed by District 17, of the United Mine Workers, charges that under cover of the political campaign the nonunion coal and steel masters are making a drive to wipe out the miners' union in West Virginia with the connivance of the public officials of both parties.

FRENCH LABOR ASKS VANZETTI, SACCO BE FREED

6,000 Protest at U. S. Embassy Office

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 7.—Six thousand workers, with a group of Communists at their head, stormed the office of the American embassy last night and demanded the release of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the two Italian-American workers to whom the Massachusetts supreme court has denied an appeal from the judgment which, if carried out, is to send them to the electric chair on a framed-up murder charge.

Fight Back Police.

The workers resisted the attacks of two hundred police agents, sent by the perfect to scatter their gathering. Reserves were called out, but it was impossible to stop the manifestants, whose fury was at fever heat.

The Communists met at the workers houses in the Rue de la Grange and marched from there to the American embassy. Thousands of workers on the streets, learning the purpose of the demonstration, joined the marchers on their way, and by the time the embassy was reached the group had assumed the appearance of an army of protest.

The demonstration recalled the furious protests of four years ago which the sentence of death pronounced on the two young labor organizers in America, called forth from the workers of nearly every country of Europe. It was these protests, directed in each case to the American embassy, which were largely responsible for the delay in the execution of the sentence on Sacco and Vanzetti. It was the hope of the American courts that if the matter were hushed up for a time, the workers would forget the case altogether.

Choose Appropriate Day.

That the workers of Paris chose Nov. 7, the day of the victorious proletarian revolution in Russia, as a fitting time to raise the voice of protest against a sentence which amounts to a virtual murder of laboring men by capitalist courts shows that far from having forgotten Sacco and Vanzetti, the proletariat of France considers the case as a matter of international importance for class conscious workers.

Rail Brotherhood Heads Meet Today to Discuss Labor Board

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 7.—Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has called a meeting of representatives of railroad brotherhoods which takes place here Saturday morning, Nov. 8, and will discuss the Howell-Barkley bill, the bill which is aimed against the railroad labor board, and which is the first, to come up when congress reconvenes. The meeting will open at 10 a. m. in the auditorium of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Stone in conjunction with other reactionary labor leaders, has taken an aggressive stand against this labor board because it takes out of their jurisdiction the right to bargain with employers and makes every deal subject to the board's approval.

STANDARD OIL TRUST KNEW BIG DANGER TO WORKERS FROM POISON

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Instructors in the department of physiology at Columbus university announced today that experiments seeking to determine toxic qualities of tetra-ethyl lead, now blamed for the deaths of five employes of the Standard Oil company at Elizabeth, N. J., have been in progress there for several weeks. The inquiry, it was said, was started at the request of officials of the oil company some time before the accidents occurred.

Tetra-ethyl lead is used in gasoline to make it more combustible so that carbon deposits will not be left in the cylinders of automobile motors.

POOR CHILDREN WILL GET LESS EDUCATION NOW

Those Are the Proposals for Meeting Deficit

The children of the working class will be made to stand the brunt of the $16,000,000 deficit in the school board treasury, is the information that comes from that body in its new proposals to cram public school education into the little breathing space allowed it by the crooked tax dodgers.

The following cut in the education system has been proposed for Chicago: Curtailment in kindergarten work (kindergarten work cost $1,194,905 in 1924); the penny lunches for children of working mothers must be stopped; the grinding of classes for subnormal and special instruction will save an additional $247,000. Night schools and community centers will go, too. And already overcrowded classes will be increased in size.

The board assures the teachers that there will be no reduction in wages, but that no new teachers will be taken on in 1924-1925.

Should all these plans still not net the necessary amount to make up the deficit the public (workers of course) will be called upon to shoulder an additional tax burden.

No mention was made in the proposal to get after the big property holders who have been shown up by the Chicago Teachers' Federation again and again as being responsible for robbing the school funds of millions of dollars annually.

Charge Klansman Desecrated Church.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Nov. 7.—Gordon Wells and William McCreedy, neophyte members of the Ku Klux Klan entered pleas of not guilty today when they were arraigned in Chittenden county court charged with grand larceny in connection with the desecration of St. Mary's cathedral. The work of drawing a jury was begun immediately.

William C. Moyer, a Klan Kleagle, who Wells and McCreedy said was their leader, has pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny.

Hunt Wins in Arizona.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 7.—With only 45 precincts to be heard from, Governor George W. P. Hunt, a liberal democrat, noted as a "friend of labor," is more than 1,000 votes ahead of his opponent. The "W. P." does not mean the Workers Party. Hunt has been known as assisting any organization even the I. W. W., which would organise the copper miners.

SAY BROOKHART LEADS IN IOWA BY 1,156 MARGIN

Subject to Canvass in State Nov. 24

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Recheck of the senatorial vote in Iowa shows that Senator Brookhart leads his opponent by 1,156 votes.

These figures are not final, being subject to canvass by the state executive council on Nov. 24.

But this increases to some extent the LaFollette group's balance of power in the next senate.

The republican "majority" will be dependably republican only when the interests of the middle class are not threatened. LaFollette and his followers remain a potentially powerful factor in both houses, even the somewhat curtailed from their position in 68th congress.

The new senate will be composed of 55 republicans, 40 democrats and one farmer-laborite. That gives a paper majority of 14. Of this 14, however, there are still five of the LaFollette group, Bob himself, Brookhart, Norris of Nebraska, and Frazier and Ladd of North Dakota.

The "Maverick" Progressives.

Besides these, there are several others who, altho not clearly allied with the LaFollette group, have voted and will vote with it in matters that are vital to the petty bourgeoisie. For example the blind man, Schall, who defeated the Cowmilker Magnus. Schall has bolted the republican party caucus any time he took the notion and even voted for a democrat as speaker of the house.

Some More Vacillating Senators.

Other senators who have voted with LaFollette and who may be untrustworthy so far as the old guard republicans are concerned are the two from Dakota, Norbeck and McMaster, Howell of Nebraska, Johnson of California, Cousons of Michigan, Capper of Kansas and Borah of Idaho.

Of course, these queer fish are of the capitalist species, first and last, but not all the time for the big capitalists. To make a showing for the interests of their small business and rich farmer constituency they are likely to get "revolutionary" enough to play around the Wisconsin fraud.

Silent Cal Will Have to Speak Up.

Now that the big business and banking interests feel that they have everything tied and guaranteed for four years, they are already trying to collect on the good chance afforded them by their unquestioned dictatorship. They are having Andy Mellon get to work now preparing recommendations to cut the income tax on high incomes.

This business is a pretty raw deal to put over right after election. Some of the "progressive" republicans that stand half way between Coondge and LaFollette are afraid that any such move will stir up Bob and his "progressive" crew, who will make capital of it in calling it the action of a "rich man's congress."

The trouble is that this reduction on big incomes could be carried out, if only the tax on small incomes of the middle class were cut also. But the politicians say that these have been cut down now as far as the treasury will stand, and that if anything is reduced it must be the tax on big incomes, and let the little business man stand the heavier loil. Cal is thus caught between two fires and so soon after election, too!

LIVINGSTON, Ill. — Foster got 18 votes out of 573. LaFollette got 339 a majority of all votes cast. The "illusion got them." The next time the real thing may have a show.

Foster Beats Davis.

BRULE, Wis.—Foster beat democrat Davis a way yonderdin this town Foster got 38 votes, Davis 7, LaFollette 60, Coolidge 83.

CARLTON, Minn. — Incomplete returns give Foster 77 votes in Carlton county, with Davis next higher with 176. Not so bad.

St. Louis County Pretty Fair.

DULUTH, Minn. — Tabulated returns for both the city of Duluth and the county precincts show that the Workers Party made a fine showing among the workers, especially outside of Duluth in the Mesaba Iron Range district. While in Duluth, Foster got only 46 votes, in the outside precincts of St. Louis county he polled 273 votes altho the total vote in the country was about the same as in Duluth. This makes 319 in the whole county.

Says It's a Shame. We Agree.

ROYALTON, Ill.—The number of votes cast here for the Workers Party was 12 votes straight and 12 votes mixed. It's a shame we got only 24 votes out of 700 miners.—William Patch.

Johnston, Confessing Failure, Falls Back On the Dear People Again

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, additional information piles up, showing that other "labor leaders," following in the wake of the Tammany Hall trade union officials in New York, are planning to scuttle their "Third Party" political tugboat, that sprang so many leaks on election day.

It is William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, a renegade socialist, however, who offers the most peculiar alibi, as the basis for future action.

* * * *

In the Washington correspondence of Laurence Todd, the Federated Press representative, this Communist baiter sets forth that he will not sponsor in the American Federation of Labor convention, at El Paso, this month, any resolution proposing the organization of a political party. He charges that is not the function of executives of big labor organizations just now. What they could do and should do was to keep alive the organization in every state that have been established for the resent campaign, in order to be ready for the next emergency.

If a new party is to be created, it must come from the people and not from a few executives, is Johnston's attitude now.

* * * *

This is Johnston, a Fascist in the labor movement, who falls back on the "people," when he has failed in his promises to the workers, to solve their ills thru the LaFollette campaign.

Johnston now disclaims any intentions on the part of labor's executives to hand down their decrees. This is his confession of bankruptcy.

These are the same executives, headed by Johnston as chairman of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, who barred the delegates of local labor unions, rank and file delegates, from the C. P. P. A. gatherings because they might represent, too well, the desires of the masses of labor.

This is the Johnston who was allied with Hillquit, the socialist, and Keating, the democratic politician, editor of "Labor," the railroad men's organ, in the war to bar any Communist influence from driving the C. P. P. A. towards independent working class political action.

This is the Johnston who made war on the Communists in his own union, the International Association of Machinists, upholding the "red-baiting" campaign to expel and suspend Communists from the union.

This is the Johnston who did not consult the membership of the organization when he inaugurated his drive for collaboration with the employers under the infamous "Baltimore & Ohio" plan.

This is the Johnston who fought every effort coming up from the masses, so valiantly sponsored by the Workers (Communist) Party, for the building of the class political as well as industrial power of the working class.

* * * *

Now this same Johnston, pal of Samuel Gompers, says he will have nothing to offer to the El Paso convention of the American Federation of Labor. This is true. He has done just about all the harm he can accomplish. Johnston will remain quiescent until the workers and poor farmers reorganize their battalions for future energetic struggles. Johnston can then be depended on to be active once more on the side of the employing class, trying to throw confusion into the ranks of the workers.

But it is certain that the workers and poor farmers will be better prepared, the next time, to handle misleaders of the type of Johnston, Keating & Co.

Under Communist inspiration and leadership they will be better able to organize their strength and give better support to the class fight, not only against the capitalists, but also against the enemies within their own ranks.

Communist agitation, education and organization will prepare the workers and exploited farmers for future class victories.

CANNON STARTS PARTY STUDY CLASS TUESDAY

Party Members Are Invited to Join

Tuesday night, November 11, will witness the launching of another excellent study class dealing with the History of the American Communist Movement."

The instructor, James P. Cannon, is national educational director of the Workers Party of America, and is well known as an interesting and successful teacher of former study classes. It is expected that many Workers Party members and readers of The DAILY WORKER will enroll for this class which will be held every Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the Technical School, 1902 W. Division St., beginning November 11. As an example of the interesting course of study promised by this class, we quote roughly from the proposed curriculum:

Begins by studying the roots of the present Communist movement inside the old socialist party, I. W. W., etc., treats the reaction of the American working class to the Russian Revolution, and the formation of the Communist International; the militant left wing of the socialist party; the split, the Communist Party, and the Communist Labor Party; driven "underground"; out into the open; the Workers Party; the battle in the trade unions; united front tactics; towards the Labor Party; contemporary radical movements.

Sympathetic readers of The DAILY WORKER are warmly invited to come to this class and avail themselves of the educational facilities of the Communist movement. The fee is $1.50 for the course, or for those taking other classes only 75c.

FOOD GAMBLER IS INVITED BACK TO DO IT ALL OVER AGAIN

Joseph Leiter, ousted from the board of trade 18 years ago, today applied for reinstatement.

Leiter was ousted May 8, 1906, following his sensational but unsuccessful attempt to corner the wheat market, for non-payment of brokerage debts incurred by him in the resultant crash.

All claims outstanding against him, variously estimated about the wheat pit as between $30,000,000 and $7,000,000, are now said to have been settled, to the satisfaction of the directorate of the board of trade.

E. Liverpool "Lap Supper" Party.

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Nov. 7.—We are arranging a nice program of music, speeches and a "lap supper" for our 7th anniversary of the Russian Revolution celebration, which will be held Sunday afternoon, Nov. 9 at 2:30 p. m., at the Trades and Labor Hall. All the comrades here are looking forward to this celebration and everything is being done to make it a grand success.

BUILDING TRADES WORKERS!

All members of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League employed in the building trades are requested to attend a meeting of the Building Trades Section of the T. U. E. L. tomorow morning at 10 a. m., at 722 Blue Island Ave. Important business will be discussed.—Andrew Overgaard.

He Must Have Celebrated.

JACKSON, Tenn., Nov. 7.—Senator R. B. Swink, of the state legislature, today was sentenced to serve six months in prison for violation of the prohibition law. He was sentenced in the federal court.

SOCIALISTS GET HEAVY WALLOP IN NEW YORK

Norman Thomas Peeved at Needle Trades

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 7.—The socialist debacle in this city was overwhelming. The Rev. Norman Thomas, LaFollette candidate for governor on the socialist and LaFollette ticket, polled only 48,137 votes while Fightin' Bob got away with 286,937. Thus it can be seen that the socialists did not gain anything by hanging on to the LaFollette bandwagon but almost annihilated themselves as a political party.

It must be remembered that whereas the Workers Party participates in election campaigns merely as part of its activity, to the socialist party elections are the entire sum and substance of its reason for existence.

Meyer's Seat Gone.

The complete passing of the socialist party as a political factor in New York is shown in the failure of their candidate in the 12th congressional district which sent Meyer London, twice to congress to poll more than a paltry 2,000 votes out of 20,000 cast. The only victory claimed by the socialists in this city is the election of La Guardia, a republican who was endorsed by the socialist party.

Over 5,000 votes were counted for the Workers Party presidential candidate, William Z. Foster, in the city. The Workers Party did not wage a vote-catching campaign but used the occasion to spread Communist propaganda, increase the circulation of the DAILY WORKER and build up the party membership.

Many Gets Small Vote.

Among former socialist office holders to be snowed under was Algernon Lee, who fount himself on the wrong side of one thusand, when the votes were counted. Lee was a member of the aldermanic body and voted for the famous victory arch in honor of the soldiers who died in France to save the Morgan millions. That was about all the soldiers got for their trouble.

Opinion as to whether there shall be a third party or not organised is divided in Socialist councils. Morris Hillquit declared the LaFollette vote proved the need for a new political alignment, but did not commit himself to a new party, except in an abstract manner. He did not even hint at the necessity for forming a labor party.

What Will Sam Do?

What action Gompers may take at the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. is also a matter of conjecture. It is generally conceded that the Tammany labor leaders at the head of the Central Council gave Gompers' prestige a bad blow when they rescinded their endorsement of LaFollette and supported Davis. The Trades Council has a membership of 700,000 and the number of votes taken out of the LaFollette column by the Tammany leader's action was a serious loss to the Wisconsin senator. It is believed that the unions that stood to their original political endorsement were not able to throw more than 100,000 to Fightin' Bob.

Another singular feature of the election was the desertion of the needle trades' votes under the control of Sigman and perhaps Hillman, to Davis rather than to the socialist gubernatorial candidate. Thomas is considerably peeved now over this treachery, but when Comrade Cannon made a statement showing the alliance between the yellow socialist unions and Tammany Hall, the New Leader, edited by James Oneal came out with a great splurge denouncing the Communists for circulating false rumors.

Sidney Respectable.

Sidney Hillman apes Morris Hillquit in his talk of a new party. No more talk of a class party for the versatile Sidney. He says: "It is my opinion that a realignment toward the formation of a new party will be well under way by 1926, when the next congressional elections are held." Abraham Lefkowitz, the gentleman who got callouses on his belly crawling to the Tammany Hall leaders of the Central Trades Council, before the election, now attacks them for speaking in the name of the council. But it is safe to predict that "Abe" and his cohorts will be very quiet at the next meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

The S. L. P. after being in the field for almost 40 years, polled 2,000 votes in New York City. At the rate they are traveling, the social revolution is going in the wrong direction, as the S. L. P. has positively states that it will refuse to recognize it, provided it does not come peacefully at the ballot box, yes, even if it took one thousand years. Any unseemly hurry on the part of the working class to overthrow the capitalist system will be vigorously denounced by the S. L. P. and the National Security League as a Communist plot.

I AM very pleased to note the campaign that has been launched to build the circulation of the DAILY WORKER. If the DAILY had the circulation in Minnesota at the present time that it should have, we would be in a great deal stronger position in carrying out a Communist campaign.

A real circulation for our paper would make it possible for us to expose this corruption and place the leadership in the hands of the left wing. This is our task in Minnesota. You may rest assured that we will do everything possible to bring this home to our membership.

WOBBLY EDITOR STANDS UP FOR THE CLASS WAR

Pacifism in Organization Must Be Fought

The 16th annual convention of the I. W. W. in sifting the charges brought by Claude Erwin, member of Industrial Union 230, against Vern Smith, editor of Industrial Solidarity and the Industrial Pioneer, is timidly probing into the fundamental principles on which the organization is based and is being compelled to trash out the question of whether the I. W. W. is to stand by its revolutionary theories or to retreat before the powers of the courts and the internal trend to pacifism and reformist unionism.

A Revolutionist Heard From.

The charges against Smith, James Morris and Frank Gallagher are based on articles printed in the Industrial Pioneer in September and October of this year. The article in the September magazine to which Erwin has taken objection is an editorial headed: "Mobilize for Class War." It was written for the occasion of Defense Day, and reads in part:

"We, the I. W. W., the fighting vanguard of the labor movement, must rally the working class; we must mobilize ourselves; we must oppose the army of toil to the army of massacre; we must assault, then turn over, and entirely destroy this capitalist system that sets us tasks, and steals our sustenance, and sports with our lives. We must mobilise every day for class war, in the same spirit that Morgan mobilise on September 12 for the cash war."

The One Cure for Injunctions.

The other article mentioned in the charges against Smith is the one entitled "The Acid Test," which appeared in October. The editorial calls on members of the I. W. W. to go into California and violate the Busick injunction—an injunction based on the criminal syndicalism laws of the state and making mere membership in the I. W. W. offense severely to be punished. The editorial states: "We need thousands of workers to go to southern California this winter and violate the Busick injunction—we need a mass repudiation of the injunction and the criminal syndicalism persecution by the hosts of labor. It is the acid test of labor's right to organize. It is the acid test of your sincerity as a class-conscious working man."

The charges against Smith state that the California members of the I. W. W. who are on trial have pleaded no violation of the injunction, and that the printing of such statements as those mentioned, calling for violation of the injunction and the capitalist system, constitutes a betrayal of the I. W. W. members into the hands of the courts.

Erwin Conspired With Rowan.

The majority of the grievance committee, with which the charges against Smith were lodged, reported to the convention that in one respect the action of Claude Erwin was inexcusable—that instead of turning over the charges immediately to the temporary officials selected by the convention, he kept them for days after the convention opened and then carried them only to James Rowan, who was using an injunction in the factional dispute.

The majority report of the committee concluded that the very statement of the I. W. W. preamble constitutes a violation of the Busick injunction, and that when Claude Erwin denies the existence of a class war, he repudiates the position of the I. W. W. The charges that the editorials may result in sending members to jail the committee reported to be groundless.

"No Violation—No Taking of Industry."

Vern Smith, defending himself before the convention scored the spirit of pacifism which, he said, he had noticed growing steadily among the members of the I. W. W.

"I have noticed a tendency on the part of many of our members to back down from the revolutionary principles of the I. W. W.," said Smith. "I wrote the articles with a view to bringing matters to a head, and I am very glad that this affair has come up. I stick now by what I have written, and I say again that we must mobilise in the same aggressive spirit in which Morgan mobilises. I am going to do just what the Busick injunction says I must not do—I am going to try to take over the industries of the world for the workers."

Shall Judge Revise Preamble?

The charge that his articles may result in sending members of the organization to jail Smith refuted by saying that if the capitalist class wants a conviction, it can secure a conviction, evidence or no evidence.

Fred Mann, speaking in favor of Smith, hit the fundamental basis on which the controversy over Smith rests when he said: "The question seems to be whether the I. W. W. is going to retain its revolutionary principles or whether it is going to have its literature written in keeping with the demands of the capitalist legislatures and the capitalist courts. I contend that there is a class war, and that the I. W. W. calls for class war."

Erwin, called to task for his statements, took the curious position that altho there is a "class struggle," there is no "class war"—a statement which Broman characterized as "murky and ill-defined."

SHOW RAILROAD BROKE LAWS AT GRADE CROSSING

Finally Free Towerman Held in Custody

Several more ordinances and state laws, which the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad violated, were read into the record of the coroner's inquest sitting on the killing of ten people when a freight train crashed into a trolley at Kingsbury St. and North Ave., last week.

Section 3410 of the revised municipal code requires that "All railroad tracks provide proper and sufficient lights at the crossings, such lights to be approved by the city authorities."

Train 58 Cars Long

Another section of the municipal code which witnesses have proven the Chicago and Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad violated states "No train greater in length than 700 feet shall be made up, switched or moved in the city, and no train shall more than 20 cars." The train which caused the wreck was 58 cars long, requiring two engines to pull it. Nicholas Wield, who ran one of the engines which pushed the train into the street car, testified that the average length of the freights run along these tracks every night is 35 cars. He stated that two engines are many times required to pull the freights along the track where the disaster occured.

Section 3394 requires that when a train is backing, a brilliant and conspicious light must be displayed on the end car, to show which way the car is moving. Testimony of a dozen witnesses has shown there was no light on the coal car which backed into the trolley. Another ordinance violated by the railroad requires the ringing of the engine bell when the train is passing street crossings.

Some of the questions which have not yet been answered are, "Does the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad have the power to use that section of the city as a private switching yard?" "Will the city continue to allow the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad to do its private switching over dangerous grade crossings?"

Worker Gets Attention

When the jury of six capitalists, selected by Coroner Wolf to "investigate" the wreck were ready to adjourn, the lawyer appointed to defend John Brahe, the crippled towerman upon whom the capitalist authorities and rich corporation were trying to lay all the blame, objected.

"Brahe has been held in jail incommunicado for four days now, without charges and with no evidence," said the lawyer, "don't you think you'd better let him out?"

That was a new idea to the jury and the coroner. But as no excuse was available John Brahe was released on his own recognizance. To the reporter of the DAILY WORKER Brahe said:

"Didn't See Anything

"I haven't been allowed to see any body but doctors and the police. I've been fed on bread and coffee for four days and made to sleep on a cell floor. Just what I've done I don't know." Brahe said he hadn't heard if the Milwaukee railroad was keeping him on the payroll or not. Neither had the railroad's lawyer, Mr. Blum.

LaFollette Controls In Wisconsin; What Will Labor Get?

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 7.—We shall now see what Robert M. LaFollette will do for labor. Not only did he carry Wisconsin in his own race for president, but what is more important, his "progressives" have complete control of the state legislature. The workers of Wisconsin are now going to see what LaFollette will deliver in actual results so far as the state power is concerned.

In the Wisconsin state senate, LaFollette's "progressives" will rule 17 to 10. In the assembly, of the 74 winners now known, 45 are LaFollette "progressives." Five yellow socialists are expected to go along with the LaFollette "progressives" and be hard to tell apart from them.

The State Federation of Labor has this year, and last year as well, condemned the state legislature for anti-labor acts. It will now have a chance to show the world how LaFollette performs when he has control, complete and unquestioned.

Wealth Mounts, Wages Stick

MELBOURNE, Australia.—In 1911, the privately owned wealth in Australia amounted to $7,089,500,000, and at the end of 1923, it increased to $12,050,000,000, an increase of $4,960,500,000. In 1911, the average weekly wage paid to all workers was $12.39 rising at the end of 1923 to $22.62 a week—an increase of 82 per cent, reducing the wage of 1923 to a purchasing power wage, measured on the 1911 level, of $12.44 a week, or 14 cents higher than in 1911.

RUSSIA PLACES TRIAL ORDER FOR EQUIPMENT IN THE UNITED STATES

NEW YORK.—Better employment for wage earners in the United States will result from the $1,000,000 order for oil mill equipment placed in this country by a representative of the Russian government. This is a trial order and should arrangements work out satisfactorily the workers' government of Russia will come to this country for more machinery for their oil industry, meaning additional jobs for American workers.

A. P. Serebrovsky, head of the Russian state oil trust, says Russia's oil reconstruction will take four years with expenditure of many million dollars.

It Looks As If Magnus Johnson Must Go Home And Milk the Cows

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 7.—The great cow-milker, Magnus Johnson, who went down to Washington and got all swelled up because "Silent Cal" invited him to tea and Secretary Wallace challenged him to a milking contest, can go back and milk cows or his own dunghill.

Once Talked of Revolution.

Magnus talked very savagely when he was running for the senate. When he was elected he even offered the opinion that there might be a revolution some day. But when the smooth guys down on the Potomac patted Magnus on the back, he changed his mind about the revolution.

Then Condemned Revolution.

Magnus shied away off to one side when asked to ride in the farmer-labor party wagon this year. He even warned against any dealings with the Communist revolutionists in the St. Paul convention. But mere words were not enough for Magnus. He became vicious, and his Berserk blood boiled against "reds." He betrayed the workers and farmers in the farmer-labor federation. He knifed Emme, the Communist, running on the farmer-labor ticket for congress, and backed Oscar Keller, the republican.

Now the cows have come home to be milked. Magnus himself is whipped in the election by a republican, Thomas D. Schall.

Schall is a blind man, but the workers and farmers of Minnesota have decided that a blind man could see things at Washington better than the faker and hypocrite, Magnus Johnson. Some say that Magnus has even set on cow milking, that he dare not go near the barnyard for fear the cows will eat him. Magnus has received the reward of traitors—oblivion.

Illinois Goes Small.

Small carried the election, even if he had to call out troops to help the Klan bulldoze the voters of southern Illinois without being interfered with by indignant workers.

The new state legislature will be republican by big majority. The LaFollette's "forces of progress" will have to yelp loud in order to be heard above the sound of shifting poker chips and the rustle of banknotes being exchanged from public to private hands.

COMMUNISTS IN GERMANY WAR ON THE DAWES PLAN

Dictatorship in Mass Arrest of Workers

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—Communist candidates will run for the German reichstag under immediate peril of arrest if the repression instituted by the government in view of the national election continues as it has begun. Mass arrests of Communist delegates and party officials are under way.

The attempt to destroy the Communist party of Germany is regarded as a protective measure by the government for the Dawes reparations plan and the huge loan recently sold in America and elsewhere.

The reparations bonds, bearing 8 per cent interest, will be worthless if the Dawes plan is repudiated at the polls.

The Communist International has published a manifesto in Moscow assuring the German Communists of the solid support of the entire international in their defense against extermination. "Down with the dictatorship of the Dawes' robbers," one of its slogans declares.

Have Jobless Fund.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The Unemployment Insurance Fund of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union now totals $250,000, the organization announces. Plans for distribution of benefits are being worked out.

AS WE SEE IT

thoritative quarters. Our readers are allowed to guess whether the position is the reward for activity in the election or a sop from the coal operators, who do not want the scab mines organized. A little thinking on this matter will prove beneficial, particularly to some miners whose sense of organization patriotism may have a tendency to make them proud of this alleged honor conferred on their president.

JOHN L. LEWIS has rendered excellent service to the American capitalists in many ways. His persecution of such men as Alexander Howat, Jim McLachlan, Duncan McDonald and the small army of militants in the miners' union, has entitled him to the consideration of his masters. But what about poor old Sammy, the greatest and cleverest faker of them all. In his old age he has put his foot in it—up to his eyes. He backed the wrong horse. The labor fakers are not pioneers. They are after speedy returns and LaFollette lost and Sam is exposed as a wind bag without any political influence.

THE workers paid no attention to Sam's directions. If they obeyed any labor leader it was the international president and his district tuchuns who could inflict punishment on the members unless they voted for his favorite candidate, or in other words the one who paid best. Now, with the approach of the next A. F. of L. convention, without a "red scare" in sight, there are rumors that the rival tuchuns are gunning for Sam's official head. John L. Lewis wants the job. Will Hutchenson of the carpenters support him? George L. Berry of the printers and Morrin of the Structural Iron Workers have a dual C. P. P. A. organized. Will the various forces who are angered because of Sam's support of LaFollette join hands and drop the old fellow now, or give him the privilege of dying as president of the A. F. of L.? The convention date is not far off and prophets were never in worse odor than just now.

THE Reverend Norman Thomas and Morris Hillquit may begin to bore from within Tammany Hall now. During the election, the doctor was very polite to Al, tho he admitted the smiling gentleman was in bad company. The voters preferred Al's home brew promises to the product of Oyster Bay. Thomas rises and sings: "The people are always right; long live the people." The ex-minister also suggests that it is about time Tammany Hall should break with the South and join the socialist party also on the mythical third party. That is progress.

THE DAILY WORKER has carried several articles during the past six months telling of the decay of the socialist party. Before the election it was bankrupt organizationally. Now it is bankrupt politically. The next move should be a united front between Spargo, William English Walling, and Benson, who is on Ford's payroll and the other disreputables who openly declared for the entrance of this country into the world war. By the way, how many of you remember the once mayor of Schenectady, N. Y., Dr. Lunn. Since then he has been a miserable renegade also lieutenant governor of the Empire state. He is no longer. He was drowned by the Coolidge tidal wave.

PLAN WEEKLY "YOUNG WORKER"

"A Weekly 'Young Worker' by January 1st, 1925!" is the slogan now being heard in the ranks of the Young Workers League.

The organization of the young Communists in this country, which only a year ago began a successful drive to turn its monthly organ into a semi-monthly, is now engaged in an intensive campaign among its membership and sympathizers to issue a weekly paper by the begining of the new year. For this, they are working to raise a fund of $2,000 and to increase their circulation to 10,000 readers.

The DAILY WORKER urges all its readers to come to the aid of The Young Worker and help the young Communists achieve success. This is the first financial and circulation appeal that the revolutionary youth has made to the adult militants and they deserve the hearty cooperation of all workers. The Leagueis the only revolutionary organization that attempts to counteract the insidious influence of capitalist propaganda among the youth of the nation, and to draw them into the ranks of the fighting working class. It is a sign of their success in this work that they are now preparing to widen their field of activity and increase their influence by the publication of a weekly paper.

Adult workers should heed the appeal by sending money—as much as you can—to The Young Worker, 1113 West Washington Boulevard, Chicago Illinois. And when you send in your contribution, don't forget to send along a subscription for a year—it's only one dollar—for some young friend of yours, or your son, or a young worker in your shop, mill or mine.

The youth always aids the party! Aid them now!

Europe and the Election

The employing class press reports that "Europe hails Cal's victory."

An examination of the comments of the leading capitalist papers of the European capitals does not indicate a wave of joy overwhelming even the ruling classes of Europe. Of course, viewing the American election results from the broadest perspective, the European capitalists do express satisfaction with the turn of events in the United States.

The conservative Daily Telegraph of London could not do anything else but applaud the triumph of reaction in the United States. In France the bourgeois press as a whole is reported to react with "mild enthusiasm."

In so far as the political affairs of Europe were concerned, the election in the United States could not have affected them vitally. The election of Davis would not and could not have meant the abandonment of the Dawes plan to put Europe on rations and to turn the working and peasant masses of the continent into coolies toiling for the rulers of Wall Street. It was the democrat Owen W. Young who was at least as much responsible for the preparation of the Dawes program as "Hell an' Maria" himself. Among the dominant bankers and industrialists who are to run the receivership of Germany, there are many prominent democrats working closely with the republicans.

And even if the impossible would have happened, the election of LaFollette, the middle-class elements would not have dared and could not have challenged effectively the dictatorship of the most powerful capitalist group which was responsible for the Dawes plan and the entire American policy towards Europe.

But it is especially interesting to note that when our capitalist press speaks of Europe's reaction to American election, it considers only the attitude and interpretation of the continental industrial and financial interests. When our open shop press talks of Europe it never thinks of the millons of oppressed and exploited working and farming masses. Certainly there can be no doubt that the real Europe, the vast masses of wage workers and peasants, will not hail the election of Coolidge and Dawes! A blow struck at the workers of any one country is a blow struck at the working masses of all countries. This is the meaning of the election to the great masses of Europe.

Krassin Goes to Paris

Leonid Krassin, charter member of the Russian Communist Party, soldier in the struggle for the victory of the world social revolution, is getting ready to leave Soviet Russia for his new post—Russian ambassador to France.

For the cable brings the news from Moscow that the Soviet commissar of foreign trade and commerce has been appointed spokesman of the Russian workers and peasants in the capital of the French capitalist republic.

Revolutionists the world over will wish Comrade Krassin all possible success at his new post.

His past achievements speak well for new accomplishments on behalf of the Russian Soviet Republic in its difficult dealings with the diplomats of the capitalist nations.

Krassin has long been considered one of the most able of all Russian engineers. At one time he managed the famous Putilov metal works at Petrograd, one of the biggest of its kind in all Russia.

It was Krassin and Litvinov who did the pioneer work in Great Britain to blaze the way for the opening of trade relations between the governments at Moscow and London.

He is, therefore, well acquainted with the British. This knowledge will stand him in good stead in his dealings with the French, with their numerous contrary interests.

The red flag flies over the Russian embassy in Paris. Krassin will soon be at his post. The social revolution establishes new frontiers.

Fascism and Social Democracy

Those who believe that the Fascisti only constitute a fighting organization of the capitalists are not correct. Fascism is far more than a military-technical matter. The Fascist movement depends upon the vigorous support of the social-democratic parties of Europe. In fact, the present tendency is for the social democracies of continental Europe becoming the left wing of the Fascist government.

The present political situation in Spain affords the most recent evidence of this characterization being accurate. There is widespread talk in Spanish Fascist circles of the present military directorate giving way to a moderate socialist government with General Primo de Rivera as prime minister.

In a communication issued by the Fascist Spanish government on October 7, the world was told that the military directorate regards the aims of the moderate socialists with considerable sympathy. While the Spanish Communists have been hounded and persecuted, the socialists have been distinctly let alone in their propaganda. The Spanish socialist party is now attracting the special sympathy of the middle and professional classes. It is on this basis that General Primo de Rivera will very likely associate himself at an early date with the national socialist group and strive to become its leader by appointing himself premier in the next government.

In Germany it has been the machine of the social-democratic party that has made possible the crushing of the proletarian movement and the rise of the Fascist organizations thruout the Reich. Today it is the social-democrats who are doing the pioneer work for the Fascisti and the biggest capitalist interests in a mad attempt to exterminate the rapidly growing Communist Party.

We in the United States have not gone thru the revolutionary crises experienced by the working masses in many European countries. But even in the United States, as evidenced in the last campaign, the socialists have on several occasions, in supporting LaFollette, found themselves in one camp with the Ku Klux Klan followers, an American prototype of European Fascism.

Sammy Insists on It

Samuel McRoberts, president of the Metropolitan Trust company, is a reactionary. That is not at all surprising. Samuel Gompers is another reactionary. That is not surprising, either. But what may be considered a matter for mild astonishment is that these two birds disagree.

Sammy McRoberts says the theory that labor should be represented on boards of directors is "fundamentally unsound." Having in mind the tragic results of the Arbeitgemeinschaften in Germany and the B. & O. plan, along with similar forms of class collaboration, we are inclined strongly to agree that such a theory is not only "fundamentally unsound," but positively fatal to the workers.

Of course, McRoberts, being an arch reactionary, wasn't thinking about the workers at all. He meant merely that the rumdum labor fakers and scissor-bills possible to get hooked into such class collaboration are too inefficient to help the bosses get more out of the workers' hides.

This is clear, because he added: "They must have the capacity, training and experience to enable them to consider business from every standpoint." He also remarked that he "opposed inefficient capitalists on a board of directors."

This is sad. And Sammy Gompers feels hurt at Sammy McRoberts. Indeed he does. Gompers even puts an article in his A. F. of L. news service expressing regret that a "former labor panacea" is now "thrown in discard." He remarks that this is bum treatment from those who will not "permit the workers to do something for themselves."

That's just the trouble, Sam. You have never permitted the workers to do something for themselves. You want to "co-operate" with the employers. You do it every time they let you. You are their most obedient servant.

Now, because your treachery to the workers, your "red baiting," your fight against amalgamation and revolutionary principles have made the workers helpless and unable to do something for themselves, your labor movement is so weak the capitalists kick it in the face and have no use even for class collaboration. But you insist on it, don't you, Sammy?

Gary Thanks God

Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, is very grateful over the election results. He has every good reason to be.

Mr. Gary has expressed thanks "to a wise and merciful providence that rules the destinies of mankind," because Coolidge has been re-elected. So profuse is the steel baron in his praise of the puppet, Coolidge, that he even has declared the president to be "a steadying force and a living example in this country beyond that of any single person since the time of Lincoln." Mr. Gary winds up his blessings of Coolidge with declaring him "a Christian statesman and a fearless leader." Such prominent men of business as the heads of the American Smelting and Refining Company, Guggenheim Bros., the Metropolitan Trust company, and the biggest banking and manufacturing institutions, join Mr. Gary in this praise.

It is not God of some other unknowable mysterious force that Gary and his tribe are now thanking. The captains of industry and finance are simply expressing their unbounded satisfaction with the efficiency of their parliamentary machinery, of their control of the press, the agencies of propaganda and the means of livelihood of the great masses. It is this political and economic power concentrated in the hands of the uppermost sections of our exploiting class that made possible the Coolidge deluge. It is this superior organization of the exploiters facing the divided, confused, misled and weak ranks of the workers that made it possible for Coolidge and Dawes to be given a mandate to ride roughshod over the interests of the laboring and farming masses.

When Gary thanks God, the working class has something very serious and urgent to think about—and act decisively. Mr. Gary is sure that the country is now ready for an orgy of prosperity. We have had too much experience with Gary prosperity to know that it is only for a handful of owners, coupon clippers and not at all for the mill hands who create the prosperity. In short, the Gary prayer is only a very painful reminder to the working class that it had better be prepared for stormy days.

Chicago Labor Officials Join "Red Baiters"

By ARNE SWABECK

ADOPTING one reactionary policy after another, dictated by its leadership (official and unofficial), the Chicago Federation of Labor has now descended to the level of the red baiting labor fakers who go the capitalist errands. Even a resolution to organize the unorganized met defeat under the flimsy pretext that those who had introduced the question "were not on the square."

For the rank and file workers, who used to take pride in the progressive leadership given by the Chicago Federation of Labor a few years ago, now nothing but a pleasant memory is left. Following the initiative given by William Z. Foster, the Chicago Federation of Labor, became the sponsor of two momentous organization drives —that of the stockyard workers and the steel workers. It even took the first definite steps in leading the working class toward independent political action.

The complete change which has taken place, from a commanding progressive position to a status of submerged indentity under the thumb of capitalist politicians, will become clear to the rank and file workers when the present fervor in chasing empty political bubbles passes away.

Non-Partisan Politics Aids Bosses.

The political neutrality policy adopted immediately after the Chicago Federation of Labor had helped to defeat the movement for independent political action by the workers, in dissolving its own creation—the Farmer Labor Party of the United States, became the beginning of a series of logical sequences. The policy of political neutrality is by no means accidental but a definite effort by the leaders who are lackeys of capitalism to divorce the working masses from their class interests. It is no neutrality at all but policies in support of capitalism, the capitalist parties and the capitalist government. It can only lead to a reactionary attitude to all other issues of vital interest to the workers. And so it is but natural that one reactionary policy should follow another.

The political chaos within the labor movement due to these efforts of the labor leaders to blurr the class lines is, of course, general thruout the country. In Chicago and the state of Illinois, however, the effect of this political trading has become a classic example. While the official labor bodies endorsed LaFollette, Wheeler and Small, the latter endorsed Coolidge and Dawes. While some labor officials endorsed Sprague, the democratic candidate fo United States senator others endorsed Deneen, the republican candidate. While some labor leaders endorsed Lyce, the democratic candidate for state's attorney, others endorsed Hope Thompson, an independent candidate for the same office, and while the Illinois State Federation of Labor made endorsements of 108 different candidates for the state senate and house of representatives, there was but one lone socialist in the bunch and no working class representative.

It is quite clear that such political neutrality is nothing but politics of the worst kind for the support and maintance of capitalism. That it aids confusion and division to the working class ranks is of no concern to the labor leaders. Their object is accomplished. If they win in the gamble and their candidates become elected they are in on the division of the spoils, and, at any rate, giving support to ambitious capitalist politicians is generally considered worth something; furthermore, no matter how it turns out, the most important object —that of keeping the workers politically divided is accomplished.

Attack Communists to Shield Own Impotency

To effectively shield these efforts to divert the attention of the rank and file workers from their real class issues and line them up for support of the system of wage slavery the pre-election maneuvers of these labor leaders had to include a vicous attack upon the Communists. Hectic red baiting became the order of the day both in the Illinois Federation of Labor and the Chicago Federation of Labor. When the Workers Party entered the election campaign, making working class power the outstanding issue, the attack became intensified.

When at its last session three resolutions were introduced in the Chicago Federation of Labor coming from Painters Local 275, the resolution committee recommended non-concurrence inasmuch as the resolutions had once been introduced by three Communist delegates, J. W. Johnstone, Arne Swabeck and Andrew Overgaard and were tabled. The resolution committee reasoned in its recommendation that such resolutions were presented by ulterior motives for the purpose of furthering Communist propganda, to harass the labor movement and promote chaos. The committee's recommendation was adopted with Secretary Ed. Nockles speaking in favor dragging the red herring across the trail.

Resolutions Offer Practical Solution.

The resolutions were the following: No. 1 pointed to danger of the rapidly developing American imperialism thru the conquest and exploitation of weaker nations; the acceptance of the Dawes plan to enslave the working class of Europe, and the race for new armaments. It called upon the American Federation of Labor to employ all the power and influence of the organized labor movement to compell the American government to withdraw all its military forces now stationed in foreign countries. It also called upon this body to bring the question of American imperialism to the attention of the convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor for the purpose of uniting all labor forces of the continent for a concerted struggle against the imperialist domination of the American capitalists.

Resolution No. 2, called attention to the menace of the Ku Klux Klan and called upon the American Federation of Labor to endeavor to secure the support of all international unions and city central bodies to arrange a series of mass meetings and demonstrations for the purpose of condemning the Ku Klux Klan.

Resolution No. 3 called upon the American Federation of Labor to endeavor to unite all its affiliated organizations for a great organization drive in all localities and industries in order to finally bring within the protecting folds of organized labor the masses who still remain outside.

Stagnation Prevails Within A. F. of L.

Ed Nockles contended that all these matters had already been taken care of by the American Federation of Labor. However it is a well known fact that it has never done anything to oppose the imperialist efforts of American capitalism, on the contrary it has rather aided these efforts. True it has gone on record to oppose the Ku Klux Klan, but never lifted a finger to actually fight it. And although the American Federation may have several platonic statements to its credit for the organization of the unorganized no efforts have been made to conduct a concerted drive for this object. On the contrary, the domination of the dead hand of Samuel Gompers and the other impotent, stupid international officials, the absolute out of date and ineffective methods of struggle and forms of organization has during the last three years brought constant loss to the trade union movement. At the 1921 convention the secretary reported a loss of membership of 710,593 and at the 1923 convention a loss of 269,167 members. Surely no live trade unionist is in doubt about the need of such organization drive.

The rank and file workers will not be fooled very long by the red baiting activities of the labor officials. They will soon recognise that the Communists are actually leading the way out of the present empty political bubble chasing and toward working class political action. They will soon realize that the Communists are today the only elements fighting actively for the building up and strengthening of the trade union movement and by actual experience it will be demonstrated to them that there is no other solution to the labor problem than the working class revolution.

Y. W. L. CAMPAIGN AMONG MINERS IS MOVING FORWARD

Progressive Clauses in Union Constitution

By BARNEY MASS
National Industrial Organizer Y. W. L.

In going over carefully the constitution of the United Mine Workers of America, we discover many progressive clauses favorable to youth labor in it. However, John L. Lewis and his gang have made no effort whatsoever to enforce their own constitution.

In article two, under the title of the object of the organization we find the third clause provides for the following: "To provide for the education of our children by lawfully prohibiting their employment until they have reached at least sixteen years of age."

What Has Lewis Done to Carry This Out?

In article XVIII, District 12 constitution, under the heading of "initiation fees," the following clauses are in it effecting the young miner. Section 4 "A member's son from 16 to 17 years of age shall be admitted free." Section 5, provides for "The initiation fee for a member's son from 17 years of age until he has reached 21 years of age shall be $10." Section 7, "Sons of widows whose husbands were members at the time of their death shall be admitted free provided said son is under 17 years of age; if he has attained his 17th year and has not reached his 21st year, he shall be admitted according to section 5 of this article." Section 10, "The initiation fee for boys not provided for otherwise and who have not attained their 17th year, shall be $10 and shall be required to go to the face of the coal as per state mining law. Such boys who are 17 years of age, or over, shall be admitted as inexperienced bottom laborers as per Section 6, of this article." Sec. 11, "No boy shall be admitted to membership in any Local Union who is under 16 years of age."

There Must be No Discrimination

The Young Workers League of America raises the slogan of free admission to the union of all young workers under the age of 21 years. Whether a young worker has a parent who is a member of the Mine Workers or not, we are opposed to any discrimination. If the U. M. W. of A. is going to retain its hold and influence and actually organize the scab fields it will be necessary to make inducements to the young miners in joining. The young miner is unable to meet the same financial obligations as is the adult miner.

In the International constitution section 14 of Article XIV, provides for the following: "Boys under 16 years of age and decrepit shall be known as half members and shall pay only half as much tax and assessment as full members."

The Young Workers' League opposes this discrimination of classifying the young boys of the state as mentioned above, as half members. Our demand is for their being accepted as full members and to enjoy the same privileges as full members.

Saltzman to Go Among Miners

Max Saltzman, national organizer of the Young Workers League of America, will tour the whole state of Illinois to further the national campaign in the coal industry, being conducted by the Y. W. L. He will address mass meetings in every town. The subject on which he will speak is UNEMPLOYMENT OF THE MINER.

Comrade Saltzman is a very capable speaker. At the present time he is touring the state of Minnesota Michigan and Wisconsin. He finished recently an organizational tour of the state of Massachusetts. Comrade Saltzman will present the program of the Young Workers League in relation to its coal campaign to all miners. He will strive to establish a nucleus of the league in every important Southern Illinois mining camp. For any information on Comrade Saltzman's tour, write the national office of the Young Workers' League. His schedule follows:

The Party and Class That Made It Possible

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

Seven years ago the red cock of the social revolution hailed the dawn of a new era and vindicated forever the theories of Marx—the master The Peters of the Second International, long engaged in distorting the Marxian method and thereby betraying the working class, denied the faith they had prostituted when they heard its lusty challenge signalling the mighty blow the Russian workers and peasants dealt world capitalism. The socialists of the Second International became the bitterest enemies of the Russian revolution, but the Russian revolution, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and the world revolution still live. They become stronger each day and under the leadership of the Communist International—born of the imperialist war and the Russian revolution—organize the working class for the capture of power in every country.

What forces made the revolution in Russia—not only the complete overthrow of capitalism and aristocracy, but the bourgeois revolution that preceded the final surrender of the state power to the workers and peasants? The social democrats hailed the provisional government that arose after the abdication of the czar as the final triumph of democracy. The mass movement of the workers and peasants was supposed to stop there and wait for the social democratic saviors to make further improvements.

Howls of rage from every stronghold of social democracy greeted the rise of the Soviets and when the dictatorship of the workers and peasants was established and the Kerensky government was thrown on the scrap pile with other garbage of history, the anger of the erstwhile saviors of the working class was uncontrollable. They renewed their allegiance to the capitalist class and furnished the democratic smoke screen behind which operated the murderous forces of world imperialism.

It was not the middle class and capitalist class of Russia that overthrow czarism nor was it the liberal and social-democratic intelligentsia that composed the provisional government. Nothing was further from the minds of these elements than the abolition of the Romanoff dynasty. They wanted, just as the imperialist allied governments wanted, a change in personnel, a palace revolution that would, by giving a democratic color to the Russian regime, pacify the masses and enable Russia to prosecute the war more efficiently.

The Russian bourgeoisie had learned a lesson in 1905. They had no intention of releasing social forces that would set in motion the great mass of the oppressed in Russia but they miscalculated the extent of the discontent, they underestimated the revolutionary elan of the Russian workers and after the overthrow of the czar by the Russian masses, in eight months, marched straight thru the defenses of Russian capitalism to the dictatorship of the proletariat.

It is just as well to settle here the part played in the overthrow of the czar by the cadets and the social democrats. As late as March 4, 1917, Milyukov had declared in the Duma that Constantinople was Russia's goal and that "If we cannot conquer with this government, we will conquer in spite of this government, but we will be victorious." The Duma was interested only in the imperialistic aims of the war, but the people were hungry. The Duma did nothing to control the food supply. It tried to win the war by talking and to allay mass discontent by the same method.

The working class took matters in its own hands. On March 8, mass strikes were declared in the Putiloff munition plants in Petrograd. Food riots occurred involving thousands of workers. On March 9, the workers of Petrograd were out on the streets and fights took place with the Cossacks. Assemblage was forbidden by General Chavaloff, commander of the Cossacks, in a proclamation announcing that the troops had been ordered to fire on the crowds.

The Petrograd correspondent of the New York Times wired his paper: "A number of causes working together, brought the crisis momentarily to a head, altho I do not believe there Can Be Any Serious Trouble While The Duma Is in Session. . . . All yesterday the streets were full of people altho Petrograd is heavily patrolled by Cossacks and mounted police. The general atmosphere is like a bank holiday with thunder in the air." (Emphasis mine.)

Women of the working class were active in the food riots that became more wide spread. They marched up to the soldiers and asked them would they shoot hungry workers, their own people. The morale of the troops went down to zero and what little shooting took place, served only to further arouse the masses.

On March 1, orders to fire upon the crowds were obeyed only in isolated instances. The soldiers themselves were tired of war and on the eve of mutiny. Almost every worker in the Petrograd district was on strike by this time and soldiers and workers began to fraternize.

The cry of the masses had changed from "bread" to "revolution."

On March 12, armed workers filled the streets. Fighting with loyal detachments of troops and the police became general. Five famous regiments joined the workers and the police were exterminated. A council of workers and soldiers was formed and in its proclamation of March 14, said:

"All together, with united forces, we shall fight for the complete removal of the old government and the convocation of a constituent assembly, chosen on the basis of universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage."

What of the Duma during this stirring period? Nothing is plainer than that it feared the popular movement and tried by both persuasion and force to stop it. On March 11, Rodzianko, president of the Duma, sent the following telegram to the czar:

"The situation is serious. The capital is in a state of anarchy. There is government is paralyzed. There is universal discontent. The streets are filled with disorderly fighting, units of the army are firing on each other. It is necessary to appoint someone immediately whom the country trusts to form another ministry. Make haste. Procrastination means death. I pray to God that the responsibility will not fall upon him who wears the crown."

The next day Rodzianko sent another telegram to the czar:

"Affairs are worse. You must act at once. Tomorrow will be too late. This is the last hour in which to decide the fate of the country and of the dynasty."

The Duma did not want a revolution. It feared a revolution and the documents show that it stood by the czar to the last.

It was only when on March 12, large bodies of troops appeared before the Duma and cheered the revolution that the Duma acted. It appointed a committee to take charge. Rodzianko was made chairman.

The police by this time were defeated. The jails were opened and thousands of political prisoners, most of them skilled revolutionary agitators, were freed. Two hundred government officials were arrested.

This Duma committee did two things—both counter-revolutionary.

It sent a telegram to the czar urging: "The immediate convocation of the legislative bodies, the retirement of the present council of ministers, and the entrusting to a person deserving of the national confidence, to present to you, Sire, for confirmation, the list of a new cabinet capable of managing the country in complete accord with the representatives of the people. Every hour is precious. Further delay and hesitation threaten incalculable misfortunes."

Its second act was to order the masses to disarm.

But the masses did not disarm. On March 15, the czar was arrested. He abdicated and named Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch as regent. The Duma committee appointed the provisional government with Prince Lvov as premier, Milyukov, minister of foreign affairs, Guchkov, minister of war and marine, Kerensky, minister of justice.

This provisional government did not take the position that czarism has been destroyed. Milyukov expressed the view of the provisional government when he said in a speech:

"The old despot who brought Russia to the edge of disaster will voluntarily abdicate or be deposed. The government will pass to a regent, the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, and the heir Alexis the czarevitch (cries of—but that is the old dynasty). Yes, gentleman, that is the old dynasty, which perhaps you do not like and which perhaps I dislike myself. We propose a parliamentary constitutional monarchy."

The provisional government changed nothing in Russia nor did it alter the attitude of the former government towards the war. On Mach 17, Milyukov sent a note to Russian representatives in other countries in which he said:

"In the domain of foreign policy, the cabinet, in which I am charged with the portfolio of minister of foreign affairs, will remain mindful of the international agreements entered into by the fallen regime and will honor Russia's word. . . . The government of which I am part will devote all of its energy to preparation of victory."

The masses had revolted against the war, but the provisional government proposed to drive them back to the shambles. By adopting this policy it separated itself from the masses and made its fall inevitable.

Around this issue of peace or war the revolution organized itself. Class interests became the guiding factors and the fiction of a government representing the whole people was no longer tenable. The provisional government re-worded its slogans of imperialist war and imperialistic peace, but mass unrest continued to grow. Soviets of workers, peasants and soldiers sprung up thruout the nation and challenged the authority of the provisional government.

When on May 1, the provisional government sent a note to the allied governments in which it spoke of "the nation's determination to bring the war to a decisive victory" and said the "the provisional government in safeguarding the rights acquired for our country will maintain a strict regard for its engagements with the allies of Russia" the fury of the masses could not be restrained. Great strikes and mass demonstrations were staged and an attempt made by soldiers to arrest the provisional government.

The council of Soviets was as yet in the hands of the non-revolutionary elements altho the Bolsheviki were active. Lenin had arrived in Petrograd in April and had taken the lead in the revolutionary agitation.

RUTH FISHER

Leader of the German Communist Party.

Program of the Communist International

DRAFT ADOPTED AT THE FIFTH WORLD CONGRESS

(Concluded from last Saturday.)

3. The Proletarian Dictatorship and the Classes.

The struggle for the expropriation of the expropriators requires the most thoro study of all elements of this struggle.

The big bourgeoisie and the rich landowners, as well as that part of the officers' and army staff subject to them, are the most consistent enemies of the working class, and a bitter struggle against them is absolutely inevitable. As a rule it is only possible to utilize the organising powers of these circles after the dictatorship has been established, and all conspiracies of exploitation and uprisings have been determinedly suppressed.

The question of the technical brain workers plays a most important role for the proletarian revolution. Every counter-revolutionary action originating in the ranks of the technical brain workers must be rigorously suppressed, but at the same time the proletariat must take into consideration the absolute necessity for these skilled workers, and carefully avoid any action which could injure them economically, especially those groups which have already suffered thru the war. These intellectual forces should be brought under proletarian influence by pointing out to them the prospects of building up socialist culture.

With regard to the peasantry, the Communist Party is confronted with the task of winning over a great part of the peasantry for the party. The victorious proletariat must differentiate strictly between the various groupings within the peasantry itself, estimate their specific importance, and aid the landless, semi-proletarian elements of the peasantry by every possible means, give them a part of the big landowners' property, help in their struggle against usurious capital, etc. The proletariat must utilize the middle elements by leaving their land and their possessions untouched, and by combating every attack made by the rich peasantry in combination with the rich landowners.

In this struggle the proletariat should base its activities upon the organizations of the poorer population of the country, which are under the leadership of the country proletariat in all countries where the system of agricultural wage labor is developed.

The petty bourgeoisie of the cities, which has always wavered between extreme reaction and sympathy for the proletariat, is also to be neutralized as far as possible. Their neutrality is assured if their property is not touched, if they are allowed liberty of economic intercourse, aided in their struggle against usurious forms of credit, etc.

In order to fulfill all these tasks the most varying organizations of the proletariat (co-operatives, trade unions, and other associations, and chiefly the party as leading power in the revolution) must be actual organs of proletarian power. It is only when these organizations lend unlimited support to the proletarian power, only when the class will is perfectly united, and when the party has the leadership, that the proletariat can successfully carry out its part as organizer of society as a whole in the most critical period of human history.

4. Abolition of the Bourgeois Monopoly of Education.

The proletariat, when abolishing the monopoly of the capitalist class of the means of production, must simultaneously destroy the monopoly of education in the hands of the bourgeoisie, that is, it must take over all schools and universities.

One of the most important tasks of the proletariat is to train skilled technicians from the ranks of the working class, not only in the sphere of production (engineers, mechanics, organizers, bookkeepers, etc.), but for scientific and military work, etc. This is the only way possible of enabling fresh groups of qualified workers to be continually added to the proletarian power, so that this may in reality become a leading power in the development of society.

To this task must be added the further task of raising the general cultural level of the proletarian masses, the task of their political enlightenment, raising the level of their knowledge and technical qualifications, their practical introduction into social work, and further, the combating of vestiges of bourgeois and petty bourgeois prejudices, etc.

Amongst the tasks of combating bourgeois prejudices and superstitions, the first place is taken by the fight against religion, a fight which must be carried on with all requisite tact and all caution, especially among those sections of workers [illegible] daily life religion has hitherto been deeply rooted.

The proletarian state power must discontinue all state support to churches, prevent any interference by the church in state organized education and further fight against all counter-revolutionary activity of church organizations or their individual representatives.

5. The Removal of Imperialist Pressure and the Organization of Voluntary State Associations of the Proletariat.

The main supports of the gigantic imperialist state were and are the artificially created relations between the colonies and semi-colonies, and imperialist mother countries. The colonial and national questions thus play an exceedingly important role, not only from the viewpoint of the decay of capitalist relations, but also from the viewpoint of capitalist structure.

In this respect the program of the Communist International makes the following demands, in complete opposition to the policy of the bourgeoisie and of social-democracy:

1. The right of self-determination, under which is also to be understood the right of complete separation from the state. This principle is binding as a requirement to be demanded of the bourgeois state, where it serves as a weapon against imperialism, and is equally binding under the regime of proletarian dictatorship, where it serves as a means of overcoming the national distrust nurtured thru centuries of bourgeois government.

2. The liberation of the colonies, and the support of all colonial movements against imperialism. In the case of a proletarian state embracing former colonies, the latter are to be accorded the right of separation.

3. Unions of Soviet Republics, at first in the form of a federation.

Besides these program-planks which relate to the system of the state, the Communist International puts forward demands for the equality of nations, and for the abolition of all anti-racial laws.

The Communist International also fights against capitalist immigration laws (for instance, the anti-Japanese immigration law in U. S. A.), and conducts propaganda against all kinds of Chauvinism and nationalism, even if such prejudice should exist among the working class. The Communist international is particularly energetic in its campaign against Chauvanism among the peoples of the great powers.

In view of the fact that the power cannot be seized by the proletariat simultaneously in all, or even in the most important countries, and that, therefore, proletarian states exist beside capitalist states, in spite of the enmity because of basic principles between capitalist and proletarian states—compromises on the field of foreign diplomacy by the proletarian states are possible, permissible, and at times even obligatory. (Foreign commercial agreements, loans, policy of concessions, participation in general conferences, and other forms of agreements, including military agreements.)

IV. The Road to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

1. The Party and its Role.

The successful fight for the proletarian dictatorship presupposes the existence of a strong, solid, tried, disciplined, and centralized Communist Party.

The party is the vanguard of the working class consisting of the best, most class conscious, most active and courageous members of the class; it embodies the whole collective experience of the proletarian struggle, based on the revolutionary theory of Marxism. Representing the general and permanent interests of the class as a whole, the party embodies in itself the unity of proletarian principles, of proletarian will and of proletarian revolutionary action.

Being a militant organization which leads the proletariat to the conquest of power, it consists of active revolutionary fighters, everyone of whom fulfils some duty for the party. It thus represents a revolutionary party bound by an iron discipline and by the strictest revolutionary order of democratic centralism, attained thru the consciousness of the proletarian vanguard and thru its devotion to the revolution, thru its ability of maintaining close contact with the proletarian masses and with the masses in general and thru correct and flexible political leadership, which is constantly tried and kept informed by the experiences of the broadest masses.

In order to fulfill its historic task, the Communist Party must preliminarily undertake and carry out the following strategical aims:

Bring under its influence the majority of the members of its own class, including the women workers and young workers.

Bring under its influence the broad masses of toilers in general (the poor of the towns and villages, the impoverished elements of the intelligentsia, the so-called "small-men," i. e., the petty-bourgeois elements in general), and thus to achieve the political hegemony of the proletariat, under the leadership of the Communist Party.

It must utilize the conflicts in the ruling classes, both in its own country and on an international scale (i. e. utilization of war crisis).

Discredit, expose and destroy the political influence of social-democracy and of the yellow trade union bureaucrats, who are the most reliable supporters of capitalism, and bring under its influence the mass organizations of the proletariat (trade unions, co-operative societies, factory and workers' councils, and so on).

In its struggle for the ultimate goal of the proletarian movement, the party must take into consideration concrete circumstances, the correlation of class forces; the degree of capitalist strength; the degree of proletarian preparedness, the attitude of the intermediate strata, and so on. The party formulates its slogans and the manner of its struggle in conformity with these circumstances. While advancing a whole series of transitional slogans and partial demands, which are determined by the given circumstances, the party must subordinate these demands and these slogans to its revolutionary goal of the capture of power and overthrow of bourgeois-capitalist society. Hence, it is inadmissible for the party either to hold aloof from the everyday needs and everyday struggles of the workers, or to limit its activities to these everyday needs and everyday struggles. It is the task of the party, while starting out from these needs, to direct the thots and action of the working class beyond these limits, i. e., to lead the working class to the revolutionary fight for power.

To neglect the formulation of the partial demands and transition slogans is incompatible with the tactical principles of Communism, for it unavoidably leads the party to passivity and destroys its connection with the masses. The tactics of the united front and the slogan of the workers' and peasants' government form the most important section of the tactics of the Communist Party during the whole period of the conquest of the masses for Communism.

Given a direct revolutionary situation, when the ruling classes are more or less disorganized, when the masses are in a state of revolutionary excitement, when the intermediate strata are inclined to go over to the side of the proletariat—the party of the proletariat is confronted with the task of leading the masses to the direct attack on the bourgeois state. This is achieved by the advancement of more marked slogans and the increasing intensity of mass movements, to which must be subordinated all branches of party agitation and propaganda, including parliamentary activities. These comprise strikes, combinations of strikes and demonstrations, combination of armed demonstrations and strikes, and finally, the general strike in conjunction with the highest form of the direct military fight against the state power of the bourgeoisie. This fight is subject to military rules; it presupposes a military plan (the fixing of time and place, etc.), aggressive operations, and undivided loyalty and heroism on the part of the proletariat. Such actions presuppose the organization of the broad masses into militant bodies, which by their very form should attract and set into motion the largest number of toilers (councils of workers' and peasants' deputies, soldiers' councils, etc). A pre-requisite for victorious tactics is propagandist work in the army and navy.

The process of uniting the masses under the Communist flag must be developed in all actual questions of daily life. Above all, the fight against the danger of fresh imperialist wars, etc.

Other questions coming under this heading are those connected with the struggle against the economic results of the war and post-war crisis. (Fight against increased prices, against unemployment, against longer working hours, against higher taxation, etc.)

The support of Soviet Russia, as a means towards strengthening it and towards mobilizing the masses about this anti-capitalist center point, constitutes the most powerful organizing instrument in the hands of the international working class.

For the coordination of actions, and for the purposeful leadership thereof, the international proletariat requires an international class discipline, which must above all be strictly adhered to in the ranks of the Communist Parties. This international Communist discipline must be expressed by the subordination of all partial and local interests of the movement to its general and permanent interests, and by the unqualified execution of all resolutions passed by the leading organs of the Communist International.

Being the united world party of the proletariat, the Communist International makes it incumbent upon all its sections carefully to weigh all the peculiarities of the situation in their respective countries. Only by studying these peculiarities is it possible to conduct a real Marxian policy. The difference between the countries of highly developed capitalism, which are on the threshold of the proletarian revolution; the countries on the eve of bourgeois revolution, which must be transformed into the proletarian revolution; and finally, the countries which are still colonies or semi-colonies of imperialist powers, and which must still inevitably pass thru the phase of colonial and national wars—this difference must determine the whole activity of the Communist Parties which are under the uniform and centralized leadership of the Communist International.

Party Campaigns: Thru Branch or Shop Nuclei?

By Martin Abern

IN judging the territorial branch and the shop nucleus the question always to be answered is: which is most effective for carrying out the Party program?

Well, let's take the recent Workers Party election campaign. Speed plus efficiency are especially needed in the parliamentary work. There must be quick and systematic mobilization of the Party membership for all the duties in connection with the election campaign: speakers, literature distribution, collection of finance, etc. Very well. How does our Party function thru the present form of organization, thru the territorial branches?

First, the National office, let us say, issues a set of instructions for the conduct and arrangement of campaign meetings, the widest distribution of literature, collection of funds and so on. This notice of instructions goes to every branch secretary, C. C. C., D. E. C. Our press, to help along, also carries the instructions and propaganda.

Party Branch Slow in Getting Started.

Our party branches generally meet every two weeks, some less often. The branch secretary receives the instructions from the national office. Even if he sends out letters, which is rare, for a special branch meeting, about two weeks elapse before the branch meets to take action on the Party instructions and program for the election campaign. It is safe to say about one-half of the branch, at best, shows up at the meeting. A discussion takes place—where to sell or give away literature, the difficulty of collecting money (a thousand reasons given here) how to secure petitions, if required, and many other things with which every comrade is acquainted.

A few comrades are awake to getting to work in the unions or on the job. But on the whole, life is desultory, they declaim: it will take a long time before the masses are awakened, and more of the same. With religious resignation many comrades continue to await The Day. Only a small part of the branch membership —who will deny?—is mobilized for the elections' campaign after much delay and exertion.

Branch Depends on Active Few.

The election campaign is on! A few street meetings, pretty good crowds—a fairly exotic feeling among the comrades aiding in street meeting work. A couple, at the most, new members brought into the Party. A few neighborhood indoor meetings held with middling success and failures. Comrades discouraged, cynical, some dogged and faithful. A barehandful of the comrades aided in putting even these meetings over. The meetings deal with very general issues, phrasily but not meatily put; no real talk on how to aid the workers in the shops. A huge demonstration meeting follows. Thousands attend, including for the first time in the campaign, hundreds of our Party members and sympathizers. The International is sung, stirring speeches are made, much literature is sold, the comrades feel elated. Then they file home and for most of them the elections campaign is over, except to read the votes the Communists got.

There is house to house distribution of literature, more than usual since the Party is hammering away at that. Who does not know how difficult it is to get an appreciable number of comrades out to distribute literature! How pitifully few. Money is collected, chiefly from the comrades themselves. They make sacrifices. But these sacrifices should and could bring more and better results. Our press gets very few letters from the workers telling how they are affected by the Communist campaign.

Perhaps a few brighter colors could be shown. But that can be left for the other comrades to do. What does remain strikingly plain is that our present organization form is cumbersome, slow in getting the membership into action, and then but a small part of it, and brings small results for the efforts. And if these are the gains from the election campaign, with its easier, perhaps hectic, means of arousing the workers, because our organizational structure is deficient, how much more deficient is it for more vital and dynamic actions—in strikes, demonstrations, DAILY WORKER drives, and the like? Unspeakable and yet, it must be noted that the present branch form of organization is historically an electoral machinery. It seems its even poor for that.

Now, how about the Shop Nucleus and the Communist election campaign? It beats the old all hollow for speed, efficiency, results. How? Assume we have a Party of Shop Nuclei, what happens?

The National Office issues its program and instructions to the secretaries of the Shop Nuclei. The Shop Nucleus is the Party unit consisting of the comrades working in the same shop, factory, or mill. Within 24 hours after receipt of instructions from the N. O., the Shop Nucleus members can hold a meeting and lay out their work. The nucleus members concern themselves mainly with propagandizing the other workers in the shop.

Shop Nucleus Gets Quick Action.

The comrades know their fellow workers, somewhat at any rate. They have a knowledge of the workers' needs, all of them are directly and constantly up against the same problem, whether it be the boss or shop conditions, strikes. There is a basis of approach by the comrades to the other workers. The discussion can start on baseball or the Prince of Wales and can easily end in a discussion on economic conditions, politics, the candidates in the field, the Communist program. The workers know each other, that counts a good deal, approach is not so difficult.

So, first, the Party nucleus can get together almost immediately. They can lay out a program of work in the shop; how to start discussion on topics of the day, sell or distribute the DAILY WORKER or other literature to the shop-mates, appeal for funds. Does any comrade doubt how much more successful our October 26—November 2 literature distributior week, successful as it was, would be if systematically distributed directly on the job? As for propaganda meetings, these vital shop discussions and political discussions are worth a dozen neighborhood meetings, altho these could still and will take place, but let us hope in better fashion.

Even from a standpoint of collecting money from our own comrades, did you ever stop to think how much easier a comrade would give up some money when he has just got paid off and has it? A few days later, it's spent for various things—slim chance to get it from him then. One machine shop nucleus in Chicago illustrates that by a regular weekly donation to the Party collected on the job. An accepted duty.

Shop Nucleus Is Organized to Work

Most important to see is that the Party campaign work brings results because the Party unit is organized for work on the job. If the shop is unionized, the nucleus can lay out work in the union in support of the campaign. The instrument of the shop nucleus in this case would be the T. U. E. L., in which, of course, every union comrade is active. Comrades speak of the shop fractions, Party committees of action and propaganda in the shop, doing this work. They might, but they don't. The reason for that is because the work isn't permanently organized like that of the shop nucleus, the basic Party unit, is. Of course, shop work is difficult, in many ways, but less difficult and no more dangerous than is a territorial branch. Communist work always has its dangers. That phase of it has no bearing here except insofar as dangers can be removed. That can be discussed another time.

And, comrades, lest we forget, we want a mass party, a mass Communist Party, a Communist Party of and in close contact with the workers, exercising ideological control and trying physically to be with them. This shop nucleus and shop nucleus work makes it possible.

Bolshevize the Party Thru Shop Nuclei.

Without elaborating further, it should be plain that in election campaign activity and more so in the other Party campaigns and activities, the shop nuclei offer the best mediums for Communist propaganda and organization. Shop nuclei will help us Bolshevize, Leninize the party.

Forward to Shop Nuclei!

Letters from Our Readers

Use It On The Boss.

To the DAILY WORKER:—I read your encouraging article asking workers to write something of their experience in the shop, mine, mill, etc. So I thought and asked myself, should I or should I not write of the condition in the shop I worked? No, was my answer. I shall not write, because my vocabulary is too poor to express half as much as I feel about the boss and foreman and all the parasites sucking the blood of the workers. No, said I, until I will be able to act, fight, write and call the masses to fight against the capitalist class. I said no until I bought a paper which claims to be a friend of the poor, and also "fights" for them. Then it made my blood boil.

An article like that in a paper where Mr. LaFollette will be the Moses to free the American workers from misery and our present deplorable system. No! Impossible! I looked again and again whether I bought the kind of a paper I was looking for. Yes, it was the same. But how in the world did Mr. Hillquit feel when he read that article. How could our great "savior" Mr. Berger sit in congress and read an article in his paper where it says, "There is not work—and there cannot be work, plenty of work—for all who are willing to work—under the wage and profit system of industry."

And how could Mr. Zigman, Kaufman, Pearlstein, read in their paper "Wages will buy the plain 'necessaries of life.' But wages will not buy good food and plenty of it; good clothing and plenty of it; good homes, well located, well furnished, and plenty of them."

And how in the world could Mr. Hillquit, Berger, London, Abe Cahn and all the rest of their clique read "the capitalist class legalizes and holds on to this system thru the control of the government; and the control of the government is seized and held by the capitalist class by means of political parties—parties committed to the capitalist system of industry." And read again (but workers, do not laugh. It is an honest opinion, I suppose so)

"Thus the workers cannot defend themselves—they cannot escape 'til they have a political party of their own, a labor party for themselves, by themselves, composed of millions who toil on the farms and down in the mines; toil on the railways, in the shops, mills and factories—composed also of men and women who are unemployed. Clearly it is up to them."

Now, workers read it again and again; read it to the people who believe in the doctrine of that paper; read what it further states: "Without personal hatreds, without any malice whatever, the socialists fraternally seek peace, justice, plenty, life, a full glad life for all. We know that modern machinery, modern tools, modern knowledge, modern methods and means of production make it practicable for those who are willing to work to produce abundantly for all who are willing to work; and that thus want and fear of want can be removed from the lives of all who are willing to work—in a wholesomely reconstructed socialized society."

Who made all those statements? Whom do they represent? Do they mean it? Do they actually fight for it? Ha! Ha! No! I will leave it to the readers, to all of those who believed and still do believe in their honesty to find out for themselves how corrupted and hypocritical are the statements made by people who in reality do not believe a word they say. How many proposals for the amalgamation of the unions were brot to conventions where they used all means, directly or indirectly to defeat them; for they did not succeed in defeating them completely. How many workers and farmers will they ask and influence to vote for a labor faker and an old cheap republican politician, Mr. LaFollette, who is against the labor party, against changing the capitalist system to a workers' and farmers' government?

How many workers were starving from hunger and were put in prisons and killed under the social democratic regime of Germany?

How many workers will be condemned to work ten and twelve hours a day and lower wages in Germany and all other capitalist countries if the Dawes' plan with the help of the social democrats all over the world will be put into effect?

No! We know you and those who doubt it will find out how hypocritical and demogogic to act different than what you say. The DAILY WORKER the Workers Party of America, the Communist Party of all the world, they are the ones who fight and work for a government by and for the working class. And each and every one who writes and believes in all that which is said, his place is in the Workers Party of America.

Editor's Note.—If your vocabulary were as impoverished as you modestly state, that would be an added reason for venturing a description of your boss or the conditions under which you work, rather than a polemic against the yellow socialists, which is a task likely to exhaust even a generous supply of English.

Permit me to say that, tho your editorial is appreciated and is published partly because of its merit and partly by way of encouraging yourself and others to accept our invitation literally, at the same time, indignation against Berger, Hillquit, et al., is a poor substitute for a brief description of some incident that may have occurred at your place of employment. The DAILY WORKER would prefer ten words from the lips of a wage slave on the events of the day than a string of curses at the system in general from a college professor.

Read the article in the magazine again, and follow the suggestions made there. We do not care anything about your style, your grammar or your vocabulary, but in the name of Marx, let us have facts, not editorials. That was the very thing Comrade O'Flaherty's article sought to protect us against, but the foe has again burst thru our breastworks.

Come again comrade. Let us have the facts, let the boss be whom he may.

Intervention in China

By G. Voitinsky

China during the last few weeks has been the center of attention of the contending forces of the world. The Communist proletariat of Europe and America is beginning to understand the significance of the risings of the huge population of China, India and the other colonial and semi-colonial countries. The imperialist powers, who in the present historical phase are ruling thru the liberal bourgeoisie and the opportunist leaders of the working class, are being compelled by events, and in spite of their program and declarations, to reveal their acquisitive ambitions in the colonial countries. The recent stormy developments in China opens up a page in that phase of imperialism in which the latter, clad in the toga of Christian-democratic-pacifism, is obliged in this garb to compel the toiling masses of the East by blood and iron to submit to the power of finance capital.

Almost simultaneously with the London conference of the imperialists of Europe and America, the declared aim of which was to secure the long promised "pacification" of Europe, began the attack of these same imperialists in the Far East. What are the conditions compelling the imperialists to develop a defensive movement against the colonial and semi-colonial countries at the present moment, and especially against China? Why has a whole series of events occurred in the autumn of this year, beginning in Sudan, Morocco, Persia and Afghanistan and ending with the imperialist actions in the large ports of Southern, Central and Northern China, actions which are characteristic of the aggressive instincts of the imperialists?

There are three important reasons in our opinion.

First, the endeavor of a section of the victorious countries—England and America—since the world war to united action not only against the imperialist powers that were defeated in the war, but also against some of their former "allies." While the London conference in reality signifies the growth of Anglo-American influence in Europe at the expense of French influence, the present struggle of the Chinese imperialists in the Far East is being fought in order to destroy the influence of another "ally" of England and America—Japan.

The struggle has not yet ended with the definite victory of one group of imperialists and the definite destruction of the influence of the other. Such results at any rate are not to be obtained by "peace" conferences. But these conferences, by destroying the former balance of forces only render the conflicts between the imperialists more acute and bring the period of armed conflicts even nearer. We have the example of the Washington "peace" conference, held at the beginning of 1922, which, by destroying the Anglo-Japanese treaty, created still more acute relations between the chief protagonists in the Pacific—America and Japan. One of the first results of the Washington conference was the armed struggle in Northern China between the Japanese group of militarists and the American group.

The second reason for the attacks and intrigues of the imperialists in the Eastern countries is the growth of the movement for emancipation, which, to no small extent, increases the contradictions between the imperialists.

The third reason is the steadily growing popularity of the U. S. S. R. among the masses thruout the East.

In the present article we shall deal with the first reason only.

PRODUCTS OF IMPERIALISM.

The Imperialist Struggle for China Since the World War.

It was the small island Japan which at the conclusion of the world war held the hegemony in China.

Itself directly very little concerned in the struggle on the European continent, young full-blooded Japanese capitalism turned its ambitions towards China, which possessed the coal and iron, these essential raw material of production which Japan so much lacked. But it was not these riches alone which attracted Japan to China. The blooming of Japanese capitalism after the Chinese-Japanese war of 1894 when Japan received Formosa and established its influence in Korea, increased the appetites of the Japanese bureaucracy and Japanese monopoly-capitalism which were protected by the ruling cliques of large landowners and militarists. This led to the war between czarist Russia and Japan in 1905 during which, as we know, England helped Japan. The Russo-Japanese War, in spite of the intervention of America in the person of Roosevelt on the side of Russia, nevertheless resulted in Japan's securing tremendous davantages in the Pacific Ocean. Japan received the Liau-Tung Peninsula which since 1898 had been leased by China to czarist Russia for a period of 25 years. As a result, there passed into Japanese hands, Port Arthur and Dairen, two important ports in the Chili Straits making direct contact with the rich province of Shantung and the chief province of Northern China, of Chili possible. A brief glance at a map of Asia will help us to understand the tremendous possibilities which were opened up for Japan as a result of the Russo-Japanese War. Japan obtained the possibility of building a railway line from Mukden, the chief town in Manchuria, to Port Arthur, thus exporting agricultural produce from Manchuria thru the port of Dairen. It also built the line from Mukden to Seoul, connecting the centre of Korea, thus uniting its sphere of influence in China with its colony, Korea.

Holding these "advantages" in China before the world war, Japan took advantage of the slackening of the imperialist grip in China. She associated herself with the British group partly because of her treaty with Britain (1902) and partly because she saw the possibilities of enriching herself at the expense of Germany. She seized the province of Man-Tung with the excellent port of Tsin-Tao and the railway connecting Tsin-Tao with Tsinan-Fu.

This sphere of influence however, did not satisfy Japan. Her ambitions were stimulated by the enfeeblement of the opposition of China and the protracted nature of the world war. In 1915, as the result of threats, bribery, and provocation, she succeeded in concluding a secret treaty with the Chinese president, Yuan-Shih-Kai, the effect of which would be to transform China into a semi-colony of Japan. This treaty, which is known as the 21 demands, contains points according to which the Chinese government undertakes to employ Japanese military instructors, Japanese police chiefs, and Japanese advisers to the ministry for foreign affairs, not to speak of the privileges granted to Japanese banks in the coal, textile, and other industries.

After our October revolution, Japan lost all sense of proportion and seriously began to think of the seizure not only of China and Manchuria, but also of Mongolia and our Siberia as far as the Urals.

Under the pretext of protecting the counter-revolutionary Czecho-Slovak legions, who had forced their way thru Siberia overthrowing the Soviet power in their path, Japan organised descents upon Vladivostok, where in conjunction with the Czechs it overthrew the Soviet government in 1918, reinforced its descents by any army of from 70 to 80 thousand men and sent divisions to the Chinese Eastern Railway at Harbin and to other stations along the railway. At the same time she sent forces into the Amur, Trans-Baikal (Chita), and Irkutsk, and a military mission to Kolchak in Omsk.

Japan possessed considerable influence over the Central government in Peking and thru General Hsu nephew of the then president of China, Hsu-Shih-Chang, conducted her policy in Mongolia she later (1920-21) supported the bands of Baron Ungern in their invasions into the region of Troitsko-Savsk and the Province of Irkutsk.

Such was the position of Japan and such were her plans at the time of the Versailles "peace" conference. Of course, the robber policy pursued by Japan towards our government and towards China did not alarm the other imperialist powers very much, particularly since as far as we were concerned, the Japanese action was part of the general imperialist plan. But neither America nor England, nor the other "allies" could reconcile themselves to the fact that Japan had taken advantage of the world war in order to secure exclusive influence in China. From that moment began the imperial struggle for China, or rather, for the destruction of Japanese influence.

The chief antagonist of Japan in China is the United States of America. This is easily understood when it is remembered that America neither before nor since the war possessed territorial spheres of influence in China.

America regarded China chiefly as a market for her products; it began to value China as a sphere of investment for her capital only since the world war, when the accumulation of milliards began to suffocate American industry.

But no less important than direct trade with China, no less important than the direct investment of capital in China, were America's strategic plans.

From Southern China, which is two days distant from the Philippines (an American colony since 1898), America can best control these possessions and also keep her eye on the basis of British imperialism in the Pacific—Hongkong and Singapore. From Southern China America can best maintain communication with the islands of the Dutch Indies, where ex-

The B & O Plan at Work :-:

By Earl R. Browder

Being in Pittsburgh, close by which is located the Baltimore & Ohio Railway shops, at Glenwood, where the infamous "co-operative plan" was first put across on the railroad shop unions, I thought it might be of value to get a first-hand impression of the workings of the Johnston-Beyer version of the arbeitsgemeinschaften. With the assistance of a local comrade, one of the machinists working in the Glenwood shops was finally located. For the purpose of reporting we will call him "Smith."

Smith was not much interested in the subject of our question. He seemed to be a typical worker, one of the two thousand in the Glenwood shops, with nothing to mark him out from the others. Formerly an active union member, he confessed that he has attended but one union meeting in several months.

"Why don't you go to your union meetings?"

"What's the use," he answered, "with only 15 to 20 members there, nothing to be done, everybody sore and disgusted, and members dropping out every month. There are plenty of grievances to take up in the union, but the union can't do anything now. It's hog tied by the 'B. & O. Plan' and can do nothing."

"What kind of grievances have you in the Glenwood shops?"

"The management is systematically sowing division among the workers, by working some overtime while others cannot get in their regular eight hours. Systematic discriminations of all sorts are going into effect. Speeding up is getting worse all the time. Seniority has become a joke, and has gone by default — there is no such thing anymore. Snitching is encouraged and rewarded, and suspicion thus spread among the workers themselves. Oh, there are plenty of grievances, and hundreds of them have been taken up in the union. But the union can't do anything. The complaints are all filed in committee, and nothing is heard from them. We can't strike—we're co-operative you know—and the bosses laugh at us."

"Is the union getting stronger for any fight that may develop?"

"Hell, no! There are 1,400 men eligible to the International Association of Machinists in the Glenwood shops. A few years ago, before the strike, most of them were organized. When the B. & O. plan went into effect we had about 800. Today there are less than 250, and they are dropping out by the dozens every month. Of these only a dozen or so ever attend union meetings. The union is being destroyed."

"Is that the reason your local didn't send a delegate to the Detroit convention?"

"The supporters of Johnston who control the union offices didn't want any delegates because they were afraid some of the real facts about the Glenwood shop conditions might leak out."

"Why didn't you fellows who are disgusted with conditions go to your union meetings and elect a delegate to fight for a different policy?"

"Oh, what's the use? Those guys have all the money and the machinery of the union in their hands. Besides they have the support of the railroad officials. And any railroad worker who gets very prominent as a fighter against the B. & O. plan might just as well kiss his job goodbye. And we haven't got anybody there to organize our forces so as to beat these officials. They have the cards all stacked against us. What's the use?"

"Have you not heard about the fight organized by the Trade Union Education League and the Communists against the B. & O. plan, which rallied a block of delegates at the Detroit convention? Why didn't you fellows line up with them?"

"Yeh, we heard about it, some of us, after the convention. It was a good fight. But us guys here, who are up against the buzz-saw, we've sort of lost heart. Maybe we'll get back our fighting spirit some of these days. It sure did cheer us up to hear about the fight in Detroit. But take it from me, there is only one way to keep us with any International Association of Machinists at all, at least so far as the railroad shops are concerned, and that is to kick out the reactionary officials who have formed a partnership with the railroad companies."

"What is there to all this propaganda about how the bosses co-operate with you in the work, inside the shop?"

"Co-operate, hell! What the co-operation means, is that we have to work out labor saving schemes, write out our suggestions for saving money for the bosses, and in return for them we get our name printed in the magazine the boss prints. Why, even the 'economy union' at the Westinghouse Electric plants nearby does more in a co-operative way than this damned 'B. & O. plan.' In the Glenwood shops we got 'honorable mention' for our contributions to the efficiency of the shop — in the 'company union' at Westinghouse Electric they pay money for such things, sometimes as much as $200 a month. That Westinghouse Electric 'company union' is a rotten lousy thing—but it is beaten by the 'B. & O. plan.'"

This is the way one union man sees the B. & O. plan after working under it for two years. The conditions he describes, the disintegration of the union, the unremedied grievances, the militant attitude of the bosses against the shopmen—all these things are facts that cannot be hid, cannot be denied, and cannot be explained away. They are the bitter fruits of class collaboration, of the desertion of the class struggle.

ploited by Anglo-Dutch capital are to be found oil and rubber, and whither American capital has recently begun to strive. The prospect of a subsidiary means of communication with Australia from Southern China was perhaps another bait to America, whose ambition is to be the first power in the Pacific Ocean. Already great American merchant vessels regularly ply in the Pacific, and commercial connections are being established with the important centers of the Pacific. The lines between San Francisco, the Japanese ports, Shanghai, Hongkong, and the Philippines and back, have been thoroly organized this year and America is now seeking a passage to the Chinese ports which is not subject to Japanese domination.

In order to have a free hand in China, in order to be able to exploit her most advantageously as a market, a sphere for investment of capital and a base from which to extend her influence over the Southern Pacific, America after the world war was obliged first to reduce the influence of Japan.

In pursuance of this aim America first of all attempted to defeat Japan in China by means of the dollar.

In the spring of 1920, Lamont, the representative of American and British banks, came to China with plans for the formation of a consortium of bankers, i. e., a single international financial center for the exploitation of the wealth of China and for the industrialization of the country according to a general imperialist scheme. America, as the richest country, would naturally play the first fiddle in the consortium. This attempt at a "peaceful" solution of the American-Japanese conflict in China suffered shipwreck at the very outset. The Japanese government, which apparently at the Versailles conference gave its consent in principle to the formation of such a consortium in China, was in 1920 unable to fall in with the "public opinion" of the monopolists and militarists, she started a violent campaign against Lamont and exposed to the Chinese masses the danger which threatened them from the united action of the imperialists. It appeared, for instance, that as security for the loan which the consortium would advance to the Chinese government or to individual militarists the consortium would receive the right of levying agricultural taxes on the Chinese peasants and, moreover, would get the monopoly right of imposing indirect taxation upon certain articles of general consumption.

And since the government in China at that time was created by the victorious Japanophile group after the struggle between the armies of Tuan-Chi-Jui, who was supported by Japan, and Generals Tsao-Kun and Wu Pei Fu, who defended the interests of Britain and America, and therefore for a certain period acted more or less independently, the revelations of Japan compelled the Peking government thru the minister of foreign affairs, W. W. Yen, to address an open letter to Lamont demanding the denial of the reports of the acquisitive schemes of the consortium. The reply was couched in such a form as to leave the Chinese with not the least doubt as to the true intentions of the imperialists.

After the scheme for a consortium broke down, America came forward demanding an "open door" in China and the maintenance of Chinese sovereignty.

The Washington "peace" conference which was held during the second half of 1921, was summoned by America under the pretext of defending Chinese sovereignty and of limiting naval armaments. Its real object however, was to break the Anglo-Japanese treaty in order to isolate Japan in the Far East and weaken her influence in China.

America as we know, only partly achieved her purpose. The Washington agreement of February, 1922, did in fact, weaken Japanese influence in China, but by no means to the extent which was formally proposed to the conference.

In order to create a situation in China which would correspond with the formal victory achieved by America at the Washington conference, it was necessary to break the real forces in China which were supported by Japan, and to set up a Central government in Peking which would hearken to Washington and London, and not Tokyo. And in fact, but a few months after the Washington conference there broke out in Northern China a bloody struggle between Wu Pei Fu (representing Anglo-American interests) and Chang-Tso-Lin (representing Japanese interests). The fight continued until Wu Pei Fu obtained a certain superiority over Chang-Tso-Lin; e superiority sufficient to increase the influence of England and America in China, but not sufficient to destroy the influence of Japan. This situation reflected the true relation of forces between America and Japan at that time.

From the summer of 1922 to the present time political life in China has been taken up with the struggle between the imperialists. The slightest enfeeblement of Japan, either nationally or internationally, immediately called forth an attack on the part of America.

The success of our partisan forces and our red army against the Japanese agents in the Russian Far East —Merkulov, Diederich, Kapelev, and others—and the final liquidation of the white and black governments in the Maritime Province, compelled Japan finally to evacuate our territories. This reflected on the relation between Japan and America in China. America became more aggressive, and in 1923, drove out the Chinese president, Li-Yuan-Hung, and placed in his stead the tool of American capitalism, Tsao-Kun.

The earthquake in Japan last year, which considerably impoverished and enfeebled her, aroused American ambitions to liquidate Japanese influence in China as rapidly as possible. She is now only awaiting a pretext.

The events which occurred in China during the last few weeks are in fact a real war in China between Anglo-American and Japanese imperialism. The same Chinese militarists, Chang-Tso-Lin and Wu-Pei-Fu, are again the participants in the struggle. They are again fighting around Shanghai-Kwan where the territorial spheres of influence of Japan, in Manchuria and of America and Britain in the Province of Chili touch on each other.

The present antagonism between the imperialists in China is far more acute than in 1922. If only for the reason that one side is much weaker than the other. At the same time the Chinese militarists themselves are far better armed and dispose of far larger armies than formerly. The present struggle is therefore pregnant of far greater dangers than any collisions which have occurred in China in recent times.

Will the imperialists in China go as far as to make an open conflict between America and Japan in this present instance inevitable? We think that the struggle will not take such a form. Japan, while doing her utmost to protect her own interests, will avoid open conflict with America. The American government, which is facing a presidential election, will hardly care to test the attitude of the workers and farmers on the question of war.

We imagine that the result of the present struggle in China will be an armed truce in China with a certain advantage in favor of the Anglo-American imperialists. But all truces will be based upon a readjustment of the spheres of influence and will be made at the expense of the interests of the population of China and partly the U. S. S. R. inasfar as we are concerned in China.

Each year the possibility of the imperialists overcoming their internal conflicts by means of peace conferences, armed truces, and groupings and balancing the political forces in the world arena become more remote.

The events in China reveal to the proletariat of the world both the true ambitions of the imperialists and the tremendous danger of a new world war in the Pacific Ocean, where the interests of world imperialism are more entangled and confused than anywhere else. The slightest weakening of one of the parties which now contribute to the equilibrium in the Far East will inevitably call forth such a collision between the world imperialists as the world has never seen.

The Communist proletariat of the west and the toiling masses of the East must zealously follow the events in the Far East and be prepared for a struggle against imperialism.

Conducted by James P. Cannon, Educational Director

"Without a Revolutionary Theory a Revolutionary Party is Impossible."

Program of Communist Propaganda

Thesis Adopted by Fifth Congress of Communist International.

(Concluded from last Saturday.)

V. Program and Methods of Propaganda.

The most urgent political aim of Marxist-Leninist propaganda is to bolshevize the party by connecting party education all along the line with the existing political problems and the tactical and organizational tasks of the Communist International and of the various Communist Parties. This principle must underly the entire program and the methods of Communist propaganda work. Programs as well as methods must concern themselves with the practical side of party work. While avoiding abstract educational programs and methods as much as possible the parties, however, must endeavor to provide party officials and rank and file members with opportunities to acquire the theoretical knowledge which Marxism-Leninism offers to the working class and which as the development of the Russian and international revolutions have shown, are alone capable of serving as a guide to the final goal. Great care must be taken, however, not to contrast Marxism to Leninism, or rather the Marxism, of the life time of Marx and Engels, to Leninism. At all costs must we provide the conception arising that Marxism is the theory while Leninism is the practice of the revolutionary labor movement. Both Marxism and Leninism comprise the theory and practice of the working class struggle for emancipation. They represent the unity between revolutionary theory and revolutionary practice, in contradistinction to the decadent "Marxism" of the Second International which adhering to so-called "orthodox" Marxism separating theory from practice; it rejected revolutionary action in practice altho it recognised it in theory. "Leninism is Marxism of the epoch of imperialism and proletarian revolution. To put it more concisely: Leninism is the theory and the tactics of the proletarian revolution in general, and the theory and the tactics of the proletarian dictatorship in particular" (Stalin). This is the basis for the program of Communist education, the methods of Marxist-Leninist propaganda. The educational program in the Communist propaganda instructions cannot consist of Leninism without Marxism. In the epoch of imperialist development and proletarian revolution Marxism cannot be adequately advocated except in the form of Leninism.

31. Marxist-Leninist economics are the theory of the state and must occupy a prominent place in the syllabus of party schools. Events in the epoch of imperialism must serve as the basis of the study of economic theory. The syllabus must also include the study of the strategic, tactical, and organizational problems of the proletarian revolution and the Leninist solution of these problems on the basis of the history of the Russian and international revolution. Last but not least, the syllabus must include the history of the labor movement in the most important countries and at home, as well as the history of the party of the given country, a prominent place being given to social conditions and the role of opportunism in the labor movement. In agrarian countries, special stress must be laid on the agrarian question and the relations between the working class and the peasantry as Lenin advocated it. Of special importance is—extensive and intensive propaganda of the theoretical and tactical problems of armed rising and civil war.

32. At no stage of Communist Party education must Marxist-Leninist philosophy be lost sight of. Marx, Engels, and Lenin were all militant materialists. Their doctrine and their philosophy brought philosophical materialism to the highest stage, viz.: dialectical materialism. The inclusion of the propaganda of materialism into the syllabus of Communist education pursues also a political aim: the teaching of materialism will make our Communist Parties impervious to certain ideological tendencies which penetrate into our ranks; to the various forms of philosophic idealism, to religion, and to indifferentism on the question of religion, etc. All these tendencies in the last resort represent alien class interests within the proletarian organizations. Therefore the propaganda of Marxism-Leninism without the propaganda of militant materialism cannot be regarded as complete. Hence, the curriculum of all party schools must include this propaganda.

33. The methods to be applied in party schools, and in self-education circles must be carefully selected. Unless propaganda is methodical, it will not achieve its aim and will only result in useless expenditure of the energy of the propagandists, and the mass among whom they work. Experience has shown that wrong methods frequently lead to the disintegration of the entire propaganda system and to the dissolution of many propaganda institutions. This being so, great care must be taken in training propagandists not only in the theories of Marxism-Leninism, but also in the methods of imparting their own knowledge to the students in the party schools and to the masses. The central propaganda organs of the party must see to it that these propagandists obtain instruction in method. They must collect material on educational methods, study it, penetrate it, and apply it.

V. Organization of Marxian Research and Literary Activities.

34. Leninism is not only the revival of revolutionary Marxism, but also an extension of its theoretical and practical content. Marxist thot and Marxist theory have not yet sufficiently permeated the Communist International. Not enuf initiative and organization has been displayed in the development of Marxian research work. The attempts of the decadent Marxists of the Second International to continue the work of the orthodox prewar Marxism of Austrian-Marxism could not but fail for the reason that it is impossible even to pretend that social democratic practice, and the theories of Kautsky, Hilferding, Bauer & Co., is really Marxist. The general decadence of scientific research after the war naturally affected Marxist research as well. The only country where Marxian research and literature have received an impetus is in Soviet Russia where the revolutionary proletariat has established its dictatorship. As far as the western Communist Parties are concerned, they cannot boast of any achievements on the field of Marxian research. The Communist International must do its utmost not only to encourage the study of Marxism-Leninsm for propaganda purposes, but also to provide opportunities for scientific research and study on this field.

35. The Marx-Engels Institute, the Lenin Institute and the Communist Academy are the international centers for theoretic work and scientific research on the field of Marxism-Leninism. The task of the Communist International is to make the results of the research work carried on in these scientific institutions accessible to the international Communist movement. This can be achieved:

(a) Thru the Agitation and Propaganda Department of the Comintern, which thru its connection with these institutos can make use of the results of their research work on an international scale.

(b) By grouping around these institutions the party workers of all Communist Parties who are interested and active in theoretical research work.

(c) By utilizing the research work of these institutions as material for a periodical publication of Marxist Leninist research, of the published classical works of Marxism, and all the scientific and critical works of Marx, Engels, and Lenin, and also a Communist encyclopedia.

36. In addition to central party schools, laboratories of Marxist-Leninist research must be established in the most important sections of the Comintern. These sections must also be provided with Marx-Lenin libraries. The object of these laboratories is: to encourage Marxian-Leninst research work, to organize colleges for comrades interested in theoretical studies, to help in the elaboration of political and propagandist works, etc. These laboratories must also be the connecting link between the various sections of the Comintern and the Marx and Lenin Research Institutes of the U. S. S. R.

Why Was the Rising in Georgia Needed?

By KARL RADEK.

We have more than once had the opportunity of observing how the bourgeois press can lie, and we had imagined that there could be no further surprises in store for us in this line. But when daily war bulletins appeared in foreign newspapers during the two weeks ending September 17, with reports on the fall of Tiflis, Batum, etc., and on bloody struggles in Baku, etc., we began to ask what could be the meaning of all this. There are foreigners in Tiflis, there are foreign consuls in residence there, we are no longer living in times of intervention and blockade, when nobody abroad was in a position to judge of the extent of their mendacity. But at last, on September 18, the so-called Georgian embassy in Paris announced to the world that the great rising of the Georgian people was over. The "Daily Telegraph," which had taken active part in the propagation of all these lies as to an extensive insurrection, now publishes an article entitled: "Treachery and provocation," which destroys the tissue of lies maintained by the bourgeois press up to this date. The article is however, in itself a fresh flight of invention. The organ of the English foreign office writes to the following effect.

A Tissue of Lies.

"The events in Caucasia are typical for conditions in Soviet Russia, and for Soviet methods. The information which we have now received from trustworthy sources shows that the news on the success of the rising in Georgia has been exaggerated, and that the Bolsheviki themselves have spread this false news (!). Ever since the independence of the Georgian republic was annihilated by the Red Army, Moscow has been expecting the day to come on which Georgia would rise to win its freedom. When the Bolsheviki expect an insurrection, they attempt—and are often successful—in provoking the movement into activity before it is ripe, so that the adversary's forces have not time for adequate organization.

"The Georgian patriots, who fled to Europe before the red forces, established their headquarters in Paris, maintained communication with their native country, and energetically gathered together men and money for the purpose of a general insurrection against their oppressors. The Cheka in Tiflis, which possesses sections all over the Caucasus, exaggerated the success of the success of these preparations, in order to increase the importance of their work for the quenching of the insurrection. The patriotic organisations of Georgia were led astray by treachery. Provocateurs have endeavored to create conspiracies where there were none in reality, and to induce a resort to force where nobody had thought of such a think. When Moscow heard that the patriotic movement was increasing in strength, it was resolved to accelerate the outbreak of the insurrection, in order, first, to provoke the Georgians to a struggle and to annihilate them, and, second, to show the Russians the strength of the Red Army and the Cheka."

We have quoted the whole of the "Daily Telegraph" article, for in addition to a lot of rubbish it includes two highly valuable admissions. We need not demonstrate the absurdity of the assertion that the Soviet government itself prepared the insurrection in order to show how powerful it is. Nobody possessing the least grain of common sense believes this. But it is of importance to note the admission that the organizatory center of the Georgian insurrection is in Paris, and the second admission that the rising has proved to be weak and of brief duration. The whole tale of the provoked acceleration of the rising by the organs of the Cheka merely serves to explain why the rising proved so weak. In this manner one of the leading organs of English imperialism acknowledges that the whole talk about a mighty national rising, and about a three weeks' struggle in Georgia, was pure invention. We must wait and see what the press of the Second International has to say to this confession on the part of an important English organ, a newspaper which receives its information from the sources of the English foreign office and English espionage.

The Plan of the Georgian Mensheviki.

Since the Georgian rising was not the outbreak of the dissatisfaction of a people, but was organized from a center, the question arises: For what purpose did the Georgian Mensheviki, living in Paris and sending Dshugeli and others to organize the insurrection, need the rising?

The whole international situation, and the methods employed for carrying on the insurrection, give the answer to this question. In England a party belonging to the Second International has secured the government. This government has been obliged, under the pressure exercised by the English working masses, to acknowledge the Soviet Union unconditionally, without wasting one word on Georgia. In France the government is in the hands of the left bloc, and is dependent upon the support of the social democrats. Messrs. Jordania and Zeretelli turned with tears in their eyes to their patrons MacDonald and Renaudel: Have you forgotten us? Can you not do something for us? What could MacDonald and Renaudel reply? In Georgia everything was quiet, there was no sign that the Georgian workers and peasants had any idea of rising in an attempt to overthrow the Bolsheviki.

M. Jordania decided to supply proofs that a "struggle for independence" really was going on in Georgia. Just before the league of nations conference, before the second phase of the negotiations on the loan, and before the negotiations between France and the Soviet Union, was chosen as the most suitable moment. The calculation was very simple: The Bolsheviki would not venture to act with their customary energy, fearing to injure their international position. The leaders of the Georgian Mensheviki, calculating on the irresolution of the Bolsheviki, hoped to attain their object, despite the known weakness of their decaying party.

What was the object which they pursued? They could not hope to overthrow the Soviet power with their own unaided forces. They decided to take possession of a few remote corners, without entering into actual fighting. They themselves were neither able nor willing to attack important centers, and hoped that the Bolsheviki would be equally unable to resolve upon an attack upon them. They had correspondents in Trapezunt, commissioned with the task of informing the whole world that there were two governments in Georgia. MacDonald and Herriot would then intervene. This whole soap bubble burst, for this action received no support from the masses of the people, and the Bolsheviki showed no inclination to play at negotiations, but preferred to act.

How was the Georgian Rising Utilized by the English Bourgeoisie?

Anyone who has not fully grasped the object of the disgraceful lies spread abroad by the English and French press on the rising in Georgia should now read the leading organ of English imperialism. We have before us the "Times" of September 18. This contains an article against the loan. One half of the article deals with the loan, the second half with Georgia. What connection exists between the loan and Georgia? This is easily explained. The article states that Georgia was the embodiment of the highest wishes of Mr. MacDonald, and of Messrs. Snowden and Renaudel as well, who even travelled to Georgia in order to be able to describe this earthly paradise. But the Soviet wolf had devoured the Georgian lamb, and Mr. MacDonald, forgetting his love for Georgia, recognized the Soviet government, and thought no more of Georgia. But now negotiations are being carried on regarding the loan. There is an insurrection in Georgia, fighting and bloodshed. What now? Is it possible that MacDonald, in face of the bloody victimization of his Georgian friends, can resolve to further the ratification of the agreement on the loan in parliament? Thus the "Times" laments and questions. We read the "Daily Telegraph" of September 20. The leading article is entitled: "The Georgian lesson." We begin to study the lesson. But again the subject mainly dealt with is not that of the title, but the loan. But towards the end of this article against the Russian loan we find an appeal to MacDonald:

"English money must not be used for financing bestial and bloody campaigners, such as that which is now drowning Georgian liberty in blood. Within a week MacDonald has to speak. We once more call upon him to study this question, for he knows more about it than anyone else. He was in Georgia when it began to build up its magnificently developed and splendidly managed state, full of pride in its newly-gained liberty. He was full of enthusiasm and confidence in the future of Georgia. Three years ago he protested in glowing terms against the unheard of crime, against the subjection by force of arms. It is his duty to tell us what security he is able to offer us that our money is not used for such undertakings. He must tell us what feelings are now aroused in him by the orgy of pogroms and murders in Georgia."

Scheme of Imperialists.

It is easy to comprehend the ends objectively served by the Georgian Mensheviki. They wanted to utilize "pacifist" imperialism for the attainment of their own aims, but now it becomes more than evident that their blood has served imperialism without any pacifist coverings. The English capitalists are endeavoring to destroy the loan agreement, in order to employ the financial blockade for the purpose of forcing upon Soviet Russia the denationalization of industry, the abolition of the foreign trade monopoly, and the payment of the czarist debts. The petty bourgeois blockheads dream of utilizing imperialism for their own ends, but invariably prove themselves the blind tools of imperialism.

The imperialist social democratic press raises a tremendous outcry over the blood which has been shed in Georgia. But this blood is upon the heads of imperialist England and France, on the heads of the gentlemen of the Second International. When substantiating his resolution on Georgia at the league of nations conference, M. Paul Boncour, member of the Second International, made the very characteristic statement: Georgia has risen, and we, the league of nations, are bound to reply, if only by a gesture. Yes, for the Georgian Mensheviki, fooled by their foreign leaders, the league of nations will surely find a gesture. But this gesture will have to bring in money for the English and French bankers and industrialists, for the whole of their outcry over Georgia has but one single end in view: The English workers are exercising pressure on the English government, and demanding a loan for Soviet Russia. The English press therefore raises its outcry over Soviet brutalities in Georgia in order to sow confusion in the ranks of the English workers, and to weaken their pressure on MacDonald.

This is the reply to the question why the rising in Georgia was necessary. But the gentlemen managing the English imperialist press have this time woven a mistake into their tissue of untruths. They are obliged to acknowledge that there has been no rising in Georgia, but a putsch organized in Paris, and they have shown their hands remarkably soon, and demonstrated with remarkable candor that the bloodshed in Georgia was for them a necessity, as a means for frustrating the Russian loan. The truth about Georgia is not a blow against the Soviet Union, but against the bloody bandits of English imperialism, who are now shedding crocodile's tears over the Georgian victims who have acted as their tools.

Two great struggles were being waged.

First, the struggle between the Soviets, representing the masses, and the provisional government representing the capitalists, landlords and middle class groups.

Second, the struggle inside the Soviets between the Bolsheviki and the Mensheviki and other non-revolutionary parties.

The cadets and the mensheviks never understood that following the overthrow of the czar not only one, but two governments had arisen in Russia. The Bolsheviks, the untiring students of the French revolution and the Marxian method, knew this and from the first day their strategy had two objectives (a) the conquest of power for the Soviets and, (b) the capture of the masses for the overthrow of capitalism as represented by the provisional government and the substitution for it of the proletarian dictatorship.

By May 19, the war policy of the provisional government, in spite of the efforts made to disguise it, coupled with the agitation of the Bolsheviki, had so aroused the masses that the formation of a coalition government was forced and the first period of the Russian revolution came to an end.

The Bolsheviki opposed the formation of the coalition government with the slogan of "all power to the Soviets!"

The masses were still confused, however, and the executive committee of the council of Soviets, by a vote of 41 to 19 decided to allow its representatives to participate in the government.

Three groups composed the Soviet executive committee. The representatives of the social-revolutionists, expressing the aims of the middle class peasantry; the mensheviki representing the intellectuals, the lower middle class and certain sections of the skilled workers.

The Bolsheviki, later joined by the left social-revolutionists after the split in that party represented the aims of the great masses of workers and poor peasants.

From this time on the history of the Russian revolution is the history of the conflict between the mensheviki and the right socialist-revolutionists and the Bolsheviki centering around the program for the Soviets—a struggle between reform and revolution.

The reformists wished to subordinate the Soviets to the provisional government. They wished to postpone all such measures as ending the war, distribution of the land and control of the food supply until a constituent assembly could be called—they were middle class democrats and had no higher aim than a typical capitalist democracy.

The coalition government was formed and upon Kerensky the hopes of the world bourgeoisie were pinned. Agreement was reached by the executive committee of the Soviets upon three points:

1. The unity of the allied fronts.
2. The fullest confidence of the masses in the new cabinet.
3. Full power for the new government.

Ostensibly this represented the surrender of the Soviets to the new government composed of cadets, mensheviks, populist-socialists and right social-revolutionists with Keronsky as minister of war and marine. This was the plan of the reformists.

Actually it served to intensify the conflict between the revolutionists and the reformists within the Soviets—the conflict that Lenin had declared necessary as far back as April.

Lenin had written in April and aroused a storm among the Bolsheviks:

"After the March revolution, the state power passed into the hands of a new class, of another class—the bourgeoisie.

"The passing of the state power from one class to another is the first principle of a revolution, not only in a strictly scientific sense, but also in a practical political sense.

"To tht extent, the bourgeois, or the bourgeois democratic, revolution in Russia is COMPLETED.

"But at this point we hear the shouts of objectors who call themselves 'old Bolsheviki': Didn't we always maintain that a bourgeois democratic revolution is ended by a revolutionary dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry? Is the agrarian revolution, which is a phase of the bourgeois democratic revolution, completed? On the contrary, is it rather not a fact that it has not yet begun?

"My answer is: Bolshevist slogans and ideas in general have been confirmed by history; but concretely things have developed somewhat differently than was expected, assumed a more original, peculiar and varied form.

"To ignore, to forget this fact would mean to resemble those 'old Bolsheviki' who more than once have played a sad role in the history of our party by repeating senseless 'learned formulae' instead of studying the peculiarities of the new, the living, reality of things."

Lenin dealt with the fact (already mentioned above) that there were in existence in Russia two state governments; that of the bourgeois and, as he said sarcastically, "the revolutionary-democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and peasantry which voluntarily relinquishes power to the bourgeoisie, voluntarily converting itself into an appendage of the bourgeoisie."

"And so," said Lenin, "the formula (of a revolutionary-democratic dictatorship of the proletariat) has already become old. . . . In the order of the day there is a new problem; the split WITHIN this dictatorship between the proletarian elements (the anti-war internationalists and 'Communists' who stand for transition to the commune) and the petty bourgeois elements (Cheidse, Tseretelli, Steklov, social-revolutionists and other 'revolutionary' anti-defeatist opponents of the movement toward the commune, adherents of 'support' of the bourgeois and the bourgeois government)."

"He who speaks now only of a 'revolutionary-democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and peasantry,' is behind the times, and because of that has de facto gone over to the petty bourgeoisie against the proletarian class struggle; he should be relegated to the museum of 'Bolshevist' pre-revolutionary relics."

Once the Bolsheviki had accepted the thesis of Lenin on the new situation and the tactics indicated, the proletarian revolution drove ahead with resistless power. The Bolsheviki by their own acts and the Russian masses by theirs, gave the final answer to the confused and treacherous adherents of reformism.

When the constituent assembly met all power was already in the hands of the Soviets and it required but a handful of Red guards to send the "statesmen" home—or to jail.

The Bolsheviki had correctly estimated the revolutionary consciousness and will to power of the Russian workers. The Russian working class lived in a country where industry, in spite of the generally backward character of the nation, was of a highly concentrated character. The advanced section of the Russian workers had absorbed the Marxian theory to an extent unknown in any other country. They had the record of the revolutionary efforts of the working class of Western Europe before them.

Above all they had passed thru the bloody revolution of 1905 and its rich experiences were still fresh in their memories. The Russian masses were equipped for struggle as no other class has ever been equipped and they had the additional advantage that the Russian middle class was not the lusty petty bourgeois of Western Europe, but a feeble and spineless group composed of mere hangers-on of the big capitalists.

Finally, the Russian workers had a revolutionary party with a history of struggle and a record of loyalty to and activity in all the conflicts of the workers from minor questions of wages and hours to armed uprisings.

The Russian working class had learned the lessons taught by the two great leaders of the masses—Marx and Lenin. In 1847 Marx had written: "The state—the proletariat organized as a ruling class" and Lenin amplified it with "The major question of the revolution is the question of power." Translated into organization, education and the armed struggle for power these simple phrases became, in Russia, November 18, 1917, the greatest of all working class statements—the first proclamation of the council of people's commissars, signed by Lenin as chairman.

It reads:

Comrades: Workers, Soldiers, Peasants, All who Toil!

The workers' and peasants' revolution has finally been victorious in Petrograd, scattering and capturing the last remnants of the small bands of Cossacks duped by Kerensky. In Moscow the revolution was successful even before a few trainloads of our fighting forces arrived there from Petrograd. In Moscow the Junkers and other Kornilovites have accepted the conditions of peace: the disarming of the Junkers, the dissolution of the "committees of safety." From the front and from the provinces there flows in, daily and hourly, news of the support by the peasants in their villages of the new government and its decrees on peace and giving the land to the peasants. The success of the revolution of workers and peasants is assured, for the majority of the people have already come out in its favor.

It is quite clear that the landholders and capitalists, the chinoviks (bureaucracy) and office-holders, closely connected with the bourgeoisie, in a word, all those who are rich or who are aiding the rich, will be hostile to the new revolution, will oppose its success, will threaten to cease the activity of the banks, will disorganize or stop the work of certain institutions, will spread confusion and sabotage in every way, directly and indirectly. Every class conscious worker knows very well that we must inevitably meet with such opposition, that the higher officials are opposed to the people and will not surrender their charges to the people without opposition, not for a moment do they tremble before the threats and sabotage of the supporters of the bourgeoisie.

Behind us are the majority of the people. Behind us are the majority of the toilers and the oppressed of all the world. We are fighting in the cause of justice, and our victory is certain.

The opposition of the capitalists and of the higher officials will be broken. Not a man will be deprived by us of his possessions without a special law for the nationalization of the banks and syndicates. This law is being drawn up. Not a single worker will be deprived of a copek; on the contrary, aid will be given him. Without establishing any new imposts, for the present, the government will first take up the task of a strict supervision and control of the collection of taxes already established, without any concealment whatever.

In the name of these just demands, the vast majority of the people have rallied around the Provisional Workers' and Peasants' government.

Comrades and Toilers: Remember that it is you who now control the government. No one will help you unless you yourselves unite and take all government functions into your hands. From now on your Soviets are the organs of government power, fully authorized, decisive organs.

Rally around your Soviets. Strengthen them. Take hold yourselves of this task, from below, and wage relentless warfare on all attempts at anarchy on the part of drunkards, hooligans, counter-revolutionists, Junkers, Kornilovites.

Introduce strict control over production and an inventory of products. Arrest and bring before the revolutionary tribunals of the people, all persons who injure the cause of the people, whether this injury takes the form of sabotage (destruction and interruption) of production, or that of hoarding supplies of grains or products, or that of holding up carloads of grain, or disorganizing the activity of the railroads, telegraph, post office, and in general, any form of opposition to the great common cause of peace, of assuring to the worker control over the production and distribution of goods.

Comrades: workers, soldiers, peasants, all who toil! Put all the power in your districts into the hands of your Soviets. Preserve and guard as the apple of your eye, the land, grain, the factories, tools, products, transportation — all these are henceforth your common possession. Gradually, in agreement with the majority of the peasantry, and with their approval, as we learn the lessons of their practical experience and that of the workers, we shall advance steadfastly and unwaveringly to the realization of socialism, in which we shall be aided by the advanced workers of the most civilized countries and which will give to the nations permanent peace and delivery from all oppression and from all exploitation.

When Communists are accused of being visionary, of neglecting the "practical" things, of underestimating the importance of the petty reforms of which the liberals and socialists and other "practical" persons make major objectives, and if this criticism weighs upon them, it would be well to read at such times the proclamation of the first workers' government in the world—a document so practical and at the same time so revolutionary that capitalism will never recover from the effect it produced.

So was the Russian revolution born. It has written many brilliant pages of working class history since but none of them are so filled with lessons for the world's workers as the record of the eight months from March to November, 1917.

Built on the solid foundation of Communist knowledge and the working class will to power, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics forces recognition from its enemies the world over—enemies whose strength declines in proportion to the speed with which the working class learns the lessons of the Russian Revolution.

Russian Comrades to Sing and Dance at Anniversary Party

Tonight, Sat., Nov. 3, the grand concert and ball in celebration of the seventh anniversary of the Russian revolution comes off. Everything is set to make this a big party. Held under the auspices of the Russian branches of the Young Workers' League and the Workers Party everybody will be there, young and—all others (Communists never grow old). It will be held at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsh Blvd., and begins at 7:30 p. m. Come early so as not to miss any of the concert which contains a real revolutionary program. There will also be speakers in Russian.

Young Workers League Members Take Notice

Mailing order house campaign meeting will be held at 3322 Douglas Blvd. to make arrangements for the campaign at Sears, Roebuck & Co. All members of area branches Nos. 1, 4, 5 and 6 are instructed to be present at this meeting. It will be held Sunday, Nov. 9, at 6 p. m. You will get your instructions as to what time and place you are to help in the campaign. Make the campaign a success. Be at the meeting on time.

Members of branches Nos. 2 and 3 will meet at 722 Blue Island on Sunday, Nov. 9, 6 p. m., to make arrangements for the work at Philipsborns.

Communists Prepare for German Elections

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE labor fakers have not much to blow about this year. Here and there some capitalist politician who happened to be endorsed by the labor skates got into office. The skates take credit, of course. In Illinois, "Silent Cal" elected Small, but the Chicago Federation of Labor officials boast of his election as a victory for the "people." The Detroit Labor News, edited by Dennis Batt, formerly member of the proletarian party, boasts of the election of John W. Smith, capitalist politician, as mayor of the city.

MOST of the labor leaders, those who supported "Bob" as well as those who placed their eggs in John W. Davis' basket, are tearing their hair. Some are blaming Gompers for departing from the time-worn non-partisian policy of the A. F. of L. They are uttering threats against his official head. Will they allow him to die before they murder him politically or will they glut their hunger for his position right now? A few weeks should tell the tale.

E. B. AULT, editor of the Seattle Union Record, commenting on the defeat of Ramsay MacDonald, declares that contributing factors were his acceptance of the endowed car, and the opposition of the Communists. This is ungrateful on the part of the Communists, continues Ault, seeing that Ramsay did more than "any other premier" in making the Soviet government secure. What other premier? Lloyd George, Bonar Law or Stanley Baldwin? Is it a matter for slapping himself on the back for Ramsay MacDonald that he should recognize Soviet Russia, occupying as he did the position of head of a labor government?

GRANTING that Ramsay did more than any other premier to help Soviet Russia, he did it thru the pressure of the British working class. But while he was ostensibly aiding Russia, he was carrying on counter-revolutionary propaganda against the Soviet Republic in Georgia, and thru this perfidious action, was partly responsible for the death of many workers and peasants in that country. The Communists, it is true, attacked MacDonald, because he is an agent of capitalism in reality, and not a fighter for the workers. The Communists of the United States do not support Senators Borah or Hiram Johnson, merely because they favor recognition of Soviet Russia for business reasons. Even Mussolini recognized the Russian government!

COMMUNISTS IN GERMANY FIGHT OLD COALITION

New Reichstag Elections Are Explained

By ISIDORE STOLER.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany. — (By Mail.)—The Reichstag is dissolved. New elections are to take place in December. This is the first parliamentary crisis since the acceptance of the Dawes plan by the monarchists, junkers and social-democrats.

For many weary months the present Marx cabinet has been trying to bring about the big coalition, from the German nationalists all the way down to the social-democrats, from Tirpitz to Crispien.

Socialists Aid Dawes Plan.

In reality this coalition has been in existence all the time. For have not the social-democrats grabbed at the Dawes plan with both hands and helped put it thru?

Have they not helped the bourgeoisie deprive the proletariat of the last semblance of Ebertinian democracy? Have not the colleagues of Hilliquit added insult to injury to the 5,000 proletarian victims now languishing in Ebert's jails?

Our American comrades and the awakening class consciousness workers everywhere must finally realize this truth: The German social democracy is today an out and out counter-revolutionary party., which plays the role of "left wing" to the bourgeoisie, but only when the bourgeoisie needs it

BRITISH TO FORTIFY SINGAPORE FEARING SOVIET RULE'S SPREAD

TOKYO, Nov. 9.—News that the conservative party came back to power in the recent British elections has created the belief here that the British will again try to fortify Singapore as a naval base for the British Empire.

England looks with a jealous eye on the trade agreements which are now being consummated by the Russian Soviet government in Asia. The Baldwin government is expected to try to fortify Singapore in an attempt to curb the advance of Communism. Some papers here state that a new "disarmament conference" may be called for the purpose of making it easier for England to establish her military rule in Japan.

MORE CHILDREN OF WORKING CLASS PAY WITH LIVES FOR THEIR POVERTY

Two more children of the working class have paid with their lives for their poverty. Emanuel Kaleto, 12 years old, and Teddy Sygnatore were crushed to death by a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul freight train in the Goose Island freight yards while picking up coal for their freezing families, not far from where the same road caused the death of ten persons in a trolley-train wreck a few days ago.

Every Saturday Kaleto had to leave his playmates and neglect his lessons to spend the afternoon gathering stray lumps of coal along the railroad track. Emanuel's three sisters, a brother and parents were hit by the blight of unemployment. The women and children did what little work they could. The dingy rooms at 1345 Bradley St., were almost bare of furniture. The cold days of winter were approaching and there was no fuel.

Teddy, who lived in the same house lost his parents a few months ago. They gave up the bitter struggle against the capitalist system, and the Sygnatore boy was left alone with his brother Joe. The two boys saw a lump of coal under a freight train and crawled under to get it. Just then the engine backed into the car. The switching operations were hurried because time means money to the railroad company stockholders. Teddy had his arm crushed and both legs cut off. Emanuel's head was cut off.

Joe, who witnessed the tragedy, wasted no time, but took the coal that his brother had collected home to his aunt. For a lump of coal means life to the gnarled limbs of the workers.

LACE WORKERS DONATE $100 TO PATERSON SILK STRIKERS' FUND

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 9.—Branch No. 1 of the Lace Workers' Union at its last regular monthly meeting, donated $100 to the Paterson silk workers on strike. To the motion which was carried unanimously was attached an appeal to join the Federated Textile Workers of America.

He Prefers Death.

MT. PULASKI, Ill., Nov. 9.—Fearing a "licking," for playing with matches, Carroll Beaver, 5, ran back into a barn which he had set on fire and perished in the blaze. His dog "Bob" ran back into the fire with him and died at his side.

Only Left Wing Can Save Trade Unions

What Must Labor Do?

Statement by the Trade Union Educational League.

WHEN the convention of the American Federation of Labor meets in El Paso, November 17, the labor movement will be facing a most dangerous situation. Extreme capitalist reaction has just won a sweeping victory in the elections. Employers are feeling cocky, and the associations of "open shoppers" are taking on new life. The labor movement has suffered by loss of members and, more seriously, in loss of morale. What course must the labor movement follow in order to protect itself? What shall the workers demand from the American Federation of Labor convention?

• • • •

Repudiate Portland Convention Policies!

Last year the A. F. of L. convention adopted a definite line of action. It was, to turn to the employers for friendly arrangements while fighting bitterly, with expulsion and discrimination, against the militant left wingers in the unions. It was the so-called industrial democracy, applications of which are to be seen in the "B. & O. plan" in the railroad industry, the Berry type of dictatorship and strikebreaking in the printing trades, the Lewis-Farrington collaboration and long-time agreement in the mining industry, and "labor banks" everywhere. One year experience with this policy, with its accompanying expulsions of militants, beginning with that of Dunne at Portland, and running thru all industries and unions, has so weakened and demoralized the labor movement that, in face of the impending "open shop" drive under the new Coolidge-Dawes regime, the trade unions are in imminent danger of destruction.

The treacherous and disastrous policies of the Portland convention, which systematized and legalized false practices long menacing the labor movement, must be repudiated. In their place must be established the policies of labor solidarity, of struggle against capitalist exploitation. These policies are those of the Trade Union Educational League, endorsement of which has been given by millions of workers, but against which the official leaders struggle fanatically.

• • • •

A Militant Program.

ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED. The American working class is still largely unorganized. The labor unions are still losing members. This is a fatal weakness. All unorganized workers must be brot into the trade unions.

AMALGAMATE THE WEAK CRAFT UNIONS INTO POWERFUL INDUSTRIAL UNIONS. A principal reason why the workers are unorganized, and why strikes are lost, is that the workers are still divided into dozens of small, weak unions, which prevent common action against the united employers. Amalgamation is absolutely essential.

ABOLISH ALL RACIAL DISCRIMINATION. The millions of Negro and other colored workers must be united with the white workers, without discrimination, and upon the basis of complete equality. This is a prerequisite to the realization of the full power of the labor movement. Discrimination is a weapon in the hands of the employers to divide the working class.

FIGHT FOR RELIEF OF UNEMPLOYMENT. The greatest immediate menace to the labor movement, to wage standards and working

FASCIST RULE IN DESPERATE DEATH BATTLE

Mussolini Tries to Stem Rising Tide of Revolt

(Special to the Daily Worker)

CHIASSO, Italo-Swiss frontier, Nov. 9.—Dead and wounded are lying on the streets of every city of Italy today. They are the price of new clashes between armed blackshirts and the workers who have risen against them.

Fascist leaders are cowering before the fury of the workers and peasants, who have been called to action by the Communist Party of Italy.

Fascisti Quit Posts.

Hundreds of them are resigning from their posts. The Fascist directorate has found it necessary to begin court-martial proceedings against those who resign in order that the few who are left will keep their places.

It has been learned that the proclamation of martial law by the governor of Parma resulted from the formation a few days ago of a committee to arrange a united front of all revolutionary groups in the province. The Fascist labor unions have received their death-blow, and to prevent workers from uniting against their common oppressors they have induced the government to place the district in a state of siege.

Mass arrests of Communist leaders are taking place as a last desperate measure of the Mussolini government to stem the rising flood of protest. At Palermo, in Sicily, 138 arrests to a convention of revolutionary labor bodies were seized by order of the prefect and charged with plotting against the state. Labor leaders in Catania, in Messina, in Naples, have been taken by police.

The arrests, however, are a mere gesture. The leaders cannot be kept in the face of the anger of the masses.

More strikes have added to the impotence of the Italian government. Prato, the textile center of Italy, is witnessing a mass strike of 25,000 workers. The metal workers of Milan, Turin, and Piombino, are out.

Garibaldi Challenges Mussolini.

Peppino Baribaldi has challenged Mussolini to personal combat as protest against the attack by Fascist militia against former soldiers demonstrating against the Fascist rule.

The refusal of the socialist and democratic groups to form a united front with the Communists has at last torn from these parties the mask of friendship for the workers with which they have been disguising their real counter-revolutionary intent. Workers are leaving these parties by the thousands and joining the Communists, whose ranks are growing stronger every hour.

POPE DECORATES JUDGE GARY OF THE UNITED STATES STEEL TRUST

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Bishop John M. Gannon, of Erie, Pa., who returned on the Berengaria after visiting the Pope, brought back with him a decoration for Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation. His Holiness sent the steel trust boss a gold medallion, for "his benefactions among the steel workers."

The Pope also conferred the title of Knight of St. Gregory on President James A. Farrell, of the steel trust. If Gary happened to be Catholic he would also receive that honor. Mussolini has recently issued a decree recognizing Papal titles.

The steel workers are wondering how much Gary gave the Pope, in return for the decoration, and more important still the atrocious lie that Gary did anything for the steel workers, except rob them.

LONE WOBBLY REVOLUTIONIST WINS DELEGATES

Vern Smith Expresses Clear Class Ideas

It was unconscious and accidental—but probably Jim Rowan will try to make something out of the coincident, of the I. W. W. convention discussing the fundamentals of revolutionary tactics on the seventh anniversary of the Russian revolution.

But it was a disgrace to the I. W. W. that some of its members were on trial before the convention for advocating the same principles and tactics which made the Russian revolution a success by giving the workers undivided power.

It is a tremendous credit to the I. W. W. that they were vindicated by a vote of 23 to 3.

These members were represented on the convention floor by Vern Smith, editor of both the Industrial Solidarity and the Industrial Pioneer, who not only defended himself and his co-defendants from the charges brought by Claude Erwin, from the Oil Workers of Taft, California, but launched a vigorous offensive against the pacifist, reformist ideology which he declared had weakened the revolutionary spirit of the I. W. W. membership until they were prone to believe that being martyrs was much better than being victors.

"Crucify Him."

The trial of Smith, Morris, Fisher, Doyle and Gallagher was resumed where it ended the day previous. The charges were evidently padded with names other than Smith's for factional purposes. But Smith was the only one who appeared. From his able defense of revolutionary principles it appears inevitable that before the month is gone he will be persecuted as a Communist. A wobbly with his views can hardly avoid it. Indeed

WHOLESALE ARRESTS IS ORDER OF DAY UNDER SPANISH DICTATORSHIP

MADRID, Nov. 9.—The Spanish police are carrying on wholesale arrests in a desperate effort to quell the rising tide of revolt against the government. More than forty persons, said to have carried with them leaflets and papers advocating a revolution in Spain, were captured near the border and thrown into jail. Similar occurrences are reported from other parts of the country.

The Spanish workers, disregarding the threats of the militarist government, and disregarding also the propaganda of the arch-faker, Ibanez, who is calling for a bourgeois revolution, are preparing themselves to overthrow the dictatorship of capitalism as well as king, and to establish a workers' government in Spain.

Jobless Make Radical Demands.

WORMS, Germany.—Full maintenance of unemployed and cancellation of their debts are among the demands formulated by the Worms conference of unemployed workers. Other resolutions adopted insist on reopening of closed industries, united struggle with those still employed for the 8-hour day.

Quake Wrecks Many Homes.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Three thousand are homeless as a result of the earthquake in the vicinity of Algiers, according to dispatches received this afternoon here.

CELEBRATE THE SEVENTH YEAR OF SOVIET RULE

Thousands Join Singing "The International"

Long before the time set for the opening of the celebration, the topmost seat in the topmost gallery of Ashland Auditorium was taken. Then came the orchestra of the Young Workers' League to take its place on the platform.

A few preliminary notes, a signal—then a sudden wave of movement thru the hall—the crowd rising as one person—and the "International," the battle-cry of the revolutionary workers of the world, bursting from thousands and thousands of throats.

The Workers' Battle Song.

It was march music, it was a song of triumph, as it was played at the Ashland Auditorium this November 7. The orchestra of the Young Workers' League, in arranging the score, had caught all the exultant rhythm of a victorious battle song.

The end of the seventh year after the greatest event in history! They were celebrating the anniversary of the greatest single day in the history of the race—the successful proletarian revolution in Russia on November 7, 1917. Seven long years of suffering had been passed thru—and the first proletarian state was still standing firm.

And when Comrade Lovestone, in a ringing address, called on his audience to go back with him over the landmarks of the road travelled by Russia since November 7, of seven years ago, the crowd responded eagerly.

Forced War's Ending.

"Remember the seventh day of November of 1918. It was only one year

Zinoviev Speaks on 7th Anniversary of Soviet Rule in Workers' Republic

The following are important extracts from a speech delivered by Comrade Gregory Zinoviev before a Workers' Conference in Leningrad on the occasion of the Seventh Anniversary of the Russian revolution.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

LENINGRAD, November 9. — Within the short space of seven years, we have accomplished wonderful things. The famine is broken, the heating and transportation crises are over. Thru the N. E. P. we are marching forward to socialism. In the villages, we are still groping towards the light, altho the peasants of Russia are growing more and more efficient. This situation in the villages our enemies are trying to use as a weapon against us, by telling the peasants that the workers are more favored than they. It is the task of the village teacher, the village correspondent, the students, the workers, the Young Communists, the Red Army, to explain to the peasants the real situation. We must fight, seriously and steadily against the "kulak" (village nepman), against the priest. Our international prestige has grown. The German bourgeoisie are kept busy defending themselves against the rising masses of the German workers. France has recognized us. In England it is no longer a question of recognition—it is a question of a loan. Leninism is becoming the guiding light of the world.

AUSTRIAN LABOR SEEKS WAGES TO FACE FOOD COST

German Workers Plan to Join Big Walkout

(Special to the Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 9.—A new wave of working class resistance to the exploitation of allied imperialism is rising in central Europe.

Angered at the continued increase in living costs combined with reduced salaries and wholesale lay-off of employes ordered by the dictatorship of the League of Nations, the Austrian railway workers called a general strike at midnight Friday after having given the government a last chance to grant their demands for a wage increase.

As a consequences Italy and Czecho-Slovakia, neighboring capitalist nations, are threatening to invade Austria while the German railway workers talk of joining the strike, which has forced the resignation of the Seipel cabinet in Austria.

Imperialist Plans "Gang Aft Agley."

The situation is full of explosive international complications and illustrates clearly how unstable is capitalist economy with its internal contradictions continually arising to overturn the best laid programs such as those now threatened, the League of Nations' receivership over Austria and the Dawes plan over Germany.

The Austrian strike and the threat of a general rail strike in Germany follows only one day after the boastful announcement of the German government having succeeded in balancing the budget. In both Austria and Germany the net result of allied imperialist control is the same for the workers.

League of Nations' Dictatorship.

In Austria the post-war collapse had brought the national economy to ruin from which the only possible permanent recovery was the proletarian revolution and socialization.

As the Communist movement was too weak, however, to attempt this permanent betterment, and as the social-democracy influence over the League of Nations promised the "reconstruction" of Austria, the nation was placed in a practical "receivership" under the League of Nations, with its government's every act subject to a dictator sent in by the league.

League Plans Against Workers.

The present league dictator is a Dutchman named Zimmerman. When the dictatorship was first established, acres of puff publicity filled the capitalist papers all over the world. "Reconstruction" was the program of capitalism against revolution. Capitalist reconstruction, of course. This is the same remedy as Harding's "normalcy." Strikes were forbidden while foreign loans gave an appearance of returning prosperity.

But wholesale discharges of railway employes and other government workers, with wages held down while the cost of living mounted has increased the misery of the workers until the illusion of "reconstruction," thru the League of Nations' dictatorship, has been driven from the mind of the

SOUP KITCHENS, BREAD LINES IN TEXTILE CENTER

Expect G.O.P. Prosperity for Fall River, Mass.

By ART SHIELDS
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 9.—There were bread lines and soup kitchens in Fall River last winter; bread lines and soup kitchens are the prospect again the coming winter in this textile city of 4,000,000 spindles.

The industrial depression fell on Fall River fifteen months ago. In other New England cotton cities unemployment averages fifty per cent.

Suffering Is Widespread.

In Fall River the ratio is two thirds. In other cotton cities the unemployed and destitute get assistance from friends and national clubs. In Fall River the suffering is so widespread that the city has had to spend more than half a million dollars already this year on poor relief.

Walk thru the department stores of Fall River Saturday night when trade should be lively and you see clerks standing around waiting for the customers who are few and far between.

Fall River is perhaps the most glaring example of republican "prosperity" in the country. It is an old manufacturing city, dating back to the beginning of machine production in this country. Its industry is "protected." Yet the workers are hungry—in acute distress—and there is no good reason to believe that conditions will improve this winter materially.

Wages Loss in South.

Fall River mills specialize on the coarser cotton print goods. This is the field affected most by southern competition and Fall River, accordingly, is harder hit than any other New England city by this rivalry. Recently, the Newburyport and Pawtucket mills have gone south and the big American Printing company is about to erect plants in the same region. Hours range from 55 to 60 in the south and wages are several cents an hour less—small as they are in the north.

The American Federation of Textile Operatives, a conservative independent union, run on the craft council basis, has considerable membership in Fall River, also in New Bedford, Salem and several other New England towns. But, unfortunately for itself, it has no connection with the southern industry. Its Fall River members are mostly out of work. During the 1922 strike this union did not attempt to pull out the mills in Fall River or its twin city, New Bedford, while the mills across the Rhode Island border were shut down by the United Textile Workers' Union and the Amalgamated Textile Workers' Union. But the Fall River and New Bedford unionists did contribute thousands of dollars to help the strikers.

Monsignor James R. Cassidy, a prominent Catholic priest, spoke from the pulpit against a proposal of William L. S. Brayton, treasurer of the Sagamore Manufacturing company to lengthen hours and cut wages for the alleged purpose of meeting southern competition. Cassidy told the people that inefficiency of management is the greatest trouble with the Fall River mills.

Opposes Undertakers.

"We want mill conductors, and not mill undertakers," said the priest.

The Brayton family is one of several in Fall River that have inherited their mill properties from generations before. But hereditary ownership and efficiency have not gone hand in hand at Fall River.

Cities for Parochial Schools.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 9.—The so-called anti-parochial school amendment to the state constitution was decisively defeated, returns compiled today showed. The vote stood 329,109 for it; 628,896 against it. The larger cities snowed it under and even those communities which were for the measure were only so by small margins.

RED INTERNATIONAL AFFILIATION COMMITTEE ISSUES STATEMENT OPPOSING SPLITTERS IN I. W. W.

The Red International Affiliation Committee today issued a statement concerning the call for a split in the I. W. W. issued by the Rowan-Bowerman-Grady injunctionite faction of the I. W. W. which the DAILY WORKER published in a news article November 8. The R. I. A. C. statement is as follows:

On October 27, 1924, the injunctionites, Rowan, Ryan, Trotter, Daly, Buchwald, Raddock, Bowerman and John Grady, threw aside all pretense and openly called for a split in the I. W. W.

They have, in their statement of that date, claimed that they are the I. W. W. They assert that the Lumber Workers, the General Construction Workers, the Metal Workers and Railroad Workers—at least such as support Rowan and company, are the whole I. W. W.

Other unions are admitted only if they agree in advance to a so-called "plan of action" that would make a complete wreck of the I. W. W. and an absolute farce of class solidarity. Rowan Acts—the Convention Talks.

By shutting out all other industrial unions and I. W. W. members these fine gentlemen have, in fact, expelled them. They have, indeed, expelled the convention. More, they have done so without any flub-dub about democracy. Without taking any referendum, either! This is using more resolution to split the I. W. W. than the convention possessed when it left and leaves the expulsion of the injunctionites to referendum.

While the convention has thus shown a lack of "initiative," the injunctionites have shown no small leadership in a vigorous, centralized and uncompromising effort to destroy the I. W. W. Let no one fool themselves! Time will show that there now sits in the I. W. W. convention those who will leave it to support Rowan in the field, just as they have supported him in the convention with fine words about "letting the membership decide."

Those who would wreck the I. W. W. are organized. While howling against "politicians" they show themselves possessed of a fair understanding of how to maneuver. They were organized long before the convention and long before the election from headquarters. Their fight from the first has been well planned. Stool pigeons who are well supervised have such plans.

To wreck the I. W. W. it was only necessary to organize around some slogans made popular by demagogues. "Down with politicians," or "Take away power from general headquarters." Anything to furnish another enemy to fight than the bosses. Any other enemy but the boss will do.

Fight Politicians Instead of Capitalists

Members of the I. W. W. Look over the propaganda put out by the men who would split the I. W. W. Can you find in it any program against capitalism? The Red International Affiliation Committee has not been able to find one hint of such a struggle. The fight against the bosses is given up.

The fight against the blacklist, the struggle for more wages and shorter hours, the elemental and immediate needs as well as the revolutionary goal of capitalist overthrowal is deftly put aside. All the membership hears from the injunctionites is "Abolish the general headquarters!" "Abolish the per capita payments!" "Tear down all centralized class organization!" "Down with politicians!" and "Out with the Communists!" Such a program pleases the employing class. The bosses are not troubled with strikes while the I. W. W. can be kept busy fighting Communists. Stool pigeons ask no more.

The injunctionites are organized. They act. Their field workers, like Dunsmore of 310, are aiding Rowan just as are those who fight on the floor of the convention. The columns of the Industrial Worker were provided for long ago, as explained by P. J. Welinder at the convention. It helps Rowan split the I. W. W.

On the same day the convention leaves Rowan's expulsion to referendum, the Industrial Worker edition containing propaganda for such action is distributed thruout the country. And in not one line of any issue has the editor written one word of condemnation of the injunction.

In the face of terrible persecution by capitalism of I. W. W. members and of workers generally, what is the program of revolutionary struggle advocated by the Industrial Worker? Nothing! All the Industrial Worker carries is ridiculous advertisements of ten-cent packages of cigarets as a fake "economic" substitute for organization at the point of production, propaganda open or covert for a split in the I. W. W. and continued and stupid attacks on the Red International of Labor Unions and upon "politicians."

Neighbors to the Police.

These things are, we repeat, the work of stool pigeons. Bowerman works with the police to railroad Arthur Linn. Raddock is revealed as serving in the military intelligence service of the government. But these are not alone in infamy. It appears to be no accident that the injunctionite headquarters at 186 North La Salle street, Chicago, is next door to a police station and across the street from the detective bureau. There are thousands of other offices to rent in Chicago.

The man who selected this headquarters was a railroad detective. This much was told the members of this committee and to members of the Central Executive committee of the Workers Party by Joe Carroll Carroll asserted he had data in detail and offered to furnish it. However, on October 10 Carroll appeared and asserted before witnesses that altho he possessed this data, he would not turn it over.

At present, Carroll indirectly defends the injunctionites and adds to their propaganda by rallied attacks on the Communists. The Federated Press is victimized by Carroll in being made to state the absurdity that convention delegates have no choice in their voting and that it was a necessity for expultions of the injunctionites to go to referendum. This article, deceptive, is responsible for the publication by the I. W. W. of two books glorifying counter-revolution against Soviet Russia.

Ungag the Press!

Both the editor of the Industrial Worker and the editor of the Industrial Solidarity freely acknowledge that because of the censorship against discussions of policy in their papers fully 90 per cent of the members are uninformed of the facts of this crisis or any other matter of policy. This being so, a referendum is a deceit and those invoking it sheer hypocrites. Not until the I. W. W. press is ungaged will referendums be worth while.

Members of the I. W. W.! The Red Internationalist and Communists are not at all neutral. We are partisan to those workers in the I. W. W. who wish both to prevent a split and bring the I. W. W. into action as a revolutionary instrument for the immediate struggle in wage wars and the final overthrow of capitalism. We are sworn enemies of all who would cease the struggle against capital and divert all energy to attacks on other workers' organizations. Revolutionary education must accompany job organization. There must be no separation. To accomplish this we invite all sincere revolutionary workers to organize themselves into a left wing and hammer out a fighting program.

Only in this way can the life of the I. W. W. be saved from the split now under way. Only in this way can revolutionary principes be made a part of actual struggle. Only in this way can all disruption against capital and labor be defeated. And when revolutionary unionists organize there is but one center to which they may look for fighting cooperation and assistance—the Red International of Labor Unions.

Defeat the splitters! Organize for unity and revolution!

OFFICIALS AID WHITEWASH OF BIG RAILROAD

Prosecutors Make Joke of Their Own Laws

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company was aided by the city officials and the state's attorney in its attempt to win release from all blame in the trolley-train wreck which killed ten people a week ago.

Assistant Corporation Counsel C. M. Doty and First Assistant State's Attorney Charles Gorman cleared the way for the release of the railroad by testimony that the ordinances violated were impossible to comply with.

Albert Doss Fade Out.

"The ordinance passed in 1893 which requires all railroads to elevate their tracks over grade crossings is not regarded seriously because of its impracticability," Gorman told the jury.

Alderman Arthur Albert, who became quite excited on the first day of the inquest "protecting the interests of the public" by demanding that the railroad be held responsible, has not been in evidence since, having evidently been surpressed by higher-up politicians.

Former Governor Edward Dunne made it his task to bring to light all the numerous ordinances violated by the railroad, which was immediately followed up by the city engineer and state's attorney who testify that these ordinances are "impossible to live up to."

C. D. Hill, engineer for the board of local improvements of the city of Chicago, who has charge of all track elevations carried on in the city, told the jury of fat capitalists that it would be impossible to elevate the tracks of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad on the Lincoln Park crossings at Kingsbury St. and North Ave., where the tragedy occurred, without elevating the whole switching line along the river. This, according to Hill, "would be impossible." He apparently meant that the railroad could not be induced to carry out this safety construction because it would eat into their profits. Hill revealed that "the city is going to the expense of several million dollars to go over the railroad tracks where they cross Ogden Ave."

Doty Aids C. M. & St. P.

Assistant Corporation Counsel C. M. Doty, also gave testimony to aid the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad. He told the jury, "I have never seen an ordinance requiring the elevation of railroads which the general refinance refered to." Gorman introduced Doty as a witness. The state's attorney's men and the corporation counsel evidently went thru the entire history of city laws, for Doty produced an ordinance passed June 12, 1872, allowing the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul's predecessor, the Chicago & Pacific railroad, to lay tracks along Kingsbury St.

W. F. Ingraham, towerman, Brahe's superior, testified that Brahe's salary is $66.92 per month, and that some of the towermen are paid as low as $50.00 per month. He admitted that it was practically impossible to get good men to work as towermen at these wages. Ingraham admitted that the lanterns paed by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad did not comply with the ordinance requiring a brilliant and conspicuous light on the rear of a car when backing. He had never heard of the ordinance.

Admitted Violation of Laws.

"Colonel" C. S. Whiting, superintendent of the Chicago terminal of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroads, admitted that he was violating the ordinances prohibiting the switching of trains more than 20 cars or 700 feet long. Whiting said he had never heard of these ordinances. When asked why he did not break the train causing the accident, which was 58 cars long, he said, "It would have interfered with our work."

C. H. Evenson, superintendent of transportation for the Chicago traction lines, shed some interesting light on the activities of "spotters" and secret service men in spying on the traction employes. He told how hard it is to get a job with the traction company, which pays notoriously low wages. "We grade the applications of men applying for employment A, B, and C. We investigate the history and references of those graded A and B and then call those we want for examination," said Evenson.

"We give the applicants a thoro mental and physical examination. If they pass that we send them to the motor division head for instructions. There old experienced motormen and conductors train the new men for two weeks. They are then sent to the division superintendent for further questioning and if he is satisfied, they are sent to my office. The applicant is then questioned either by me or one of my assistants. They are then placed on the list. Then and not until then do they start drawing their salaries."

After the traction employes get a job, Evenson stated, they are constantly watched by supervisors, spotters and secret service men.

We Must Win These Four Million Voters for Our Struggle for "All Power"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Victor L. Berger, socialist boss of Milwaukee, has recovered sufficiently to give his views of the election. Not the national election, the state, or the Milwaukee county elections. But the immediate political misfortunes of Berger, himself, in "the Fifth Wisconsin District."

* * * *

Berger claims his re-election. The police returns reveal he is 396 ahead on the final showing. But the Coolidge-LaFollette politicians have not given up. They are still trying to count him out. That is Berger's bitter pill. And up to the time of going to press he had not been able to swallow it.

* * * *

Berger now admits that when the socialists went into the alliance with LaFollette it was nothing more nor less than a political trade. The socialists were to aid LaFollette. Then the LaFollette strength was to go to the socialists.

Berger himself admits, over his signature, that "Victor Berger was entitled to the full LaFollette vote."

* * * *

But capitalist politics are not played that way. Berger found that LaFollette "leaders" in Milwaukee advertised in the newspapers, calling on the voters to put their crosses in the G. O. P. circle, and to "vote 'er straight." That meant knifing the socialists. Berger's lament is as follows:

"While the socialists of Milwaukee (and of the state of Wisconsin for that matter) have loyally supported Robert M. LaFollette with their organization, their press and their money—while the socialists have concentrated all their efforts in behalf of LaFollette, just as intensely as they did in the past for Eugene V. Debs for that matter—some petty LaFollette leaders in Milwaukee—and most of these leaders are 'small bore'—obviously did not reciprocate with the socialists. We do not blame LaFollette personally for this."

* * * *

And why not blame LaFollette as well as his petty henchmen! LaFollette, as much as his least consequential ward heeler, was a party to the "deal" with the socialists.

The big fact is, however, that LaFollette and his political machine remained loyal to the class they represent—the small business class. Berger betrayed his socialist principles, yellow as they are, when he entered into a class collaboration deal with LaFollette. Berger turned traitor to the workers and exploited farmers. Then, in order to make the "deal" go over, he thought LaFollette would be as big a traitor as he. LaFollette, however, remained loyal to his class interests, as did his followers. They knifed the socialist candidates for the straight republican ticket.

* * * *

Berger's little bit of class collaboration in politics failed, just as all efforts to link the interests of labor with those of capitalism must react against the working class.

LaFollette votes did not go over to the socialists. Instead, as Berger admits over his own signature, "Some 10,000 voters changed from the socialist ticket to the republican ticket apparently in fear that the tremendous last minute campaign in behalf of the 'yellow paint' Lueck—democratic and Coolidge candidate for the governorship—would elect him."

Thus the socialists helped elect the LaFollette candidate, Blaine, whom the socialists, especially Berger's Milwaukee Leader, had bitterly fought in the primaries, denouncing him as an enemy of the workers and farmers.

Berger's class collaboration with LaFollette's republican party resulted in large masses of socialist voters, who had broken with the capitalist political parties, going back into the Wall Street political fold.

* * * *

In his alliance with LaFollette, Berger carried out a little National Civic Federation stunt all his own. Berger often denounced Gompers and other "labor lieutenants" of the capitalist class for banquetting under Civic Federation auspices with the biggest capitalists, charging this would blunt the edge of the working class struggle. But the LaFollette-Berger alliance in Wisconsin has brought even greater confusion into the ranks of labor in that state. They have been led to accept LaFollette and his nostrums as something "just as good," or even better, than independent political action.

* * * *

These Berger policies, the policies of the socialists, in the political struggle, are no different than any other class collaboration policy.

They smell of the same surrender to the enemies of labor that one finds under the so-called "B. & O." Plan, in the industrial field, by which the railroad workers are called upon to surrender the interests of their class struggle for power to the interests of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, a capitalist institution. The railroad corporation, privately owned, gains, while the workers lose.

The same condition arises in the arbitration of labor disputes. The arbitration board is always packed with the upholders of the capitalist system, who are on the opposite side from the class position of the workers, and decisions hostile to labor result.

There is the classic example in the Railroad Labor Board, where the representatives of the workers collaborate with the spokesmen of the railroads and "the public." But the representatives of "the public," just as LaFollette, who poses as the spokesman of "the people," are always to be found, in any crisis, championing the interests of the capitalists, not the interests of the workers.

* * * *

Four millions of workers and farmers voted for LaFollette. Berger's Milwaukee Leader claims that the same number of votes could have been cast for Eugene V. Debs, if Debs had received as much publicity as LaFollette. But Debs and Berger helped deliver those votes in support of LaFollette, a believer in capitalism.

It is now the task of the Workers (Communist) Party to win those four million of workers and farmers for the class war against capitalism; for the overthrow of the Coolidge-Davis-LaFollette-Berger social system.

This can only be done by enlisting these millions in the fight against the class collaboration policies of the enemies of the workers, both within and without the organized labor movement. These millions must be won for the Communist struggle for "All Power to the Workers!"

AUSTRIAN LABOR SEEKS WAGES TO FACE FOOD COST

German Workers Plan to Join Big Walkout

Austrian workers and they are beginning to resist.

Dawes Plan Strikes Reef.

While the Austrian railroads are completely tied up and even the postal, telegraph and telephone workers are talking strike, the left wing of the German railway unions is forcing the social-democratic union officers to consider a general strike in Germany at a meeting to be held today.

The "huge success" of the Dawes plan in "balancing the budget" is now revealed as the capitalist side of it. The social-democrat government is permitting business to make 50 to 80 per cent of profit, while wages are either reduced or remain stationary and the price of bread and other necessaries are climbing higher and higher.

On the German railroads, the other big complaint is the slashing dismissals of workers. This was promised in the Dawes plan and the dictator sent from America, Owen D. Young, fired tens of thousands of workers and is still "weeding" them out.

Yellow Socialists Can't Deliver.

Just as in Austria, the social-democrats of Germany have created the illusion that all would be well if capitalist "reconstruction" was accepted and all talk of "Bolshevism" suppressed. The party of Ebert and Noske began a campaign under the slogan of "cheaper bread." But the price is going up instead of down. This illusion being exposed to the workers, and their foreign dictators giving apt illustration of capitalist "reconstruction," the German workers, particularly the railway workers, now working for a private corporation into which the Dawes plan of the government lines be merged, are ripe for strike.

Strike Electrifies German Labor.

German workers are reported as being greatly stirrred at the news that Austrian railroads are shut down. The strike is carried out with military discipline. Not a train has moved, even the government failing to get a train it begged for to take government officials to the capital.

The strike brings to a head the crisis that has long threatened to explode under the smug hypocrisy of the League of Nations pretense that its program was "rehabilitating" Austria.

League of Nations Split.

In face of the general strike, news from all quarters indicate the intention of Fascist Italy to invade Austria with armed force to keep the traffic lines open upon which Italian industry depends for coal, coke and continental grains. This is supposed to be in agreement with Czecho-Slovakia to invade from the north to keep rail lines open for its needed constant communication with Italy and the seaboard.

However, invasion by Italy and Czecho-Slovakia would flatly violate the provisions of the League of Nations, not only because Austria is a so-called "independent" nation against which no armed invasion may be launched unless approved by the league council, but the invaded nation being under a dictatorship of the league invasion of it by armed forces practically making war upon the League of Nations by Italy and Czecho-Slovakia who are both members of the league!

League Warns Its Members.

Herr Zimmerman, dictator of Austria appointed by the League of Nations, has warned Italy and Czecho-Slovakia against armed invasion, but as the national interests of both countries are suffering, no one can say what will happen. Settlement of the strike depends upon the action of a new cabinet to take the place of the fallen government of Seipel, the Catholic socialist pacifist.

PHILADELPHIA HOODLUMS BEAT UP COMMUNIST

(Special to the Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 9.—Joseph Lillin, member of the Hungarian branch of the Workers Party, was arrested here the day before election for distributing campaign leaflets. Lillin went out with a bundle of campaign leaflets for distribution from house to house when he was descended upon by a bunch of hoodlum patriots who began beating him up and chasing him until he was arrested.

The charge against him is the distribution of seditious literature and the stupendous requirement of a one thousand dollar bond had to be secured before he was released. The hearing comes up in court on Monday, November 10.

THE farmers of North and South Dakota like the DAILY WORKER very much. Those who get the paper and read it invariably become boosters for the Workers Party.

I do not know of a single agency within our party that will do more to increase the party membership and advance the cause of Communism among the farmers than the extension of the circulation of the DAILY WORKER. Too much attention cannot be paid to this matter.

Those members, in this district, who make it a point to read the DAILY WORKER carefully, are the best workers for the party. They admire the truthfulness and audacity of the paper, and become great boosters for it.

With DAILY WORKER subs we can build the brick wall of Communism, educationally and organizationally.

Fraternally yours,

Alfred Knutson,
District Organizer, Workers Party.

CHICHERIN SHOWS UP HYPOCRISY OF HUGHES' ARGUMENTS IN HIS RECENT INTERVIEW IN MOSCOW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 9.—Referring to Secretary Hughes' declaration on the foreign policy of the government of the United States since 1921, particularly with regard to Soviet Russia, Chicherin, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, remarked in an interview with Moscow journalists that altho Hughes' argument underwent certain changes, his relentless enmity towards the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics remains immutable.

And yet, observed Chicherin, the original line of argument as to the impossibility of economic relations with the Soviet Republics, in view of the latter allegedly presenting but an economic "vacuum," has been entirely broken by the development of Soviet exports—grain, in particular, as well as cotton imports from America. As for the state secretary's assertion regarding a would-be lack of personal safety in Soviet territories, this has been refuted by the Americans themselves, as, for instance, by "Ara" representatives and a number of United States senators.

Arguments a Glaring Makeshift.

Any reference to the activities of the Comintern (Third (Communist) International), the responsibility for which is being laid by Hughes on the Soviet government is, but a glaring makeshift. Indeed, does the state secretary or, for that matter, anyone else hold MacDonald responsible for any actions of the Second International? And yet, previous to the war when the latter organization was engaged in revolutionary and particularly in anti-militaristic work, while its leaders were often members of governments in various states—no one ever dreamt of proffering such charges as against those governments.

As a matter of fact, the Communists in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics who are on the staffs of government organs are busy with state affairs, while party organizations carry on party affairs, very much in the same way as the republican party of the United States is engaged in party work outside of their government business. None but political ignoramuses can find anything to say against this manner of mutual relations between the party and the state, long established in all civilized countries. The more valid is this differentiation between the Communist Party and the government in regard to the Comintern, which is an international body, of which the Russian Communist Party is but one of the many constituent parts. Under such conditions any attempt at ascribing to the Soviet government or its representatives abroad the role of organs of the Comintern is but a flagrant and wanton misinformation of public opinion.

Hughes is Servant of Capitalists.

The difference between the Soviet government, which serves the interests of the toilers, and Hughes' administration, which is the servant of the magnates of capital, does not mean that some compromise between them is not feasible.

Just this reverse is true, declares the people's commissar of foreign affairs. The Anglo-Soviet treaty indeed evidences that mutually profitable deals are possible in the question of debts, the cancellation of which Hughes professes to consider as an unsurmountable obstacle to the resumption of relations with the Union.

The real obstacle, however, lies in the state secretary's unwillingness to admit that equality of rights is possible between two opposite economic regimes and in his desire to destroy the Soviet regime.

Personifies World Reaction.

Then, proceeding to communicate numerous and detailed data, with reference to authentic sources, on Hughes' many years' activity as a lawyer in the interests of Morgan, the Standard Oil Co., and other trusts, to the detriment of public interests—Chicherin points out to the fact that it is from Hughes' past that his present governmental activities have been inherited under which members of the American government are involved in the oil scandal, while Morgan's interests are placed higher than anything else. Indeed further states Chicherin, Hughes is a personification of world reaction and of aggressive American imperialism which is now rapidly returning into the sphere of world politics.

The temporary solution by the London conference of the main differences of European politics has enabled the imperialistic powers to act jointly against the colonial peoples, which are emancipating themselves, and also directly or indirectly against the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Explains Anglo-American Bloc.

Mr. Chicherin points out to the open armed intervention and the secret support of civil war in China; the support given by the British to the revolt against the Emir of Afghanistan, and analogous facts in Western China, Central Asia, Persia, Kurdistan, and Arabia; the aggravation of bandit movements on the river Dniester, directed as they are against the Ukrainian Soviet Republic; then the "putsch," or attempt at revolt in Georgia, avowedly staged by the western governments. The people's commissar lays special stress on the leading role of the Anglo-American bloc in this world wide onslaught of imperialism, and the contradiction existing between the pacifist declarations of Hughes in Paris and those of MacDonald and Herriot at Geneva, and the facts of the powers' aggressive policy.

Reverting to the Georgian affair, the foreign commissar declares that the Soviet government need not fear such stage-like revolts, for it has on its side the strong support of an overwhelming majority of the Georgian people. Indeed, whereas in the minds of the authors, the "putsch" in Georgia should have brought discredit to the Soviet power, as a matter of fact it only showed the latter's strength and the failure of the so-called League of Nations.

The irreconcilably hostile actions and utterances of Secretary Hughes against the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics are a sign of possible new attempts of imperialists at intervention and economic blockade of the Union in one form or anther within the nearest future. However, concluded Chicherin, the Soviet government it taking stock of this event uality.

Ford Willing to Take Musole Shoals from Cal's Administration

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 9.— That Henry Ford's mind is still open today to reasonable proposals for the development of Muscle Shoals seems indicated by an exchange of letters between Ford's secretary and Allen J. Rouhas, Mayor of Sheffield, Alabama, in the heart of the Shoals district.

The letters were made public by E. G. Liebold, Ford's secretary.

Despite his criticism of congress and his withdrawal of his offer for Muscle Shoals, Liebold in a letter replying to a note of regret from Roulhac, declared that "if congress has an offer to submit to us, it will be given prompt attention."

THE WORLD WAR DEBT FUNDING COMMISSION WANTS TO LENGTHEN JOB

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The world war debt funding commission sees no possibility of funding the European debts to the United States before February 1, it was announced at the treasury today. Congress, therefore, will be asked to extend the life of the commission, which expires February 1.

FACES OF CAPITALIST CANDIDATES MAY BE BROADCASTED IN 1928

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.— Radio, which played such a termendous part in the presidential campaign just ended, will be so developed during the next four years that voters in 1928 will not only be able to hear the candidates, but to see them as well, by broadcast movies.

This prediction was made today by acting Secretary of Commerce Stephen B. Davis.

Altho Davis believes that there will be few persons within the United States in 1928 who will not hear the broadcast speeches of presidential aspirants, he declared that the old time political meeting, with its red fire and enthusiasm will never go into the discard in American politics.

"There has got to be something to put pep and hurrah in the campaign," he said.

HE RAISED RED FLAG ON FRENCH WARSHIP IN ATTACK ON SOVIETS

ANDRE MARTI.

GENERAL DAWES' MAJOR MELODY SOBBED BY SOUSA

Frankenstein Hops on to the Bum Stuff

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

John Philip Sousa, the musical favorite son of American capitalism, gave two concerts at the Auditorium theater last Sunday afternoon and evening. He opened up with some awful trash called "Robespierre, or The Last Days of the Reign of Terror." One of his encores to this was the Melody in A Major by a gent named Dawes, known hereabouts for various pleasantries such as schemes for the enslavement of the German working class, conducting a banking business in a criminal way, and similar niceties. But, and we say this knowing full well the danger we run of being thrown off the staff of this paper, being ousted from the party, and barred from taking part in radical activities forever more, Hell and Maria has written a very good sentimental tune.

Feeding The Morons

John Dolan, first cornet of the band, played a few solos. Dolan has a phenomenal technic, and he played worse trash than the first number of the program. But this is partly excusable because on a band program one must throw a sop to the morons.

Three other soloists graced the program. A soprano named Nora Fauchald sang "The Maids of Cadiz" by Delibes and made a deserved hit with it. The first saxophone of the band played whirlwind waltz, but the encores it produced, two saxophone octets, eclipsed the effect of the solo.

Wanted: Nervy Conductor.

George Carey, the xylophone player, played a work of his own best described by its title, "The Pinwheel." The xylophone is almost an unrecognized instrument in symphonic and solo music. If somebody would write a concerto for it, and if some conductor would have the nerve to produce Debussy's rhapsody for saxophone and orchestra, the highbrows might wake up to the possibilities of these two instrumen s.

Sousa played an arrangement of Strauss' tone poem "Don Juan," which was a flat failure. "Don Juan" is no more suited to band arrangement than one of Sousa's marches is suited for a symphony orchestra.

There was a lot of delightful jazz, and plenty of Sousa marches. Musically there is nothing wrong with these well known compositions of the famous bandmaster. But when one considers the uses to which they are put, there is quite a different story to tell.

Young Workers League Has Concert and Ball At Workers' Lyceum

To raise the funds for the city organization to carry on its factory campaigns, the Young Workers League is arranging a concert and dance to be held Nov. 22, at the Workers' Lyceum 2733 Hirsch Blvd.

After the concert which will be very brief and variable, including tableaux recitations and singing, no sentimental songs, by the way, will be sung at the concert for which we pay our hard-earned dollars.

Then there will be dancing—The Englewood Orchestra will play Russian waltzes and American jazz with ballet dancing in between.

"The Man on the Kerb Stone," a short sketch of a modern proletarian seeking bread for his family.

All the proceeds of the affair are going to finance the factory campaigns of the city organization.

Tickets are 35 cents. Good time guaranteed.

Get Schedel Out on Ball.

The Labor Defense Council has succeeded in getting John Schedel out on bail. It furnished $1,000 in addition to amounts furnished by friends, making up the total of $2,500 necessary.

ANDRE MARTI, FRENCH REBEL, IN RED RUSSIA

Tells Horrible Story of French Prisons

By ANISE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 20.— (By Mail.)—Andre Marti is in Moscow. Marti the Jailbird; Marti, who was condemned to death for high treason! He is addressing city councils amid applause. He is being entertained by the Leningrad fleet and shown the honors of Kronstadt. The various factories which have been named in his honor rush into print, telling how they have improved production in the last few years—all in honor of Marti.

For Marti was a jailbird in France. And Marti is a hero in Russia. And the difference between these two extremes show that in spite of the apparent peace on the surface of the world, in spite of trade treaties and recognitions, there is a great gap between what Russia thinks and what some other nations think.

Marti was one of those French sailors in the Black Sea fleet who refused to fight the Russian revolution and led what is called by governments at war, a "mutiny" against his commanders, and was brought home on the promise of pardon, and then promptly condemned to death. There was quite a scandal about it at the time, and so Marti's sentence was commuted to imprisonment. And at the last elections he was sent as deputy to the French parliament by the Communists, so the government rather had to let him out.

Cannot Visit Prisons

In fact an amusing change took place in the relation between Marti and prison. After spending several years in closest inside contact with prison life, Marti cannot now, as member of parliament, get permission from the department of justice even to visit the prisons any more. They are afraid he will talk too much about them.

And he does. He is still a smiling sailor boy of France, with quick French movements of greetings as he turns to meet me in the Communist International building. But there is a twinkle in his smile, and purpose. Just now he has incidentally been exposing French prisons in an article published in the Russian papers.

"When Herriot came to power, we thought he would free the political prisoners" he remarks, "but he didn't in fact he is putting more. And thousands of soldiers, arrested for war-time offenses, are still in the worst of jails. One soldier of my acquaintance, who refused once to go immediately for dinner through a deadly hail of bullets, was given ten years at hard labor.

Herriot Against Rebels

"Herriot is especially against the revolutionary mutineers of the Black Sea Fleet. A soldier who in Odessa refused to fight the Russian revolution is still in jail. He was condemned to death, but his sentence was later commuted to twenty years. Another sailor in the terrible African prison got a double sentence for answering back to an official who struck him.

"There are also foreigners in the French jails, for offenses committed in a foreign land. Hungarians who took part in the Hungarian soviet government still languish in French prisons. The jails of the capitalists are international, you see. Two Syrians are in jail for refusing to obey a French commander in Syria. A Soudanese who was twice wounded in the Dardanelles was given hard labor for life because he read the Koran to a fellow soldier and advised him not to fight any more for the French.

Cockerel Escaped

"There is a class line in the Tribunals. Four months ago an ex-soldier, a working man of forty-three years with four children, was condemned to death by a military tribunal because he had deserted during the war. One month ago, an officer who murdered the janitor of his dwelling was set free by the military tribunal. When I tried to have this investigated in the house, there was such a noise and clamor of cat-calls from those socialist benches who do not believe in the class war.

"The French jails," continued Marti, "are of several kinds. In Paris is La Sante, where, where conditions are good; here are sent short-term political offenders, mostly journalists, who are not badly treated. Then there is also Riervo prison for longer terms also with a good regime; here are sent politicals whom the government thinks it can talk over to its own side.

Food Is Rotten

"But other French jails are the worst in Europe. The food is impossibly bad and scanty; you can't live on it. The government exploits the hunger of the prisoners by selling extra rations at fantastic prices. The punishments are terrible, not only deprival of food, and dark cells with and without chains, but rooms which revolve so that sleep is impossible. Besides this the jailer often beats prisoners, so that there are many cases of death from this, these deaths, of cause, being otherwise reported. The jail at Caennes are especially bad; obliged to work here is practically a death-sentence, as the death rate is 75 per cent.

"The worst of all are the military prisons, especially those in Africa There are no more hideous creatures in the world than the jailers here. Many prisoners wound themselves, cutting off a finger or a foot, in order to be sent to hospital. Here especially are sent those soldiers who spread revolutionary propaganda in the army and fleet.

"Besides the jails I know about there are more which are unknown, for I was not allowed, though a member of parliament, to investigate them."

Figures Show Few Negro Children Get Into High Schools

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.— There were 2,229,642 pupils enrolled in the high schools throut the United States in 1922, according to statistics gathered by Dr. Frank M. Phillips of the federal bureau of education and now published by the bureau. This was an increase of 272,287 over the total for 1920, the gain being about 20 per cent. Colored pupils numbered 35,731, or a gain of 8,100 over the year 1920. Teachers totalled 113,680, an increase of 16,920 in two years. This is apparently one teacher in the high schools for every 1,000 of population; one colored pupil in high school for every 350 of colored population, and one white pupil in high school for every 45 of white population, if the total population be taken at 100,000,000 white and 10,000,000 colored. Phillips' report gives 109,248,000 as the total population in 1920.

Steadily since 1909 the proportion of high school pupils to the total of pupils in the high schools has gone down—not much, but from 43.2 per cent to 20 per cent. The senior class enrollment was 12 per cent of all in 1909, and was 9.8 per cent in 1922. To that extent the American people are keeping their boys and girls longer in high school before setting them to breadwinning.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 9.—Additional proof that the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. company union is run by the company, not the workers, was given when the "Workers Congress," the official name for the organization, voted to hold no more regular meetings unless called together by the management. No further action was taken on wages. Recently the company union voted to accept a ten per cent wage cut. The reduction is still pending. The wage cut is being opposed by the textile council affiliated with the United Textile Workers' Union.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 9.—Everett Mills have closed again until Nov. 17. The 1,400 workers employed normally by the company have not had more than three days work in the last five weeks. A three-day week will be in force when the big cotton mills reopen.

STUPENDOUS SUMS SQUANDERED IN PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN TO KILL CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Fear that the child labor amendment to the federal constitution will be defeated is expressed. To become a part of the constitution, this measure must be ratified by the legislatures of 36 states. That is to say, it will be killed if 13 states permanently reject it. Four have done so. Most southern states are considered certain to reject.

Corporations Fight Amendment.

As the women's organizations, backing ratification, see the situation only a crusade will now save the measure.

They realize that back of the opposition is the massed corporate wealth of the country, which is afraid that if this amendment is put thru some other amendments in defense of the working class will likewise be written into the constitution.

Sweep Country for Child Labor.

Large sums of money are being expended by the textile and other child-employing interests in the business world, in combatting the child labor measure. Pamphlets and speeches are being printed and circulated, speakers are traveling over the west, addressing groups of farmers and small merchants, and country newspapers are being supplied with canned propaganda against ratification, most of this work is being done without the sounding of any alarm by the big city press.

Coolidge Is Non-Committal.

The women are much disturbed over Pres. Coolidge's failure to take an active part in the Massachusetts campaign on behalf of the children's charter. They now fear that he will refuse to say another word for the measure when it comes up for action in the state legislatures.

DRAMA IN THREE ACTS TO BE SEEN AT GREEK BALL

Proceeds Go to Greek Communist Weekly

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—"The White and the Black" a three act darma by the foremost Greek contemporary writer Spyros Melas, will be the main feature at the grand entertainment and ball given under the auspices of the Greek Branch of the Workers Party for the benefit of EMPROS, the Greek Communist weekly, the official organ of the Greek Federation.

Due to the popularity of the drama which is a literary work of first magnitude, the entertainment and ball is the most promising of the gatherings that the Greek branch has ever held. It will be held in the beautiful Terrace Garden at 57th street between Lexington and 3rd avenues on Monday evening, Nov. 10.

Altho the drama will be staged in Greek, the Greek comrades have seen to it that the drama will not be all Greek to those who do not understand the language of the Olympian gods. A brief synopsis of the drama in English is given below.

The Drama

In the first act, a young man, Alkis of a petty bourgeois family, comes back from Paris, where he was sent to study and become a physician against his will, as he had ambitions to become a sculptor. Altho an M. D., he refuses to put his science into practice, deserts his "career" and opens a dancing hall. This arouses the wrath of the whole family tree of the profession being considered of the most humiliating to the traditionally high standing of the family.

The second act deals in the beginning with Margarita, the elder daughter, who has grown into spinsterhood due to the petty bourgeois convenionalities, she cannot marry Andreas a poor artillery officer, with whom she has been in love for fifteen years. The only thing left for the old lovers is the nauseating indulgence in the memories of their love when they were young. Anthe, the 22-year-old daughter, who herself is molted with the petty bourgeois ideas of bourgeois morality, falls a victim of Nickolas, a rich young seducer to whom her mother has surrender her, thinking that he is an honest prospective son-in-law. This young man, as Alkis discovered from his comrades, is an expert seducer of young girls.

Alkis, in bitter language hits the old traditions and bourgeois conventions, whips ruthlessly the present day family morals. He tells them of his aspirations of seeing a new form of family, a family in which all members will be bound by mutual sentiments and not by the false ones of today.

In the third act, Andreas, the officer-lover of Margarita returns from a mission to the young seducer Nicholas, bringing the news that he failed to convince the latter to marry Anthe Costas, the elder son, who after a long struggle has succeeded in acquiring a somehow good position in a bank, and who is engaged to a rich society girl, fears the annulment of his engagement. The first "disgrace" caused to the family by his youngest brother Alkis when he opened a dancing hall, "a dungeon of shame and prostitution" as Costas calls it was followed by the disgrace caused by his younger sister's deliverance of her honor to Nicholas. Costas, in his effort to save his position and prevent the breaking of his engagement by his fiance's relatives, resolves that it is necessary that his family honor must be "whitewashed" in his sister's blood. He persuades Anthe must commit suicide, and dictates a letter to her mother, which he asks her to sign, and in which she "explains".

A 9-piece orchestra will furnish the music for the dance after the presentation of the drama. Tickets are sold at the Greek Branch, 315 W 29th street and special reduced rates are made to English speaking comrades.

TWO EDUCATION ASSOCIATIONS IN ANTI-RED CLASH

Sharp Conflict Between the N. E. C. and A. E. A.

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.— Between the action of the National Education Association in endorsing the Education Week program announced by J. J. Tigert, U. S. commissioner of education, after Tigert had taken the Americanization committee of the American Legion into partnership, and the action of the American Education Association in summoning a world conference on education in order to promote world peace, there is sharp conflict.

The world conference was held in San Francisco in June and July, 1923. Has the association gone over to nationalist fears and class bias and general denial of its earlier attitude since 1923?

The program for Education Week announces that we must "Stamp out revolutionary radicalism," and that "The red flag means death, destruction, poverty, starvation, disease, anarchy and dictatorship."

Its Stand in 1923.

What did the association say in 1923? It published the proceeding of the world conference at San Francisco, boasting the service it had rendered the cause of peace on the one hand and individual culture on the other, by bringing together the educators of countries around the earth, in a common purpose to bring about a common understanding and tolerance. It established a world federation of education associations.

Resolutions adopted by this world conference, dealing with international ideals, declared that "A universal aim in teaching the history of a country should be to teach the social, economic and political development of the nation and to show the relationship of these lines of activity to similar lines of development in other countries." Also that "History should be taught from the world point of view." Also that "The economic, social and intellectual welfare of humanity demands uninterrupted co-operation among the nations of the earth, and the reign of reason and justice founded upon international good-will; that such teaching will show the dependence of those things which enter into a true conception of civilization."

Urge Good-Will Day.

With the statement of principles, the conference resolved that May 18 be henceforth celebrated as international good-will day, that date being the anniversary of the opening of the first Hague conference. It was resolved that "an international flag, as the emblem of international good-will, might well be used in this celebration."

Dr. Augustus O. Thomas, state commissioner of education of Maine, was in charge of the arrangements for this world conference, and was chosen as president of the world federation. He remains chairman of the foreign relations committee of the N. E. A., which now has permitted its name to be linked with the Tigert-Legion celebration of an international hate week under the name of better education.

Laugh at the Rich

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Audiences that fill the Lyceum Theatre every night are having many a laugh at the "Best People," a satire on the idle rich. These "dressed up idlers," as the millionaire's daughter calls her mother and uncle when she rebels against their ideals and falls in love with a chauffeur from Missouri, take themselves so very seriously. The success of the "Best People," and "What Price Glory?" shows that the great American public likes to "ha ha" at the master class when it gets the chance.

LaFOLLETTE SWALLOWS ADAM'S APPLE AND ISSUES STATEMENT

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 9.—The "independent" LaFollette, having swallowed his Adam's apple successfully, spoke up yesterday noon in his first formal statement, saying:

"By the election of President Coolidge, the American people have chosen to retain in power the reactionary republican administration with its record of corruption and subservience to the dictates of organized monopoly."

LaFollette, unmindful of the drubbing, or pretending not to mind, called on progressives "to close and gird themselves for the next battle. We have just begun to fight."

WEALTHY CAPITALIST BREAKS UP SON'S HOME; WIFE WAS POOR

A warrant for the arrest of Louis Ambler, Jr., son of wealthy Oak Park parents, was issued today in the circuit court here, charging him with contempt of court for failure to pay his wife, Melba Ambler, 16, $20 a week. The young couple was married last May in Aurora and separated the next day by the husband's father. Young Ambler is now seeking an annulment of his marriage, and pending a hearing has been ordered to pay his bride $20 a week. He is four weeks in arrears, according to the court records.

the anarcho-syndicalist chairman began the attack at once.

Smith is charged with writing editorials calling on workers to "assault, overturn and destroy the capitalist system" and urging "thousands of workers to go to California and violate the Busick injunction."

The trial was somewhat clouded by the attempt of Chairman Welinder to discuss abstractly the theory of violence. The first attempt broke on a quarrel among the delegates as to whether the chairman was or was not talking too much. There seemed small reason for debating the question.

"What's in the Papers?"

Erwin arose and in contemptuous tone inquired—"What right have these editors to sit safely in Chicago and write anything they want to, while the membership in California is facing jail for selling the I. W. W. papers on the streets? I want a point of information from fellow worker Smith as to which he thinks is the more revolutionary attitude?"

Smith's answer implied that he thot it made a great deal of difference what the editors in Chicago put into the I. W. W. papers, as to whether selling them on the streets was a revolutionary act or not.

"The A. F. of L. union men have been capable of the greatest heroism," Smith declared, "but they are not revolutionary. The United Mine Workers' rank and file have proven themselves capable of the finest sacrifice —but they are not revolutionary. Even the A. E. F. in France was heroic, but they would be the first to tell you that they were not only non-revolutionary but against revolution by the workers."

This is Real Leadership.

Smith then launched into a history of the growth of pacifism in the I. W. W. from the time when Walter C. Smith's attack on militarism was relegated to the scrap heap at the request of lawyers under pressure of prosecution, and how it kept on, the I. W. W. retreating step by step from the advanced position which once made it the leading revolutionary body in America.

The California defense, said Smith, became so bad that pamphlets were issued describing the I. W. W. as an exact duplicate of the early Christian church and boasting that no organization in the world ever endured so much illegal violence in a better and more forgiving spirit.

Salvation Army Man Leads Woba.

He stated that by adopting a non resistant attitude the I. W. W. had attracted to it all the types who glorified martyrdom above proletarian accomplishment. The leader of pacifism in the I. W. W., so a wobbly in the audience told the DAILY WORKER, was a Salvation Army captain named Alfred Cohen. Smith did not mention Cohen, however, but added that just as pacifists were brot in, the fighting and class conscious workers were repelled by the change in the I. W. W. When pacifism began the I. W. W. had 58,000 members, now it had only 30,000.

These pacifist elements had taken the lead and so dispirited the membership that it would not fight back. When he heard, Smith said, that the I. W. W. loggers in Maine were determined to resist the violence of the Ku Klux Klan, he cheered up and was for publishing the news in Solidarity, but Vangsness of the Lumber Workers had vetoed it on the grounds that it might encourage the members in Maine to fight, and that was against the interest of the organization.

No Cheek Turning for Speed.

So far had the non-resistant ideas gone, said Smith, that in San Pedro the members did not retaliate even when their children were taken on the occasion of a raid and dipped in tubs of boiling coffee. "If I had been there, I believe I would have done something," said Smith. Erwin jumped up and tried to make a point by saying, "Two nights after the raid a crowd gathered to hear George Speed speak on the street." "Perhaps to," said Smith, "but I'll bet that Speed didn't tell them to turn the other cheek." "Speed, a delegate hopped to his feet — You're darned right I didn't."

These men were not cowards, explained Smith. Not at all. They were only paralyzed with inertia induced by pacifist teachings. They showed great heroism and splendid sacrifice, but won nothing but a job in the San Quentin jute-mill. Erwin, again trying to make a point, asked Smith if he was willing to go to California to "violate" the Busick injunction. Smith said he was when pacifism was laid aside and the only effective action, mass violation, started. "When you get a thousand men to go, I'll be with them. But your pacifism has destroyed so much that your calls don't get them any more. The general who would fight like the I. W. W. pacifists have in California, and send little detachments separately onto the firing line to be killed off, would not be complimented, but shot for treason," Smith observed.

Non-Resistance Officially Licked.

When the vote was taken to accept the majority report vindicating Smith and calling on Erwin to retract his charges, the vote stood 23 to 2 in Smith's favor, Leonard, Murray and Schwandt opposing. But the non-resistant Erwin resisted the call for retraction and as there is nothing more savage in attacking other workers than one who believes in not attacking capitalism, the delegates passed up the refusal without notice.

Report Stirs Anarchist Ire.

The convention had before it Smith's report as editor. This had been handled very gingerly previously. Rumor said that it was loaded. But upon Smith's vindication a motion was made to accept his report. Pandemonium broke loose. The anarcho-syndicalist chairman claimed the right to attack the report. The convention having apparently decided that one of its necessary functions is to keep Welinder silent, he resigned the chair, but finally took it back after being promised ten minutes to state the position of the Berlin International.

The report was read. It calls on the I. W. W. to declare clearly whether it has any revolutionary purpose, whether or not it is organized to overthrow capitalism, or merely to carry on production after capitalism has been overthrown by some other forces. It takes up non-resistance and it criticizes the California boycott, not in principle and not in all its forms, but decrys the evil effects of relying on the boycott to overthrow capitalism and asserts organization at the point of production rather than at the point of consumption should be accented and unenforceable boycotts not attempted.

Wesley Everrest Was a Communist.

Welinder's attack was solely on the suspected implication that if force was necessary then a red army was necessary, too, and any one who thot so was a Communist. He set up the novel argument that when the I. W. W. is attacked in its hall by mobs it should not resist there, for there was a better way, no resistance was needed anywhere except on the economic field. He even inferred Wesley Everrest was wrong in defending his life at Centralia. He should have depended on economic power. The same with the men on the Verona.

"When the Germans invented poison gas," said Welinder, "the English did not use the same method in retaliation. They invented a more scientific defense against the gas namely, the tank. Those who believe in other than economic methods for waging the class war should go where such methods are approved, to the Communists."

Are Tanks Economic Power?

The innocent remark that England did not use poison gas raised a laugh. But that tanks were represented as "economic power" no one seemed to notice, nor was inquiry made why the English had not gone on strike when Hindenburg attacked, and met the poison gas with folded arms.

Smith replied, however, and pointed out the experience of Italy and Spain, where strong labor movements were destroyed by physical force in spite of their economic power. "These facts show that altho you may have the strongest and best organized unions, capitalist reaction burns your halls, murders the leaders and imprisons and intimidates all active members—and does it successfully unless you organize resistance, protect your halls, defend your lives and save your union and its economic power."

The report was accepted and turned over to the committee on policy.

Still Severer Censorship!

Complaints against the Spanish and Hungarian papers for printing Communist and anarchist matter were read. Nobody knew which articles were referred to, nor did anyone suggest that the papers should be free to members and such articles answered. Everybody in the I. W. W. is supposed to be able to write articles, but nobody is supposed to answer articles expressing different opinions than the orthodox. It is much easier to suppress them. So the G. E. B. was ordered to exercise a still further censorship in the future!

Rowan's Friends Knife Griffith.

J. A. Griffith was handed a nice package as a reward for signing the injunction and then recanting. Rowan's gang in the convention, who successfully used the demagogue cry of "let the membership decide" and saved Rowan's expulsion for a referendum, played a slick trick. They made a motion for the expulsion of Griffith and got it thru without any referendum. Let traitors to Rowan beware! Only traitors to the I. W. W. get a referendum.

conditions, is the army of millions of unemployed. Industry must maintain its workers. Complete unemployment insurance must be established. Unity must be set up between employed and unemployed. The unemployed must be organized for this purpose in councils, in which unions and other working class bodies participate. Shop committees and control committees to regulate production must be established.

ORGANIZE THE YOUNG WORKERS. The millions of young workers now outside of the labor movement must be bret inside. To this end the labor movement must demand for them equal pay for equal work, a six-hour day and five-day week, abolition of overtime and night-work, non-employment in dangerous industries, a minimum wage, and control of apprentice schools by the unions. The young workers are the greatest potential power of the labor movement.

NATIONALIZE THE MINES AND RAILROADS. So long as these two basic industries are in the hands of private employers, who are free to use their manipulating power against the workers, and to engage in "open shop" drives, financed from the profits of them, so long the workers will continue to suffer increasing exploitation. The basic industries must be nationalized, with workers' control of operation.

FREE LABOR'S PRISONERS OF WAR. The capitalist dictatorship relies upon terror to keep the labor movement quiet and submissive. One of its means to this end is the imprisonment of labor militants. The labor movement must demand the release of all those who now fill the prisons of the country, and must prepare to back up this demand with action.

REPEAL THE ANTI-LABOR LAWS. The so-called criminal syndicalism laws in the various states are nothing but instruments directed against the labor movement on behalf of the employers. An organized demand must be made thruout the country for their repeal and for the release of their victims.

STOP THE DEPORTATION OF WORKERS. A new weapon used by the capitalists, designed particularly to terrorize the foreign-born workers and prevent them from joining the labor movement, is the threat of deportation. The labor movement must throw its strength into the struggle to stop the deportation of workers.

FIGHT AGAINST THE KU KLUX KLAN. The K. K. K., the American Legion, and similar bodies, are used by the capitalist class in its fight to destroy the labor movement. The trade unions must break the influence of all such organizations over the minds of the workers, and combat their influence everywhere.

THE PAN-AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR MUST BE MADE AN ORGAN OF ANTI-IMPERIALIST STRUGGLE, AND NOT, AS NOW, AN INSTRUMENT OF THE AMERICAN CAPITALISTS FOR SUBJUGATION OF LATIN-AMERICA. Capitalism obtains much of its power to exploit the workers thru its still more extreme exploitation of the semi-colonial countries. Gompers is a brazen tool of American imperialism. The Pan-American Federation must be changed into an organ of struggle against imperialism.

HANDS OFF CHINA. The struggle now going on in China, which is fundamentally a struggle of the Chinese masses to throw off the yoke of Japanese, British, and American imperialism, must find the labor movement strongly and positively in support of the Chinese masses, and their national and revolutionary organizations. The workers of America must demand "Hands off China!"

RECOGNIZE SOVIET RUSSIA. As a measure vital to the economic interests of the working class, but above all as a sign of international solidarity of the workers of the world, the demand must be made for the complete and unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia.

INTERNATIONAL UNITY. The present movement for complete international unity on the trade union field, initiated by the Russian trade unions and the Red International of Labor Unions, is the hope of the working class. It must be supported by all means.

A GENERAL UNITED FRONT OF LABOR. All the old artificial divisions among the working class must be broken down, and the fighting forces of labor must be mobilized to prevent the destruction of the unions, to defeat the "open shoppers," to relieve unemployment, to protect wages and working conditions, to organize the unorganized, and to carry thru all of labor's militant program. To this end united front committees, conferences, congresses, must be brought together on a local, district, state, and national scale. A general labor congress should be called as soon as possible to unify the whole working class struggle on the political and economic fields.

The Reactionary Officials Sabotage.

Gompers and his reactionary lieutenants will sabotage all items of this militant program. These corrupt "leaders" of labor will never lead the labor movement to anything but defeat. Only the rank and file workers, by making demand for the militant program, by organizing their demand in an effective manner, by taking control of their own unions, can protect the trade unions, can build them up and strengthen them, can put the militant program in effect in the life of the working class. In order to do that, the militant rank and file workers must have organs of communication and common action.

Build the Left Wing.

Nothing but an organized left wing movement can save the American trade unions from destruction. The center for such a great left wing movement is in the Trade Union Educational League. The basis for such a great left wing organization is in the militant program here set forth. Let every worker join in the demand for this program. Let him unite with his fellow militants thruout the labor movement. Let the rising spirit of solidarity and class struggle in the labor movement make itself heard and make itself powerful!

Raise the banner of solidarity and class struggle!
Spread the militant program!
Break down the sabotage of the reactionaries!
Build up the left wing!
For international and national trade union unity!
For the struggle against capitalism, and for the workers' and farmers' government!

THE TRADE UNION EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE,
National Committee.

CLAIM GENERALS IN MEXICO RESTLESS AS CALLES TAKES POWER

(Special to THE DAILY WORKER.)

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 9.—President-elect Plutarco E. Calles is threatened with a revolt involving many of the generals in the Mexican army who declare their loyalty to General Obregen, the retiring president, it was learned here today.

Plans for an uprising in the army have been completed by the Obregon generals and it is that the move may culminate in the curtailment of Calles' power as president and the appointment of Obregon as secretary of war.

Striking Machinists Standing Solid at Flow-Meter Plant

In spite of the fact that Federal Conciliator Marshman is trying to get the strikers at the Flow-Meter machine shop to return to work, the picket line is holding firm after a month's effective striking. The machinists struck as non-unionists against a wage cut, and immediately joined the International Association of Machinists.

Marshman is the strike-breaker who aided the Pullman company to break the strike of the steel workers last May, and who tried to get the garment strikers to accept the employers' terms and go back to work. He is supposed to be impartial, but always tries to make a settlement on the employers' terms.

The Flow-Meters machinists had been earning $1.00 an hour, but the boss slashed their wages 25 per cent and the men struck.

Candidates in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—C. E. Ruthenberg, Workers Party candidate for congress in one of the Cleveland districts was credited with 517 votes. C. Brahtin, the party's nominee in another district received 259 votes while A. V. Severino received 219. Their names had to be written in on the ballot.

Italian Protests in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 9—An Italian stood before the office of the Italian consulate here last night and fired six shots from a pistol. He said that he wished to protest against the Fascist outrages which have been terrorizing Italy.

HEROIC ATTEMPT IS MADE TO SUGAR-COAT THE COOLIDGE GRIN

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 9.—Candies on a stick called "Charms" have been displayed in the shops here carrying the profile of Coolidge engraved on them, both before and since the election.

New Klan Building at Forth Worth, Tex., Has Gone Up in Smoke

(Special to the Daily Worker)

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 9.—Fire declared by Ku Klux Klan officials to have been of incendiary origin, completely demolished the new huge Klan building here today, causing a loss of several hundred thousands of dollars.

Investigation revealed that the blaze had started at both ends of the building simultaneously. The fire followed on the heels of a close fight in Forth Worth during the gubernatorial elections. Dr. George C. Butte, republican and Klan supporter, was leading Mrs. Ferguson here and in Tarrant county by 82 votes today.

Say Fall Didn't Do It.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 9.—A flat statement that former Secretary of the Interior Fall did not conceive the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, fuel base project, involving the trading of government royalty crude oil for fuel oil in storage, but that the plan originated in the navy department, marked the trial of the government's suit to cancel E. L. Doheney's leases in federal court her today.

Brake on Paper Money Kills Jobs.

BERLIN.—The stabilization of the German currency which results in the printing of rentenmarks instead of the daily printing of a thousand varieties of the paper money circulation during the inflation period, has reduced the workers in the government printing office from 12,000 to 3,000.

after the Russian masses had risen to overthrow their oppressors. And still the forces of Communism thruout the world were strong enough to bring the end of the world massacre.

"Remember the seventh day of November, of 1919. That day saw the backbone of the counter-revolutionary forces broken forever. Remember when the Russian workers smashed the ring of fire and steel which the capitalist nations had drawn around them. Remember November 7, 1921, which saw the hosts of the white terror and their generals—the Yudenitches, the Kolchaks, the Denikins, swept into the Black Sea, and the dastardly attacks of the Polish lackeys of imperialism hurled back.

"Then a few years of more peaceful building and planning, the complete liquidation of the great famine, the restoration of industry and agriculture.

Capitalist Governments Surrender.

"And now, on November 7, 1924, we see twenty capitalist governments openly confessing that their attacks on Russia have failed, and that they have been powerless against the determined masses of Russian workers."

Wild cheers greeted Comrade William Z. Foster when he mounted the platform. Most of the audience had heard Comrade Foster speak after his first trip thru Russia in 1921. Most of them had heard him speak when he returned from Russia this summer, and was able to tell of the wonderful progress of the workers' and peasants' governments. And they were eager to hear more of the international significance of the revolution.

"The Russian revolution is the burning, living symbol of the new society," said Foster. "It is our assurance that not only in Russia, but in every country of Europe and finally in America we shall be able to raise the red flag."

There were other songs and other speakers. There was the Freiheit Singing Society and the mandolin orchestra of the South Slav Federation. There was Comrade Oliver Carlson, who spoke for a short time on the spirit of the Russian youth, and Comrade Martin Abern, who as chairman, guided the meeting smoothly.

Then the collection and the sale of literature. But how different from the ordinary "collection." No coaxing, no long explanations.

Respond to DAILY WORKER'S Call.

The mere name of the DAILY WORKER, which was to benefit by the celebration brot hundreds of dollars from workers eager to give what they could. Pamphlets, papers, buttons—all went quickly. Over $700 was taken for the DAILY WORKER.

And it was only one of the celebrations taking place on that day in almost every city of America, where workers were greeting the end of the seventh victorious year of revolution.

UNION MEMBERS ARE EXPELLED WITHOUT TRIAL

Hutchenson Decree is Called "Slave Order"

By MAUD McCREERY.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9.—Those affected characterize as a "slave order" the decision of the general executive board, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, under which 15 of the 16 carpenters expelled from Los Angeles local unions last March may be reinstated. The unionists were expelled by Organizer A. Muir on instructions from General President Wm. L. Hutchenson for alleged membership in the Trade Union Educational League.

The order, after sustaining the general president for suspending the men for membership in the league, which is designated as "an organization antagonistic and dual to" the brotherhood, reads:

"When the suspended members file an affidavit with the general office that they have severed all their connections with the Trade Union Educational League and never again will give that league any recognition, support, encouragement or assistance, nor will they become members of any similar or kindred organizations or give support, aid, assistance or encouragement to any such organizations opposed to or in conflict with the policies, principles, laws, rules and regulations of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, that they be permitted, upon payment of all back dues and pereapita tax, to continue their membership in the brotherhood.

"That they shall not be permitted to hold office in an local union or to represent any local union or serve as committeemen for any local union for a period of five years.

"This ruling applies to all members suspended in this case in Los Angeles on instructions of the general president, except D. Z. McClure of local union No. 158, in whose case the suspension is made permanent."

Ignored Constitution.

The expelled members are indignant, not only at the decision of the executive board, but also at the manner in which they declare the board followed the lead of Hutcheson in ignoring the constitution in handing the appeals and in delaying the decision until after the close of the recent general convention, thereby depriving the delegates of the privilege of acting upon the appeals and putting off for four years the right of the expelled members to appeal to the next general convention.

"The decision of the general executive board is virtually a slave order and if obeyed would seal tight our minds against any progressive move that did not happen to meet with the approval of the official bosses of the brotherhood," says Jim Walker, one of the expelled men, an active member of the brotherhood for 19 years and business agent local union No. 158 for the year previous to his expulsion.

Expelled Without Trial.

"The general executive board, as well as the general president, violated the constitution all the way thru these cases. First the general president issued an order to expel us without giving us a trial or even preferring charges against us in the manner provided for in the constitution. Then the general executive board for over six months ignored our appeals from the order of the general president and, by holding the matter off until after the general convention, lockeyed the delegates out of their right to make a final decision and also, at the same time, deprived the membership of the chance to get the facts in our cases from their delegates to the convention. Even now, in rendering a decision, they are again violating the constitution which declared that copies of the decision shall be sent to members affected by it.

"The board has never replied to us on our appeals in any manner and the only reason we know anything about the decision is because the local unions voted to send us copies of it. All we asked in our appeals was a fair trial according to the constitution. The manner in which the general office has handled these cases is a direct violation of all the democracy and justice that the general officers boast of so much. We protest against our inability to get a square deal in the capitalist courts—how about it when we don't get it even in our labor unions? We feel confident that had these cases gone to the general convention the decision would have read differently. I think the general officers were confident of this too."

The 16 carpenters were expelled by Organizer Muir, immediately after a raid by the police on the Trade Union Educational League here when all the books and records of the league were confiscated. The records, it appears, contain the name of the league membership as well as those of sympathizers who contributed to its work financially. In this manner, it is charged, Muir obtained the names of the union carpenters belonging to or in sympathy with the work of the league and its police raid formed the basis for the expulsion of the 16 members. Two of the men filed affidavits with the general executive board declaring that they were not members of the T. U. E. L. The board decision they received the same treatment as if they had been.

Y. W. L. NUCLEI PLAN ADOPTED IN THREE STATES

Salzman Reports Tour Brings Good Response

The trip of Max Salzman, organizer of the Young Workers League, who is touring the principal centers of Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin is meeting with a good response.

In Minneapolis a definite plan of work was adopted in harmany with the national program of action.

Four Branches Consolidate.

In an effort to concentrate on reorganizing the league on the basis of shop nuclei the four old scattered branches have been consolidated into one strong branch which will work to carry out the plan of work adopted.

Efforts to establish a shop nucleus in the Munsingwear Co. and the Minneapolis Steel and Machinery Co., will be made before Jan. 1.

In St. Paul, the efforts of the comrades must be to bring into the league more industrial workers as the present membership is too much of a student elemeht. These student comrades realize themselves that their important task is to organize the industrial workers and have agreed to conduct a campaign on the Brown and Bigelow Co., a concern employing several thousand young workers.

In Cromwell, our branch must concentrate upon reaching the farming youth, according to the outline of work given them by Salzman. Cloquet is concentrating upon organizing a nucleus before the first of the year in one of the camps.

Superior Active.

Superior, Wis., has been one of the most active units in the lake district Salzman made a good impression in Superior and after a presentation of the immediate problems confronting the league decided to throw their entire energies behind the N. E. C. program of action. Duluth has no league unit yet, and Salzman is making efforts to organize a nucleus before he completes his trip.

The membership of this district are all working hard to put over the Weekly Young Worker drive. Already the branches have sent in their quotas and all promise to put the drive for $2,000 and 10,000 subscribers "over the top." All other districts will have to go some to beat the Superior district.

The balance of Salzman's tour is as follows:

Ironwood, Mich.....Nov. 8, 9
Mass, Mich.....Nov. 10
South Range, Mich.....Nov. 11, 12
Hancock, Mich.....Nov. 13, 14
Ishpeming, Mich.....Nov. 15
Marquette, Mich.....Nov. 16
Eben Junction, Mich.....Nov. 17
Munising, Mich.....Nov. 18
Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.....Nov. 19
Superior, Wis.....Nov. 20
Minneapolis and St. Paul.....Nov. 21, 22, 23.

Workers Get Below Minimum.

The minimum cost of decently living for a normal wage earner's family, according to the Family Welfare Society of Boston, amounts to $1,889.49. This is more than $100 in excess of the cost of the same family budget in 1922 but a few dollars lower than the cost in 1921. The cost of the items of the budget in 1922 and 1924 is shown:

Budget Item	1922	1924
Food	$559.09	$552.61
Clothing	316.01	326.62
Rent	360.00	420.00
Carfare	70.80	70.80
Fuel and light	128.51	129.66
Cleaning and Supplies	43.25	31.97
Unspecified	310.39	327.97
Total	$1,787.96	$1,889.49

The society claims that this budget "provides over and above physical minimum something for the development of personality" but it is open to question whether the sponsors of the society could provide even for their physical necessities on the amount shown. The average wage paid male workers in Massachusetts fctories falls over $450 short of this minimum, amounting to about $1,425 with full-time work.

HOW TO FIGURE OUT YOUR BOSS' LOOT

Compare Your Wages with Your Boss' Profits.

FIND the name of your boss or firm in the newspapers, of last week and this week, or go to the local tax office and find out how much income tax your employer pays. You have a legal right to this information. Find the amount which he paid (or the nearest amount) in column A of the following table. Then look at the amount opposite in column B. The amount in column B represents the MINIMUM income which this exploiter robbed from the workers in 1923. He probably received a great deal more.

If he is a good liar, he forgot to report some of his income. If he is a shrewd business man he probably has a lot of income on which the government charges him no tax, such as interest on Liberty loans, etc., which was used to buy guns, ships, munitions, poison gases, and other instruments of destruction in the last world war. Also he probably owes part of his taxes. Therefore, the amount of income on which he paid a tax in 1923 is but a part of his total income.

Column A Taxes Paid	Column B Minimum Income 1923	Column A Taxes Paid	Column B Minimum Income 1923
$ 1,000	$ 17,000	$ 75,000	$ 230,000
2,000	25,000	100,000	280,000
3,000	32,000	200,000	500,000
4,000	38,000	400,000	1,000,000
5,000	43,000	960,000	2,000,000
6,000	48,000	1,500,000	3,000,000

9,000	60,000	2,600,000	5,000,000
10,000	64,000	5,350,000	10,000,000

LOSOVSKY TALKS TO RUSSIAN TRADE UNIONISTS ON SITUATION IN CHINA

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 9.—The following is part of the speech of A. Losovsky, president of the Red International of Labor Unions and member of the Central Council of Trade Unions, delivered at a special delegate meeting of the Central Council and the executive committees of trade unions, devoted to the situation in China:

"The actual developments in the far east affect the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics not only indirectly, but directly, too. We must bear in mind that we are now witnessing the beginning of a new period of wars.

"China is now faced with open military intervention into the country's internal affairs, as the ultimatum presented at Canton by the British French, American and Japanese governments affects the internal struggle in the south. We are thus confronted not only by fresh intervention in China, but also by new world conflicts

"As a matter of fact, the sharp edge of this intervention is directed both against China and the Soviet Union for the intervention was started after the conclusions of the Soviet-Chinese treaty. The conclusion of this treaty raised the spirit of the broad masses of the Chinese people, which protested against foreign imperialism. The latter evidently feels a great danger from such an awakening of Chinese national feeling.

"Available information tends to show that the pressure the imperialistic governments are bringing to bear is due to their intention to divide between them the territory of China. Now, who can prevent this? None but the revolutionary part of the proletariat and, foremost, the Soviet trade unions. . ."

It was at the conclusion of this speech that Mr. Lozovsky proposed the formation of the "Hands Off China" Society already numbers over into a formidable organization of practical brotherly sympathies of the toiling people of the Soviet Union with their Chinese brethren.

The membership of the "Hands Off China" Society already numbers over 400 thousands, and reports are still coming from all parts of the Union of Soviet Republics of branches of the society being organized. The movement, which has penetrated into the remotest corners of the Union meets with warm response on the part of the population. The latest news is the organization of such societies in Baroutan, Samarkand, the Kalmyk region, and Bokhara.

Mukden Agreement Text Incorrect

PEKING, Nov. 9.—With reference to items in the local papers reporting what is purported to be an agreement signed between the Soviet and Mukden, the Rosta correspondent learns on best authority that the texts of "articles of the Soviet Mukden agreement" as published in the papers are absolutely incorrect.

It is stated that the true text of the agreement will probably be soon received at Peking and will be available for publication.

KEEP UP FIGHT TO WIN CASES IN MICHIGAN

Await Decision of the Supreme Court

Eugene V. Debs has just contributed $5.00 to the Labor Defense Council for the defense in the Michigan cases, which he recognizes as vital "to every worker, regardless of affiliation."

This is only one of a number of contributions from Debs and shows his keen interest in the outcome of the Michigan cases. All contributions should be sent to the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

Fate of Cases in Balance.

The fate of the Michigan cases is now in the balance. No further steps can be taken until the Michigan supreme court renders its decision on the appeal of C. E. Ruthenberg. Then will be decided the depositions of the charges against William Z. Foster, William F. Dunne and the 29 other Communists indicted.

The Labor Defense Council has just received the auxiliary brief of Attorney I. E. Ferguson in the Ruthenberg appeal; this brief is in reply to that of the prosecuting attorneys.

Ferguson emphasizes that practically all of the so-called evidence in the Ruthenberg case was secured in violation of the law, calling particular attention to the unlawful seizure of Ruthenberg's suit case.

An Arrest Without Warrant.

"We certainly do not admit," he states, "that this was a lawful arrest. As already emphasized, it was an arrest without warrant, based only on the suspicion of Spolansky and Shanan that certain persons were present whom they were seeking on some federal charge. Apparently the idea of a violation of the Michigan criminal syndicalist statute was an afterthot based on the literature found at the convention grounds. Unless the bare presence of the arrested persons at the Wolfskeel resort was a felony—because these persons were Communists and had been engaged in a party convention—the October complaint could not give color of legality to the arrests and search made in August at the instigation of the department of justice agents."

Sold Goverment Information.

The Spolansky mentioned in the brief is the same individual who has been dishing out warmed-over fiction about "Reds" in the Chicago Daily News and other capitalist papers.

It is the same Spolansky who, when in federal employ was selling government information to the Thiel Detective Agency, at the munificient sum of $25 a day.

Another Soviet Nation

MOSCOW, Nov. 9.—Yusuf Zade, Plenipotentiary Representative of Bokhara, has handed a note to Chicherin, informing him to the decisions of the Fifth Bokharan Kurultai (parliament) regarding the changing of the People's Republic of Bokhara into the Bokharan Soviet Socialist Republic, its entry into the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and the national re-demarkation of frontiers in Middle Asia.

CLAIRE SHERIDAN SEES MANKIND FREED THRU COMMUNISM

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 9. — Tho not a Communist herself, she believes that the future salvation of mankind is in Communism, states Mrs. Claire Sheridan, the noted English writer and sculptor, in an interview with a foreign correspondent at Odessa.

Mrs. Sheridan came to the southern Russian port on a motor-cycling tour in Ukraine. To Russia she came thru Poland. After the latter country, Ukraine, made a very strong impression on the English traveller.

"I have been especially impressed by the sanatoriums, the resting homes for the workers and the schools I have seen, as well as the Russian youth and, particularly, the so-called Leninites. True, the elast of people to which I belong (Mrs. Sheridan is a cousin of Winston Churchill) calls the Soviet experiment madness, but I, for one, firmly believe in the future of the Union of Soviet Republics, and I want next time to bring my children here to give them a glimpse of the new approaching world."

Among the Odessa works and various enterprises Mrs. Sheridan visited the cinema factory where a film was taken illustrating the visitor's stay at Odessa. This reel was shown to the English guests but 22 minutes after the photographs had been taken. At Mrs. Sheridan's request, the film was to be sold to "Pathe," the money thus realized to be turned over to one of the Odessa children's homes.

Caution No Longer Needed

Now that Coolidge has been given a decisive mandate to occupy the White House for four years more, there is every liklihood that his highly over-advertised virtue of caution will tend to vanish. At least we feel certain that it will be crowded into the background by a maze of new "virtues" which the employing class will invent for its political mouth-piece.

We are certain that in California, Mr. Coolidge will cast aside this reputation before he does it elsewhere. Hiram Johnson has not been losing love on Coolidge for many months. It will be recalled that Hiram Johnson was offered the vice-presidential nomination at the republican convention in 1920 but had turned it down to permit Coolidge to have it. It will be further recalled that Herbert Hoover has dellvered California to Coolidge despite the tacit and overt opposition of Senator Johnson. Under these circumstances Coolidge need no longer be cautious with Hiram Johnson.

No one will attempt to interpret the fight of Johnson against Coolidge as a contest between progressivism and reaction. Johnson is as much a progressive as Coolidge and vice versa. Johnson is the man who had Daugherty appoint Wm. J. Burns to a position in which he could utilize all the governmental powers of espionage for strike breaking purposes. Senator Johnson has won the well-earned reputation of being an artful dodger.

The fight between Coolidge and Johnson, if it ever should materialize into a struggle, will simply be a conflict between two reactionaries of fundamentally one stripe. Had Johnson assepted the vice-presidential nomination in 1920, he instead of Coolidge would now be at the head of the republican party and serving the very blackest interests that the so-called Sphinx of the Potomac is now serving. We sincerely hope that the two champions of capitalist reaction should succeed in blackening each other sufficiently to make them both stand out before the masses in their true colors.

The Menace of Militarism

The menace of American militarism to the peace of the world was very forcefully pointed out the other day by Comrade Trotsky, the Soviet Minister of War. Speaking on the aim of the Red Army, Trotsky showed that the American imperialists are now building a huge military machine and that they are at work fostering dissensions and division in the ranks of the other national groups for their own interests of world supremacy.

Divide and conquer has often been the motto of ruling classes. At home our employing class pursues this policy in keeping the workers and poor farmers hopelessly divided, pitted against each other and presenting broken ranks in every test of class strength. Abroad our imperialists are reporting to essentially the samo practice. Germany will be strengthened against France, France will be thwarted in her effort to crush Germany. France will be supported against British capitalist imperialist ambitions. Poland will be backed against Germany and so on down the line of national capitalist groups. But all in all American money, Yankee gold, will be mobilized to unite the very groups now being divided when it concerns a challenge to or an attack against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The menace of American militarism is part and parcel of the menace of American imperialism. Militarism is a special violent form of capitalism. Capitalist exploitation rests on the bayonets, on the threatening cannons, on the policemen's clubs —in short, on highly organized force and violence of the employing class.

The menace of American militarism is an immediate one. It is a most serious one. Yankee militarism is long out of its infancy. It is now a titan. American military and naval forces actually and potentially are growing at astounding proportions. Our exploiters have sufficient resources to continue this mad race for many years. Only the working masses can stay the hand of our profit-taking and war-making class. Every battleship, every soldier, every marine, every military and naval air pilot in the uniform of the American government is a link in the chain that is now being forged to bind the workers to the imperialist plans of our ruling class.

The Walla Walla Times, a daily newspaper published in Walla Walla, Washington, by the Typographical Union, has suspended. The two capitalist papers are running on an open shop basis and will continue to do so, the news report states. The officials of the labor movement have been much busier driving radicals out of the unions than fighting the "open shoppers" with the inevitable result. Even the great Typographical Union is suffering severe losses.

The Baldwin Government

The composition of the Baldwin government indicates that the British ruling class feels itself strong enough to dispense with its social-democratic camouflage. The new cabinet is all-tory.

It is significant that the second most important position in the cabinet is given to Winston Churchill, the most notorious anti-labor baiter in Britain, one of the greatest criminals of the world war and the leader in the movement to unite the conservatives and right wing liberals against the labor party. Churchill is chancellor of the exchequer.

Lloyd George did not even get a look in. That discredited prostitute is now meeting the fate of his type. Raised to prominence and power on the shoulders of the masses, who once took him seriously when he attacked the British ruling class, like Woodrow Wilson, he turned out to be one of the most despicable traitors that ever deceived the masses, and like Wilson, he was ditched by the very class he served so well when they no longer needed him.

The tory government will carry out a "strong" foreign policy. The Singapore naval base will be developed and Britain will make a gallant attempt to win back some of the prestige it has lost to its greatest rival and most powerful foe, the young and lusty capitalist giant of the West, the United States.

But there are one million and a half unemployed in Britain; there is trouble in Ireland, India, Egypt, Mesopotamia, China and in every part of the world where the flag of the pirate empire flies. Ramsay MacDonald pulled some very hot chestnuts out of the fire for the British capitalists. The tories are now trying their hand at getting the rest. But they will get badly burnt. The British Empire has seen its best days. So has capitalism. The power of the workers is growing, slowly but surely. The Soviet Republic of Russia stands firm as capitalist governments rise and fall, desperately trying to find a way out of the impasse in which they find themselves. Soviet Russia stands as a beacon light to the workers of the world and a terrible challenge to the capitalists. The Baldwin government will go, other governments will follow. But the British working class will have their day, when under the direction and leadership of the Communist Party of Great Britain and the Communist International, they seize the power which so long has been used against them, and organize the Soviet government on the ashes of the robber empire.

The Professors Go to School

There have been many funny sides to the LaFollette movement. One of them is the way the professional classes rallied to the standard of the cracked liberty bell. Among these were the wise professors of political economy in the great universities, and after them they dragged an assortment of enthusiastic middle-class students.

In the campaign for LaFollette, few were more indignant at the Communists than these professors for the Communists pointing out the frailties of "democracy," for their insistence that there exists a dictatorship of the capitalist class and that the only way to defeat its purposes is to overthrow it and establish in its place the dictatorship of the proletariat.

No, sir. The professors knew better. They knew that this is a free country where the workers could change things by the ballot, peacefully and by due process of law, etc. They had studied Adam Smith and they had proved, yes sir, proved —that Marx was wrong. They were meliorists, not revolutionists.

With this in mind the professors—and the students—went out to vote, and 400 students to watch the polls. A liberal education in the fallacies of political economy as taught by liberals resulted. Husky football quarterbacks got a roughhousing by the "orderly forces of democracy" in the shape of wallops from hired toughs who threatened worse punishment if they "failed to vote right."

Two professors, of political economy, Jerome G. Kerwin and R. L. Mott, received post-graduate lectures upon the futility of parliamentary means as a method of social change when they were kicked out of polling places by policemen who, strange to say, did not fulfill their expectations of the role of the state as a neutral agency above disorderly class divisions, but who summarily hustled them onto the sidewalk when they protested at the brazen frauds being put over by the election judges and gunmen.

The professors have been to school and taken a little lesson in dictatorship. Will they revise their attitude toward Leninism and the program of the Communist International?

Senator Burton K. Wheeler did not get into the White House, but he got a lot of good advertising out of it. He is disgusted with the result of the election. We have not yet heard from Harry M. Daugherty.

Stanley Baldwin offered Sir Robert Horne the post of secretary of labor in the tory cabinet. Sir Robert felt quite insulted. He may have thought that Baldwin mistook him for John L. Lewis.

Magnus Johnson can spend the time now that he formerly devoted to attacking the Communists, milking cows and pitching hay, and hoping to be back in clover some day.

The Argentine republic has decided to withdraw its representative from the Vatican. It looks as if the Holy Father is out of luck these days.

German Communists Fight Morgan Coalition

to perform some dirty work against the working class.

In recesses between such counter-revolutionary jobs, the social democracy acts the ideal lickspittle and flunk, bidding for a job in some police presidium or in the department of that prostitute called "bourgeois justice."

Explains the German Parties.

In order that our American comrades may better understand the social structure and class content and interests of the political parties in Germany, I shall enumerate the most important of these and analyze their class composition.

Heading the extreme right is the Fascist "Deutsch-Volkische" party. This party is the result of a fusion of the former "Deutsch-Volkische" and "national-socialist" parties. It draws its strength chiefly from the nationalist agrarian and petty-bourgeois elements, the notoriously reactionary students, and the nationalist sections of the petty officials. The leading lights are Otto von Bismarck, and Ludendorff.

The "Deutsch-Soziale" party is a purely petty-bourgeois party; it is also nationalist and notorious for its anti-semitism. In it we find nationalistic workers. The spiritual leader of this party is a certain Kunze, who has the characteristics of unscrupulous demagogy itself; all sorts of shady elements, and degenerate petty-bourgeois are the lieutenants of Herr Kunze.

Deutsch-Nationale—Landowners.

We now come to the second strongest party in the old Reichstag—the "Deutsche-Nationale" or nationalist party. This is the party of the junker, the big and middle landowner. It is flanked by the higher bureaucratic officialdom and commercial bourgeoisie. Tirpitz, Hergt, Count Westarp, and Von Kanitz, the food minister in the Marx cabinet, are the pillars of this party. The nationalists have been thirsting for the sole control of the government for a long time; as it is, without a minister in the Marx cabinet, they have the judiciary completely in their hands, and are the executioners of the white terror.

In reality only the industrial wing of the nationalist party, is the "Deutsche Volkspartei" (people's party), which is based on the heavy industry and city bourgeoisie. It was this party that really represented the nationalists in the Marx cabinet, and furthered their interests.

Catholics in Center.

The government party, the "Zentrum" (center) is the clerical, Catholic party. It is the unholy defender of the holy Vatican, the counterpart of the Austrian Christian party.

The German Chancellor Marx (Wilhelm) is the political twin brother of Seipel, the Austrian chancellor. Both are the quintescence of mediocrity, which has been called upon by the bourgeoisie to keep the suffering and rebellious masses in subjection.

In this party we also find big industrials, and sections of the petty bourgeoisie; its main strength is drawn from the Christian trade unions, which are especially strong in Silesia and on the Rhine. The representative personalities of the "center" are Erzberg, Wirth, Marx.

Jews Democratic.

In Germany too we have a "democratic" party. It draws its democratic inspiration from the Jewish industrial and banking bourgeoisie, and from the democratic-republican city bourgeoisie. It is a sad and characterless crew, trying to play the part of a democracy that does not and cannot exist and of a republic born of proletarian weakness and indecision, and social democratic treachery.

These are the bourgeois parties that openly acknowledge their bourgeois composition and bourgeois interests.

There is yet the social democratic party, which still is able to mislead millions of workers with the lie that it is serving the interests of the proletariat. Its shameless and cynical betrayal of the working masses is by now so notorious that we need go into no details or recapitulations.

Parties Unite on Dawes Plan.

We said above that in reality there was unanimity between all the bourgeois parties, including the social democracy, as to the advisability of forming a big coalition for the carrying out of the Dawes plan. The social democrats consented to sit in the same cabinet with Tirpitz, Hergt and Westarp. The nationalists on their part declared their willingness to accept the helping hand of the social democrats in the rather difficult job of subjugating the German proletariat and reducing it to the status of colonial slaves. Why then, in the name of Ebert, did this splendid coalition unions fail to realize? The answer to this question is contained in the small word fear. The social democrats fear the wrath of the misled proletarian masses; the nationalists fear the disappointed followers whom they demagogically promised, only a few months ago not to vote for the Dawes plan, and never to ally themselves with the social democrats. But we have lived to see both nationalists and social democrats voting for the Dawes slave plan, and both social democrats and junkers proclaiming their willingness to coalesce for the dirty work. The Communists have repeatedly demanded the dissolution of the Reichstag, but the bourgeois parties and the social democrats always voted this proposal down—only to go into dissolution themselves a few weeks later — though they never feared the devil more than new elections.

How do we Communists look upon the coming elections? The Dawes report stands accepted—on paper. That was the sole function of the Marx cabinet-after the May elections. Von Tirpitz and Kautsky, Hergt and Crispien, all shook hands on the hangman's pact. MacDonald, Herriot, General Nollet and Morgan were jubilant. Capitalists, they naively believed, was again saved! But . . . they have forgotten in their calculations the most important factor of the whole scheme, namely the workers. They have forgotten that there is a limit even to the great patience of the German worker; they have forgotten that even the memory of the laboring masses sublimates and retains a sort of chronicle of the wrongs and sufferings and betrayals inflicted upon them. The monarchists, fascists, junkers, anti-semites, nationalists, clericals, Jewish bankers, and the jackal social democrats were all agreed on the Dawes plan, the entry of Germany into the imperialist League of Nations, the London Agreement, the abolition of the eight-hour day and the substitution of the twelve-hour day, the white terror, and the unscrupulous, cynical, brutal exploitation of the German proletariat. In one voice they all proclaimed the new "era of peace at home and abroad," which meant and means the crushing of proletarian resistance at home, and the mobilization of all imperialist hounds against the only proletarian state, Soviet Russia.

Workers Suffer.

But between the wish and its realization, there is a long and dangerous path for the bourgeoisie. The few months that have passed since the conclusion of the London Agreement, have intensified the economic crisis in Germany. Unemployment is growing from day to day; the cost of living is rising rapidly; the eight-hour day has been voluntarily relinquished by the reformists, and the twelve-hour day is no rarity in Germany today. And then, the cruel winter (of which the silly poets sing that "he knows no classes") is on the threshold, with some more misery and suffering, more hunger and more death for the proletariat. Every month of the Dawes paradise means more suffering and destitution for the workers.

But, again, the growing crisis is also manifesting itself on the field of industrial strife. The workers are shaking off the lethargy of the last few months. They are beginning to discern the plunderers who are about to unite in a common attack against them. They are demanding higher wages and the eight-hour day; they are protesting against the Dawes plan and the white terror; they are rebelling against the traitors of the social democracy. All this, of course, means trouble for the Dawes plan—and all the bourgeois parties, including the social democrats, know this. They also know that today a different Communist Party is leading the revolutionary proletariat than a year ago. In October the German proletariat was an inch away from power; all the symptoms of a revolutionary situation were there; but what they lacked was the Bolshevik leadership, itself ideologically clear, brave, determined, cunning, able and willing to lead. The treachery of the social democrats in October, 1923 has taught the revolutionary workers a good lesson. The present leadership of the German Communist Party will know how to take advantage of the weaknesses manifested by the bourgeoisie and their social democratic lackeys. We have at least a good nucleus of a Bolshevik general staff.

Attempts to Crush Communists.

The bourgeoisie and the social democrats know this only too well. No sooner was the Reichstag dissolved, than the bloodhounds of the social democratic chief of police, Richter, started the chase after Communist deputies who, thru the dissolution of Reichstag had lost their immunity. Comrade Hoelein, who last year had spent many months in a Poincare prison, has been arrested together with two other deputies: Maslowsky and Eppstein. The homes of these and all the other leading members of the Reichstag and party functionaries were searched in truly vandal fashion. The bourgeois press is decorated with ten inch cynical headlines: "Communists outlawed; lively chase after them." The social democratic "Vorwarts" does not even attempt to conceal its joy at this "lively chase."

But they are all radly mistaken. The Communist Party cannot be destroyed, cannot be throttled out of existence. In this election all parties are united against the Communist Party. Luddendorff and Kautsky, Von Tirpitz and Breitscheid are raving the same mad cry against the only proletarian party in Germany. But these gentlemen forget that in 1919 the social democratic Noske had had 15,000 workers murdered; the Communist Party grew in spite of Noske. In 1920 the social democrats severing sold out the Ruhr workers to the enemy, and still the Comunist Party grew. In 1921 the same Severing crushed the workers of Middle Germany; the Communist Party grew none the less. In 1923 General Muller, with the aid of the social democrats, marched into Saxony and Turingia and crushed the workers there; the Communist Party grew. With the votes of the social democrats, the Communist Party was outlawed and the state of siege declared; 8,000 revolutionary workers and functionaries of the Communist Party were thrown into prison and our press prohibited, and still the Communist Party grew. And today the social democratic chiefs of police are arresting and persecuting the leading and most active party members in the hope of exterminating Communism in Germany, in order that the social democrats may have a free hand in the colonization of the German proletariat.

Communist Program.

The German Communist Party will not and cannot be silenced, it will continue to rouse the masses and mobilize them for the inevitable struggle. The industrial and economic conflicts, and the new strike movements will inevitably bring political struggles in their wake. The slogan of the German Communist Party continues to be: Rejection of the Dawes plan or any other colonization plan; the expropriation of the factories, ships, mines, railways and large estates and the control of same by the working masses under a revolutionary workers' government. The Communists demand furthermore, an alliance, not with the pirates of the League of Nations, but with Soviet Russia; the freeing of the proletarian political prisoners and the united front of all workers against the bourgeois and their social democratic lackeys.

With these slogans, and without hiding its true revolutionary countenance from the masses, the German Communist Party will enter the election fight.

cial activity or inactivity of the czarist aristocracy living in London, was decorated with red bunting and pictures of Lenin smiled knowingly at the guests from the walls.

THE reception committee consisted of workers, who smoked cigarettes and chatted informally with the guests, among whom were such notables as George Bernard Shaw, H. G. Wells, and prominent labor leaders. Ramsay MacDonald was invited but sent his regrets. Perhaps his regret was accentuated by his bungling of the "Zinoviev" letter, now admitted even by MacDonald to be a fake.

LEONID Krassin is going to Paris to occupy the old Russian palace which housed the old and cunning intriguers of the czars. The French government which swore by the Holy Rood that it would never, never recognize the wicked Bolsheviks, is giving the Soviet envoys a right cordial welcome. Rakovsky was very disappointed that he did not find any secret documents. They may appear in the Hearst press later on, when some impecunious nobleman gets his price.

IN Italy the Fascist dictatorship is building rapidly downhill. Benito's machine is cracking. He tried to play the role of a black Lenin and failure yawns before him. It will not work, dictatorship of the few by the many. There are two kinds of dictatorships. The capitalist kind, which is the domination of the many by the few and the Soviet kind, which is the domination of the few robbers by the many producers until such time as capitalist robbery is completely eliminated, when the dictatorship will naturally cease. The latter will succeed because it is in the interests of the masses and is also in harmony with social progress.

DENNIS Batt of Detroit is not so sure whether the Russian revolution is a success or not—yet. But Dennis is a practical politician. He no longer talks Communism or denounces the Workers Party as an "aggregation of reformists." Dennis supports capitalist politicians for election and runs for office on the G. O. P. ticket. In Russia they don't do such things. Perhaps the Russian leaders are not as well fed as Dennis, but it is safe to say that if their heads are not as fat, neither are they so empty.

THE Washington group of the C. P. P. A. met and decided to hold on to what they had, which is nothing but their jobs. Johnston expressed himself as contended with the situation. Why not? The machinists are taing good care of him. Senator Wheeler is not so contended. He is not president of a labor union, and must watch his step. He is sore at the labor leaders, sore at the farmer leaders, sore at all groups except the socialists. The latter did fine, he says, and deserve praise. They've got it—in the neck.

THE C. P. P. A. will hold a national convention in Washington late in January to "consider" the formal launching of a political party. In the meantime nothing will be done to prejudice the action of the delegates, or anticipate their wishes. In other words nothing will be done. Lawrence Todd, Washington correspondent for the Federated Press, who had a gay old time puffing wind into the LaFollette gas bag, appears to be rather pessimistic just now. In a recent dispatch he says: "Sentiment will be sounded as to whether the state and local workers want a new party or merely the creation of a permanent C. P. P. A. which in the next campaign might become an ally of the democrats. That it would endorse the socialists is—from the present indications of sentiment around headquarters—quite unthinkable. The drift is toward more conservative and opportunistic tactics."

THERE you are. The socialists were the most useful allies of the bourgeois politicians and the labor fakers in killing the labor party movement. That issue is now as flat as a pancake, as the statement of the Workers Party points out. When the socialists had done the dirty work for the middle class leaders, they were cast aside like squeezed lemons. They are given the same treatment that MacDonald was given by the British capitalists after they had served their purpose.

* * *

WHETHER the fakers who control the C. P. P. A., organize a definite party or whether they continue as now playing with the democratic party and with progressive republicans, one thing is sure, and that is that they will not organize a "labor party." The only party in the United States that fights for the interests of the workers and farmers is the Workers (Communists) Party. This party is broad enough for every toiler in industry or on the farm, who wants to fight against the capitalist class and for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

SPREADING DEMOCRACY

France Brings Civilization to Algeria.

SHYLOCK LEWIS MAY TAKE HIS POUND OF FLESH

Sharpening Knife for Operation on Sam

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The fine nest of labor fakers, who split away from Gompers in his imbecile rush into the arms of LaFollette and who chose to sell out to Coolidge, are in high feather at the prospects of reward from the new Coolidge regime.

The wise guys around the capital are whispering names of those who are going to be handed a government job. Among them are some of the choicest grafters that ever obstructed a labor movement or scuttled a union.

A Hot Lot of "Labor" Men.

John L. Lewis, now president of the United Mine Workers, is promised, as reported in the DAILY WORKER some time ago, the job of secretary of labor after March 4. The queer "labor" representative who has held down that political plum is John J. Davis. Davis is a banker, and a millionaire banker at that. He lives in Andy Mellon's town, Pittsburgh.

John W. Lewis is about as interested in forwarding labor's interests as is banker Davis, and both of them are as devoted to labor as is Archduke Michael Michaleofitch of Russia. Anyhow, Andy Mellon and Frank Stearns, financial backer of Coolidge, will name the next cabinet.

There are other jobs being picked for other prize labor fakers usually supported by the liberals when the Communists have attacked them for class collaboration on the industrial field. Liberals could see nothing wrong with John L. Lewis when Communists pointed out that his industrial co-operation with the operators was treacherous class collaboration.

Now they see the political collaboration, but probably have learned nothing from Communist criticism. T. V. (Pinguy) O'Connor, already holding a job on the shipping board is in line for fatter pickings, and Bill Lee of the B. of R. T. is due to get something directly or have his lobbyist, W. N. Doak, made safe on the interstate commerce commission.

Lewis to Fight Gompers.

Lewis is expected to make things hot for Sam Gompers at the A. F. of L. convention which opens at El Paso November 19. He came out with a scrabead from his defeat in the 1921 convention and now has a fine chance to knife Sammy to the heart. Lewis backed Coolidge and Sammy backed LaFollette—all according to the "non-partisan" plan of the A. F. of L. Now John Lewis is going to rub it in. He figures that the A. F. of L. will have to be nice to him as he is going to be the next secretary of labor.

Teachers Ordered To Tell Children Red Flag Means Death

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 10—School children of Peoria will be told that the red flag means death, under arrangements made by the school authorities with the Peoria American Legion to celebrate national education week beginning Nov. 17.

On patriotism day, which under the propaganda plan of the federal education bureau comes Nov. 14, the children will be instructed by teachers, legion speakers and others that "the red flag means death, destruction, poverty, starvation, disease, anarchy and dictatorship."

On the day before, labeled constitution day, the school officials will impress on the youngsters the all-and menace of extreme pacifists, revolutionists and Communists.

And the Peoria Ministerial Association will lend a hand with special gas attack on pacifists and radicals during that week.

WAR DEPARTMENT'S AIR PILOT WILL PREACH ON PEACE TO SILENT CAL

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—President Coolidge attends the First Congregational church in the capital. The Congregationalists belong to the Federal Council of Churches, which has asked that all clergy in the affiliation of the council preach a sermon in the cause of world peace. At the president's church the pulpit will be filled on this occasion by Col. John T. Axton, chief chaplain of the army, who will talk on "A Definite Pathway To World Peace," the war department announced.

WORKERS CABLE GREETINGS TO SOVIET RUSSIA

4,000 Pledge Solidarity with Russian Workers

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 10.—The celebration in Central Opera House, of the Seventh Anniversary of the Russian Revolution held here was tremendous and inspiring.

Four thousand enthusiastic workingmen and women packed the large auditorium beyond its utmost capacity at fifty cents admission, and several hundred had to be turned away because there was no more room.

Every expression of solidarity with the workers and peasants of Russia, every advocacy of world revolution, and especially every mention of Lenin, was met with rousing cheers.

The temper of the audience is shown by the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously to be cabled to the Soviet government:

Workers Cable.

To the Workers' and Peasants' government of Soviet Russia:

Kremlin, Moscow, Russia:

We, the class conscious workers of New York, assembled under the auspices of the Workers Party of America, on the Seventh anniversary of the Russian Revolution, send our greetings to the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia, who by their great achievements have won and fortified the proletarian revolution, and we assure our Russian comrades that we stand by their side in the international struggle of the workers against capitalist imperialism and for the establishment of a world Soviet republic.

(Signed) Charles Krumbein,
District Organizer, Dist No. 2,
Workers Party of America.

The impressive success of this meeting proves that the Communist movement of New York is not afflicted with any "after election sleeping sickness." It demonstrates that the members of the Workers Party continue the campaign after election just the same as before—the permanent campaign for a Soviet America.

Financially the meeting was as great a success as from the propaganda standpoint. The share of the DAILY WORKER, which receives three-fourths of the net proceeds, already amounts to over one thousand dollars. Receipts from the tickets sold in advance by the branches will probably bring the net returns to the DAILY WORKER up to twice this amount.

Meet Only When Boss Whistles.

MANCHESTER, N. H.—Additional proof that the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co.'s company union is run by the company was given when the Workers Congress, the official name for the organization voted to hold no more regular meetings unless called by the management. No further action was taken on wages. Recently the company union voted to accept a 10 per cent cut. The wage cut is being opposed by the textile council affiliated with the United Textile Workers' Union.

WOBBLIES VOTE TO REINSTATE THE POLITICALS

Expelled for Accepting Individual Amnesty

All political prisoners who were expelled from the I. W. W. because they accepted individual amnesty, have been reinstated into the organization, providing they have not been taking part in controversies or denouncing the I. W. W., by order of the convention which held its concluding session in Emmet Memorial Hall yesterday.

A motion of the Rowan faction to hold up the expulsion of Fred Blossom, Quinlan and Lorton until put to a referendum vote was voted down by the convention.

Schwandt Voices Views

Delegate Emil Schwandt declared that those who opposed the reinstatement of those who came out on parole are trying to obtain solidarity in jail instead of in the industries.

"We fight to get the men out of jail and when we get them out we expel them," said Schwandt. He was referring to delegates Erwin, Leonard and Murray who "are opposed to anyone coming out out on parole", as Erwin, one Rowanite at the convention, put it.

Swanson and Leonard, who wanted to put the expulsion of Fred Blossom 40-a referendum, tried to create the impression that the membership is flooding the delegates with protests against Blossom's expulsion by the convention. Practically every delegate, however, denied they had received any communication from the field urging a referendum on Fred Blossom. George Speed, of the marine transport workers, said that "probably seven members met behind a water tank and passed a resolution and these delegates are now trying to say that the membership wants a referendum."

The motion for the referendum was voted down because it was felt the convention had all the evidence which has not been placed in the hands of the membership.

The 16th general convention of the I. W. W. was appealed to by Ed Hayes, a member of the Metal Mine Workers 210 who had been expelled at the instance, so it is alleged, of questionable elements suspected of connection with the Burns detectives uncovered last year.

After a long hearing the convention sustained Hayes and ordered his reinstatement.

Interim Officers Appointed.

The convention ordered that the G. O. C. of each industrial union should furnish members of a temporary general executive board until others are elected. In the case of 120 and 310, the convention appointed delegates Leonard and Broman to take office in the place of the Rowanites who, at the head of these unions, are still fighting the convention and attempting to split the I. W. W.

Welinder Appointed Gen. Secy-Treas

C. J. Welinder is appointed to fill the office of general secretary treasurer until a new official is elected by referendum. As he came to the convention from the lumber workers, whose industrial union officials are the injunctionites who have attacked the convention as being "controlled by politicians," there is a possibility that Welinder may be expelled by the lumber workers' union for being led around by the Communists.

Forest Fires in Indiana.

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 10.—Precautionary measures to prevent a disastrous blaze were being taken here today following the breaking out of six field and forest fires in the Parches woodlands in this neighborhood within the last few days. Lack of rain has increased the forst fire menace until it is possible a vigilantes committee may be organized.

REBELS DIE UNDER GUNS OF THE FASCISTI DICTATORSHIP IN SPAIN

(Special to the Daily Worker)

London, Nov. 10.—Joseph Llacer and Jean Montejo, rebels against the military dictatorship of Spain, met their death at the hands of a Spanish firing squad at daybreak this morning.

The two men were among the hundreds arrested yesterday for carying with them literature advocating armed uprisings against the government. No pretense was made of giving them even the semblance of a trial. The Spanish military authorities have indicated that the rest of the prisoners will be executed wthin a day or two.

BORAH TO PUSH FOR RUSSIAN RECOGNITION

White Baptist Slated for Trimming

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Recognition of Russia, direct and unqualified, is to be an issue henceforth in every debate within the Coolidge political ring.

And upon recognition will depend the further longevity of "red plot" scares and terrorization campaigns against radicals in the rank and file of labor unions.

Borah to Lead Foreign Relations

Senator Borah, who becomes chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, after Lodge having died, has stood thruout the recent campaign for this direct recognition. He told the voters of Idaho in every speech he made that there could be no real disarmament, no real peace, no economic safety in the world, until the United States had established normal relations with the Soviet Republic. His vote was 90,000 as compared with 60,000 for Coolidge in Idaho.

Hughes and Hysteria

Hughes alone has stood between the administration and a less hysterical stand on the recognition issue. Hoover was apparently willing to change ground, but Hughes prevented him from speaking. Col. Harvey, before he became editor of the newspaper owned by Ned McLean, nephew of the late imperial Russian ambassador, indicated to senators who had toured Russia, that he favored outright recognition. If he becomes secretary of state next March, he will be free to follow his own judgment in giving such advice to Coolidge.

Investigate Goose Island Tracks in Probe of Death Crash

Hearing on the trolley-train wreck in which ten people were murdered by the greed of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad company was to come up yesterday in Judge Harry Olson's court in city hall but was postponed until this morning to give the city engineer an opportunity to investigate the tracks at Goose Island. The city offers to inform the jury what chances there are of elevating the tracks.

Albert Becomes Silent.

The DAILY WORKER reporter asked Alderman Arthur Albert who represents the public at the sessions and who was very aggressive in the beginning of the hearing, why he has presumably given up the fight. Alderman Albert has been sitting thru the sessions the last few days without uttering a word.

"I am disgusted with the personnel of the jury. They are a wishy washy bunch who keep vascillating. They don't come to any decision."

The reporter then asked him what he thinks he as a representative of the public can do to force the railroad officials to elevate the tracks. He replied that it is a "matter for the city council to take up" and that he will see to it that they do take it up. He failed to say, however, why the city council has done nothing heretofore

Gompers Passes Thru Chicago.

Samuel Gompers denied himself to interviewers most of yesterday afternoon at the Morrison Hotel. Gompers passed thru town on his way to the American Federation of Labor convention in El Paso, Texas. Gompers, together with members of the international unions, left last night for El Paso.

Mail Robbery Trial Postponed.

Trial of the $3,000,000 Rondout mail robbery case was postponed until tomorrow here today on request of the prosecution. The illness of Assistant U. S. District Attorney Edwin F. Weisl, who has been appointed a special assistant attorney general to prosecute the nine defendants, was given as the reason for the delay.

Armistice Day is Call to Workers Everywhere To End Capitalist Rule

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the capitalist world is trying to celebrate Armistice Day, the Sixth Anniversary of the ending of the World Imperialist War. But instead of a time for enjoying peace after "the war to end all wars," we find the earth shaking with new upheavals; everywhere threats of new wars; preparations for renewed slaughter.

• • • •

Labor thruout Western Europe is rattling its chains more vigorously than ever. It is protesting against its meager allotment of bread. It is hungry under the decisions of the Versailles Peace and the best nostrums of the Black Capitalist International, the League of Nations.

• • • •

On this November 11th it is railroad labor in Austria that raises its mailed fist to the international bandits. Austria was to rise out of its ashes, under the tutelage of the League of Nations. Loans were forthcoming, wages were slashed, workers were discharged to cut down expenses, especially on the railroads, capitalism was to be rehabilitated. All the world was made to ring with the great cure that had been effected in Austria under "The League."

But six years after the war it is suddenly discovered that "the cure" doesn't work. Jobs were not found for the discharged workers. Meager wages did not meet the high cost of living. So the Austrian workers are forced to strike.

• • • •

But Europe is an economic entity. The railroads that cross Austria are needed by the other countries making up the patchwork of nations mapped by the Paris peacemakers. Czecho-Slovakia must have its outlet to the sea. Italy must get the products she needs from the interior. So they both threaten intervention in Austria against the striking Austrian railroad workers, in the fight for their own existence.

• • • •

Then there is Germany, under the Morgan-Dawes plan, a replica of the League of Nations dope peddled to Austria. The German workers are hungry and out of jobs. They are very sympathetic to Austrian labor, with the result that the railroad strike may extend over both countries. Not the best situation for the inauguration of Morgan's scheme to subject German labor to his rule.

The fate of the League's plans in Austria indicates what will happen to the Morgan-Dawes plan in Germany. Resistance of the Austrian workers to the plans of the League will be duplicated by the even more stubborn opposition of the German workers to the best laid schemes of Wall Street's greatest financiers.

• • • •

The capitalist world also prophesied as much for Mussolini rule in Italy, as it did for League rule in Austria, and Morgan rule in Germany. The Fascist dictatorship was to show the world how efficiently a nation could be conducted; especially when public utilities, like the railroads, were returned to private ownership.

But developments have been going from bad to worse in Italy. Labor is more discontented than ever. In spite of the bloody tyranny of Mussolini, the workers march under the Red Flag of the social revolution singing "The Internationale"; heralding new struggles against the capitalist oppression labelled Fascism.

Armistice Day, 1924, finds Mussolini trying to wipe out the last vestiges of parliamentary government, thru the dissolution of parliament, in which his majority, secured thru the manipulation of the election laws, is now threatened.

• • • •

Another Fascisti dictatorship totters in Spain. Resistance is raised on every hand against the government of Dictator de Rivera, seeking to bulwark the tumbling throne of the dissolute King Alfonso, symbol of capitalist misrule. Disaster in the war against the Moors in Africa has helped bring on the military dictatorship at home, which uses its greatest energies in an effort to crush the organized workers, the white terror claiming many Communists as its victims.

• • • •

But Armistice Day, 1924, finds the clouds blackest in "the peaceful sea," the Pacific Ocean. Here it is that the American warmakers are most active.

The American jingo press hails with great joy the plans of the British, under the imperialist Baldwin government, to fortify Singapore, strategic naval port in the Orient. The Chicago Tribune is most brazen in its statement of the imperialist intentions of the American capitalists in the Far East. It declares:

"Britain, said Sir Percy Scott just before his death, cannot take a fleet to the Orient adequate to defeat Japan. The same might be said with less certainty but with much truth in regard to the United States. The inevitable inference follows that Britain and the United States must co-operate in the western Pacific. The white powers in the Pacific must stand together. The key to the situation at this time is Singapore."

• • • •

The Chicago Tribune utters no hypocritical pretensions to peace under capitalism. It is openly for an alliance with Great Britain, in the Pacific, to crush the competition of Japanese imperialism, and to completely subjugate the markets of China and other oriental countries.

That means war. Another world war. Not because some peoples are white, others brown, and still others yellow. In the last world war the British fought the Germans, both of the same race, both of the same blood. The British slaughtered Germans and vice versa in the struggle to win advantages for competing capitalist groups.

The same will be true of the U. S.-British war on Japan and its allies, no matter whom the latter may turn out to be.

It will not be because Americans are white and Japs brown that the war will be fought. It will be because America's Wall Street has united with Great Britain's Lombard Street for the domination of the Orient. And if the workers of all the countries engaged refuse to fight each other, and turn against capitalism at home, as the Russian workers and peasants did in 1917, then the capitalists of the United States and Great Britain will be the first to unite with the Japanese capitalists to crush the workers' revolution.

• • • •

The goal toward which all labor, in all countries, on this Armistice Day, 1924, should struggle, remembering the World War of 1914-18, is the abolition of capitalist imperialism in all countries.

Only the world-wide rule of the workers can prevent the new wars now threatening.

Only the victory of the Workers' Soviet Rule can change the armed truce of the capitalist nations today into the real and lasting peace of tomorrow.

SOCIALISTS IN ITALY GO OVER TO MUSSOLINI

March Side by Side with Blackshirts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CASTELNUOVA, Italy, Nov. 10.—Blackshirts and "socialists" joined hands here on Sunday in a joint ceremony in memory of the socialist deputy Matteotti and the fascist deputy Casalina.

That the blackshirts and the socialists marched side by side surprised no one who has watched the counter-revolutionary tactics of the socialist party—and other parties of the legal opposition—within the past months.

Go Against Rebel Workers.

The socialist party has again and again refused the offers of the Communist Party to form a united front against the Mussolini regime, and has expressed its desire to remain within the ranks of the legal opposition, of which the democratic party is a member. Only a few days ago Mussolini himself characterized the socialists as harmless parliamentarians from whom the fascist dictatorship has nothing to fear.

The joint ceremonies in Castelnuova are taken as a sign that neither the socialists nor the fascisti bear each other any ill will because of the killing of one of their members. That the circumstances surrounding the two deaths make the cases absolutely incomparable to each other seems to have made no difference to the socialist or the fascist leaders.

Shed Every Semblance of Decency.

They have forgotten—or else they ignore—the fact that while Giacomo Matteotti was brutally murdered by a gang of gunmen for his attempts to expose the graft operations of the Mussolini cabinet, Casalina met his death at the hands of a worker who had seen his friends shot down, their homes burned and their unions broken up by orders of the fascist organization of which Casalina was the head.

Mass Meeting in San Francisco.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov.—10—A huge mass meeting, arranged by the newly-organized Jewish branch of the Workers Party here, will be held at Robinson's Hall, 1175 Turk street, Sunday night, Nov. 16. The purpose of the meeting is to unify Jewish workers in the Communist movement.

Sam Globerman, who has been very active in the Communist movement in Los Angeles, will speak in Jewish, and James H. Dolsen, district organizer, of the party, will address the meeting on the need of a strong organization.

The Pace of the Spenders.

David Gage Joyce, millionaire lumberman and former brother-in-law of the famous Peggy Joyce, was made defendant today in a suit for $24,289 which L. Linden Co., Chicago interior decorators claim is due them for decorating and furnishing Joyce's town and Florida homes "in the most extravagant fashion possible."

O'BANNION, CITIZEN OF LIVELY HABITS, RETIRED FROM BUSINESS

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—"Dean" O'Bannion, one of Chicago's most colorful police characters whom prohibition and its attendant beer running, and hi-jacking is said to have first millions, was shot and killed in his floral store here today.

It was to this store that O'Bannion, gang leader and gang fighter, pistol wielder and veteran of several shootings, had retired to end quietly a life replete with excitement and danger.

"BUILD THE DAILY WORKER!" Yes, and we cannot build it too fast. It is our strongest weapon at this stage of the game.

Like the famous long-range gun of the Germans, it is a continual menace to the security of the enemy.

We must keep it loaded to the muzzle. Its ammunition is the subscriptions we send in.

Where the DAILY WORKER goes, there comes understanding of the tactics which will win the power for the workingclass. There comes the patience and courage which will make the workers masters of the world. There comes the realization of strength and the steadfast determination to succeed which is building up the Communist parties everywhere.

Let us be daily workers for the DAILY WORKER every day.

FASCISTI PLAN MARCH IN LONDON

Austrian Rail Strike May Spread to Germany

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

ACCORDING to elements, that have again blocked the Mephistophelian designs of the Soviet government, the latest outrage committed against decency by the Bolshevik authorities is to organize semi-nude societies, in order to overcome the shortage of clothing. Our information comes by way of Teheran, Persia, and was published in the Chicago Tribune. This means that it is as true as the autobiography of Baron Munchausen or the diary of William J. Burns.

BUT what is funny is good whether it is true or not. The workers have brains, and using them is good mental exercise. There is no better for of mental gymnastics than looking for a particle of truth in the columns of the capitalist press in general and in the Chicago Tribune in particular. The Teheran correspondent, tells us that the Russians are wearing skins to save the clothing bill. He did not say whether the new wearing apparel was made out of the hide of the mensheviki or the Georgian "patriots" who were recently slaughtered in big heaps by the ch-o-o-l Cheka. But we venture to say, if the skins originally adorned other and more respectable animals, that the new style will not prove any more economical than the old. Unfortunately tigers and hyenas are not as plentiful as mensheviks.

THIS beastly trick of the Bolsheviks was nipped in the bud, literally. The cold weather came along and the modern cave men and cave women had to run around the block to keep from freezing. But as fast as they ran, the cold was still faster, with the result that they now find themselves all dressed up and no place to go, except near the furnace. But a picture of a Red Army regiment in the capitalist press a few days ago, showed a set of fellows neither shirtless not coatless, and evidently anxious to skin the capitalist class on general principle. It's not a bad story at that.

GENERAL Ludendorff, has a scrap with Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria. The former wants the Kaiser restored to the Hohenzollern throne. The latter does not, desiring the seat himself. Unless William the Last sits on it, Ludendorff intends that it shall be covered with tacks. Prince Rupprecht insists that he will plant his posterior on it, even if he had to decorate that part of his anatomy with a cast iron basin. So the battle rages.

RUPPRECHT suggests that Ludendorf has a brain which competes in clarity with a kettle of mush. The general reports that the prince's word of honor would turn a grave robber green with envy. Even kings can be abusive. "My word is as good as a king's," declares Ludendorff. Rupprecht smiled. Perhaps he thot the word of honor of a king is as worthless as that of the man who promised to produce some steam heat in the editorial office of the DAILY WORKER. The radiator is there alright but it is too independent. Its like a Communist who does not belong to the Workers Party. It is connected with nothing. If it stays in the same condition much longer, it is liable to freeze to death, but not before the editors turn into icebergs. Keeping kool with Koolidge seems to have been taken seriously.

DIPLOMATS OF LEAGUE FEARFUL OF BIG WALKOUT

Seipel Asks Dictatorship to Crush Labor

(Special to the Daily Worker)

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 10.—The Austrian railroad strike, threatening to spread any hour to all of Germany besides, has the frock-coated diplomats of the league of nations worried.

Tied Up Tightly.

Airplanes and motor trucks are being pressed into service to move food and mails, but can only make a scratch.

Country districts naturally suffer least, having food supplies. But in the cities the situation is becoming critical.

Capitalists are afraid that the necessary sequence of a general strike—uprisings of hungry masses—will give the workers the idea of revolutionary struggle for power.

League in a Fix.

The league of nations is an embarrassing and unpleasant situation. Its nice plans for capitalist "reconstruction" are upset by a lot of workingmen. If they give in to the strikers and make some decent concessions on wages, the diplomats are afraid it will encourage the workers to more strikes. But if they don't do this, Italy and Czecho-Slovakia—both members of the league—threaten to violate its discipline and treaty agreements by invading Austria to keep a route open for their necessary commerce. It must be understood that the Austrian strike ties up these other two nations as well.

The catholic chancellor, Seipel, who resigned, asserts that if he is given authority by parliament—which meets today—to crush the strikers with troops and white guard terror, he will take back the job of running Austria for the league of nations.

GOMPERS' N. Y. MACHINE O. K'S AID TO DAVIS

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 10.—At the first after-the-election meeting of the New York Central Trades and Labor Council, the action of the executive officers in indorsing Davis, Morgan's lawyer, in spite of the body's previous indorsement of LaFollette, was approved.

This utter disregard of the wishes of the body was heartily indorsed by an uncommonly fine collection of gangsters and thugs, who had been procured for the occasion.

No Socialist Protest.

A notable feature of the meeting was the complete failure of the socialist delegates to make any defense of their standard bearers, LaFollette and Thomas. Among those absent were Feinstone, known socialist supporter of LaFollette and delegate from the United Hebrew Trades.

Criticism of the action of the officers was led mainly by Delegate Lefkowitz, of the Teachers' Union, who, as usual, was doing the dirty work that the socialist party did not have the courage enough to do itself. The chief pastime of the meeting seemed to be whacking the remains of the socialist party.

Calls Socialist Party Dead.

In refuting the charge that he was a political office holder in the pay of Tammany Hall, Sullivan claimed that he had only accepted his present lucrative position with the city administration after many months of pleading on the part of city officials.

He defended his indorsement of Davis, mainly on the basis of its neces-

EXCLUSIVE RICH JUST CAN'T BE BOTHERED BY VULGAR SURROUNDINGS

NEW YORK—Legal representatives of the Rockefellers, of J. Pierpont Morgan, and of other wealthy New York residents argued in public hearing, at the city hall before borough president Julius Miller, against the extension of manufacturing districts in the exclusive Park regions. The multi-millionaire absentee residents of the red and gray stone palaces of Fifth and Park avenues do not want garment and fur manufacturers to bring their shops and workers into the hitherto exclusive residence and retail section of Manhattan. Private detectives and guards now employed by these wealthy residents would not be able to handle the increased crowds on the sidewalks, it is unofficially announced, and increased trucking in the neighborhood would certainly be annoying wherever the rich families were staying at these particular homes.

YOUNG WORKERS IN DRIVE ON MAIL ORDER HOUSES

Distribute Leaflets at Two Big Plants

The drive on the mail order houses conducted by the Young Workers League of Chicago has met with initial success on the very first day.

More than thirty members of the Y. W. L., with the aid of several members of the Junior Section, were at the gates of the giant plant of Sears, Roebuck & Co. and at Phillipsborn, yesterday morning and afternoon distributing 10,000 leaflets announcing the campaign and the expose of the dreadful conditions of the mail order houses which will be featured in the special mail order house edition of the "Young Worker."

Young Workers Show Interest.

Many of the young workers greeted this campaign as a signal for a fight against the bosses and showed a will to help in this fight which has been initiated by the Young Workers League of Chicago. An encouraging sign in the campaign was the fact that most of the young workers kept the leaflet which was given to them.

For this campaign 15,000 copies of the Special Mail Order House edition of the Young Worker have been printed. Compared with the number of young workers in the mail order industry in Chicago the sales of this edition are expected to be far below the demand.

Starting with Big Push.

Every effort of the city organization of the Young Workers League will be made to get definite results out of this campaign. With the vim and vigor with which the membership of the league has responded there is no question but that the Young Workers League will be known to every young worker in the mail order industry in Chicago. It is expected that this campaign will mean the organization of shop nuclei in every house of the industry in Chicago.

The following is the program for tonight and tomorrow:

Sears, Roebuck & Co.

Tuesday at 4:40 p. m. Wednesday at 7:30 a. m. and Wednesday at 4:30 p. m. Volunteers to report at Arthington (999 S.) and Kedzie (3200 W.) The Young Worker will be sold and names and addresses of interested young workers collected.

Phillipsborn's.

Tuesday and Wednesday at 4:30 p. m. Volunteers report at Harrison (600 S.) and Paulina (1700 W.) to sell Young Workers and collect names and addresses of interested young workers.

In connection with the above schedule members of the Working Area Branch No. 2 and No. 3 are to report at Phillipsborn's and members of Branches No. 4, No. 5 and No. 6 at Sears, Roebuck & Company.

MILITANT STEEL WORKERS WIN UNION ELECTION

Progressives Make Big Showing in Referendum

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WARREN, O., Nov. 10.—Returns from the election now going on in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers indicate that for the first time in many years the reactionary leaders up for reelection are finding stiff opposition in the shape of a well organized progressive organization.

For many years the fate of the Amalgamated Association has been in the hands of such reactionary labor fakers as Mike Tighe and Walter Larkin.

Leaders Betray Membership.

Lodges have deserted the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. because these reactionary labor fakers have signed scales fastening upon the membership obligations they could not and would not fulfill.

From a one-time mighty labor organization capable of carrying into action the wishes of thousands of steel, tin and iron workers, the present A. A. has shrunk to a mere shadow of its former great self and as a consequence it has to exist upon the crumbs the masters flung its way.

During the past few years thousands of its members have stood upon the firing line demanding their rights as workers only to find that M. F. Tighe & Co. viewed the conflict form afar venturing into the battle zone only longe enuf to inform the strikers to return to work.

The campaign of M. F. Tighe & Co. to return themselves back to office has been carried on with all the fervor and despair of labor fakers intent upon fastening upon the backs of the workers their pet notions of handshaking with the steel barons.

The progressive landslide indicates that a new dawn is breaking for the steel workers and from the rank and file new voices and stronger hands backed with a sincere desire to serve the down-trodden steel workers is rising up and paving the way for a mighty organization of steel, tin and iron workers.

The present struggle in the A. A. conclusively proves that the correct place for the Communists is in the union of their trade. Steel and iron workers, and all others who have been holding back from joining the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. should at once join hands with the progressives, by remaining outside they are aiding M. F. Tighe & Co. to continue in the saddle.

REFUSE ADMISSION TO DAILY WORKER TO FETE TO AVIATORS

A fat army major blocked the door of the Auditorium Theatre, where two around-the-world aviators were being feted, Sunday night and refused admission to the DAILY WORKER reporter. "There aren't any speeches and the press has been taken care of anyway," the major told the DAILY WORKER reporter, after shying at the word "worker." The major meant the capitalist press, which is giving columns of space to the Army and Navy Club and to the militarist propaganda now being centered around the aviators.

The DAILY WORKER reporter persisted, but was denied admission on the ground that "this is just a society event under the auspices of the Army and Navy Club to welcome Lowell Smith and Leslie Arnold, a couple of good fellows." All the capitalist newspapers in the city were allowed to view the military demonstration.

They Died for Labor

By HARRISON GEORGE.

ALL men must die. It is not strange to human experience that some men are killed by other men. This is not strange or fearful to Communist workers. But today Communists as well as all workers commemorate the death of four men who died for labor.

A building of gray stone on North Dearborn street, Chicago, is passed daily by thousands who do not know the terror behind its walls. It is the Cook County jail. To those who know, the very sight of the building makes one shudder, then flush with deep anger and hatred of the class which thirty-five years ago murdered by legal form Albert R. Parsons, August Spies, George Engel—and which was cheated by the self murder of Louis Lingg before they could force him into the noose with which they hanged his three comrades.

Force and terror are the foundations of capitalism. To those who have been in the Cook County jail when men are hanged; to those who have been locked in the same cells and shuffled endlessly around the same dingy bull-pen hung with the dirt and cobwebs of decades, where Parsons, Spies and Engels were first caged and then hung in 1887, it does not seem so long distant. The terror exercised by the dictatorship of the capitalist class seems a more living, threatening thing. It fills one with rage and impatience that men and women of the workers bear with this monster, this capitalist terror —especially as they need not bear it.

WHAT is the story of those who were hung on November 11, 1887? First, they were leaders of the workers. Parsons was long the head of the first central labor body in Chicago. They were all union men and believed in a system of society which they called "anarchy" but which we know as the goal of the Communist movement, and call Communism.

In what situation did they come to think these thoughts? The civil war had left the manufacturers of the north the victors alike over the southern slaveholders and the wage slaves of the North who had borne arms against them. Ascending capitalism knew no bounds to its greed and ruthlessness. Unions were crushed into secrecy. Factories claimed the last ounce of human energy from the workers. Ten hours, twelve hours, fourteen hours were demanded from men who had sprung to arms to "free the slaves!"

The men, the women and the children of labor were utterly at the mercy of an unchecked, swaggering capitalism. The long hours of those who worked for little pay was naturally complemented by the hundreds of thousands of unemployed who tramped the streets, begging and in rags. In the working class districts of Chicago one had to pick one's steps along the sidewalks where slept thousands of homeless, hungry men.

UNDER such conditions a convention of unions was held in 1885 and a decision adopted that the long hours of labor must be shortened and a call sent forth to the effect that on May 1, 1886, the workers should begin to enforce the eight-hour day and strike in case it was refused or they were penalized.

Parson, Spies and the rest of the revolutionary workers of Chicago took the lead. The Central Labor Council of Chicago, which would look with loathing upon the leadership of Chicago labor today, heartily supported these men in their militant agitation for the eight-hour day on May 1, 1886. The whole nation of labor rallied to the call, and the workers poured into the unions.

On May 1, 1886, thousands upon thousands of workers were granted the eight-hour day. Other and larger capitalist bosses chose to fight. Strikes broke out everywhere at once. The McCormick Reaper company employes, on strike, held a meeting. Police attacked it without warning and fired into the crowd, killing many workers. August Spies was the speaker. A great protest meeting was called for the next day at the Haymarket.

THOUSANDS gathered to hear the revolutionary leaders of Chicago's militant labor movement speak. Again the police appeared with drawn clubs and guns. They were beginning to beat and shoot again, when someone—never discovered—threw a bomb into their midst, killing several. That was the excuse for breaking the strikes for the eight-hour day.

The capitalist dictatorship began a period of open white terror. "To the scaffold" was the cry from every bourgeois throat. What mattered it that no one knew who had thrown the bomb? What matter that everyone knew that the police had shot and beaten workers without mercy before the question of this resistance? What matter that it was clear that Parson, Spies, Engel and Lingg were elsewhere or engaged in their regular affairs? Capitalism called for blood.

Parsons, feeling innocent, ever surrendered. A farcial trial was held. The "fair and impartial" judicial farce gone solemnly thru as tho it made any difference as to evidence. Albert R. Parsons, August Spies, George Engel and Louis Lingg were sentenced to be hung on November 11, 1887. The white terror of the capitalist dictatorship carried out its murderous will.

THESE men died for labor. Let us, then, remember them. But not only remember, but avow ourselves to carry on the struggle until the capitalist dictatorship is ended. Let us vow to carry forward the cause for which they died! Let us go onward with the Communist International!

SEIZE LAND OF PRESIDENT-ELECT CALLES IN MEXICO AND TURN IT OVER TO PEONS UNDER LAND LAW

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 10.—President-elect Calles returned to the capital from his European visit today to learn that the agrarian commission had seized a large part of his ranch to be turned over to peons.

While expropriating part of the landed property of the president-elect, the commission took a large slice of the ranch owned by Foreign Minister Saenz, who objected to the seizure.

This is the first application of its drastic constitutional amendment to the holding of high government officials.

All available federal troops have been sent into southern Vera Cruz to stamp out the last vestiges of rebellion before Calles is inaugurated on the first of December. With the exception of a small area in southern Vera Cruz, where lawless bands are active, the whole republic is under control of the federal government.

CHURCHILL IS MUSSOLINI OF GREAT BRITAIN

At Least He Is Ready for Benito's Mantle

(Special to the Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The British Fascisti to the number of several thousand marched from the provinces into London yesterday and held a monster mass meeting in Trafalgar Square.

The illusion that Fascism would not find a fertile soil in "law-abiding" England, was shattered as General R. B. D. Blakeney, active head of the British Fascisti, addressed the mob of blackshirts, using the same kind of language that Mussolini used in Italy before his march on Rome.

The defeat of the MacDonald government and the lackadaisacal policy of the official trade union movement, has given the fascisti leaders the encouragement they were looking for, backed by the Morning Post and Chancellor of the Exchequer Winston Churchill who is quite willing to become the Mussolini of England, the fascisti are now expected to make great headway in the near future.

Following Musso's Example.

They are following closely the policy originally advanced by the Italian dictator regarding socialism, coupled with the anti-foreignism of the Ku Klux Klan of America. Tomorrow the fascisti plan to gather in London during the armistice ceremonies, in which the king will participate. The blackshirts intend to prevent any labor or radical demonstrations. They put loyalty to the king as one of the foremost planks in their platform.

Given Free Reign.

While the fascisti are armed, officered, equipped with motor lorries, chemical sections, and are ready for active service, the government gives them complete freedom of action. Even under the MacDonald regime, while Communists were jailed for making speeches against capitalism, their homes raided and headquarters entered illegally by Scotland Yard detectives, the contrived illegal acts of the fascisti were ignored.

Those who fondly imagined that the social revolution would come in England thru a majority in the house of commons are getting disillusioned.

Lenin--The Great Strategist of the Class War!

THE above is the name of a series of impressions of Nikolai Lenin, leader of the first successful proletarian revolution, written by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. These impressions, translated by Alexander Bittelman and published in pamphlet form by the Trade Union Educational League, will appear in the DAILY WORKER, starting in Wednesday's issue. Not only Communists, but all workers should take advantage of this opportunity to become more intimate with the life of Lenin, the founder and recognized leader of the Communist International, as well as the founder of the Russian Communist Party. The publication of this series of impressions of Lenin, by Losovsky starts on Wednesday. Don't miss them!

GOMPERS MOBILIZES TO AID OPEN SHOP WAR ON LABOR DURING "ANTI-RED WEEK"

By KARL REEVE.
(First Article.)

Doddering old Samuel Gompers, superannuated president of the American Federation of Labor, has again lined up with the foes of labor by allowing his machine, headed by "clown prince" Matthew Woll, to endorse and give nation-wide advertisement to "Education Week" in the public schools, aimed at the Communists and all militant labor.

This is not the first time that Gompers has lined up with the American Legion, which is promoting "education week." In October, 1923, just after Gompers' followers had expelled William Dunne from the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. for being a champion of the working class, Gompers rushed down to San Francisco, where he was the guest of the American Legion convention.

This was the same convention which had invited Mussolini to attend as the Legion's expense, to tell how he kept the capitalists in control of Italy by murdering workers. Gompers was disappointed, however, as his colleague did not accept the invitation. But Gompers had good company at the American Legion convention.

General Joseph Haller, the Polish autocrat, was also a guest of the Legion at the San Francisco convention. Haller, fresh from his bloody work in Poland on behalf of the French bankers, made practically the same remarks in speaking to the "legionnaires" as were made by Gompers. Haller strongly urged "100 per cent Americanism, even of the foreign born."

First Aid to Legion.

Gompers told the convention of the American Legion, "The American Federation of Labor stands side by side with the American Legion in everything," and then boasted of his help in the world war "to make millions of dollars safe for American plutocracy." Gompers is now making good his pledge by releasing the machinery he controls, to boost "education" week in co-operation with the National Security League, the National Education Association, the American Legion and the bureau of education of the U. S. department of interior.

A resolution condemning the Ku Klux Klan by name was defeated by a vote of seven to one in this same convention, which Gompers promise the undivided support of organized labor to the legion. Gompers' support of the American Legion antedated the San Francisco convention by two years, for Gompers formed an open alliance with the legion at the 1921 convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The American Legion is promoting education week at the request of the employers in order to teach anti-unionism to the school children, and to inculcate into their immature minds that all workers must be docile slaves who never rebel against capitalistic oppression. Ever since its formation the American Legion has broken up peaceful meetings of workers, opposed strike movements, displayed on all occasions hostility to the aims of trade unionism and loyalty to the employing class.

Gompers Goes the Limit.

Gompers, in the Cincinnati convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in 1921, invited the commander of the American Legion to address the convention.

Gompers went further than that, and invited this labor hating organization to set up trade union branches of the American Legion, thus opening the way for the fostering of the entire organized labor movement with anti-working class, capitalist propaganda.

And now Gompers is allowing his lieutenant, Mathew Woll, to send letters to every affiliated central body throout the country, urging trade unionists to co-operate with the legion in disseminating anti-labor propaganda to the school children of the country during "education week."

sia. Occupying such a strategic position, he would be able to advance the cause considerably. Russia has plenty of enemies in Washington. There are many czarist aristocrats now washing dishes. EASTERN democrats are charging McAdoo with knifing Davis. The DAILY WORKER pointed out that at the very time McAdoo was supposed to be getting knifed in the John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, he was actually running around the old haunts in Washington, which were frequented by himself and his adventurous father-in-law, the late Woodrow Wilson, during the early part of the latter's administration. William Jennings Bryan suggests an alliance between the Democrats and the progressives. Norman Thomas, the socialist candidate for governor of New York, calls on Tammany Hall, to prepare for the S. P. election, by first cleaning itself of its Southern affiliations, while Gompers to tell the American Federation of Labor convention at El Paso, that his non-partisan policy won a glorious victory to punishing the democratic party for treating him with contempt.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST congratulates Calvin Coolidge and Al Smith over their victories. Hearst likes Al Smith about as well as Smith likes Volstead. But Hearst changes his policy frequently even if he does not change his mind. During the 1920 gubernatorial elections in New York he boosted Dudley Field Malone, the farmer-labor party candidate for governor until a few days before the election. His cartoonist caricatured Al as the bosom friend of bootleggers, thieves, and all-round criminals. But he suddenly dropped Dudley and found that Al was the personification of civic virtues.

THE question "what is the socialist party going to do next?" is frequently asked nowadays. The correct answer is liable to be just "nothing!" Berger is kicking because the socialists in Wisconsin voted for governor Blaine who was endorsed by LaFollette, and forgot all about their own candidate, William Quick. Berger is now learning that his united front policy with LaFollette was the story of the lion and the lamb. The LaFollette lion is now picking his teeth with the S. P. lamb's tail. Berger said, LaFollette was a socialist, therefore it was only natural that the members of his party should look on the LaFollette movement as a synonym for the socialist party.

STEEL WORKERS WIN ELECTION

candidate, Brother Weddell received 1456. A. M. Jennings of Granite City, the progressive candidate for secretary-treasurer received 1621 votes against 561 for D. J. Davis.

Jim Strong, of Canonsburgh, Pa., received 1522 votes against 612 cast for Leonard.

The progressive vote in the 14 lodges shows that they were defeating the Mc. P. Tighe & Co. slate by a vote of two to one and in some cases three to one.

Ben I. Davis, the reactionary editor of the A. A. Journal, received 612 votes in these 14 lodges while P. J. Morgan the progressive candidate received 1491 votes. Ben I. Davis is brushing up on his preacher's racket expecting an early return to the soul-saving profession.

Confident of Victory.

The progreseives are confident that the present elections in the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. will oust from office some of the labor fakers now gracing important positions in the A. A. and bring into office workers who have a sincere desire to make the A. A. respected and feared by the steel barons, and not as it is at present simply tolerated because a few old fogey labor fakers hear the steel barons first and the steel workers last.

A new dawn is breaking for the steel and iron workers and it is the duty of every Communist to join hands with the progressives in this organization of steel, tin and iron workers, and together with them march on to the organization of the steel slaves—the last great bulwark of the steel barons.

Such fighters as Jack McKeown, Jim Ward, Bill Clark of Warren, O., King of Pittsburgh, Bill Gray of Pittsburgh, G. A. Wilbur of McKees Rocks, Sam T. Baker, John Stose, Wagner, Jim Strong of Canonsburgh, along with A. M. Jennings and Weddell of Granite City and Bill White of Girard, O., are in this fight for a bigger and progressive A. A. of I. S. & T. W.

Well may Mike Tighe & Co. tremble in their boots.

COUNTESS PASSES ACID TEST OF LOYALTY TO THE CAPITALIST CLASS

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Catherine Countess Karolyi of Hungary told an audience here that she is a very misunderstood woman. She stood up for the reign of white terror in Hungary, and declared she was not even pink, let alone red. Coutess Karolyi was a little "in bad" when she landed because the National Security League charged her with being red. But the countess explained that she had only advocated that the dirty linen used on the bandages of wounded Hungarian soldiers should be washed.

The countess, however, was not appreciated in Hungary. She heard of the gold that poured into the purses of nobility who had been kicked out of foreign countries. The countess felt she would be appreciated if she came to this country and told the capitalists here how proud she was of the bloodthirsty capitalist regimes of Europe.

Countess Karolyi was perfectly willing to advocate in this country the perpetuation of the rule of the employing class which has reduced the workers of Hungary to such miserable destitution.

But R. Stanwood Menken, superintendent of the National Security League, heard about the dirty linen episode and had the countess investigated at Ellis Island. The countess' speeches since landing have been vicious enough against the working class, however, and the danger of deportation has been removed. Menken will allow Countess Karolyi to replenish her purse by continuing to denounce the workers.

CO-OPERATIVE CONGRESS HEARS SOVIET DELEGATE

Says Big Opportunities Exist in States

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, November 10.—The co-operative movement is "the handwriting on the wall for international capitalism" according to George F. Keen, fraternal delegate to the Fourth Co-operative Congress from the Co-operative Union of Canada. The congress is in session in Greenwich House, New York City, and Keen brought the greetings of the Canadian Union at the opening session. "The British labor government was one of co-operators," he claimed, "and came out stronger in the election in spite of defeat. The time is coming, and I believe within the next ten to fifteen years," he declared, "when Britain will be a great co-operative commonwealth."

Soviet Delegate Speaks.

Jan E. Jansen, delegate to the congress from the All-Russian Central Union of Consumers' Co-operatives (Centrosyus), brought the greetings of the Russian co-operators to the first session. He mentioned the 25 years' growth of his organization and said that the Russians saw in the United States the opportunity for the co-operative movement to develop on an equally large scale as the Russian.

Dr. J. P. Warbasse, president of the Co-operative League, welcomed the delegates and Mrs. Warbasse, who with him just has returned from a tour of Europe studying co-operatives, read greetings from foreign societies which had been invited to send fraternal delegates. Letters from all over the United States then reported upon the progress of their own co-operative enterprises. One of the most interesting reports was that of Frederick Fouron of the Franklin Co-operative Creamery in Minneapolis, Minnesota, which has become the biggest milk concern in the city. K. E. Grondel told of the growth of the United Co-operative Societies of Pittsburgh, Pa., which do a month ly business of $25,000. Leo Lelievre, representing the Soo Co-operative Mercantile Association of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, told of the $50,000 monthly business of their seven stores. Other delegates had reports of varying success.

The Co-operative Educational Institute of Brownsville, New York, one of the places visited by the delegates during the congress, is unique. E. L. Deachy, alternate delegate, says that the aim of the school is a Workers' University and at present students are being prepared for colledge entrance.

No Change in Mind.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—No statement was issued by President Coolidge on the eve of the Massachusetts referendum on the child labor amendment, appealing to the voters of his state to endorse that measure for ratification by their legislature. In answer to questions, the White House merely let it be known that he had not changed his mind."

Last December, in his message to congress, and before business had lined up against it, Coolidge favored the proposed amendment.

M'ANDREW LETS DROP ANOTHER SCHOOL SCHEME

Will Recommend More Junior Highs to Board

Directly upon the heels of the school board's brilliant schemes to reduce the cost of education by taking it out on the working class children and the teachers comes another recommendation from McAndrew which will be presented before the board meeting on Wednesday afternoon to spend $170,000,000 of the school money to erect 165 schools, mostly junior high school buildings.

This means that the children will be crowded in the class rooms, kindergartens will be abolished, teachers will be dropped and with that money the board will put over its pet scheme, the junior high schools for which purpose McAndrew was brot to Chicago. McAndrew, it must said, is doing his job.

"Junior high schools" a teacher told the DAILY WORKER reporter, "is the bosses pet scheme for reducing the cost of education and doing away with higher education among the children of the working class. Thru them it will be possible to reduce the actual cultural education of each working class child and employ the last two or three years in school in training them to work in shops and factories. Only the children of the wealthy, whose parents can afford to keep them in school for the full education period, will be given a cultural education.

"This is the scheme nearest to the hearts of the big business interests of Chicago, so we will hear on Wednesday afternoon their man Friday, McAndrew, argue for the expenditure of $170,000,000 of the children's school money, their parents' tax money, to make better robots of them for their employers.

"Instead of continually going on their knees before the mayor, begging him to do something for them, if the Chicago Teachers' Federation would stand up straight and do something for itself, maybe McAndrew would take notice that they are a force to be reckoned with.

"The Chicago Teachers' Federation could get much more effective results by calling a joint meeting with parents and explaining to them what is being put over on the city of Chicago. They could work together with the parents and put a few kinks in the cherished schemes of the bosses to robotize the children and the teachers.

"Let's have less hobnobbing with mayors who have proven on previous occasions what can be expected from them and let's have some really effective protests."

Minor's Speech Stirs Los Angeles Crowd at Russian Celebration

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 10.—Robert Minor was the principal speaker at the Seventh Anniversary of the Russian revolution celebration held in Symphony Hall. The hall was packed to the doors and Minor was at his best in his speech and analysis of the Russian revolution and Communism. He roused the crowd to such enthusiasm that many new members were secured for the party and stacks of literature were sold. Subs to the New Workers' Monthly and DAILY WORKER were also sold.

Fred Biedencamp was chairman and Ella Reeve Bloor was one of the speakers. She received a rousing welcome back to California.

Movement Lively.

The movement in Los Angeles is in a very healthy condition. The winding up meetings of the campaign were exceptionally lively in the Bay Heights district where emmissaries of Abe Cahan and the LaFollette movement appeared at every street corner and regularly got their hoots and jeers from the crowds.

On the eve of election a great truck load of speakers covered the big corners. William Schneiderman of the Young Workers' League acted as chairman. Fred Biedekamp of New York, together with Levine and Mother Bloor held the crowds until a late hour.

Two Lame and Dirty Ducks.

WASHINGTON.—Will Harry Daugherty be recalled to the colledge cabinet, as a consequence of the "vindication" claimed by the G. O. P. as the meaning of the reactionary victory at the polls?

His friends hope that he may be given another chance, but they concede that Coolidge is likely to pick for any vacancies in the official family. Denby may be given appointment to some high stlarie job, such as the federal trade commission, and young Teddy Roosevelt will be consoled by a diplomatic appointment if he wants one.

INCOME TAX RETURNS SHOW BIG AMOSKEAG CO. LIED ABOUT PROFITS

(By The Federated Press)

MANCHESTER, N. H., Nov. 10.—Publication of Amoskeag Manufacturing company's income tax return showing a profit of $5,000,000 made by the big cotton and worsted mills instead of a loss of $2,800,000 as the treasurer's report showed for last year has set the whole town talking.

Workers are more than ever resentful of the 10 per cent wage cut recently accepted by the so-called company union representattives in view of the suddenly revealed profits of the concern. First assistant postmaster general, in a political rally in this company town of Manchester, attempted to defend Amoskeag's profits by stating that they came from investments in wool.

Frank P. Carpenter, member of Amoskeag's board of trustees and bitter protestor against the present management of the company says that the profit-in-wool story is "stuff and nonsense," that at best the advance in wool prices could have been only partly responsible. On the difference between the treasurer's valuation of the mills at $3,000,000 and the city assessor's valuation of $37,000,000 Carpenter said that the value of the mill depends upon its income producing power, and "if you can't make money at the plant it is valueless." He is interested in the company's suit for tax rebate, however.

Attorney William S. McCarthy, state senator-elect from the district, declares that he will introduce a resolution in the next session of the legislature authorizing an investigation of Amoskeag's finances.

TEACHERS CLAIM ECONOMY PLANS MUST BE FOUGHT

Urge Mayor to Reopen Fight on Tax Dodgers

Declaring that the recommendation of the school board to increase the size of the overcrowded classrooms in the elementary schools would render the education of Chicago's children very inferior, the Teachers' Federation at its last meeting denounced this proposal together with the other economy plans recommended by the school board.

They appointed a committee to call on Mayor Dever to remind him of his own statement to the city council on July 2, 1923 in which he pointed out the "alarming extent of tax dodging by big property holders in Chicago." They will also remind him that at this time he issued another statement in which he pointed out that if this condition were remedied it would not be necessary to cut down school operating costs as the school treasury would receive the money it is being robbed of by these tax dodgers.

The mayor will be invited to attend a teachers' mass meeting in the near future to discuss the situation.

Meet Herbert Myrick Who May Be One of Silent Cal's Cabinet

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., publisher of a farm journal of the extreme reactionary type, waited scarcely ten days after the death of Secretary Wallace to deliver to all press correspondents in Washington a printed account of his own achievements, labelled "For Who's Who 1924." With this self-started boom for a cabinet job came a more elaborate tribute to Myrick and his publications, filling some four columns of magazine space.

Myrick's latest achievement was a fight against ratification of the proposed child labor amendment in Massachusetts.

It is understood that Secretary of War Weeks is to resign in March, if not earlier, and that when he goes young Roosevelt may be made secretary of war. This will leave the cabinet without a Massachusetts regreesentative, and Myrick might be chosen.

87,648 Mexicans Came To U. S. in Year in Long Hunt for Jobs

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—87,648 Mexicans, nearly all of them workers, came into the United States in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, announces the Federal Council of Churches. The number coming this last year was nearly seven times as many as came ten years ago.

Many of the Mexican immigrants are now working as skilled mechanics—machinists, boilermakers, printers, carpenters, plumbers and other craftsmen. But most are semi-skilled or unskilled laborers.

Aeroplanes Make Successful Flight

Moscow, Nov. 10.—Five aeroplanes, purchased in the U. S. S. R. by the Afghan government, have made a flight from Termez to Cabul over the high mountain ridge of the Hindu Kush.

The aviators, who have thus made the first flight over this unexplored route, were officially and enthusiastically met in the Afghan capital.

SHOP NUCLEI ENDORSED BY LOCAL CHICAGO

Plan Membership Meet to Discuss Situation

At the city central meeting of Workers Party Local Chicago, Wednesday, Nov. 5, a lengthy discussion on the reorganization of the Workers Party on the shop nuclei basis took place. The keenest interest and enthusiasm was displayed for the reorganization and a thoro understanding and willingness to proceed to the work of organising the shop nuclei. Chicago comrades are plainly awake to the absolute necessity of building the political party of the Communists on the job. With this enthusiastic response from the Chicago comrades, reorganization is bound to be effective.

After the discussion the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"The City Central Committee of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, having heard and discussed the report presented by Comrade Abern on the question of shop nuclei, wholeheartedly endorses the decision of the Communist International and of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party for the reorganization of our party into shop nuclei and declares that this is an important and necessary step toward the bolshevization of our party."

Five shop nuclei are already organized and functioning in Chicago.

Motion was also unanimously adopted to hold a membership meeting as quickly as possible on the shop nuclei question.

Membership Meeting Planned.

A membership meeting of Party and League will take place within the near future in order to analyze the recent elections campaign and to plot out the future tasks of the Workers Party.

Seventeen New Members.

Applications of 17 members were accepted from the following branches: North Side English 3, Northwest English 1, Douglas Park English 2, Mid-City English 1, Hungarian 2, Finish 1, Italian, No. 1—2, Lithuanian No. 3—5. Among the union members were members from the Chauffeurs, Office workers, Boilermakers, Janitors, Carpenters and Clothing workers.

Lenin Memorial and Karl Liebknecht day will be celebrated in Chicago on Wednesday, January the 21st. Branches shall not hold any conflicting affairs on that date.

T. U. E. L. Groups Report.

Very good meetings of the metal trades, building trades and Amalgamated Clothing Workers T. U. E. L. groups were reported. Meetings were more largely attended and policies in the various union organizations taken up. Every group member must exert every effort to attend meetings of his group. For meetings of various groups see other columns of the DAILY WORKER.

Branches are being visited steadily with reports on the various theses adopted by the Fifth Congress of the Comintern.

Another special edition of the DAILY WORKER was distributed in Chicago for November the 7th celebration.

With the elections campaign over greater stress will be laid on the industrial and trade union work in order to further the Communist pogram also shop nuclei organization, will be on the first order of business.

Meetings of City Central Committee will be held, first and third Wednesday. The next meeting will be on the 19th of November.

Lettin's Case Comes Up in Philadelphia Court This Morning

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Joseph Lettin, member of the Workers Party who was arrested on election-day for distributing handbills containing Communist propaganda, will be arraigned before Magistrate Pennock tomorrow.

Lettin narrowly escaped death on November 4, when a gang of pay-triotic bussiness men beat him up and chased him into a street crowded with heavy traffic.

Philadelphia capitalist newspapers are making much of the fact that Lettin has not taken out citizenship papers, altho he came here from Roumania twelve years ago.

BUILDING UP WORKERS' POWER IN SOVIETLAND

Anise Gives Proof of Red Thoroness

By ANISE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 19.—(By Mail.)—I am just back from a trip down thru the provinces, where I went especially to see the John Reed children's colony which I am helping to put on its feet with gifts from American friends. Two or three little events will be of interest in America.

The first is the tale of a plate. Speaking of respect for private property—here's an example. Three months ago, on my way to Saratov, I had breakfast in the Tamboy railway station. Just as I was getting on the train I remembered that I had left my white enamelled plate behind in the diningroom. I wanted to go back, but the conductor warned that there wasn't time.

So just as the train pulled slowly out of the station, he leaned from the platform and called to an officer of the G. P. U., the state police which manages order on the railroads: "This comrade left a white enameled plate in the dining room. She is coming back in five days. Get it and keep it for her."

I came back in five days, but my train passed thru the town during the night and I did not care enough about my plate to claim it. But three months after, when I was again en route for Saratov via Tambov, I related the story to my fellow travellers. "I am going to get my plate from the G. P. U. in Tambov," I said.

Anise Gets Her Plate.

They laughed. So did I. I did not know whether the G. P. U. officer had ever found the plate; certainly no one could expect it to be kept so long. And when I reached Tambov, and explained the situation to a new G. P. U. man on the platform, he also grinned broadly. But I insisted. "Go to your office and see if it isn't there!" I said. "I want to write to America how they look after private property in Russia."

He went. And five minutes later, just as the train was again pulling out of the station, he came running, bearing aloft in his hand the identical white enamelled plate, which he handed to me amid a grin of delight of onlookers. And I am passing the tale on to America, as one little sample of the orderliness of Russia.

Machinery For Use.

I've one other tale, about the manager of a Soviet farm. I went to see him on behalf of the John Reed Children's Colony, to know whether we could have the extra buildings which they were not using, the agricultural repair shops, blacksmith shops, the stables, field kitchen, and above all the mill.

At night as well confess that I had just been having my fill of small town politics. If any American workers think that petty wire-pulling and mean politics is forever banished when a worker's government comes into power, I suggest they take a look at their own trade unions and working class organizations and they'll get another idea. . . Well, we had been going thru a row between the Young Communists and the Women's Section of the party and the Teachers' Union, as to which should supply our colony with teachers; they all had a long string of deserving unemployed who needed the jobs. It seemed that we had no right to choose the teachers, we thought good for the children, but had to take the teachers whose organizations needed the jobs. I was feeling a bit disillusioned about the dictatorship of the proletariat, and I prepared for another fight with the manager of this Soviet farm.

Not a bit of it! He cheerfully made us a list of the buildings they didn't especially need, and said that he would recommend to headquarters that we should have them. Then we came to the mill. He wanted the mill, and so did we. We saw ourselves feeding two hundred children from the proceeds, and he saw himself making good the deficit on his bad harvest.

He Was Convinced.

We explained to him just how we intended to operate it. We told him we had no taxes to pay, and we had two good mill-stones of our own for repairs, and we could do the repairing in our own work shop, and operate the mill afterwards cheaply as we would only employ two full time workers, and would handle the rest of the job with the older boys, while he would be compelled by union rules to pay many men who would be idle a good deal of the time.

He turned to his other work and I went out to mine, thinking that, in spite of all the disillusions of small town politics, there is after all, no other land on earth where anyone considers that your right to a piece of proprty is to be secured by proving that you can make the best use of it.

BILLY SUNDAY PRESENTS CAL WITH A TURKEY

Stormy Bill and Silent Cal Make Fine Team

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 10.—Billy Sunday, manager of a three-ring religious circus in the interests of the Lord and his own pocketbook, and campaign manager for Jesus and the saints, who some time ago blasphemed his way into the graces of Calvin Coolidge, will send what Sunday claims is the fattest turkey from his private ranch in Oregon to Coolidge for the White House Thanksgiving dinner.

Cal Enjoys Billy's Gift of Gab.

The friendship between Silent Cal and Babbling Billy began a year ago in Charleston, S. C., where Sunday was thumping the ground in honor of the Father, breaking up furniture to the glory of the Son, and cursing volubly to show his respect for the Holy Virgin.

"Why didn't I think of such words when I was handling the Boston police strike?" Cal is reported to have murmured to his wife. So, with a view to improving his vocabulary, Cal invited Billy Sunday to lunch. For which Billy swore undying allegiance to Cal. And when Billy swears, he can make you believe him. Cal did.

They Even Have Same Wishes.

The wish-bone of the Thanksgiving turkey sent by Sunday will be split between Cal and Charley Hughes. They will wish, then—and how they will wish—for the eternal damnation of the Communists.

ELEMENTARY MARXIAN ECONOMICS

CLASS in Elementary Marxian Economics. Questions for Wednesday, November 12, at 2613 Hirsch Blvd., Chicago. Earl R. Browder, instructor. Read this week, "Value, Price and Profit," chaps 8, 9, 10, and "Wage-Labor and Capital."

1. What determine the value of 10 hours of labor?
2. What determines the value of the labor-power expended in 10 hours of labor?
3. What determines the amount of surplus value available to the capitalist from the labor of the worker?
4. Why do we say that a wage is the price of labor-power, not the price of labor?
5. What point of similarity is there in economics between slave-labor and wage-labor?
6. Are profits regularly made under capitalism by selling commodities above their value? How can profits be made by selling commodities at their value?
7. Why do the capitalists always want to increase the hours of labor, even tho they pay an hourly rate, while the workers will generally want to decrease the hours?
8. Can the capitalist make more profit out of long hours, while paying time-and-a-half rates for overtime, than he would paying regular rates for short hours?
9. When a capitalist buys raw material and labor-power, and apulies the labor power to the raw material to produce a new commodity, what determines the value of the new commodity?
10. How does the capitalist realize the surplus value crystallized in the commodity?

Collateral reading: "Value, Price & Profit," Marx, chaps 5, 6, and 7, "Shop Talks on Economics," Marcy.

Answers to last week's questions.

1. "Labor time" is the primary measure of value. It can therefore have no value itself, except in terms of itself, and when translated into money or price simply takes another form of measure for "labor time." The "value of labor-power," on the contrary, is not a measure or determinant of the value of the products of labor, but is itself determined by the "labor time" necessary to produce the "labor-power."
2. A general increase of purchasing power by the workers would result in an increased demand for those things which workers ordinarily buy, the necessaries of life, but would not increase the demand for luxuries except the most ordinary, nor of machinery and other means of production.
3. A general increase of wages would temporarily increase the price of the necessaries of life by increasing the demand above the supply established by the previous demand.
4. Such a general increase in price would be but temporary, because the increased price would raise profits, attract capital from other industries paying a lower rate of profit, and thru competition between capitalists reduce the prices to the former level by increasing the supply to equal the demand.
5. The re-establishment of supply to demand indicated in question number four would change the distribution of capital among the various branches of industry, because it would require more capital for the production of necessaries of life than heretofore, and less capital would be available for the production of other commodities. In other words, more workers would be engaged in producing those things that workers consume.
6. A decrease in working hours is of more benefit to the workers than an increase in wages, other things being equal, because it lessens the pressure of competition between workers and tends to bring the raise in wages after it. The increase in wages does not carry with it a tendency to shorten hours.
7. A decrease in the length of the working day is a direct reduction of the rate of exploitation and at the same time an increase in the rate of wages. It further provides the worker with more leisure for study, organization, and political activity, all of which increases his relative social power and his ability to increase the value of his labor-power.
8. A general increase in the hours of labor for all workers would result in an immediate decrease in the total amount of wages paid to all workers because fewer workers would be required to do the same amount of labor. At the same time it would start a general reduction in the rate of wages of those employed by increasing manyfold the competition between workers.
9. "Labor" is that which gives value to its products, measured by its duration in time; "labor-power" is the energy stored up in the worker, which he sells as a commodity to the capitalist, and which the capitalist uses to produce values greater than its value (price or wage), which is done by extending the "labor" time beyond that necessary for its regpoduction.
10. The value of a commodity is not determined by the value of the commodity labor-power used in its production, but by the duration of labor, or by the labor time, socially necessary for its production. It is the difference between the time which labor is actually expended for the capitalist, as against that time necessary to reproduce the value of the labor-power that is the source of surplus value.

November 16, Red Day for the Young Communists of N. Y.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 10.—For a long time the revolutionary movement of New York has not seen such a day as the Young Workers League has in store for it. Nov. 16 will be a doubly Red Day. It is the official opening of the membership drive of the Young Workers League, and also the day on which the Young Communists will welcome Comrade Olgin, recently returned from Soviet Russia, back home.

Appropriate arrangements have been made to fittingly celebrate such an occasion. Two large halls have been obtained, at the Harlem Casino. An elaborate program has been arranged which will be continuous from 2 p. m. to 2 a. m.

At 2 p. m., Comrade Olgin will deliver a lecture on The Young Communist Movement in Russia and in Other European Countries. After the lecture there will be an entertainment and a bazaar. In the evening there will be a ball with a grand march at 10 p. m.

Those who remember the Junior play presented at the International Youth Day celebration will surely come to see the new and better Junior play.

Fun, color, life, all day long, Nov. 16, at the Harlem Casino, 116th St. and Lenox Ave.

Get your tickets now sold at 50 cents in advance. On sale at the headquarters of the Young Workers League, 208 E. 12th St., at all branches of the Y. W. L., and at the Jimmy Higgins Book Store, 127 University Place.

PROPHET'S DOPE IS PUNCTURED AT THE POLLS

Todd's Tales Topple As Bob's Bubble Bursts

Communist writers are often times accused of possessing more zeal than judgment. They are charged with painting the revolutionary picture in too bright colors, and allowing their natural optimism to becloud their sense of actuality. Their severest critics are liberal journalists whose association with the working class movement is usually the somewhat ghostly connection between it and Greenwich Village.

Other liberal critics cannot be accused of exaggerating the virtues of the revolutionary movement or of beating the tomtom for its leaders. But when they get hired to sing the praises of the petty bourgeois radicals and capitalist reformers, there is no limit to their imaginations.

Doping the Dope.

One of the most willing of LaFollette's press agents in Washington was Lawrence Todd, Federated Press Staff correspondent. His pre-election talks makes interesting reading in the light of the thirteen electoral votes that Fightin' Bob managed to squeeze out of Wisconsin. We have been keeping tab on Todd's predictions. Here they are:

July 14—While anticipating the Capture of most of the western states and half of the middle states, the LaFollette managers are not going to offer any detailed figures until the real campaign has been launched along in September. . . . LaFollette as matters stand, has a chance of election; he is sure of defeating Coolidge; he stands an excellent chance of defeating Davis. Probably Bryan leads in the race with LaFollette second. (Signed by Todd.)

Wall Street Was Kidding.

Aug. 21—Wall Street has passed the word down the lines: it is for Coolidge and Dawes. It expects LaFollette and Wheeler to run second in the popular vote—if they don't run first—and it conceded to Davis and Bryan nothing outside the solid south. . . . Wall Street believes it can elect Coolidge, but it concedes that LaFollette will be his only dangerous opponent. (Signed by Todd.)

Sept. 10—Thruout the country there is a rising tide of disgust with the ancient political buncombe," says Henry L. Mencken, author and editor of The American Mercury, in a statement issued at LaFollette headquarters. (Quoted by Todd.)

Sept. 18—The favorite theme of the G. O. P. press agents is an interview with a standpat senator or national committeeman, who is called in from a distant state to confess that Coolidge will carry his state by a majority just as big as Harding secured in 1920. Nothing is too wild for these intimates. For instance, Minnesota is claimed about three tmes a week for Coolidge while Dawes is reported as arousing the enthusiasm of the Germans in St. Louis. (Unsigned dispatch.)

But Thomas Was Bent.

Sept. 25—Indeed, Norman Thomas, the socialist nominee for governor, is expected to make a dent in the republican vote before Nov. 4. (Signed by Todd.)

Sept. 30—Hoover is deeply worried by the enthusiasm with which LaFollette's support of public ownership of giant power has been received all thru the campaign. He looks past the November election to the time when a congress in which the progressives will hold an absolute balance of legislative power, will be able to block any pro-corporation moves by either a Davis or a Coolidge—if either of those corporation servants should get into the White House on March 4. (Signed by Todd.)

Cal a Live Corpse.

Oct. 3—Virtual acknowledgement that the republican organization is on the defensive, fighting with its back to the wall, and that it has lost all confidence of victory in November, is seen by press correspondents here in the statement made to them by Chairman Butler on the democratic progressive combination in the West. Coolidge, meantime, looks as dead as the Mellon plan. (Unsigned dispatch.)

Oct. 4—One thing is certain—the solar plexus blows dealt Coolidge and Dawes by Sen. Brookhart at the opening of his campaign in Iowa have been damaging to the G. O. P. machine in many states east of the Mississippi. (Signed by Todd.)

Even Magnus Is Dumb.

Oct. 11—So effective has been the fight against individual tories in the house and senate that the chances overwhelmingly favor the appearance in the new congress of a farmer-labor-progressive group twice or three times as numerous as in the present one. The new congress will not take orders from Coolidge, should he win. (Signed by Todd.)

Oct. 11—Of course, the bourbon democrats laugh derisively at this claim that LaFollette and Wheeler will run ahead of Davis and Bryan in the electoral college and thereby qualify for the finals in the deadlock in congress. (Signed by Todd.)

What actually happened is history, but not the kind LaFollette expected to make.

ROUMANIAN TERROR IN BESSARABIA

ODESSA, Nov. 10.—A bloody insurrection, in which many peasants were killed, took place in Tatarbunary, Bessarabia, which is occupied by Roumania. Many of the Roumanian "Siguriza" (political secret service) have also been killed. In the village Bernia, six peasants have been killed by the gendarmes. At the congress of the peasant party held in Beltzi, Bessarabia, resolutions of protest were passed against the mass murders and arrests. Bratiano, the Roumanian premier, blames the left wing of the peasant party for the bloody massacres in southern Bessarabia.

13 Villagers Slaughtered.

A peasant deputy from Alba, named Cetatea, protested to the chamber of deputies against the execution of thirteen villagers who were accused of plotting against the government. He said the gendarmes conducted the peasants to the outskirts of the village, shot them down, and then summoned a doctor to examine the corpses. The physician discovered that two peasants were still living, although badly wounded, whereupon they were dispatched. The doctor was then slain so he could not be a witness.

After many armed conflicts between the political police and the armed peasant detachments in southern Bessarabia, the Roumanian government began to cleanse the ranks of the gendarmes, the military organizations and the clerical help of the government in Bessarabia. The government does not trust any more its own servants. Out of the ten newspapers published in Bessarabia in the Russian language, nine have been closed by the government. Only one paper, "Bessarabskaya Mysl" published in Kishinev, has not been closed.

"PEOPLE'S COURT" IN GERMANY USED AGAINST WORKERS

Prisons Are Filled with Political Prisoners

By I. W. A. Press Service

Justice is running wild in Germany. Armed with the powers of state, drunken with rage and prejudice, it runs amuck. Its victims are exclusively workers.

German justice has made itself the accomplice of all monarchist conspirators against the republic. Some of the old imperial generals, each of them guilty a hundred times of high treason against the republican form of government, has never been taken up by justice. The "people's court," formed by the new republic against the old monarchist plotters, are manned by those very plotters and used against the working-class defenders of the republic.

This travesty on justice has filled the German prisons with politicals out of the ranks of the workers. In the first four months of the year 1924, 5,950 indictments were returned in Germany for alleged political crimes. The perpetrators of the Kapp putsch in Germany in 1920, which, if successful, would have reinstated the run away Wilhelm as German emperor, are all free while of the workers who organized for the defense of the republic against the Kappists, there are still forty-one in prison.

Ludendorff, the arch-conspirator against the republican form of government, is feted thruout Germany as a national hero while the workers who organized a counter movement against the contemplated monarchist coup, were persecuted and more than two thousand years of imprisonment was pronounced against them.

Sentences Dring Much Misery

Between June and September, 1924 2,273 workers were sentenced to 1,760 years of imprisonment for alleged political offenses. The victims of these judicial crimes are either languishing in prison where they are cruelly mistreated, and sometimes murdered outright, or they are the families of the victims—innocent women and children, starved and harrassed by the police as the friends of the hated politicals.

They appeal for help.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid is organizing relief for them, to be distributed thru the Red Aid International. Send contributions to 19 South Lincoln Street, Chicago Illinois.

BOYS AND GIRLS SEIZED AND SOLD AT $25 A HEAD

Slave Trading Helped by Australian Govt.

By W. FRANCIS AHERN
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

RABAUL, New Guinea, Nov. 10.—While the Australian federal government was busy assuring the league of nations that there was no truth in the statements that the natives in New Guinea (new mandated to Australia) were being shot down and murdered, one of the government's own magistrates was inquiring into the indiscriminate slaughter of 4 native men, 6 native women, and 5 native children, one a babe at breast.

The evidence at the inquiry at Rabaul Sept. 10 and 11 was so revolting that the Australian government has been forced into a searching investigation of the expedition responsible for the crime.

Slave Recruiters Arrive.

Last February a recruiter named James O'Dowd was operating in the Postdamhafen district. Recruiting is the respectable name for securing indentured labor. It is slave-running. The natives are secured for work on the plantations, the recruiters being paid $25 per head for each adult slave, and $25 for each boy slave.

O'Dowd roped in three sons of a native chief named Yassouri. The boys escaped and returned to their village, protesting against their seizure. O'Dowd proceeded to secure them again, and a fight ensued.

Natives Revolt.

The natives of the village rought to protect the sons of their chief. O'Dowd was speared and killed. An expedition proceeded to the village and wiped it out. Only two native males and one native female escaped. Sixteen natives, men and women and children, were slaughtered, including the three wives of chief Yassouri.

The evidence was of such a cold-blooded nature that magistrate Wanliss said "If this ferocious treatment was meted out to these people it has an important bearing on the relations of the natives to the administration. A searching inquiry must be made into the conduct of the expedition."

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—In spite of the fact that each new born baby in Berlin is entitled to receive three marks (75c) from the government, the birth rate has fallen from 47.2 per 1,000 in 1876, and 21 per 1,000 in 1914 to 10.4 per 1,000 in 1923, in the German capital.

PIFFLE FLOWED FREELY FROM SILENT CALVIN

Morgan's Atty. Sends His Greetings

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 10.—A fairly long string of presidential piffle was issued from the White House yesterday morning formally thanking the American boobery for falling for republican propaganda and making the hard choice between Coolidge and chaos.

"Me and God"

Laying aside the little matter of terrorizing the workers by threatening closed factories, and the other little matter of several millions spent in making them believe it, Calvin raised his eyes fervently to the top of Teapot Dome and announced: "I can only plainly acknowledge that this result has been brought to pass thru the work of a divine providence of which I am but one instrument."

Inasmuch as the "divine providence" of capitalism elected him, Coolidge announces that he is, "rededicating America to the service of God and man," in a Thanksgiving proclamation he issued at once. In his modestly claimed that "we" have "financially assisted" other nations, quite forgetting to add that "we" expect both the interest and the capital back.

Gold Dust Twins Perform.

After promising to serve "all the people," capitalist and working class alike, Coolidge answered the slightly ironic telegram of congratulations from the democrat elect pro. Wall-street Davis, in which Davis expressed a "hope" that the new administration would "insure to the welfare of the country." Silent Cal assured him that it would and thanked Davis for his "patriotic sentiments."

The Flivver King's Jokes.

To the DAILY WORKER: Henry Ford once said he is against charity. As an employe of the Ford flivver factory I would like to know how he accounts for the fact that we are forced at the threat of losing our jobs to contribute $1 and $2 every year to the Community Fund which comprises the Y. M. C. A., American Legion, Salvation Army and every other anti-labor organization.

Another one of Henry Ford's wheezes is his prosperity boast. On the 25th of October, 25 per cent of the men were dropped in each department, some even more. There are rumors that this will soon be followed by another wholesale laying off of workers.

Yours,
G. E.

Their first conversation betrayed the fact that she was not fastidious

AT a distance she had appeared unusually neat, immaculate. But upon their first face-to-face meeting he discovered that her teeth were not clean. And he soon lost interest.

So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And you know it is cleaning safely.

So the makers of Listerine, the safe antiseptic, have found for you also the really safe dentifice.

MARINE LABOR OF ARGENTINA IS MILITANT

Large Communist Group is Very Active

By J. STONE.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 10.—A strong Communist group exists here within the Federacion Obrero de Maritimos (Marine Workers' Federation).

It is carrying on a strong campaign to amalgamate the transport unions and to affiliate with the Red International of Labor Unions.

10,000 Members in Buenos Aires.

The F. O. M. has a membership of about 10,000 in the port of Buenos Aires. Recently the steamship companies tried to buck the union by hiring unorganized workers.

This was a violation of the agreement between the shipowners and the F. O. M. and a strike was first called on the particular ships offending.

Then when it was learned that the rest of the shipowners were supporting the strike-breaking ships, the rest of the seamen of the F. O. M. joined the walkout and would have brought the bosses to terms had their organization been supported by the shore workers.

Naval Forces Used as Scabs.

In the strike naval men were used on lighters and tugboats and river steamers as scabs. Ships are still carefully guarded and the Buenos Aires police invent stories of attempts to blow up vessels in the good old United States style.

It is very hard to win in a marine strike when the longshoremen are unorganized and keep on working when the seamen and the rest are on strike. The strike is thought to be provoked by the shipowners in order to break the F. O. M., which has won their hatred as the strongest union in the port.

Aborigines Help Open Shop.

The longshoremen are the weak spot. Out of 10,000 there are only 2,000 organised. One reason for the lack here of organization on the shore is that the fascist organization called the "Patriotic Society" and the shipowners import half-civilized Indians from the wild country, and these Indians do not understand the meaning or need of labor unions. However, the supply of wild tribes will not last forever and those brought in will learn many things.

NEEDLE WORKERS OF CLEVELAND RUSH TO AID OF SILK WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Nov. 10.—A resolution praising the striking silk workers of Paterson for their heroism in the battle against the mill bosses and urging them to keep up the fight until it has been won was passed unanimously at a meeting here called by the Cleveland Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Members of the Workers Party took an active part in the meeting and are giving whole-hearted support to the committees for the relief of the silk strikers.

The resolution reads in part:

"We . . . greet the heroic struggle of the Paterson textile workers, now on strike against the intolerable, inhuman exploitation of the silk mill bosses of Paterson, N. J.

"We have followed with great interest your many trials and sacrifices in the face of brutal persecution and suppression by the police and hired thugs of the bosses.

"We consider your struggle our struggle. We urge you not to give up your fight till you have achieved complete victory.

"We extend to you in this fight for union conditions fraternal assurance of solidarity.

"We pledge you in the name of the organizations we represent and in the name of the Cleveland conference for Relief of Paterson Textile Strikers, which we have formed for that purpose, all possible moral and financial support."

A number of affairs have been arranged for the benefit of the Paterson strikers.

GOMPERS' MACHINE O. K'S DAVIS

sity if "Governor Smith was to be saved from defeat." He said, "We would have gone the whole way with our indorsement of LaFollette, if it had not been for the activity of the socialists on behalf of Thomas."

Ryan Spills Some Beans.

Joseph Ryan, of the Longshoremen's union, supporter of Strikebreaker Cal Coolidge, received an ovation from the stalwart henchmen with which he had packed the meeting. He prided himself on "having picked the winner."

Nevertheless, he defended the action of the officers in indorsing Davis and incidentally made a few significant remarks. "If the American Federation of Labor should decide to form a labor party or a third party," he said, "we would go along with it."

He mentioned the fact that the executive council of the American Federation of Labor had indorsed LaFollette only by a 6-5 vote and that they were now thoroly scared at the mess they had gotten into. "Since such a message was sent from the American Federation of Labor headquarters," he said, "to take such action as will protect our organization." In other words, to get back in the democratic fold. He further pointed out that as the delegate to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, he wanted to know where the body stood on the question of political indorsement.

Delegate Protest Officers' Action.

Numerous delegates took the floor in protest against the high-handed action of the officers, one delegate remarking that "If certain individuals had been paid for selling out, they could not have done a better job."

Frechti, of the Painters, threatened that the action of the officers would drive many organizations out of the central body. Mulholland, the chairman, refused to answer the question of the Letter Carriers' delegate as to whether the officers had voluntarily given the impression that their action was official. It was brought out that there had been no meeting of the executive board at which the indorsement of Davis had been decided upon, altho one delegate claimed that cards had been sent out for such a meeting to a few picked members.

Lefkowitz Aided Smith.

Lefkowitz of the Teachers' Union then defended himself against the charge that he had betrayed the central body by making a public statement denying his indorsement of Smith. He admitted, however, having been responsible for drawing up the statement of the legislative committee, which indorsed Al Smith, even tho he said he had always stood for "independent political action."

He denied having worked for his friend Norman Thomas, saying that the LaFollette forces had kept strictly to their agreement to work for the national ticket only. He pointed out that the action of the officers set a bad precedent which established the supremacy of the executive board over the central body and its right to overrule the decisions of the larger body. It also established the precedent, he claimed, whereby the executive board could at any time make public its decisions without refering such decisions to the central body for approval.

Machine Closes Debate.

The Gompers' machine then brought up its heaviest artillery against the insurgents. Coughlin, the socialist, in a confused speech, during which he was heckled vigorously, charged the LaFollette forces with having betrayed the labor movement by nominating Thomas as against its friend Al Smith. He mentioned the fact that the socialist party had supported a republican, Littleton, in Brooklyn. Costello believed a demand for Feinstone. "Where is Feinstone?" he yelled, "I don't see him here!"

Finally the last and heaviest gun was brought forward—Jim Holland, president of the New York State Federation of Labor. In stentorian tones Holland denied any charge of having sold out. He excoriated the socialist party and said, "They have been shot to pieces since the war. They would tear down this government if they had the nerve. But they haven't got the nerve. The labor movement was fooled into indorsing LaFollette and Wheeler, but it will never be fooled again. They put this thing across when the old man (Gompers) was flat on his back." Holland promised a day of reckoning at the next convention of the American Federation of Labor for those responsible for the LaFollette indorsement. Holland also mentioned a mysterious conference at 1461 Broadway, recently attended by himself, Sullivan and a representative of the democratic party, which may have a determining influence upon the recent action of the executive officers of the Central Trades and Labor Council.

As soon as Holland concluded, there was a loud demand for the question. The approval of the action of the members of the executive board, was carried by a loud and decisive majority. A great many of the bona fide delegates rushed up immediately and demanded that they be recorded in the negative. It remains to be seen whether the insurgent group will take any further action as a result of the high-handed action of the officers of the body.

What it Means.

As a meeting of one of the strongest sections of the Gompers' machine just before the national convention of the American Federation of Labor, this gathering is most significant. It seems likely that the ultra-conservative bureaucracy, the Gompers' group, have decided to come back solidly into the democratic fold and leave the LaFollette, progressive ranks. In case of the formation of a third party, it could therefore look for support to the small minority of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, the Johnston group. The big battle of the convention apparently will be between these two forces.

CHINESE ATTEND RAISING OF RED FLAG OF SOVIETS

Big Celebration Is Held at Shanghai

(By Rosta)

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 7.—The official flag-raising ceremony has been held here at the Consulate-General of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

To the impressive strains of "The International" and the Chinese national anthem played by a band of the Shanghai municipality, the Red Flag was hoisted in the presence of numerous representatives of the Chinese authorities.

Among those present were the commander-in-chief, General Lo Yung-halang, the military governor of Ho Ren-ling, representatives of the Chinese police, administrative and judicial organs, the chamber of commerce, the press, cinema photographers, and also representatives of the Soviet state and economic institutions, as well as a big number of Soviet citizens and generally, a large public.

An official reception was held in the premises of the consulate-general in the evening of the same day, at which were present numerous representatives of Chinese public organizations and press and of the Soviet institutions and Soviet citizens.

The Chinese authorities were officially informed of the opening of the consulate-general.

Celebration at Canton.

CANTON, Nov. 10.—The flag was raised on the building of the consulate of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics at Canton to the strains of "The "International," and the Chinese national anthem, in the presence of Chinese civil and military authorities and representatives of numerous public organizations. Speeches delivered on this occasion were enthusiastically met by all those assembled. An official banquet was held in the evening at the consulate.

California Judge Hits Hard Blow at I. W. W. Membership

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Nov. 10. — Judge C. O. Busick of Sacramento has declared permanent the anti-I. W. W. injunction, issued temporarily a year ago. By this injunction mere membership in the I. W. W. is cause for arrest and imprisonment for six months. It is so worded that it may be used against any unpopular labor organization and by a test case men have been convicted under it in counties at the other end of the state from the one in which it was issued. The usual procedure now in Los Angeles is to serve the Busick injunction on everyone who attempts to speak at an I. W. W. meeting.

James Elliot has been released from the criminal syndicalism indictment in the case of delegates arrested at the California I. W. W. convention in Sacramento a year ago. Of the 16 defendants one has died, and Elliot has been very ill. The other 14 will be tried next month.

EVEN BRITISH MENSHEVISTS CAN'T ENTHUSE OVER GOMPERS' PROPAGANDA

(By The Federated Press)

Despite the eye witness account of The Federated Press correspondent who peacefully spent her vacation in the Russian Soviet state of Georgia, terrible Russian atrocity stories are still industriously circulated by the Chicago Tribune and by labor papers accepting the propaganda statements of certain social-democrat exiles in Paris.

The truth, as reported from the scene of the Georgian uprising, is that a small ineffectual attempt of former landowners and oil concessionaires together with the old discarded social democrat rulers of Georgia was quickly put down by the Soviet government aided by the people of Georgia. There was little bloodshed and practically no interruption of commerce.

To clinch this it is only necessary to quote from The New Leader, the principal British social democrat paper, which in its issue of Sept. 19, puts the dispatches about Georgia via Trebizond (Chicago Tribune Foreign "News" Service) on an even lower plane than Riga, where the Tribune also has a long distance observer on Russia.

"It would be rash," said the British social democrat organ, "to dogmatize about the news from Georgia, but we give rather less faith to the telegrams of the industrious American journalist in Trebizond than to those of the romantic school in Riga. From Riga at least there runs a railway line to Moscow; there is none from Turkish Trebizond to Georgia. There clearly was a revolt and it has been suppressed. It may well be that the peasants acted against it, for under the present system they enjoy the land. It is probable that one rising and above all the news of the rising was timed to play its part against the Russian treaty (with England). Without crediting the tales of bloody repression we would say plainly that the more mercifully the Bolsheviks act the better will they stand in the opinion of the European workers' movement."

The British social democrats apparently take no stock in the heart-rending appeal to Samuel Gompers sent by the exiled Georgian social democrats from Paris and broadcast to the American labor press by a labor news service with headquarters in Washington.

Merrick's Six Year Sentence Will Come Before Higher Court

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 10.—John E. Merrick, Haverhill trade unionist, is out on $15,000 bail following sentence of three to six years on a framed dynamite conspiracy charge.

Merrick had been convinced at Lawrence, upon what his friends claim to be framed evidence, charging him with having dynamited before the fact to placing dynamite near the shoe factory of Kulpe Brothers, Inc. in Haverhill, Mass., during labor troubles which were caused by a strike in the early part of January, 1923.

The supposed bomb was incapable of going off, because the wires could not connect to complete the circuit. The defense claimed the machine had been planted to discredit the union.

The whole trial was so obviously prejudiced and its outcome so surprising to the defense that they will take the case before the supreme court. Merrick has been running a small garage, having been blacklisted by the shoe companies for his energetic union work.

Karl Reeve Speaks Before Big Crowd In South Bend, Ind.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 10.—The best safeguard for the successful continuation of the Soviet government of Russia is for the workers to create a workers' and farmers' government in the United States, Karl Reeve, reporter for the DAILY WORKER, told the audience here Saturday night celebrating the seventh anniversary of the establishment of the Communist government in Russia. Reeve related the history of the sufferings and triumphs of the Russian workers and peasants since the world war.

The Workers' Home, 1216 West Colefax Ave., was well filled with many young people as well as the old time comrades. The audience sang the International, and listened to an orchestra of young workers.

Hunger Strike Report False

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—The assertion contained in the manifesto of the Executive Committee of Second International with reference to Georgia, alleging that socialists in Soviet prisons have gone on hunger strike, is a piece of fabricated news from beginning to end. It is officially ascertained that not a single political prisoner either in Transcaucasia or, for that matter, in any other part of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, has declared hunger strike.

It may be observed that the allegations of the Executive Committee of the Second International regarding so-called hunger strikes in Soviet prisons are no more reliable than other assertions of alleged mass executions of socialist hostages the continuation of the revolt, or the news of the would be capture by insurgents of Batum and Tiflis.

RAILROAD GAINS GO UP AS MEN'S WAGES GO DOWN

Speedup System Brings Hardship to Workers

(By The Federated Press)

Fewer railroad workers turning out more work for reduced pay are helping to swell railroad profits for 1924, according to the August wage statistics of the interstate commerce commission. The figures show that the wholesale layoffs coupled with reductions in average weekly earnings meant a reduction of more than $30,000,000 in the total August pay roll compared with August, 1923. This represents money saved for security holders at the expense of the families of railroad workers.

Total wages paid in the industry in August amounted to $239,518,006 compared with $270,187,583 in the same month a year ago. This is a reduction of 11.4 per cent. It is in part accounted for by a decrease in the average monthly pay from $138 in 1923 to $134 in August, 1923, largely due to reductions in average hours worked.

Reductions in force, however, accounted to an even greater extent for this $30,000,000 saving for the benefit of railroad owners. According to the commission's figures 184,583 railroad workers who had a job in August, 1923, were out of work this year. This is a reduction of nearly 10 per cent in the number employed. Actual hours worked by railroad employes were reduced 16 per cent.

This reduction in total hours for which the railroads are paying involves an increase in the work railroad employes are turning out for each hour's pay. The table shows the reductions in certain wage costs per unit of service in the summer of 1924 compared with 1923.

Cost per freight train mile
Locomotive repairs	$0.409	$0.495
Train enginemen	.239	.254
Enginehouse expense	.089	.094
Trainmen	.387	.388
Cost per passenger train mile
Locomotive repairs	.127	.168
Train enginemen	.130	.137
Enginehouse expense	.057	.061
Trainmen	.085	.091

This means that railroad shopmen employed in repairing engines are producing 20 per cent more freight train miles for each dollar of wages paid. Similarly engine men are producing 6 per cent more freight train miles per dollar of wages than they produced in 1923.

Maintenance Men Suffer Most.

Maintenance employes suffered most severely in the reductions in force altho the number of train and engine service employes has also been heavily reduced. The commission's figures show the number of employes laid off since a year ago as: clerical workers, 10,072; maintenance of way, 42,268; maintenance of equipment, 54,682; station employes including dispatchers, telegraphers, agents, baggage and freight handlers, 11,348; yard, switch and hostler service, 2,409; train and engine service, 33,533.

Such figures show that increased productivity of labor under private capitalism produces not shorter hours for the employes of the industry but increasing insecurity of job and a more precarious opportunity to earn a living. All improvement in industrial technic under the present system tends to greater profits for the owners.

Progressive Victory in Steel Unionism

It will be good news for the steel workers and for revolutionary labor generally to learn that the fight begun by the Trade Union Educational League has been waged to a successful conclusion so far as ousting the reactionaries from leadership of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers' Union is concerned.

The labor faker gang known as M. F. Tighe and company, who sabotaged the great steel strike of 1919 and withdrew the union from the national committee, is fired by the membership voting two to one and in some cases more, for their progressive opponents.

In the great strike the Mike Tighe group of officials took all brought into it by the organization campaign, but contributed very little to make the strike a success. In fact they spread a spirit of pessimism and tried to break the line and make a contract with Bethlehem Steel in violation of their solemn agreement with the other 23 unions for the fight in the national committee.

The reactionary officials withdrew the A. A. of I. S. & T. W. from the national committee at once when the strike was called off, and pretended that it did so in order to establish itself as the organizing center of an industrial union in the steel mills. Wm. Z. Foster at that time pointed out the dishonesty of this excuse, and history since then has amply justified his criticism. The steel workers still lack industrial unionism and, in fact, lack any effective unionism at all.

If the progressive forces now elected as a result of the groundwork laid in the convention last year by the T. U. E. L., expect to accomplish anything, they will bind themselves much closer than they are now to the fighting left wing of all the unions of this country organized in the T. U. E. L. This is a prime necessity, as the steel strike showed that even that huge effort needed the support of the miners and railroad workers. It is imperative for any progressive force in any union in America to work as closely as possible with the other militants of the T. U. E. L.

It is just as important that every revolutionary unionist in America should lend every effort to any progressive action in the A. A. of I. S. & T. W., for until the steel mills—the rock bottom of American imperialism, are organized no union in the whole country will be safe. All power to new life in steel unionism!

They Admit It

Chicago's Association of Commerce is going to see that charity ends at home, as well as beginning there. It has organized a nice, new bureau to look after the unwary business man who is mooched by all sorts of organizations for "aid to the poor."

The new bureau is to investigate before issuing credentials to any organized beggars other than the big tag-day drives, which are already subject to veto by these bosses, although these drives don't matter so much as they only fish for dimes on the street corners.

The new bureau is to look after such things as "charity balls," "benefit performances" and "subscription lists." The proceeds of these things, it is alleged, "do not always reach the charities under whose names they operate." The Association of Commerce is going to pass a law—without consulting any parliament—that anybody wanting to run an affair for the poor, must get the O. K. of the Association of Commerce, or the business men who take the Association's word for it will give nothing.

We have no wish to protect the business men from getting gyped, neither do we care for the so-called "charities" which cannot get by the investigators. We merely point out that it is admitted that proceeds from many charities never get to the "deserving poor." In addition we observe that the rich ordinarily give to no charity that doesn't pay something back to capitalism.

The Red Cross, the acme of bourgeois charity, was heavily supported by the rich. It saved the crippled man-power for the factory and it furnished supplies and aid to counter-revolutionary attacks on Soviet Russia. When capitalists support the "Thanksgiving dinner" for which the Starvation Army lassies beg the nation in the name of the "deserving poor"—they depend upon the S. A. to see that the proper ideas are fed along with their sloppy stews. The capitalists want to get the poor to "eat out of their hands" and rendered submissive. Just let any poor devil go into the Salvation Army and demand to be fed! He may be poor, but they will decide he is not "deserving."

Capitalism asks returns even for its so-called charity. That it admits some proceeds do not get to those for whom it is designed and that it means to stop it, all this is merely capitalism insisting on efficiency in the conduct of its business of keeping the poor in the right frame of mind

Imperialism's Labor Department

American imperialism has its labor department. Just as does the labor department of the United States government pretend to function for the benefit of labor while actually plotting against it in the interest of capital, so does the labor end of Yankee imperialism have fine words of "solidarity" and "brotherhood" to cloak the savage ends of exploitation.

The labor department of Wall street is going to have a convention at El Paso on November 17th. It is first going to discuss ways and means of preventing the workers north of the Rio Grande from strengthening their fighting lines on the political and economic field, to prevent amalgamation of the out-of-date craft unions and to defeat all efforts of the left wing to co-ordinate all forces of labor for a united class struggle against capitalism.

Alhough there will be many progressive measures offered, the A. F. of L. convention is expected to give them—and the workers who have passed them thru their unions and hope for their adoption, the cold and stony stare. The A. F. of L. convention will be in the hands of the labor fakers who care, with the yellow socialists, the left wing of the bourgeoisie.

But the El Paso convention will be only the beginning of the treachery. Gompers has his prototype in the Mexican labor movemtnt. What Gompers does in the north, Morones seconds as a matter of course in the colony of Wall street which lies south of "El Rio Bravo" and which is called the Mexican Republic.

After the El Paso convention the fraternity of labor fakers is going to meet at the Pan-American Labor Congress in Mexico City. If the Pan-American Congress does no more than the Gompers-Morones crowd (which is to say Wall street) lets them, it will have betrayed the oppressed and struggling workers of Central and South America to the clutches of the most ruthless and relentless of exploiters, the ruling imperialists of the United States.

It will be the duty of American workers to watch well the doings at El Paso, and to see that their demands upon capitalism shall not be smothered but given voice and power. It is their duty also to insist in tones that can be heard that the Pan-American Congress shall act as an instrument of liberation of the workers of Central and South America.

The Austrian Strike

When the Allies beat the Central powers the Austrians got rid of the House of Hapsburg but were given the House of Morgan instead. The Hapsburgs soaked the Austrian workers but gave them a good show every once in a while. Morgan does not even pay his slaves a visit. He does his business with them by radio.

Austria was down and out when the war was over. The country was so reduced that the city of Vienna, once known as the queen city of Europe, did not have room to draw a good breath. The population of Austria outside of Vienna, was not as large as the membership of a gang of Chicago hijackers.

But Vienna was still a great transportation center. Railroads passed thru there. It was essential to commerce and industry that Austria should be put on its feet. So the League of Nations got Morgan to advance a few million dollars, with which to purchase the leaders of the social democratic party, which was the dominant political party in Vienna.

A catholic priest was selected as premier of Austria and between the catholic church and the socialist party the House of Morgan was doing fine. But—

There are always "buts" in this contradictory capitalist system of ours. In order to pay the interest on the loan advanced by the House of Morgan, thousands of workers had to be thrown out of employment. But workers must eat under any kind of a regime even under a social democratic-clerical one. They struck and tied up the Austrian railways thus cutting the trade arteries of Italy and Checho-Slovakia.

Mussolini and the Checho-Slovak government threatened to send troops into Austria to guard their trains. The League of Nations does not like this idea for obvious reasons. Neither do the German workers who have greviances of their own. They may pool their greviances with those of the Austrians and set heli popping in Europe.

The German workers who are already feeling the heavy hand of the Dawes plan are considering following the example of their Austrian comrades and tying up the German railroads. Thousands of German workers are being dismissed.

The international capitalist imperialists can purchase the socialist leaders and the labor fakers but they cannot eliminate the class struggle. The Austrian strike may be the signal for a new era of working class revolt on the continent of Europe.

The Coal Rivers Colleries owned by members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is issuing orders to union miners on the direction of Warren S. Stone, evicting them from their homes, on the union owned mine property. One of these days the employes of the labor banks may go on strike!

The workers of Austria are most ungrateful. Instead of working and starving loyally like nice little soldiers of the League of Nation, they have gone on strike. Strikebreaker Dawes may bring his Minute Men of the Constitution over there to save his plan.

Harvey O'Connor Has His Day In Court

(We herewith publish the following rejoinder from Harvey O'Connor, Cleveland correspondent of the Federated Press, to an editorial that appeared in the DAILY WORKER of October 30; taking O'Connor to task for his tacit defense of Warren S. Stone, director of the notorious scab Coal Rivers Collieries company.)

"Editor, DAILY WORKER:—Your paper, in a leading editorial of Oct. 30, described me as a 'press agent for Warren S. Stone,' and as having 'entered the fray on the side of his paymaster, Stone.'

"Your remarks are very misleading to the thousands of your readers and I must ask the liberty of making a correction. So far from being a press agent for Stone. I have met the man but once and that but for a few moments. The only connection that can possibly be traced between Stone and myself, is that we both work for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, he as president and I as an assistant on the Brotherhood's Journal.

"The Journal has not commented in any way on the Stone-Lewis controversy over the Coal River Colleries except on the page known as The President's Page and written by Stone himself. Certainly no orders or intimations have ever been transmitted to me in regard to the Collieries dispute, nor has any pressure of any kind ever been exerted on me in any way in writing of this dispute.

"As Cleveland correspondent for the Federated Press, I have attempted to portray faithfully and impartially the news events of the local labor movement. That is my duty, neither more nor less. Certainly as a news representative of the Federated Press, it is neither expected of me nor allowed to me to defend or attack Stone. As you very well know, it is not the function of a Federated Press correspondent to retail his own opinions in his news dispatches. It is that very tendency in capitalist newspapers which has led the labor press to form its own news service, in order to escape opinionated and colored news stories.

"Referring to the Cleveland dispatch to which you take such violent exception, I must say that I believe it is of great value to the labor press to know what reasons Stone advances in behalf of his stand on the Coal River Collieries. It is up to labor editors to comment as they please on this defense, but certainly not to attack the correspondent, who, serving without pay, has made it possible for labor newspapers to know what Stone has to say.

"May I close with this observation? Being in Cleveland, I naturally have access to Stone's statements that the correspondent in other cities does not posses. If I were in Indianapolis, I would have similar access to Lewis' statements. But am I to be assailed for handling such legitimate news as originates in Cleveland? In writing of the Lewis-Stone dispute, I have leaned backward in an attempt at fairness. In that and all other controversial matters, nothing more can be asked of the newspaper correspondent. It the editor wishes to comment on the reporter's article, that is his province

"Harvey O'Connor."

Reply—On October 30, we commented on a news article in the Federated Press service, with a Cleveland date line, sent in by Harvey O'Connor, assistant on the editorial staff of the Locomotive Engineer's Journal of which Albert F. Coyle is acting editor under the direction of Warren S. Stone, now president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and head of the Coal Rivers Colleries company, a mining corporation, owned by members of the Brotherhood and now operating non-union. O'Connor's story told of the action of John L. Lewis in sending two miners officials into the Cleveland district, to work against Stone. They visited local unions, retailing the story of Stone's attitude towards the United Mine Workers of America, and his refusal to sign an agreement with them on the basis of the Jacksonville Pact.

Two Wrongs Not One Right

The Federated Press dispatch suggested that Lewis was acting in the interests of Calvin Coolidge's candidacy, which is quite possible and characteristic of the notorious labor faker Lewis. But that does not justify Stone. In fact our attitude toward both is one of contempt and bitter hostility for their betrayal of the labor movement and their open collaboration with the capitalist class; Stone sitting at the same table with the Wall Street bankers and Lewis the agent of the big coal operators and radical-baiter extraordinary.

The correspondence between Stone and the officials of the United Mine Workers has been given wide publicity. Its puts Lewis in the same light as any other coal operator, who refuses to recognize the union on the ground that "he does not want any agitators interfering with his business."

Substantial Connection

Harvey O'Connor tries to minimize his connection with Stone. But it is a rather substantial connection; much about the same as that existing between Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal and John L. Lewis. In other words O'Connor is on Stone's payroll!

Perhaps Stone did not direct his editors to comment on his infamous connection with the scab mines, but it is a well known fact that the acting editor of the Locomotive Engineer's Journal is often called on the carpet, by Stone, for allowing matters offensive to the railroad companies to appear in its pages. This is particularly true of articles in criticism of the New York Central Railroad, with which Stone is on very good terms. In fact that road has applied for floor space in the building now under construction by the Brotherhood in Cleveland.

As the subject of this article is not Warren S. Stone but Harvey O'Connor, one of Stone's paid editors and therefore one of his press agents, we will not go deeply into Stone's record. We are anxious to know however, how a journalist calling himself radical or even progressive, can afford to resent public censure when he sins either by omission or commission on the side of a union leader, who refuses to recognize a brother union, in the operation of his coal business. We hardly credit the defense that correspondents of the Federated Press are expected to be political eunuchs, without the right to present the news from the point of view of the working class. If O'Connor's presentation of the Lewis-Stone controversy is not a defense of Stone we cannot understand what it is.

Stone's Sins Against Labor

If the Federated Press and its correspondents find themselves in such a position that they must pass over such crimes as those committed by Stone against the labor movement in the interests of self preservation, the sooner such a polluted source of information is dammed, the better for the American working class. O'Connor refers to "opinionated and colored news articles." We refer O'Connor to the stuff sent out by Lawrence Todd, Federated Press correspondent in Washington, which was nothing but LaFollette propaganda from start to finish and permeated with hostility to the Communist movement. Our non-opinionated friends usually are opinionated in favor of the right wing in the labor movement.

"In writing of the Lewis-Stone dispute, I have leaned backward in an attempt at fairness," declares O'Connor. We quite agree, but it was in the general direction of Stone. That is the trouble. What the DAILY WORKER is after is not "fairness" but the truth. And the truth in this case would put down Lewis and Stone as two labor crooks, both equally guilty and both deserving to be pilloried before the bar of working class opinion.

"Friends of Labor" Win

By DUNCAN McDONALD

Now that the election is over and prosperity floats serenely over "our" country and all those elected to office are "friends" of labor, everybody should be happy. On Labor Day last a hundred labor "leaders" called on the President of the United States and pledged their support. The fact that he had acted as a strike breaker in Boston, vetoed the salary increase for the postal workers and vetoed the bonus bill seemed to make no difference to these labor leaders.

Another aggregation of labor leaders pledged their support to John W. Davis and again we see him being heralded as a friend of labor. The fact that he had appeared in the United States Supreme Court in behalf of the Corbnado Coal Company against the United Mine Workers and at every opportunity represented the corporate interests of the country made no difference.

Still another aggregation boosted the peerless leader from Wisconsin as "a friend of labor" nothwithstanding the fact that his principal backers were sugar trust magnates, bankers, wealthy merchants all of whom are against labor.

Coming nearer home we find other labor leaders boosting the unsavory Small as a friend of labor even though all the hard roads in the State were built with scab labor at a rate of pay less than would support a Chinese coolie with rice.

Heads and Tails.

No matter which of the capitalist candidates got elected he was a friend of labor as they were all endorsed by some aggregation claiming to speak for labor and drawing a goodly salary for their effort. It was a case of "heads I win, tails you lose." The labor vote was peddled out to any one who had a job to offer or the necessary cash to contribute to the ones who speak for the labor movement in America.

If there was needed an example to show the fallacy of the American labor movement in politics it was furnished in the recent campaign. Even Gompers who has trailed the democrat donkey in every election for years broke from his moorings and half heartedly supported LaFollette. This may account for the fact that the Bull Moose candidate only carried his own state.

The corruption in Washington under the unholy regime of Coolidge, Fall, Daugherty, Burns, Denby and the rest of the crooks, some of whom are still in power, would be sufficient in any other country to drive the party into oblivion for all time, but here in America it seems to be a badge of honor to get caught with the goods and insures the guilty ones another term in office. Selling the public domain for such a cash consideration seems to furnish sufficient lubrication in the form of oil to enable the machine to roll on noiselessly to success.

Finances Get Mixed.

The situation in the national capitol is only outdone by the rottenness in Illinois where it seems to be a badge of honor to get caught in the act of stealing two million dollars of the taxpayers' money to get merited recognition. Never before in the history of Illinois politics has there been a situation so replete with corruption as has been evidenced under the Small government in Illinois.

Fattening at the public crib for years and years, Small seems to regard Illinois as his very own and the money in the state treasury gets so mixed up with that of the governor it cannot be separated. The printing bills charged to the state are said to mount to the millions immediately prior to the campaign. It is a common rumor that one hundred thousand dollars worth of postage has been charged up to taxpayers and used to send out campaign literature. All the members of the family are on the payroll down to the forty-second cousins. Every mayor, newspaper man, flunky and petty-forging politician is on the payroll of the state as "rabbit shepherd" or some other useless occupation.

Hard Roads vs. Hard Cash.

The hard roads have been built with non-union labor, non-union cement, and the stories of how the contractors had to "kick in" in order to get the jobs, furnish some interesting material for grand jury action if it were not that it is done by one in high position. The trading of pardons for labor support is about the rawest sort of crude politics witnessed in a century. The paid workers have now increased the army of unemployed in the vicinity of Springfield to a alarming extent. The day after election one could see them lined up on the streets with long sad faces, apparently regretting the fact that the election is over and winter coming on.

192 mines out of 297 in Illinois are idle and some fifty million tons of coal lie on top awaiting disposal at a time when the rush season is on, but this makes no difference. The "friends of labor" got elected.

To Finance Big Electric Plant.

(By Rosta)

MOSCOW, Nov. 10.—The Electric Works Planning Commission has approved a general scheme of financing big electric construction works in the working year 1924-25.

A total sum of 16,860,884 rubles is to be allotted, of which 7,432,000 rubles to be appropriated as long-term loans, the rest to be granted without refunding.

THE POWER COLUMN

Twice every week—this column uncovers to your view the motive power behind the DAILY WORKER. Here for the interest and inspiration of every reader—and especially the DAILY WORKER agents and committees—are tried and proven suggestions and accomplishments to drive the DAILY WORKER to further conquests.

Here is POWER—the power of brain and effort of men and women of the working class who not only believe—but ACT!

15,000,000 POUNDS OF PAPER!

THE Chicago Tribune has used 15 million pounds of paper in one, single month of August of 1924! Fifteen million pounds of paper used by only one newspaper of the many in the powerful Capitalist Press of this country to poison the minds of the workers. The elections have proved the POWER of this press. The backward state of Labor is additional evidence. The workers are blinded by the millions of pages sent out everyday by the POWER of the lying press.

But We Are Also Beginning to Speak in Millions!

Not yet in millions of pounds of paper used each month. Today the DAILY WORKER uses approximately 60 thousand pounds of paper a month. 60 thousand—against 15 million. But what we could do with 15 million! Doesn't it open to view POWER to you? Working class POWER that would put fear into the hearts of those who live on the labor of others? Some day the working class will own papers that use 15 million pounds of paper a month. All of the papers—all POWER of the press, the near future wills to the working class.

Today we have an infant giant—a growing DAILY WORKER that uses 60 thousand pounds of paper. And already this mere beginning of POWER is being felt. No organ of the working class is so whole-heartedly hated, bitterly fought—because 60,000 pounds of paper makes possible millions of printed pages. The DAILY WORKER has printed (including foreign language Communist papers) the following millions of printed pages in the last three weeks of:

October 12 to 18 .....1,452,300 printed pages
October 19 to 25 .....1,628,000 " "
October 26 to Nov. 1.....1,746,800 " "

Already we are printing millions of pages! Millions of pages to fight the workingmen's battle. But active workers in the Labor Movement—BUILDERS!—are making possible the day of 15 million pounds of paper a month. Builders are bringing POWER! With subscriptions and bundle orders increasing the circulation of the DAILY WORKER is growing. BUILDERS!—of the DAILY WORKER and the Labor Movement are responsible. Builders like these (is your name among them?) who have sent in NEW subscriptions in the last two and a half days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week:

A Good Supply—But What a Demand!

The Workers Monthly had a large first month's printing. Many thousand copies were printed above the orders on hand (with a little anxiety, because of the cost!) to be ready for a continued demand after issue. And we thank whatever Gods a Bolshevik believes in for the inspiration! Bundle orders continued coming in with every mail and subscriptions are giving the "Bricks" for the DAILY WORKER a merry race. And still they come! Bricks are coming to "build the DAILY WORKER" and subscriptions are coming to add to the strength of the Workers Monthly whose success was instantaneous on the appearance of the first issue. Without question the high standard of the very first issue of this splendid magazine has established its permanence and insures its future growth. Congratulations from workers the country over are spreading good cheer in the office. The Workers Monthly will add further POWER to the building of the labor movement. To the POWER of the DAILY WORKER add the POWER of the Workers Monthly to make for some two-fisted fighting and more POWER for the working class.

State's Attorney In League With Underworld

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

SENATOR LODGE is dead. His passing will not be missed by the American working class and even the capitalists he served so well do not find him indispensable. During his political career he was always on the side of big capital and there is no outstanding achievement to his credit in any walk of life. He was an astute political trickster and very valuable to the ruling class. But his name will be forgotten three days after the grave closes on him.

EMMA GOLDMAN, counter-revolutionary anarchist, is now in London. She intends to write her autobiography, which will no doubt have a ready sale among the wealthy intellectuals who get a kick out of people like Emma Goldman, knowing them to be quite harmless critics of the capitalist system. Indeed, the anarchists of the Goldman type and the capitalists have very much in common. Emma asserts her love for the United States. We may expect a move on the part of the American Defense Society to get her back here again as one of the many sinners against capitalism who wish to make atonement for a consideration.

RUSSIAN czarist refugees in France have appealed to Premier Herriot for succor in this their trying hour. The red flag of the Communist Republic is flying over the palace where the exiled vermin held out for the past seven years. Inside the palace are the employers and envoys of the Soviet Republic. The refugees appeal to Herriot in vain. Trance has recognized the workers' government, and the ruling class of France has not changed it mental attitude toward the Soviet Republic, business is business, and the czarists can suck their aristocratic thumbs.

THERE is a big war on in France between the catholic church and the Herriot government. The catholics are allied with the royalists and the extreme reactionary nationalists, represented by Poincare. Herriot belongs to the school that booted the religious orders out in 1905. He is a mason, and the French masons unlike the British and American variety, are not required to believe in a personal God and are inclined to be atheistic. The catholic bishops are now out for Herriot's scalp but it is more likely they will get the worst of the duel.

AT the rate things are going, it would not be surprising to see His Holiness either committing suicide, taking a ship to America or turning the handle of a hurdy gurdy for a living. In the event of the downfall of the Fascisti dictatorship, which now seems a certainty in the near future, His Holiness might be asked

SOLDIER DEAD GET 2 MINUTES FROM WALL ST.

Clerks Work as Usual in Washington, D. C.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 11.—The stock exchange suspended business of laying a financial and commercial basis for the next war for two minutes yesterday in order to doff its silk hat in formal comemmoration of the last war.

In most of the Wall Street offices the brokers and bankers had their clerks take the slack up early so that two minutes could be spared for "the dead."

Keeping Busy with Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The fact that the hypocritical observance of Armistice day has become a mockery of the soldier dead is shown by the lack of any public demonstration at the national capital.

Coolidge even refused at the eleventh hour to declare a holiday and let the government employes off for even half a day. Because these workers needed their pay and their jobs too much to indulge in a patriotic spree, they stayed on their jobs. This made attendance at the Arlington national cemetary a mere handful of idle politicians.

Even these parasites semed to lack any enthusiasm. Coolidge and a few of the Teapotters motored out and laid a wreath (paid for by government money) on the tomb of the "unknown soldier" who, doubtless, if he could have broken thru the marble, would have introduced himself with unmistakable indignation at the hypocrisy of capitalist governments.

Nobody even made a speech denouncing the "reds" at the tomb of this unfortunate victim of American

IF SOCIAL WASHINGTON WANTS A BALL SILENT CALVIN IS WILLING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—President Coolidge is not in favor of holding an inaugural ball at the White House on March 4, the day of his inauguration, but will attend if the ball is held.

That much of the plans for inaugural day were made known at the White House today. The inaugural ball four years ago was called off by President Harding after plans for the affair had been practically complete.

"EDUCATIONAL WEEK"

"When a feller needs a friend!"

McANDREW WILL TAKE PENCILS FROM CHILDREN BUT NOT TAXES FROM WEALTHY PROPERTY OWNERS

That the school children of Chicago will next be called upon to do with fewer pencils and copy books to help Superintendent McAndrew keep his promise to big business, that their tax dodging will not be interfered with, was made known in a new school economy proposal coming from the head of the public school system.

Superintendent McAndrew has made a recommendation to the finance committee of the board to cut 10 per cent per capita on school supplies this year.

This reduction will bring the cost of school supplies this year, for an additional 20,000 pupils, to approximately the same amount that it was last year, $960,000.

Every year the board faces a deficit in funds and with this depleted financial situation it must meet the needs of a body of pupils which grows faster than the school's income. The growth this year, on the basis of last year's expenditures would cost $2,500,000 and the increase in revenues amount to less than $1,000,000. The school deficit is now $15,000,000.

Fewer Pencils; More Buildings?

McAndrew's juggling of figures to reduce expenses will appear like a cross word puzzle to most of us in view of the fact that this afternoon he will argue with the members of the board of education at their regular meeting at 650 S. Clark street for an expenditure of $170,000,000 in the next ten years for the building of 165 new school houses, the bulk of those to be used for junior high schools.

CONVENTION OF I. W. W. IS OVER; MET 4 WEEKS

No Real Settlement of Controversy Reached

The 16th general convention of the Industrial Workers of the World adjourned yesterday without any real settlement of the controversy after 26 days of sessions in which the fundamental issue of clarification of revolutionary policy was left until the last day and then thrown into discard by a motion to refer the matter of revolutionary principles to the incoming general executive board.

That this failure to take an unequivocal stand on the matter of revolutionary principles is a victory for the right wing reformists and marks a milepost in the transformation of the I. W. W. from an anti-parliamentary revolutionary political party into a union, is the opinion of many observers and members.

Three Reports on Policy.

The policy commitee which early in the convention had been instructed to present an interpretation of the preamble, postponed its report until the last day, after the constitutional alterations providing for machinery to put policy in effect had already been completed. The convention's business was taken up hind side foremost.

When at last policy came up, the careless left wing, as usual, had failed to agree and two revolutionary interpretations were offered by two revolutionary delegates, one as a majority report submitted by Fred Mann and one submitted by Charles Gray. Against these two P. J. Welinder of Seattle, a minority report of the most astonishing pacifist-anarcho-syndicalist nature. It could well have been

MUSSOLINI IN BIG CRISIS AS ASSEMBLY MEETS

Threatens to Kill Off the Opposition

(Special to the Daily Worker)

ROME, Nov. 11.—Mussolini will face one of the most critical days of his career, when parliament meets as scheduled tomorrow. The opposition parties are not expected to attend.

Mussolini is threatening to turn his black shirts loose on the country unless the opposition breaks down.

Division of Opposition Helps.

Mussolini's only hope for the present is the inability of the bourgeois opposition to organize for disciplined action.

The war veterans' organizations have issued manifestos declaring their independence of parliament and refusing to support either the fascist majority or the opposition.

War Vets Absent.

In an interview to the press, Mussolini said he was holding his blackshirts back.

Mussolini addressed a meeting today of the fascisti supporters in the chamber. But the legionnaire deputies were absent as well as the liberal leaders, Giolitti, Salandra and Orlando.

Defies Opposition.

The fascist premier expressed the hope the majority would keep faith with the government and said the threatened absence of the minority from the chamber would not keep parliament from functioning.

"Fascism must be cleared of disturbing elements, and peace among the citizens restored," Mussolini said.

Trouble beneath the surface in Italian politics will come to light, it is believed on the reassembling of parliament tomorrow. Fascist and opposition deputies are in constant conference and it is certain the opposition will carry out its threat of boycotting parliament, not even troubling to attend the sessions.

Parisian Printers On General Strike For Wage Increase

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Parisian typographical workers ordered a general strike today in support of their demand for a wage increase. There were indications that many evening newspapers would be unable to publish.

Lodge's Death Raises League Hopes.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 11.—Greater possibilities that the United States may enter the league of nations were seen here today by J. M. Athens, professor of political science, at the University of Illinois, as a result of the death of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, its bitter opponent.

BANKRUPT FARMER WITH FAMILY FOUND STARVING IN A CELLAR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Nov. 11.—James J. Bolz, his wife and four small children were taken by county authorities from a vegetable cellar on the Leonard Everett farm and removed to the Grandview farm juvenile home.

The family, in rags and without food, came from Minneapolis, leaving there August 4 for the south in a one-horse wagon.

Father; mother; Mary, 10; Dorothy, 7; Bobbie, 3; and the baby, nine months, were sleeping on the cement floor of the cellar with almost no covering. They had been living there two weeks.

Work has been provided for Bolz by a farmer near the juvenile home.

NEGRO ASSOCIATION LAUNCHES FIGHT ON RACE SEGREGATION

NEW YORK—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announces a nationwide series of demonstrations against racial segregation. On November 30, the Sunday following Thanksgiving day, the demonstrations will start with a mass meeting at Washington, D. C. James Weldon Johnson, national secretary of the association, Louis Marshall, famous New York attorney, who served as counsel for Leo Frank, will be among the speakers.

The "black belt" of American cities will be the principal objects of attack.

A judicial decision against segregation is announced by the association's New Orleans branch. There a segregation law providing that neither Negroes nor whites might live in a district inhabited by the other group with consent of a majority of the group, was declared invalid.

COOLIDGE AND CHAOS FINDS OMAHA HUMBLE

Cal Is Crowned; Rail Barons Turn Off Serfs

(Special to the Daily Worker)

OMAHA, Nebr., Nov. 11.—A lay-off affecting 164 employes of the Union Pacific railroad here, becomes effective this week it was learned today.

Another cut of 150 men is expected within the next thirty days by those in close touch with railroad affairs. A general falling off in railway business now is given as the reason for the lay-off.

Now That Election Is Over.

The roundhouse force will be cut fifty-six men, the freight car repair yards thirty-eight men, and thirty engineers and forty firemen also will be temporarily discharged.

The lay-off was not wholly unexpected in railroad circles. Whether or not the other seven railroads here will follow the Union Pacific's lead and retrench also, is not known. This lay-off is the first to be experienced by the employes of the Union Pacific system since last spring.

The unemployed problem in Omaha territory was approaching the acute stage just prior to election. There was some slight relief for two or three weeks, but conditions are once more becoming serious.

Chaos For Workers is Coming.

The packing plants, the largest industry in this district, are constantly reducing their forces. Hundreds of unskilled laborers appear at the gates looking for jobs which now pay from fourteen to seventeen dollars a week. Many of them have to keep pace with piece workers for ten hours and more each day. The majority only work part time. The whistle still blows at 3:30 p. m., just as it did when the union eight-hour day was in effect, but has no meaning for the workers now.

The building trades have many unemployed, the no-called boom has passed and but little construction work is being planned.

CROWE IN PACT WITH O'BANNION NOTED GANGSTER

Killers Gunmen Helped Clinch His Victory

The relations between State's Attorney Crowe and the underworld was brot out clearly today when it was revealed that Dean O'Bannion, notorious killer and highwayman, who was killed in his florist shop by three gunmen, worked for Robert E. Crowe in the last election campaign and helped to carry several wards, hitherto democratic, for his newfound republican friends.

This and the dropping of indictments against members of the Lundin-Thompson machine by Crowe as a result of a pre-election agreement proves conclusively that the strikebreaking state's attorney is not so much concerned with upholding even capitalist law and order as he is with serving his masters and building up his own political machine with the aid of the murderers and robbers of the underworld at the bottom and the wealthy malefactors at the top.

King of Criminals.

When Dean O'Bannion, notorious gangster, killer, hijaker, burglar bootlegger and philanthropist succumbed to the ministrations of three business rivals, Morgan Collins, chief of police, declared that the Windy City's arch-criminal was dead.

The career of Dean O'Bannion, since he first burst into the limelight in Chicago affords an interesting subject for speculation, on the workings of law enforcement under capitalism. According to statements issued by the police, Dean is responsible for no less than 25 of Chicago's most sensational underworld killings. He was once caught in front of a safe in the Chicago office of the Typographical Union. There were $35,000 dollars in the safe and Dean O'Bannion was after the money. Nothing happened to him except being arrested. The case was dropped.

Stealing Booze.

Quite recently O'Bannion was indicted with Lieutenant Mike Grady of the detective bureau and others for stealing liquor from a government warehouse. Nothing happened, and everybody involved was exonerated.

One of Dean O'Bannion's partners was a gentleman known as "Dapper" Dan McCarthy. The latter was formerly business agent for the Plumber's Union and was one of those whose name was mentioned whenever a murder took place in Chicago's underworld. McCarthy and other men of his calling were in the habit of calling at State's Attorney Crowe's office whenever they were wanted. On one occasion McCarthy had his picture taken in Crowe's office, with two of the states attorney's aids.

The Reason for Immunity.

Why did not State's Attorney Crowe prosecute Dean O'Bannion and the other gunmen who took human life on the streets of Chicago with as little concern as if they were merely shooting ducks? There are several reasons but two are sufficient.

The first is, that the sluggers employed by the manufacturers in labor disputes are recruited from the ranks of the protected gunmen. This is not the kind of work the gangsters like best but they have to do it in order to buy protection. With the aid of the

A LEADER NOT A HERO

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The first chapter is entitled "A Leader—Not a Hero." It is as follows:

* * *

By A. LOSOVSKY.

THERE are epochs in human history when single individuals incorporate the experiences and historical tasks of whole classes. History develops by curves and as the class struggle develops in intensity these individuals appear in the foreground and assume their greatest importance at a time when the social antagonisms reach their highest point.

Human history knows of many examples of gifted statesmen, thinkers, politicians and diplomats. But all of them up till now have been representatives of the feudal and capitalist classes. Only in the 19th century when the proletariat came to feel itself as a class do we find the reflection of its interests in the genius, Marx. Lenin is the direct successor of Marx.

When we consider closely Lenin's role in the labor movement of the last decades the first question that appears is, whether we Marxians ought not to revise our theory regarding the role of single individuals in history. For is it not a fact that Lenin has been a living illustration of the theory of the heroes and the masses and did he not, by the activities of his life, disprove the correctness of the materialist conception of history? We must consider this problem at the very outset in order to relieve ourselves of any false idealistic conceptions that we might entertain. The truth is that the real greatness of the genius of the most outstanding strategian of the class struggle can be correctly appreciated only from the point of view of the class whose leader he was.

The Marxians who enter the study of Lenin's role in history are under no necessity of abandoning their theory of the relation between heroes and masses. Quite the contrary. Only on the basis of the materialist conception of history, only thru a sober analysis of the forces in the class struggle, can we correctly appreciate the role which Lenin, the greatest thinker and revolutionist, has played in the international labor movement and in the international revolution.

Tomorrow—Marxism in Practice.

Did You Ever Run for President?

WE do not ask you out of mere curiosity nor to gather statistics, but in order to whisper a secret to you. If you haven't run for that almighty office, you can at least have the pleasure of knowing how it feels to run. Not to run, mind you, with the idea of being elected, or even the hope; but to run on a Communist ticket and to meet up with all sorts of curious situations and incidents while on your campaign tours.

William Z. Foster, recently the Workers Party's candidate for the presidency, has written a most interesting article on his drive, entitled: "Campaigning for Communism," and it is going to appear in the coming magazine section of the DAILY WORKER, SaturJay, Nov. 15, 1924. Of course, you will want to read it—that is taken for granted.

And that isn't all! Not by any means. There will be, besides the well chosen photographs and cartoons, the first of a series of articles by Max Shachtman, on a little discussed subject—the Communist movement among children. "Keeping Them Young and Red" is the name of it, and it speaks for itself.

Alexander Bittelman will analyze the results of the recent election and you can bank on some keen stuff when you read it.

Jack Johnstone, leading militant in the American labor movement, will write on the problems facing the convention of the American Federation of Labor to be held soon at El Paso. And—

But what's the use of telling you all that's going to be in the magazine section? We'll bet a fur coat against a mark that you will pronounce it one of the best issues that has yet come off the press. Oh, yes, don't forget to slip the good word to your friends. They'll thank you for it.

BIGGEST PROFITEERS DICTATE THE POLICIES OF THE N. E. A., IN WAR ON PROGRESSIVE LABOR

By KARL REEVE.
(Second Article.)

The National Education Association, which was called in by the United States bureau of education to aid the American Legion in putting over anti-labor "education week" on the public schools Nov. 17-22, is an organization controlled by the Manufacturers' Association.

The National Education Association is run by financiers and big business men to reduce teachers' salaries, keep militant working class sentiment out of the schools and pervert the teaching of truth into mere feeding of capitalist propaganda to the school teachers and the children.

Feted by A. of C.

The chambers of commerce always act as hosts to the national conventions of the National Education Association.

Red-haters, labor union smashers, and capitalist morons who preach doctrines of "docility necessary to success" are given the patforms at these conventions. In the 1922 convention of the N. E. A., Pershing, Coolidge and Hughes formed the battery of capitalist henchmen who praised the profit system. The Boston Chamber of Commerce paid the expenses of this convention and had charge of the entertainment of delegates. Strike-breaker Coolidge was the honored guest of the N. E. A. convention held in Washington last year.

Every act of the National Education Association, aims to distort the truth and to control the minds of the school children.

N. E. A. is Political Machine.
